THE GRIP OF EVIL

A MIGHTY THEME INSPIRED BY THE CONFLICTING THOUGHT OF THE GREATEST MEN OF THE NATION

PRESIDENT WILSON says:

"The strongholds of evil and wrong in the world are not as strong as they look."

GOVERNOR DUNNE of Illinois says:

"I believe this nation has been progressing toward higher and better ideals and that conditions of society in America, as contrasted with the past, are immeasurably better and purer."

GOVERNOR HUNT of Arizona says:

"Most emphatically, I assert my belief that while evil, as an abstract entity, always has a part of humanity in its grip, the world is, nevertheless, growing better year by year."

MAYOR CURLEY of Boston says:

"Humanity is in the grip of evil! Struggle for a livelihood is more brutal in our day than in ancient times."

SENATOR MORRIS of Nebraska says:

"Humanity, while making progress, greatly improving and reaching a higher state of civilization, is nevertheless in the grip of a great evil."

IS HUMANITY IN THE GRIP OF EVIL?

Your audiences will insist on seeing these pictures so they can determine for themselves the questions on which leaders of thought disagree!

Compelled to Make Superior Pictures

THE V-L-S-E is compelled to make superior pictures.

By the very nature of its operating system—The Open Booking Method—it must produce pictures of continuously consistent quality.

With exhibitors free to choose only those pictures which have merit, it would be ruinous to put out any other kind.

That this fact is generally recognized by the trade, is evidenced by the endorsements which this company's policies are receiving from exhibitors everywhere.

You will join in these endorsements when you experience the benefits of these policies for yourself.

Gentlemen:

When we opened the Cinema-Concerts at Orchestra Hall, there was considerable time and thought spent in selecting what we believed would be the one best feature to present to our patrons. There were no restrictions -- we wanted the best the market afforded regardless of price or manufacturer.

As you know, our selection for this opening was a V-L-S-E picture. In view of greater success than we had anticipated for our first week, it seems only fitting that we should express to you our satisfaction.

The acting, plot and photography were splendid -- it was great, and we are happy to say we have set up a most satisfactory record on this opening picture.

Many of our patrons said it was the best picture they had ever seen, and all seemed to go away well satisfied.

Trusting that our future business relations will be as pleasant and profitable as the past, we are

Mutual Film Corporation,
Cincinnati, Ohio.

Dear Sirs: We wish you to know of our success relative to showing the first series of "The Secret of the Submarine."

Nearly all day and evening it poured down raining, and, of course, we could imagine the handful of people who would come to see the picture we so extensively advertised, but much to our surprise (by no means is this a joke) the first show was packed and people were waiting to the curb. Now that we have a good beginning on "The Secret of the Submarine," we feel we'll have no trouble in getting the crowds for the remaining series.

With kindest regards, we beg to remain

Yours very truly,
Lawrence Bueche, Jr., Mgr.

Success is pouring in on exhibitors showing "The Secret of the Submarine!" Their letters tell wonderful stories of popular clamor to see the smashing scenes in each chapter! Read the reports reprinted on this page. All cities and towns have literally "upheaved" to view every 40-centimeter sensation!! Imagine crowds standing out to the curb in the rain! What other serial has ever equaled it? WILLIAM RUSSELL SERIES

Please Your Patrons

There is no surer way of making your theatre highly successful than by giving your patrons what they like.

William Russell is one of the screen's most likeable stars. He is of the type of hero women admire and men favor. His following is extensive.

The American Film Co., Inc., is now presenting him in a series of eight Mutual Star Productions of five reels, each a separate story. The first of these, "Soul Mates," recently released, was so favorably accepted that many additional bookings were received.

The combination of a well liked star with fine vehicles makes the William Russell series a most pleasing attraction to offer.

TRIANGLE PLAYS

Frank Keenan and Enid Markey in THE PHANTOM

Not since the days of the famous "Raffles" has there been a detective story so exciting, so full of adventure, so thoroughly absorbing as "The Phantom" the latest TRIANGLE PLAY with Frank Keenan and Enid Markey, to be released July 2nd.

Chock full of surprises—abounding with quick action and tense moments—this TRIANGLE PLAY is different from any other in which Frank Keenan has appeared.

So cleverly is the story handled that the most enthusiastic fan won't be able to foretell the final ending. By the time Keenan has changed from Gentleman Thief to Central Office Detective and then to U. S. Secret Service Officer anything seems possible. And when the end is reached you are more surprised than ever at the outcome.

If your patrons enjoy detective plays they certainly will appreciate "The Phantom."

Exhibitors Are Seeking Co-operation

A FEW days before the opening of the two New York expositions in May a prominent exhibitor from the South was in New York.

He owns a chain of first class theatres and his investment and current business undoubtedly rank in volume right up with the prominent manufacturer's.

He decided not to remain over to attend the expositions because he didn't believe they would be of sufficient business value to him.

I AM wondering if this exhibitor is going to Chicago, and if other and equally prominent exhibitors are also going—the men who also have big businesses at stake in this industry, whose names are very well known and who do not as a rule attend exhibitor conventions and have never taken any interest in exhibitor or any other kind of trade organization.

Do these men believe in organization? We take it for granted they do.

THEY believe in organizing their own businesses—that is evident, else they could not have achieved prominence and success. And therefore we deduce—as we must—that they also believe quite as emphatically in trade organization.

They realize—as realize they must—that only general trade organization can tackle successfully the problems they cannot tackle by rowing up stream alone.

HERE'S a letter from one of these exhibitors, one of the very few of his class who have taken an active interest in organization. Let me say in advance that he is not seeking office or prominence. He isn't going to Chicago as a delegate—but simply as a business man.

His sincere denial of office seeking will be quite well understood by those who have spent time and money in organizing work for the general good and got only a kick for their pains—but who also are so constituted that they would dig in again with coats off if the other fellow shows the slighest inclination to help.

HIS letter says in part: "I would like to see this done, and if there is any way you can personally assist in bringing this around, I believe you would confer a favor on every exhibitor in this country, and that is, that a meeting should be held in Chicago,—possibly Tuesday as I feel Monday many will not have reached the city,—at which the prominent exhibitors from different parts of the country, a few, if not all of the big manufacturers, and the trade press can meet in an informal way in some hall or assembly room where we would not be hampered with the noise of the street, etc., and where a heart-to-heart talk could be had by allowing each speaker from three to five minutes."

"A MAN of ability and a good topic, who would need longer time, could be given it by somebody waiving his time. At this meeting the following questions to be taken up: Do we need a National League? If we believe in one exposition a year, where should the headquarters of this League be established; the discussion of the present pictures being released; the demand of a majority of the exhibitors for a certain class of picture.

"The price discussion would be had which will certainly enter into the business for the coming year more than it ever has. Exhibitors all over the country find themselves, not with an investment of $10,000 or $15,000 or $20,000 in a theater as it was some three or four years ago, but investments running into hundreds of thousands, paying a high price for service,—not a price to which the manufacturer is perhaps entitled, but one that is prohibitive for a big house organization, newspaper advertising and ten cents admission. Where many of us are trying to "put across," as we term it, higher prices, very few are meeting with success.

"I fully believe that Chicago is going to have one of the biggest turn-outs of exhibitors in the history of the business. I believe they are coming for business and not for pleasure, and if the right kind of push and energy is shown by all concerned, I think it will be a turning point in the industry for the benefit of everyone."

OTHER exhibitors have written in regarding the Chicago convention and while they treat the subject from various angles it is most interesting and significant to note that there is a remarkable agreement upon one main point: they want and will welcome co-operation—co-operation with the producer and exchange.

They are thinking about it. They are thinking more about it, they are seeing its necessity more clearly than are the producers. And this is decidedly to their credit as business men.

THERE are things to be discussed between producer and exhibitor that can only be settled by such discussion. These matters are of the utmost business importance; bread and butter matters they are which no one in the industry can afford to neglect.

It is unbusinesslike, it is absurd, for the exhibitor to sit in his house and rail at the system of advance deposits and at his low price of admission and because he cannot get the kind of pictures his people want, etc., etc.

AND it is equally unbusinesslike and just as absurd for the producer to sit in his swivel-chair in New York and ask the exhibitor to raise admission prices and to do this and that, and also to think that he knows what kind of pictures the exhibitor and the public want.

These problems can be settled and only settled through conference. And the place and the time for this conference is Chicago, July 10th to 18th.

THIS publication, as emphatically and often stated, believes in exhibitor organization, separate and distinct from any other organization.

But ways and means can easily be devised whereby the national league can secure systematic co-operation with the other branches of the industry and whereby exhibitors can have a very prominent voice in a general trade organization without impairing in the least their own organization, but on the contrary, to the end of greatly strengthening it.

This is the problem—the big problem—which the Chicago convention can settle. And it vitally concerns the big exhibitor, the little exhibitor, the manufacturer, the distributor—and every one, high or low, connected with this industry.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

New Testimony in the Case of the Editor vs. the Publicity Man

CHARLES F. COBRY, photoplay editor of the World-Herald, Omaha, "said something" in his recent interview with the MOTION PICTURE NEWS correspondent, when he criticised the types of press sheets sent him by the various film manufacturing companies. Several exhibitors sent him cards, indorsing everything he said. Several manufacturing companies wrote him letters. The following, from the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, is typical:

The World-Herald,
Omaha, Nebr.

Attention: Charles F. Cobry, Photoplay Editor.

Dear Sir:

I have just read "A True Story for Publicity Men," in the Motion Picture News of June 10. Needless to say the same interests me.

As the World-Herald has been on the BALBOA mailing list for some time, I am curious to know if the press sheets we send out are merely "ri-i-ip" -ed and consigned to the waste-basket.

If so, I would appreciate your telling us just why. I enclose this week's budget of which your frank criticism would be valued.

Having been a newspaperman, I keenly sympathize with your position. I realize that the average press sheet is what you say about it. For that reason we have tried to make BALBOA'S different. The liberal use made of our offerings in many papers indicates that we are succeeding.

We are exceeding anxious to get the department editor's viewpoint. Naturally, we want to supply you what you will find useful. If we're not doing it, tell us. If you will only give some idea as to just what you want, will try to fill the bill. Not long ago, we mailed a collection of photos of BALBOA principals and stars to The World-Herald for your files. If you need more, advise us.

This department is here to co-operate with the photoplay editor. Give us a chance to prove it. Send us your page occasionally that we may study it and get your angle.

Cordially yours,
The BALBOA Amusement Producing Co.,
Publicity Dept.

THE Balboa budget included a dozen paragraphs of studio chatter, a human interest story about Little Mary Sunshine, Balboa's starette, and some Indians, and an interview with H. M. Horkheimer, president and general manager of the Balboa company, about the pictorial element being the strongest appeal of the photoplay, as viewed by Mr. Horkheimer.

Cobry decided to use two of the briefest studio chatter paragraphs and the first two paragraphs of the proffered one-third column article about Little Mary Sunshine.

"I FIND Balboa's stuff among the best I receive," he said. "I have a column of brief paragraphs, in which I use some of their studio chatter regularly. Briefer items would help. The interview with Mr. Horkheimer is old stuff, in which you couldn't expect anyone to be interested. If he would have told how some particular picture was made by connecting the film, turning the picture machine crank faster or slower or some other way—but he didn't.

"The little story about Little Mary Sunshine is human interest stuff, but it is too long. Women will read it and talk about it, maybe, if it was shorter. So I used the first two of the five paragraphs. And they are long paragraphs. That is bad.

"The stories I always use are about 150 words long—with several paragraphs in them. They make the page look readable, and if they have the stuff in them, they add instead of detract."

Not the Star—"The Play's the Thing"

THE "Bluebird" advertising campaign recently instituted in the Saturday Evening Post goes deeper than the usual advertising propaganda designed to sell goods.

Its keynote is, "the play's the thing." The copy sets forth that stories are selected on their merit alone; and that the cast of each photoplay is picked for its fitness and for no other consideration.

All of which is very sane and promising.

Rembusch Urges Fight at Chicago Convention Against Manufacturers' Advance Deposit Policy

"I Would Not Be Inconsiderate of the Film Maker's Rights, But There Are Certain Business Principles That No Man Should Compromise On," He Declares in His Platform; "Cash Is Worth Something; It Commands Preference at All Times; For It We Give Discounts in Other Lines of Business; Then Let There Be a Premium on Cash and a Discount on Cash"

WITH the Sixth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America at Chicago but two weeks away, the presidential candidates are being vigorously groomed for the race and are adding to their original manifestoes upon their platforms.

Both National President Fred J. Herrington and Frank Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Indiana, are out with detailed explanations of their positions on important questions.

"My platform shall be the greatest good for the greatest number," is President Herrington's declaration in coming before the exhibitors of the league for re-election to the office he is holding.

"The exhibitors being the greatest number, it is they I have tried to represent.

"The condition of the national league to-day and one year ago is all that I can refer to, and I feel that the executive committees, of which I am a member, deserves all the credit, as with the assistance of the many exhibitors throughout the country, we have made possible peace and harmony where there was chaos, organization where there was anarchy."

"I would suggest that we all go to the Chicago Convention," says President Herrington, at the conclusion of his letter, "with the one and all-important subject uppermost in our minds—organization. When assembled there, we can depend upon the intelligence of the men present to select those for office who are best fitted to carry out the exhibitors' wishes. Let us be there from the north, south, east and west—and all the territory in between!"

Frank Rembusch is no less explicit in his declaration of principles than Mr. Herrington. Says Mr. Rembusch:

"There are a dozen vital facts concerning the motion picture business, on which I would like to say something, such as senseless competition, undesirable and ill-suited programs, foolish censorship and silly business policies, but at this time I ask you to follow me through a recital of only one unfair business policy that we have allowed to become shackled on us, namely, the advance deposit. Furthermore, I am going to ask every exhibitor to say something and do something to assist in eliminating this and other evils which, for the sake of the business as a whole and for the sake of your own bread and butter, you should cooperate in bringing about.

"The Chicago convention takes place in two weeks. What I ask you to do will cost you the price of a two-cent stamp, the price of a wire, or a trip to Chicago, and if you have any courage, any foresight, any business sense, any red blood in your veins, you will heed the appeal made to you by the Exhibitors League and do your share towards putting this business on a business basis, by expressing yourself immediately with reference to this vital question and others that are confronting us. If you have your business at heart you will be in Chicago, July 10 to 18.

"About ten years ago there came into my little store room show a film agent. I was invited to refreshments at a nearby friendly inn, and after he secured my order for one film a day at fifteen dollars a week, I felt pleased and felt that the film company appreciated my becoming a customer. It was a favor to them. As the salesman left he said, 'Send us your check at any time. Your credit is always good with us.'

Wanted to Collect $10 With $11,000 on Deposit

"In June, 1916, there comes an express agent into my $15,000 theatre, which is a successor of the little store room show. His greeting is, 'F. J. We have a film package with a C.O.D. of thirty dollars attached.' On investigation I found that this film corporation that sent the film had one hundred and twenty dollars of my cash on deposit and it had been in their hands for months. My service was paid in full as per contract, even in advance. I wired and they answered, 'Sorry, bookkeeper made mistake. Films will be released.' My show had been held up for an hour and my feelings and temper disturbed until I was not a fit companion for man or beast. And this is an everyday incident in the lives of exhibitors in June, 1916.

"A friend exhibitor is rated in Dun and Bradstreet's at $250,000. He has $11,000 up in advance deposits. I was in his office when the express boy brought in a film C. O. D. $10. We talked about it and what we said cannot be repeated here because it would choke the printing press.

"I recently met an exhibitor in Cincinnati who is a large operator. He told me his advance deposits amounted to forty-seven thousand dollars. We were talking about it and a film man figured out that film manufacturers have on deposit some million dollars in money advanced by the exhibitor. In other words, the film manufacturers are making film with our money and it isn't fair. We have no stock in their concerns, get no dividend, we are given no preference, no security and no discount for cash. We take what they give us and just what they give us. We can't get our money back unless we quit and then we take the money out in film service whether we want to or not. Put the proposition up to anyone, anywhere. Is this fair? Is this equitable? Is it good business policy? Is it a healthy condition for a buying market? If you object, then in the name of common decency, if you have any courage, any business sense, Mr. Exhibitor, you will demand that we quit keeping on this way.

"I would not be inconsiderate of the film manufacturer's rights, but there are certain business principles that no man should compromise on. The film manufacturers are entitled to their rights and to their money, and I don't object to paying a day or a week in advance, particularly, but I do object to paying weeks and months in advance. It is true that the dead beat exhibitor is the cause and the argument by the manufacturer for this condition. It is at the same time true that we are not all deadbeats and we object to being generally classified as such.

"In the first place cash is worth something. It commands preference at all times. For it we give discounts in other lines of business. Then let there be a premium on cash and a discount on cash. Let the film producer refuse service to the deadbeat and make him pay more, like any other business, and it won't be long until those of us who are trying to pay our bills and be honest won't be worried with the deadbeat competition that so often butts in on us in an illegitimate way, wipes away our investment, our livelihood and the work of a lifetime. Let me repeat, we want to be fair to the film manufacturer and we are going to be fair to him. We need the good, legitimate film manufacturer and I don't believe the legitimate film manufacturer, or any film manufacturer, who will consider the matter in the right light wants this condition. But let's hear their argument.

"Film manufacturers argue that if you pay them in advance they will give us better subjects. But it isn't fair to begin with and it follows that it isn't human nature that a man is going to give you better service when he already has your money. He is liable to give you worse.

Exhibitors Do Not Cancel Good Service

"Film manufacturers argue that exhibitors are too prone to cancel, and it costs to sell film and if the exhibitor is not bound up tight they lose the salesman's expense and salary. In the name of common sense I hope we have not entirely given up our birthright! Haven't we a right to cancel service? If a film service is so mediocre that it is impossible to keep the exhibitor interested, it is certainly burglary to force him to keep it by making him pay for something in advance which may be boosted to the sky by the publicity man and often turned out by the director in the shape of a lemon. We have a right to cancel service and I insist that we keep this right. If a service is good we don't cancel it, but fight to hold it.

"Film manufacturers argue that they are making film on such close m[illegible]n they can't afford to take a chance. Holy Horrors! Look at the chances we are taking. Most of us who were prosperous a couple of years ago are now losing money on account of the high prices of film service, our large investments, senseless competition, too many theatres and too long programs.

"Film manufacturers argue they are paying such high salaries that advance deposits are a necessary precaution. Well, we exhibitors haven't hired the performers and we shouldn't have to pay for their hire if exorbitant salaries are offered. There is a limit to everything human and I say that no man or woman can earn one hundred thousand to over a half million a year in front of the camera.

"Film manufacturers argue that everybody wants these big long features. We do want big long features, but want short ones also. Our success comes from catering to the most people. The literature and phraseology of the picture is becoming so aristocratic that many people cannot appreciate or comprehend it. An average show runs an hour and a half or two hours. The clerk and the business man who can spare fifteen or thirty minutes for recreation, doesn't come any more because they cannot spare the time, and as for the children—they go to sleep. Just because the subject has five reels doesn't make it good. Listen Mr. Film Manufacturer, there never was a greater mistake made than when all the regular program manufacturers went to features. If the regular manufacturer had stayed with his regular program, put the same energy, the same publicity, the same performers, the same pep and enthusiasm into the regular program as they did in the feature program, we would now have a more varied program, catering to more people, with less competition and more money for all of us. We need both the regular and the feature program. Let one manufacturer make the regular program and make it right, and the other one make the feature program and make it right.

"The film manufacturers say 'We can't produce a high class program unless we know beforehand and have the exhibitor's money beforehand.' He must rightly take the chance.

"The trouble with all of us is that we are too close-mouthed. We won't say anything until we are disturbed to the boiling point. All of these propositions can be worked out peacefully, systematically and commercially. How are you going to do it? I will tell you how to do it and do it right now—in three words—go to Chicago.

"Come Mr. Exhibitor and Mr. Manufacturer. Let's both go to Chicago July 10 to 18. Let's all get in a big room together, lock the doors and throw the keys away; open up our hearts, own up to the truth; exchange sympathy and advice and start to build for a sound, solid future.

"You want to save your business. I want to save my business. We all want to save our business. This is our business and this is a big business meeting of the whole industry. If we don't take care of our business nobody else will. If I know anything about the temper of the exhibitor and the manufacturer, this is going to be the greatest conference of the motion picture industry in it's history. Many are going to Chicago in desperation. Most of us are losing money. There is a reason for it, and we should have enough business sense to find out and remedy the evil.

"Close up your show shop, if necessary. Come and spend a few days in serious business conference. If you are a big exhibitor you have a big reason for coming. If you are a small exhibitor with everything invested you have every reason for coming. Whether you are a member of the League or not, be there. Chicago will make you welcome. Chicago exhibitors will see that you are taken care of. There never was a time when it was so vital for the exhibitor to meet in conference. Let yourself be heard in voice at the convention. If it is impossible to come then use your men; send a letter or wire to the Chicago convention; suggest what you want; but be there yourself if possible.

"Mr. Exhibitor, opportunity is before you. Are you coming to Chicago? Are you going to wire? Are you going to write? Are you going to do anything? What are you going to do?"

Under the heading, "Some of the things we should advocate," Mr. Herrington emphasizes the following:

First: One solid organization of exhibitors to carry out the many ideas of the best interest of our business as exhibitors.

Second: A bureau of Information with its executive office in New York City.

Third: A National executive board selected from the representative of the industry or that part of the trade as represented by the exhibitors, to meet semi-annually to arrange for our National convention and exposition in conjunction with the Board of Trade or some other organization representing the industry as a whole.

Fourth: The formation of a Motion Picture Board of Trade where the exhibitors shall have equal representation with all other parts of the industry.

Fifth: The election of a committee on legislation from the two organizations for the purpose of advancing legislation that will be of the best interest to our business and combat such legislation as is a detriment in the state as well as the federal government.

Sixth: To place our business on an honest basis, where we as business men can establish a credit, and make the pre-payment policy as now enforced by some of the exchanges, unnecessary, as it is a reflection upon every man in the industry.

Space Taken by Manufacturers Indicates Convention Success

The contracts for space already signed by producers and manufacturers, who will exhibit at the Sixth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, indicate that it will be one of the most successful technical expositions ever held. The large number of exhibitors throughout the country who have already signified their intention of attending the big show in Chicago, shows that the important exhibiting end of the industry will be equally well represented.

Now comes the announcement that an unprecedented number of moving picture stars will attend the convention. Although scores of prominent film stars have yet to be heard from, the numbers that have already accepted the invitation of the management to be present is very large. The Vitgraph Company has promised to send a trainload of its most popular players. Every actor and actress in the Essanay Company will be seen at one time or another during the time of the convention. Others who will be there are: Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Hazel Dawn, Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Theda Bara, Clara Kimball Young and Alice Brady. Chaplin fans will be enabled to see their idol, if his work in Los Angeles has progressed sufficiently to insure regular releases in spite of his absence. This galaxy of national favorites assures the success of the convention from the popular point of view.

The managers of the convention promise that the Chicago exposition will be equally worth while from the point of view of the exhibitor and manufacturer.

Clara Kimball Young will not only attend the Chicago Convention next month, but the Committee on Arrangements has set aside July 14th in her honor as Clara Kimball Young Day. The promoters of the convention were particularly eager to have Miss Young visit Chicago and through the intercession of Messrs. Jones, Linick and Schaefer, the Chicago partners of Lewis J. Selznick, the star's promise to appear was obtained.

Miss Young will address the convention in the morning, speaking in behalf of bigger, better and cleaner pictures. In the afternoon and evening she will hold a reception, meeting all the attending exhibitor-delegates and their families as well as the general public. Handsome souvenirs are being prepared for distribution throughout the day.

Miss Young will go to Chicago direct from Poland Springs, Maine, where she is spending a brief vacation. She will return to New York in time to begin her work in "The Common Law" on July 16, as scheduled. Miss Young will be escorted to and from Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick, Albert Capellani, director general of her producing company, and E. R. Schayer, the publicity director.

THE star once ruled in the theatrical world. Nowadays, however, plays are written for their own sake, not to exploit and fit the star.

We have had too much of the star in the photoplay—to the detriment of photoplay art and its advancement. Every one knows that.

AND every one knows, too, that we have had and are having too much of the star's inflated salary. A producer the other day, in addressing his high-salaried studio force, said: "You are killing the goose that laid the golden egg."

If this new advertising helps to start a more healthful regime in this connection, it will have done much for the whole industry.

Mobilization of National Guard Affects Industry

Metro, V-L-S-E, Vitagraph, Fox, Pathe, and Various Other Companies Show Patriotic Stand in Mexican Crisis—They Will Hold Positions for the Men in Their Organizations Responding to the Call from the State Militia Commanders and the Salaries Will Go on in the Absence of the Citizen Soldiers

WITH the official call from Washington for an immediate mobilization of the National Guard, the motion picture industry is one of the first fields to be seriously affected. At the general offices of the Metro Pictures Corporation, and the several New York studios of the Company, there was more or less shifting of plans owing to the call on several of the important persons of that organization. At the general offices, in the Longacre Building, among those who received the first call for service was Merritt Crawford, managing editor of the Pictures Magazine, and associated with Arthur James in the publicity department. Mr. Crawford is a Spanish-American war veteran, and a former member of the Seventh Regiment. He joined the Depot Battalion of the Seventh Regiment several months ago, and was placed on the reserve list. Mr. Crawford's chief duties will be connected with the recruiting, guard duty at the Seventh Regiment Armory, and drilling new recruits.

Another member of the publicity staff in the Metro offices who has left his post is Alexander Duane, an active member of Company B, Seventh Regiment. James Curtin, also in the auditing department, is getting his routine work in order anticipating a call any moment from the First Battalion, New York Naval Militia, of which he is a member.

In the scenario department, at the Metro-Rolfe studio, Howard Irving Young, has given up his desk and duties, to join the ranks of the Seventh. Mr. Young was at work on a scenario for Emmy Wehlen, who is to star again under Metro auspices. He arranged to complete the scenario in camp, if necessary, in order that the Company will not be kept waiting. George D. Baker, formerly of the Vitagraph, will direct this five-part feature.

Bushman May be Called

John W. Noble, the director of "Romeo and Juliet," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are being starred, will probably soon be called to the colors and the production either halted or continued under the direction of another producer. Mr. Noble was a student at West Point and served as a first lieutenant in Cuba and the Philippines, during the Spanish-American war. He is on the army reserve list. "Romeo and Juliet" is less than one-third completed, and Director Noble is now in Long Island working with his company on exterior locations.

Another member of the studio working force who has been called to the colors is Percy Scofield, chief carpenter at the Metro-Rolfe studio. He is a member of the Fighting Sixty-ninth, the first regiment to get under arms. There are several other members of the Metro forces who are anxiously waiting the call, which they expect any minute.

The larger film companies have, almost without exception, adopted a patriotic attitude toward the mobilization of the militia. One of the first to demonstrate this was V-L-S-E. W. W. Irwin, president of the Big Four, issued an announcement soon after the mobilization order was posted, to the effect that all its employes who answer the President's call to duay will receive full pay during their absence, and will find their positions awaiting them on their return.

Furthermore, Mr. Irwin has announced that the opportunities for advancement on the part of these employes will in no way be impaired because of their absence on military duty. The announcement, which affects Big Four employes in twenty-four cities, reads:

"Anyone in the organization who is a member of the militia of his State, called to the Mexican border, shall receive full pay during the entire period of his absence on such duty, and upon his return shall find his position awaiting him.

Pay Salaries While Employes Away

"In the opinion of the home office, big business possesses patriotism as well as does the individual, and we therefore do not want to discourage any employe who is a member of the State militia from performing his full duty. On the contrary, we want him to know that his absence will cause him no financial loss nor loss of prospects of advancement.

"Send to the home office a detailed report of the military organization to which the employe belongs when he departs for the front, his rank and his written order directing to whom his money shall be paid. Checks for such salary will be sent from the home office."

A similar attitude has been adopted by Universal. Six employes of the Eastern studios of this company have been called to military service, all of them cameramen or operators, and these will not only receive full pay during their absence, but their positions will be held for them.

Vitagraph, Fox, and Pathe, it is understood, have also made practically similar arrangements with their employes.

McGowan Out for Record in Filming of "Judith" for Signal

He Began Production of the Picture on June 9, and with Everything in Readiness, Hoped to Complete the Subject by the Twenty-second or Twenty-third

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Los Angeles, June 24.

AS an example of what can be accomplished in film making when everything is in readiness, is being most strikingly illustrated at the Signal studio, where Director J. P. McGowan is filming "Judith of the Cumberlands." The company began work on this June 9, and it will be completed by the twenty-second or twenty-third, more than one-half of it being finished by the sixteenth.

Paul Hurst, who in the action of the play becomes a cripple as the result of a fight and in all scenes following limps, met with an accident last week when he fell from a mule, twisting his foot and badly lacerating the ligaments. This will render him a cripple throughout this picture and probably the next. A number of the scenes in which he limps were taken prior to the accident, and unfortunately he was limping with the other leg, so it required a retake of all these scenes so he could complete the picture.

The Helen Holmes Signal Company has but a few scenes to make on "The Diamond Runners," which will be made immediately after completing "Judith of The Cumberlands."

Signal, the station on the Salt Lake Railway, at the Signal Film Corporation's studio, is to be the site of a new roundhouse. It is now being constructed, and will be modeled after the one at San Fernando, California, in size and structure. This mammoth setting will be used for scenes in the photodrama, "The Manager of B. & A.," adapted from the railroad story by Vaughn Kester. In the final scenes of the photoplay, this roundhouse will be destroyed by fire.

G. E. Jenks, a former scenario writer for the Universal, has been engaged by Director J. P. McGowan of the Signal to serve in a similar capacity. Jenks took up his new work last week, and is preparing a lumber district story which will require scenes taken in and about Eureka, California. The company will go to that place upon the completion of "The Manager of B. & A."

WHEAT CROP IN KANSAS AND CORN CROP IN MISSOURI MAKE BIG BUSINESS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Kansas City, Mo., June 24.

Kansas exhibitors depend on the big wheat crop for good business and Missouri exhibitors depend on the corn crop for capacity business and the indications point to a big business for the exhibitors in the Kansas territory.

In Kansas the heavy rains of the last few weeks will insure an immense wheat crop and the exhibitors are looking forward to excellent business as a result. This will be the third bumper wheat crop in the state and all the farmers are in excellent financial condition and they are the patrons that practically all of the exhibitors cater to.

Missouri, that section of it which is low land, has been under water and some trouble with shipments has been experienced, but the last two or three weeks has caused the corn to grow by leaps and bounds. A good corn crop this year will be the first good crop for two years and motion picture exhibitors are looking forward to an unprecedented business in the next three or four months.

SAM SPEDON TO REPRESENT VITAGRAPH AT CHICAGO IN JULY

Sam M. Spedon, who besides taking care of the transportation of producers, exhibitors, and others of the motion picture industry on a special train, which will leave New York for Chicago on Saturday, July 8, for the Sixth National Exposition and Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and the motion picture industry, will also go in the capacity of "Official Representative" of the Vitagraph Company.

Mr. Spedon will look after affairs for the Vitagraph Company, which has contracted for an elaborate booth at the exposition hall, and will meet Vitagraph's many friends who visit the show. He will see that they are given a handsome Vitagraph souvenir as a remembrance of the occasion.

Lasky Releases Will Be Made Only Through Paramount

Cecil B. de Mille, Director General, Makes Emphatic Denial That Company Intends to Put Its Pictures on the Market by Aid of Any Other Releasing Organization

Los Angeles, Cal., June 24.

HERE'S a death knell to many rumors. Cecil B. deMille, director general of the Jesse L. Lasky Company, growing tired of being questioned daily by local newspapers as to the truth of statements concerning the company merging with others, issued a statement which was read to all newspapers. In this deMille said the Lasky Company had no intention of moving to another studio, nor would it release its photodramas through any releasing organization other than the Paramount Pictures Corporation for a number of years. The rumors have spread to all parts of the country, and caused many newspaper stories which have proven very disturbing both to producers and owners of picture theaters who use Paramount service.

Mr. deMille is now working on the script for the first Geraldine Farrar picture, active filming of which will probably not be commenced until the latter part of the month. Miss Farrar is in the meantime taking athletic training in preparation for her work before the camera.

By the first of July, the Lasky producing organization will consist of six companies. James Young, who produced two pictures for Lasky earlier in the year, has been reengaged and will begin work shortly. E. J. LeSaint, for a long time with the Selig Company on the coast, and later with the Universal, where he produced a serial and several five-reel features, has also been added to the Lasky organization. He will begin work on his first Lasky picture within a few days.

An exceptionally strong cast has been placed under the direction of George Melford for the filming of the Lasky subject, "The House of the Golden Windows." The story for this is based on the fairy tale of the two children who saw the windows in a beautiful house high up on the hill, and after a great struggle reached the mansion which proved to be a ramshackle building, and the golden windows but the reflection of the sunlight.

Cleo Ridgely and Wallace Reid appear in the featured parts, and Mabel Van Buren Marjorie Daw, James Neil, Ben Fleming and Billy Jacobs are cast for the principal parts. Upon the completion of this, Director Melford will take up the filming of the Lasky subject in which Lou-Tellegen will be starred.

The second Lasky-Marie Doro picture made under the title of "The Kid," is to be known as "The Common Ground." This was directed by William C. deMille, and is a story of the slums, in which Miss Doro is supported by Theodore Roberts, Tom Meighn, Horace Carpenter, Mary Mersch and Mrs. Lewis McCord. This Lasky photoplay will be of special interest to husbands, as in it Miss Doro proves she is a milliner of distinction, being able to make twelve model hats from one.

A company of Lasky players, including Blanche Sweet, Tom Meighan, Theodore Roberts, and Director Frank Reicher, has left for Bear Lake Valley where they will spend ten days or two weeks filming scenes for "The Storm." Story for this Lasky play was written by Beatrice C. deMille, who with Mrs. Cecil B. deMille, and Mrs. Frank Reicher, will accompany the players to the mountain resort.

Since the completion of the new star dressing rooms at the Lasky plant, the inviting surroundings and cosy parlors have in a measure caused—afternoon tea parties. Geraldine Farrar and Lou-Tellegen were the honored guests at the first of these parties, this one being of the nature of a "welcome home." The hostesses were Marie Doro, Blanche Sweet, Cleo Ridgely and Anita King. Something special is being prepared for an event of this nature to be given upon the arrival of Fannie Ward.

Bosworth Studios to Be in San Mateo, Near San Francisco

Film Magnate Will Remove His Company from Southern Part of the State—People of New Producing Town Will Subscribe $15,000 Toward Construction of Stages

San Francisco, June 24.

THE first step toward what is expected to develop into a general transfer of the motion picture industry from Southern California to the environs of San Francisco, followed months of negotiation, was taken yesterday when Hobart Bosworth, one of the leading producers of the southland, accepted the offer of the board of trustees of San Mateo, and agreed to build a studio and move his company to that city.

Under the terms of the agreement the people of San Mateo will subscribe $15,000 toward the construction of a studio and will give Mr. Bosworth the use of the corporation yard.

"No time will be lost in getting things started," said Mr. Bosworth to a representative of Motion Picture News, at the St. Francis Hotel. "Already plans for the studio are being drawn, and as soon as they are completed I shall leave for Los Angeles to arrange for the removal of my company to San Mateo. We intend to remain here permanently for the production of big features and program films.

"Our first big production will be Stewart Edward White's wonderful story of San Francisco, 'The Gray Dawn,' which will be filmed in this city on the actual scenes of the incidents. Work on this picture will begin about Sept. 15, according to our present plans.

"Whether other producers will follow me in the near future I cannot say; but I was the pioneer of the industry in Southern California, and I hope to play the same role here."

Two of the stars engaged by Mr. Bosworth for his productions next year are Fritzi Scheff and Ruth St. Denis. San Mateo, the future home of the Bosworth Company, is but sixteen miles south of San Francisco and has all the requirements for first class film production, and can be reached from the business section of this city in less than an hour by street car, train or auto bus.

Universal Makes New Classification of Its Pictures

After July 17 Identification of Certain Types of Subjects with Brands Will Be Inaugurated —Stars Will No Longer Be Identified with Brand Names

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company announces that after having received a consensus of opinion from practically all the exchanges with regard to the arrangement of the program, it appears that the majority of the exchanges are in favor of identifying certain types of subjects with the various brands instead of identifying stars with the brands which has been our practice in the past.

The program will undergo a change as a result of which several of the brands will be switched about and beginning with the week of July 17, at which time this change goes into effect, the brands will identify certain types of pictures and not stars. The following is the schedule which will be followed hereafter in branding the various subjects:

Red Feather Features: the weekly five-reeler will be released under this brand. Nestor; parlor comedies. Gold Seal; the weekly three-reeler will be released under this brand. Victor; comedies or comedy dramas will be released under this brand. L-Ko; slap stick comedies. Animated Weekly; topical subjects; and Big U; rural, costume, sea, light western and juvenile dramas. Laemmle; refined society dramas will be released under this brand. Powers; novelties, such as cartoons, manikins, juvenile comedies and educationals. Imp; melodramas, detective, mystery and underworld dramas. Rex; refined society dramas; Bison; western, mountain, Indian, railroad and animal dramas. Joker; slapstick comedies will be released under this brand.

"Civilization" Grips Public with Hatred of War

Ince Spectacle Moves Audiences by Its Powerful Arguments for Peace in the Picturization of Effects of Deadly Conflict—An English Soldier, Who Has Passed Through Terrors of Modern Warfare, Writes to Producer a Letter Depicting His Terrible Experiences—Lorrimore to Help Direct Destiny of the Picture

WITH the two public tests of his big spectacle, "Civilization," reported as unqualified successes, Thomas H. Ince is preparing for another such "test" during the coming week, when the film will open for a run at the Grand Opera House in Chicago.

Already the picture has met with public approval on the Pacific coast, and in New York, where it is playing to immense business. Mr. Ince, convinced that his picture meets the popular test of both east and west, now announces that he will "feel out" the middle west in the same manner through the Chicago presentation, and at the same time afford state rights buyers an opportunity to view the picture.

With "Civilization" ready for the state buyers, Mr. Ince has obtained the services of Alec Lorrimore, one of the best known men in the picture industry in this country. Mr. Lorrimore opened new offices in the Times building, New York, last week, and will have a large share in directing the future policy of the Ince productions.

Mr. Lorrimore's most recent connection with the picture industry, was as president of the Colonial Company, which office he assumed on January 13, last, after a short telephone consultation with several of the leading stockholders.

"Mr. Ince is more than pleased with the reception of his work in New York," said Mr. Lorrimore. "Last week he said: 'If I never make a dollar out of this picture, it is something to have brought out such a letter as that from an English soldier in the trenches, an enlarged copy of which is now on exhibition in front of the Criterion theatre.'"

This letter, an enlarged copy of which, on a poster stand has been attracting crowds in front of the Criterion theatre, New York, reads as follows:

Vivid Picture of War's Horrors

"Dear Mr. Ince:

"For one who has been through the Gehenna of Nations in France, and for the millions who remain, as I went, to lay down my life for the defense of my country and my loved ones, I thank you, sir, with a simple soldier's prayer, that your wonderful picture (which I saw here tonight) may waken your own great race to the demoniac madness of modern war. What you in your mighty screen sermon have depicted—vividly remorseless and truly horrible as it is—is but the least part of the Saturnalia of war.

"Picture the stench of your comrades rotting in death by your side as you are bespattered by the hot blood of others freshly butchered in all the blistering heat and volcanic thunder of shrieking shells and belching guns. Then, in the black and deadlier silence of night, while you lie half-buried in muddy bloody slime hour after hour waiting for hell's fire to burst out from the earth and sky again, to feel the maggots that are devouring in their millions the men you have lived and fought by, crawling over your own living carcass, as your brain reels in delirium at the sights and sounds you hear and see, and at those struggling souls you feel above and about you, still fighting a ghostly battle in the air, as if not realizing death!

Moved by Lesson of "Civilization"

"Then—the thoughts of home, of the anguish of loved ones, their lack of your support—helpless women, hungry babes—Oh! God! You can't think of it!

"No! Not even you, whose vision seems to have been made prophetic, clear and pure with the power of a great god-purpose. I can write no more. I can think of no more that I dare write. But, sir, you have in "Civilization" done a great work for God and for the sons of that Man who made us all in His image.

"Let every man, woman and child go to see this picture. Let them see in it that world tragedy we, whom I write for, have come through. Let them see in it—as I do—the dethronement of the physical with all its false idols and the awakening to Christ's kingdom on earth of a new and fuller spiritual consciousness, born of brotherhood and self-control, which in its turn shall give birth to a new race, with liberty-loving hospitable America as its home.

"May God bless and prosper you as the world will thank you, is the heart's prayer of

"Yours for civilization,

"A plain British Soldier.

(Formerly of 2nd Lancers Batt. R.F.A.)

"P. S. Please do what you like with this letter, but preserve my nom-de-guerre, as I don't want my own personality obtruded."

Mr. Lorrimore himself is an Englishman by birth, but an American by adoption. He first came to this country thirteen years ago, returning later to be married. He came back five years ago, and has been in the picture industry here ever since.

Metro-Yorke Players Will Leave for Hollywood

Company Headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, in the Thousand Islands for Three Weeks Making Exteriors for "River of Romance," Will Go at Once

THE Metro-Yorke company of players headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, which for more than three weeks has been in the Thousand Islands making exterior scenes for "The River of Romance," the first release of the new company on the Metro program, returned to New York this week. The company will leave at once for Hollywood, California, where Metro-Yorke features will be produced.

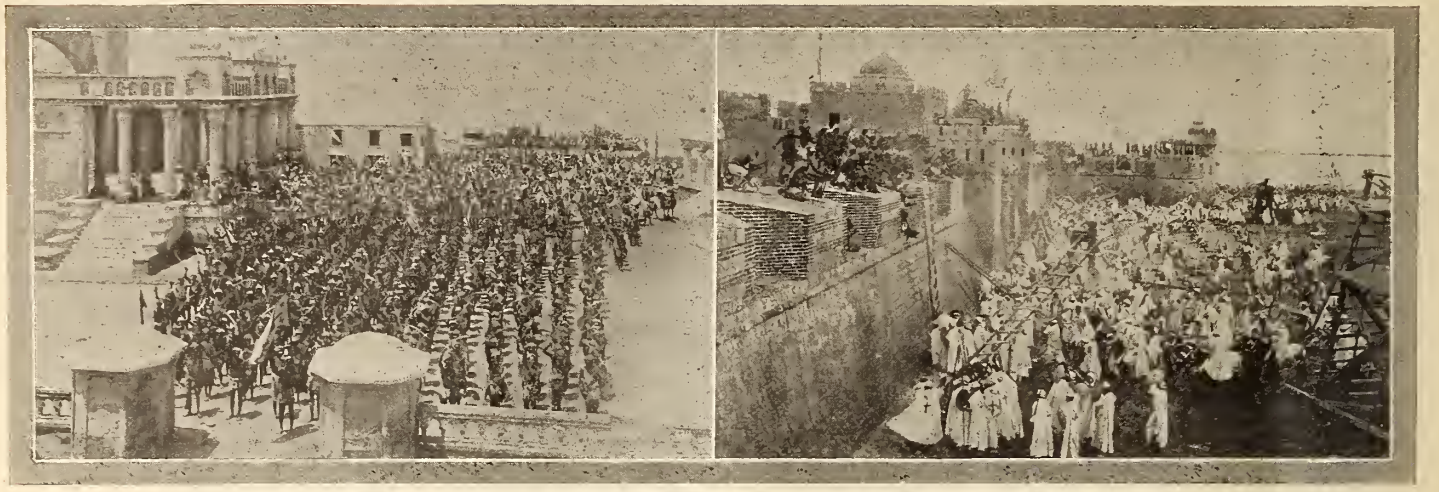
The story picturized in the five reels of "The River of Romance" was blended by Director Henry Otto with the wonderful natural scenic effects to be found in the famous archipelago in the St. Lawrence River. Considerable delay was met with in the making of the picture, however, by reason of the inclement weather. During the players' stay at Clayton, N. Y., rain fell for six consecutive days. And on most of the days when it was not actually raining it was either too misty or too cloudy to take pictures.

The nearness of the release date caused both the director and stars to work under high pressure in order to take advantage of every moment of sunlight.

Anxiety to complete the production led the entire company several times to start out in a motor boat for a location despite the rain. There to wait for the precious moments when the sun broke through the clouds. In this manner director Otto managed to obtain five or six scenes a day that otherwise would not have been gotten in time.

The company included Mr. Lockwood, Miss Allison, Miss Allison's mother— Director Henry Otto, and his assistant Bennett Molter, Lester Cuneo, Ray Smallwood, Stanley Mason, James Sweeny and Ben H. Grimm.

It is planned by the Yorke Film Corporation, of which Fred. J. Balshofer is president, to send the company to Hollywood. Mr. Balshofer's studio which has previously been the working place of the Quality Pictures Corporation, of which Mr. Balshofer is also the head, will in the future be used by the Metro-Yorke company of players.



LEVY SUCCEEDS ALEXANDER, WHO WILL REPRESENT FOX IN LONDON

Jack Levy, former manager of the booking department of the Fox exchange in Dallas, has been appointed manager of the New York exchange, succeeding William Alexander.

William Alexander has been appointed European representative of the Fox Film Corporation. His headquarters will be: Fox Film Company, Limited, Fox Film Building, 74-76 Old Compton street, London, England.

SUCCESS OF "DIANA" DECIDES UNITY TO BRING OUT MORE CLASSIC MYTHS

"Diana," the classical photo drama produced by the Unity Sales Corporation, has proven such a success at the Strand theatre, New York, that Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager of the concern, has decided to produce a cycle of the classic myths including such famed legends as "Theseus" and "The Golden Fleece." At present the plans are to produce these works with colored effects and large companies including Paul Swan and Baroness Von Dewitz, who appeared in "Diana."

SUB-COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO DRAW PLANS FOR NEW TRADE ASSOCIATION HOLD 2ND MEETING

A second meeting of the sub-committee empowered by the general committee to draw up plans for the formation of a national trade association, met at the office of the V-L-S-E on Thursday, June 22. The following were present: W. W. Irwin, Nicholas Power, Jesse L. Lasky, Jules Brulatour, Lee W. Ochs, L. L. Levine, W. M. Seabury, J. H. Hallberg, Tracy Lewis and W. A. Johnston.

Reports were submitted by the committee on Constitution and By-Laws, and the Committee on Budget. A further meeting was called for Monday, June 26.

It was decided to hold a meeting of the General Committee at luncheon at the Hotel Astor on July 6. The Committee in charge consists of Edward Earl, J. H. Hallberg and E. K. Gillett.

CLEO MADISON WILL BE SEEN IN MODERNIZED VERSION OF "LA TOSCA"

Cleo Madison, Universal star, who has been producing the pictures in which she stars, will have the leading role in a production of a modernized version of "La Tosca." The Universal Company has selected Miss Madison for stellar honors in the feature. The story of the opera will be the basis of the photoplay. Miss Madison is engaged now in gathering a wardrobe for the picture, and is supervising many of the arrangements for its production. The feature will be released on the Bluebird program.

WANT TO CLOSE THEATRES 15 DAYS TO STIMULATE FALL BUSINESS

Cleveland, June 24.

There is a motion on foot to secure, by means of a scattering vote, the exhibitor attitude toward closing the motion picture houses of Cleveland for fifteen days in July. It is contended that the closing will stimulate fall business, beside giving the houses an opportunity for housecleaning. This proposition has been favorably received by some of the smaller outlying houses, but the downtown houses are expected to use their influence against any closing whatever.

Many Priceless Sculptures and Finest Examples of Modern Painting in the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, Were Studied by Director of "Daughter of the Gods"

WHEN "A Daughter of the Gods," Herbert Brenon's gigantic William Fox picture starring Annette Kellermann is offered during the coming summer, its author wishes the world to know the various sources of his inspiration. In the works of many artists Mr. Brenon found suggestions from which he built his picture.

After the director was commissioned by William Fox to produce the picture, he repaired to the Metropolitan Art Museum in New York. There he studied statues and paintings that made such a firm impression on his mind that certain scenes in "A Daughter of the Gods" bear close resemblance to the work created by these artists. Winslow Homer's "The Gulf Stream," is recreated and elaborated in the picture by way of a battle between natives and sharks. The opening scenes of the production will bear a close resemblance to the combination of Cabanel's "The Birth of Venus" and Coypel's "Venus and the Sea Nymphs."

Sketches of these and other works were made and taken to Jamaica and there were carefully done before the camera by the director. Other works which furnished suggestion and inspiration to Mr. Brenon are "Moonrise," by Frederick Church; "A North Easter," "Canon Rock," and "The Maine Coast," by Homer; "Beaching the Boat," by Joaquin Sarollay Bastidax; "The Surf," by Emil Carlsen; "Isle of Shoals," by Childe Hassam; "The Waterfall," by Twachtman.

Mr. Brenon, as is generally known, did not stop here in his research work. Architecture of all styles and periods was studied diligently by Mr. Brenon. However when it came to the final cutting of the picture Mr. Brenon thought of other things than his art. His last ten thousand feet of film combine dramatic action and that which is artistic to an unusual degree.

Kalem Sets July 28 as Date for First Ivy Close Comedy

"The Girl and the Tenor" Is Name of Initial Release of Comedies Featuring English Beauty—These Subjects Will Appear on General Program Fridays

THE Kalem Company announces July 28 as the date of release for the first of the one-reel comedies to feature Ivy Close, who recently came to this country to take up screen work. "The Girl and the Tenor" is the title of the initial Ivy Close comedy.

The new Kalem subjects will be released in the regular service of the General Film Company, Friday being the program date selected for them. Kalem officials, following the first private view of "The Girl and the Tenor" last week were enthusiastic over the prospects for Ivy Close subjects. "I feel certain," declared Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company to the News, "that exhibitors, will place them in the front rank of popularity, both because of the wonderful beauty and stability of Miss Close, and because of the strength of the supporting cast and the stories.

"I believe that Henry Murdock, who has become such a favorite in Sis Hopkins' comedies, is seen to even better advantage in the Ivy Close picture. He is a natural fun-maker and playing opposite Miss Close makes a combination that could not be bettered."

William McKey, Arthur Albertson, C. D. Peruchi and Mary Taylor-Ross, are others seen in the cast of "The Girl and the Tenor." Ivy close is seen as the daughter of a theatrical magnate who sets out to sign the great tenor, Signor Bologna, played by Henry Murdock, and as a result of the opposition of a rival manager and the jealousy of the signor's wife meets with a series of laughable adventures.

EXHIBITORS AND CHURCH SOCIETIES LOCK HORNS OVER CENSORSHIP

Exhibitors of Hutchinson, Kan., are pitted against church enthusiasts on the question of abolishing the present State moving picture censorship. The church oppositon is mostly from societies of young people who wish to erase all traces of suggestiveness from the screen.

Metro Plans for Summer Include Extensive Program

Besides the "Romeo and Juliet" Production, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in Stellar Roles, Many New Stars and Directors Have Been Engaged—Regular Players and Directors Work at Top Speed—Special Attraction Is "A Virginia Romance"—Mme. Petrova Will Star in Feature Written by Herself

METRO'S summer activities include an extensive program. In addition to the screen production of "Romeo and Juliet," with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in the stellar roles, several new stars and directors have been engaged. The regular stars and directors are being worked at top-speed, and newly arranged one-reel weekly features will form an interesting section of the new program.

A special attraction, in the nature of a booster for summer business, is the two-reel subject, "A Virginia Romance," in which Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne are starred. This is the first time that these two have ever appeared on the Metro program in a feature less than five reels in length. The story, written by Charles A. Taylor, is of college life in the southland.

Among the new stars at work on Metro production is Irene Fenwick, who recently joined the Metro forces. She has appeared in several big screen productions, but is perhaps best known for her work upon the speaking stage. She last appeared in the theatre in "The Co-respondent," which had a successful run on Broadway last season. She was also the star of "The Song of Songs," and many other noted stage productions. Miss Fenwick is now at Delaware Water Gap, Pa., at the head of a strong company of players. The production is as yet unnamed, and is being produced under the direction of William Nigh.

Emmy Wehlen Begins Work in Five-Reeler

Emmy Wehlen, who made her debut in motion pictures on the Metro program last season in "When a Woman Loves," has begun work on another five-part feature, the first of several she will make at the Metro-Rolfe studio. George D. Baker, who was directing at the Vitagraph company until a few weeks ago, has been engaged to direct the Wehlen features. Mr. Baker has been in the theatrical and motion picture business practically all his life, and was a member of the producing firm of Cassell and Baker before taking the directorship in the silent drama.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison are now at work under the direction of Henry Otto, who is a recent addition to the Metro directing forces, making the final exterior scenes at the Thousand Islands on "The River of Romance," a five-part production which will be released July 17. Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison, with a supporting company headed by Lester Cuneo, will leave for California in ten days or two weeks, where the Metro-Yorke company has taken over a studio.

Mabel Taliaferro has just begun work on another five-part feature, the first of six big productions which she has contracted to do for Metro. It is called "God's Half Acre," and was written by June Mathis. Edwin Carewe is directing all the Taliaferro features.

Mme. Petrova is working at the Popular Plays and Players on the final scenes of "The Eternal Question." This production was delayed on account of the continued rainy weather. Harry Revier continues as supervising director at the Metro-Popular Plays and Players studio, it is announced.

Mme. Petrova in Own Production

Upon the completion of "The Secret of Eve" Mme. Petrova will be starred in a production which she has written herself. She will also assist in the direction of this feature, as she does in every one of her productions.

Edmund Breese will also begin work within the next week or so on another production at the Popular Plays and Players studio. He was last seen on the Metro program in "The Spell of the Yukon." His next picture will be another picturization of a poem by Robert W. Service, the "Kipling of the North."

Charles Horan, who has just completed "The Quitter," with Lionel Barrymore in the starring role, is now at work on the scenario of "The Upheaval," which will be put in production within a few days with Mr. Barrymore in the stellar part.

Max Figman and Lolita Robertson, who recently joined the Metro forces, have been engaged to make one-reel comedy features. Their first offering is "Her Birthday Gift." They are working under the auspices of the Rolma Film Corporation, a newly organized producing company on the Metro program. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, who have been making single-reel comedy features for Metro, have been away on a two weeks' vacation in the Adirondacks, and upon their return will at once begin work on another of their laughmakers.

Big Four Prepares Program to Make People Forget Hot Spell

On July 3, Vitagraph's "Conflict" Is Offering from V-L-S-E, "Fathers of Men," Comes on the 10th, and "The Tarantula" Will Sting Dull Patronage on the 17th

DEVISED to aid exhibitors to combat the hot weather, by providing them with productions of such strength as to draw the public inside their theatres, despite the heat, the Big Four has compiled a program of July releases of exceptional merit.

Of the Vitagraph offerings, "The Conflict," released July 3, featuring Lucille Lee Stewart, is a compelling drama of a battle of hearts and wits by two women, one rich and the other poor.

Robert Edeson, Naomi Childers and Bobby Connelly are featured in "Fathers of Men," released under the "V" banner, on July 10. It is a story of a family feud that arose when one man stole the wife of another.

Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno will be seen in "The Tarantula," on July 17. The Senorita falls in love with Teddy Steele, who trifles with her love. She learns, too late, that the woman always pays.

Anita Stewart is to be seen in a new vehicle, "The Daring of Diana," on July 24, in which she is pictured as a newspaper reporter.

"Hesper of the Mountains," released July 31, presents Lillian Walker and Evart Overton. It is a story of a rich girl who goes West, much to her dislike, but who comes to a realization of the fact that real men are bred there.

Lubin will offer "The Light at Dusk" on July 31, featuring Orrin Johnson, the well-known Broadway star. Vladimir Krestovsky deserts his wife and baby in Russia and, coming to America, becomes a big factor in steel world. He marries the daughter of a fellow millionaire, but she later dies. His Russian wife and daughter also come to America years later. With them is the daughter's husband. Later a child is born and the young husband appeals to his employer, Krestovsky, and a reunion results.

Selig has produced "The Prince Chap," which will be released on July 24. In "The Prince Chap" Marshal Neilan, the director of the production, returns to the screen. Scenes for this picture were taken in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Associated with Mr. Neilan in its production are Mary Charleson, who recently joined the Selig forces; Bessie Eyton, and George Fawcett.

"According to the Code," which features Lewis S. Stone, Marguerite Clayton and E. H. Calvert will be offered by Essanay on July 10.

PATHE CLUB TO HAVE OUTING ON JULY 23

The Pathe Club, under the presidency of J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, has become very active. The club has a membership of about 125, which includes Frederic R. Coudert, Paul Fuller, Jr., and H. L. Kingsbury of Coudert Bros.; L. J. Gasnier, president of the Astra Film Corporation; Rube Goldberg, the cartoonist; Dr. Rumley of the Evening Mail; Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow; Edward Jose, general director of the Feature Film Corporation; E. K. Wheeler, treasurer of the Feature Film Corporation, and others.

A steamer has been chartered for July 23 and an all-day outing will be enjoyed at some point up the Hudson or on the Sound. Athletic contests and various games have been arranged and a number of attractive prizes put up.

The officers of the club are J. A. Berst, president; P. Brunet, vice-president; P. A. Parsons, secretary, and G. Bardet, treasurer. The Board of Governors include above and M. Ramirez-Torres, F. H. Knocke, G. A. Smith, A. Rousseau and F. C. Davidson.

Through an arrangement made between William A. Brady and George Kleine, the Billie Burke serial, "Gloria's Romance," at the Globe theatre, is to share the program with World Film productions, and Kitty Gordon has already made her bow at that theatre in her third feature, "The Crucial Test." Miss Burke's serial will occupy the same important role at the Globe that has characterized it and the addition of the World features will be prerelease, with a change of production each Sunday.

Kitty Gordon

Mr. Kleine is showing the eighth and ninth chapters of the Billie Burke serial this week and will also change each week to the chapters released on a Monday following their opening performance at the Globe.

This arrangement is permanent and will continue at the Globe during the life of the Kleine serial there, according to the announcement.

Cleveland Film Men Form a Screen Club

Besides Exchangemen, Exhibitors and Manufacturers, Newspaper Representatives Are Eligible for Membership—C. E. Shurtleff of V-L-S-E Is Prime Mover in Organizing Body

Cleveland, June 24.

CLEVELAND motion picture interests have combined to form a club to be called the Cleveland Screen Club. Exchangemen, exhibitors, manufacturers, and newspaper representatives will be eligible to membership to the club, which is being formed along the lines of the most successful organizations of the kind in the country. These various branches of the motion picture industry, while working independently heretofore, have felt the need of getting together for the general good.

Such a foregathering brings about an opportunity for the discussion of questions relative to the industry, for exchange of information of value to all, and for the promotion of better understanding among Cleveland film men, manufacturers, exchange representatives and exhibitors. While all have felt the need of such an organization, it fell to C. E. Shurtleff of the V-L-S-E exchange to be the prime mover in gathering the men together and forming the club.

The plans at present are to meet twice a month at a luncheon at the Statler Hotel, the luncheon to be followed by a business meeting. At the next meeting on June 27, the organization will be perfected, and plans will be discussed for the fall and winter activities. The principal future event will be a projected motion picture ball at which the screen stars will be present as guests, and motion pictures in the making will be shown.

The following are charter members of the Cleveland Screen Club:

Exchange men: Paul C. Mooney and Joseph Williams, Fox Film Corporation; P. A. Bloch and Irwin H. Hirsh, World Film Corporation; J. R. Johnson, Pathe exchange; W. E. Lusk, Mutual exchange; W. W. Gulp, Bluebird exchange; H. A. Bandy, Triangle exchange; Max Milder, General exchange; C. E. Shurtleff and A. M. Holch, V-L-S-E exchange.

Exhibitors: Mark Greenbaum and Jack Greenbaum, Alhambra theatre; David Adler, Strand; Joseph Grossman, Standard; F. P. Woda, Orpheum; Will J. Freedman, Metropolitan; E. N. Downs and M. Printz, Knickerbocker; Harry J. Bailey, Doan; W. C. Kaspar, Fairyland, and Benj. J. Sawyer, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Northeastern Ohio.

Manufacturing companies: R. H. McLaughlin and Johnny Ray, the Reserve Photo Play Company; J. D. Raridan, the Sunbeam Motion Picture Corporation; James A. Fitzgerald, Midland Film Corporation.

Winner of Lasky-Columbia Photodrama Contest Announced

"Humility O'Hedford" by Dr. R. Ralston Reed, a Physician of Morristown, N. J., Is Story Selected by William C. de Mille—Plot Deals With Colonial Witchcraft

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made by Professor V. O. Freeburg, who started last winter a class in photodramatics in Columbia University, that the prize play contest under the auspices of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company had been concluded and the producing firm had selected as the best of more than a score of photoplays submitted, one entitled "Humility O'Hedford," by Dr. R. Ralston Reed, a physician of Morristown, N. J.

When the class was first organized last autumn, Samuel Goldfish in a letter to Columbia University offered the co-operation of the Lasky Company in conducting a contest for the best photoplay written during the initial year of the class. William C. De Mille, a Columbia Alumnus, who almost since its inception has been actively identified with the producing department of the Lasky Company, personally read the manuscripts which were submitted several weeks ago.

The successful conclusion of the Columbia-Lasky Prize Contest showed an interesting phase of the activity of the new photodramatic department of the Lasky Company. Several weeks ago Mr. Lasky announced that the producing firm in order to better co-operate with American writers, would move its scenario department from the studio at Hollywood, California, to the executive office in New York. Hector Turnbull, formerly dramatic critic of the New York Tribune, and for the past year identified as a writer for the Lasky studies, is in charge of the scenario department.

Although the studio is 3,000 miles away from New York all the work of preparation on the script preliminary to its actual production for the screen will be done in New York and the finished manuscript forwarded to California.

Jesse L. Lasky expressed his belief that with the success of Columbia University's Photodramatic Department, other universities and colleges throughout the country would follow Columbia's lead in this direction. It is likely that the Columbia University-Lasky Prize Photoplay Contest will become an annual feature. No details of Dr. Reed's play were made public.

"Co-operation from Film Maker to Exhibitor"—Freuler

Organization With Such an Aim Is Necessary, Says President of Mutual—"Every Problem of the Business Is in a Very Definite Sense an Exhibitor's Problem"

PRESIDENT JOHN R. FREULER, of the Mutual Film Corporation, is distinctly in favor of an organization or association of the motion picture interests including every ramification of the business from the manufacturer to the exhibitor. Discussing the movement which began with the recent meeting of motion picture men at Delmonico's in New York, Mr. Freuler said:

"That such an association is necessary, vitally necessary, to the continued success and prosperity of the industry ought to be self-evident. Never has the history of American business seen so great an industry as the motion picture development with so little organization, so little co-operation of the interests which should be allied in a common cause.

"There are certain conditions and problems which are identical and equally important to manufacturer, distributor and exhibitor. There is no reason whatever save inefficiency within ourselves which can keep us from working on the common problems for the common good. We have only to evolve a way in which to give adequate and equitable shares in representation and responsibility to each branch of the business.

"The exhibitor should recognize the bigness of his interest in this movement. He should recognize, too, his important position as the man who controls the screen, which is the most powerful medium of addressing the public that the arts of expression have ever devised. Every problem of the business is in a very definite sense an exhibitor's problem."

BARONESS VON DeWITZ IS WITH FOX

Baroness von DeWitz, international actress, has joined the William Fox forces. She was formerly the star of the Royal Danish ballet, and she has been in this country for several years, dancing and acting in moving pictures.

The baroness's life has been chock-full of romance. She met her husband near ancient Kronberg Castle, where the Elsinore forest lends a romantic background. The place is called Hamlet's Grove, and a bronze statue of Shakespeare's hero stands there.

The Baroness's little son, fifteen months old, is named Hamlet.

Baroness von DeWitz is of the true Danish type—large, with big eyes, and long golden hair that hangs in unconfined ringlets over her shoulders. She looks more like a little girl than a woman.

Director James Vincent has charge of the new Fox picture in which the baroness is to appear. It is said to deal with a Scandinavian subject.

SCREAMERS MAKE NOISE FOR FIRST ANNUAL BALL, JULY 1.

Los Angeles, June 24.

Invitations have been issued by the Screamers for the first annual reception and ball given by this organization of publicity writers of the west coast film colony. The guests for this event will be California members of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, directors, leading actors and actresses and principals of the film industry. The ball will be given at the Gamut Club on the evening of Saturday, July 1.

Committees appointed by Chairman J. C. Jessen consist of William E. Wing, Bennie Ziedman and Clarke Irvine, arrangements; M. G. Jonas, Carlyle Robinson and Kenneth McGaffey, entertainment; invitations, Kenneth O'Hara and Mabel Condon. All Screamers will serve as members of the reception and floor committees and participate in securing refreshments.

CALKINS TAKES MANY BLUEBIRD ORDERS

William A. Calkins, manager of the Bluebird exchange of the Intermountain territory, is annexing several new accounts each week. Calkins has been over all the territory and reports that the outlook for the Bluebirds is very good throughout the district covered by him.

"How Britain Prepared" in Two New York Theatres

Unable to Accommodate Crowds at Lyceum, Where Official British Film Shows Kitchener's 5,000,000 Civilians Turned Into Soldiers, Patriot Puts Print in Standard

UNABLE to satisfy the crowds that wished to obtain admission to the Lyceum theatre, in New York, where the official British motion pictures showing how Kitchener transformed over 5,000,000 civilians into an efficient fighting force, and Admiral Jellicoe's Great North Sea Fleet, the Patriot Film Corporation has been compelled to place a second print of the picture in the Standard theatre, as well as to extend the engagement at the Lyceum theatre. The Lyceum had been engaged for a run of four weeks, but large numbers of people who desired to obtain admission to the house were unable to do so.

The Standard theatre has consequently been engaged to take care of the overflow crowds, and since the first performance there, capacity business has been the rule.

Speaking of the business enjoyed by the film, Al. Lichtman, general manager of the Patriot Film Corporation, said: "We are, of course, highly gratified by the remarkable success of our picture. However, it is nothing more than we expected. I do not think that any film has been so well received by the critics since "The Birth of a Nation." It is most timely; the entire country is vitally interested in the Preparedness movement, and our picture is a splendid exposition of the unending toil necessary to the making of an army out of a number of civilians. And, as one reviewer said, 'the picture is performing a national service in making known the perils of unpreparedness."

"We have been deluged with requests for bookings from all over the country," continued Mr. Lichtman. "However, we are not yet ready to place the attraction in any but the largest houses that can offer the most attractive booking. At present, the production is being shown in about ten legitimate theatres throughout the country, where it has been booked for indefinite runs. From the reports I have received to date, the showings seem to be good for several months in all of the theatres the picture is now playing. Within the course of a week or so, I expect to have at least twenty prints working in different parts of the country."

Chaplin Loses Legal Fight to Restrain Showing of "Carmen"

Decision in Favor of Essanay and V-L-S-E Is Affirmed by Appellate Division of Supreme Court—Comedian Now Faces Half Million Dollar Suit by Essanay

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has lost his last card in his legal fight against the Essanay Company and the V-L-S-E, which he sought to restrain from exhibiting the burlesque on "Carmen," in which he was starred.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court was the tribunal to rule against the comedian, it having handed down a decision affirming the order of the Supreme Court in favor of the defendants.

In his original application for an injunction to restrain the Big Four from exploiting the "Carmen" feature, Chaplin sought simply to prevent the showing of the film. When that was denied, he appealed. This action was argued two weeks ago, before the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, and the decision last week was the result.

Chaplin now finds himself face to face with a half-million dollar suit brought against him by the Essanay Company. In their complaint, filed in Los Angeles, the Essanay Company charge Chaplin with breach of contract, alleging that he failed to appear in four comedies called for in his contract. This suit will be called up at a near date, Chaplin already having been served with the papers.

According to the wording of the suit, Chaplin agreed, in July, 1915, to aid in the production of ten two-reel comedies before January 1, 1916, for each of which he was to receive a bonus of $10,000 over and above his salary of $1,250 per week.

UNITY TO BRING OUT VERSION OF "LOTTERY MAN"

The latest photo play acquired by the Unity Sales Corporation is the photo drama version of "The Lottery Man," in which Thurlow Bergen is starred.

"The Lottery Man" is a sprightly comedy-drama dealing with the adventures of a reckless newspaper man who put himself up as a prize for the fairer sex. He is fairly swamped with matrimonial offers but the winner of the lottery appears to be his sweetheart's cook.

PACIFIC PICTURES COMPANY AT WORK ON FOURTH SUBJECT WITH BINNEY IN THE LEAD

Los Angeles, June 24.

The Pacific Pictures Producing Company is now on its fourth subject with Josh Binney as lead. One has been titled "Heart Throbs." It deals with the misfortunes that beset a family as the result of a son becoming involved financially by gambling. In the climax the daughter is prevented from marrying the heavy when another woman appears at the wedding and answers the question that it should not be.

A comedy is entitled "Smoke," and deals with the evil of the smoke habit from the viewpoint of the women, playing up their intentions of eventually attempting to stop men from the use of tobacco. Ultimately there is a happy compromise when the men buy presents for their wives with the coupons they received at the cigar stores.

The third subject now in production will be known as "Up from the Depths," and consists of two reels. The scenario is by C. G. Barr, and has for its principal character an orphan girl, accustomed to misfortunes, who marries a crook to secure a home. She is mistreated by her husband, and when he brutally attacks her on the street, a clubman comes to her aid. Later the clubman is attacked by the crook and his followers, an attempt made to shanghai him, but the wife learns of this and prevents the carrying out of the act.

Seven Companies Are at Work Under World Directors

Frank Crane Is at Saranac Lake Supervising "The World Against Him," Emile Chautard Is Busy with "Nathan Hale," and Barry O'Neill Is Producing "The Scourging Way"

Latest Poses of Ethel Clayton, the World Film Star

WITH all the productions completed which will be released during the summer, the Paragon and Peerless studios, and the production departments of the World Film Corporation, under William A. Brady's direction, are busily engaged on the program that will obtain with that company throughout the forthcoming regular theatrical season.

Seven companies are actively engaged at present with another company assembling now to begin work upon the return of Maurice Tourneur from his first vacation in eleven years, and will begin producing next week.

Frank Crane, supervising the production of "The World Against Him," has been at Saranac Lake for the past ten days directing E. K. Lincoln, June Elvidge and a large cast of players. During the eight days Mr. Crane's company had been at the mountain resort, they succeeded in working one day.

Emile Chautard, who recently completed "Friday the 13th," is in charge of the production of "Nathan Hale," in which Robert Warwick will make his future appearance. Chautard, Warwick and the company, including Gail Kane and Alec Francis, have been at Boston for the past week.

Barry O'Neill, who created "Husband and Wife" in fourteen working days and whose picture is said to be one of the finest yet produced by the World Film Corporation, is now in his fifth day on the production of "The Scourging Way," with another all-star cast headed by Holbrook Blinn, Ethel Clayton and little Madge Evans.

Harley Knoles is in charge of the production end of the next Alice Brady picture, "Miss Petticoats," and recently returned from New Bedford, where a great many of the water scenes were staged on board an old whaler.

Mollie King is to begin work next week on her next production which has not been named as yet but which will, in all likelihood, be a story calling for Miss King's appearance as a waif.

"The Almighty Dollar" has been completed by Robert T. Thornby with E. K. Lincoln, Frances Nelson and June Elvidge and will begin next week with an all-star cast in another production.

The policy adopted by William A. Brady of having two productions on hand for each company, now allows for the working in the studio on the second production when continued bad weather prevents location and exterior work. Thus, during the past two weeks, with the exception of Frank Crane's company at Saranac Lake, the inclement weather has not interfered to a great extent with the regular work at the Paragon and Peerless studios.

Pathe Program Made Ready Up to July 17

Last 2 Episodes of "Claw," 2 Chapters of "Guilty," 2 "Lonesome Luke" Comedies, a Goldberg Cartoon, 4 Scenics and 4 News Weeklies for Release Next 2 Weeks

LAST two episodes of "The Iron Claw;" two chapter of "Who's Guilty?"; two "Lonesome Luke" comedies; a Goldberg cartoon; four scenic pictures and four issues of the Pathe News make up Pathe program for the next two weeks.

Beginning July 3 the Pathe Company will release "The Cave of Despair," the next to the final chapter of "The Iron Claw."

Following "The Cave of Despair" comes "The Weaker Strain," the latest chapter of the "Who's Guilty?" series, featuring Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore. This briefly, is the idea of "The Weaker Strain": If the wife of a young man, just climbing toward success in his profession, is gifted with an unusually splendid voice; and if she can add to their income by singing in public; and if the husband believes that it is his duty to support his wife and her duty to be content to live within his income—is the wife justified in deciding on a career for herself?

"Luke's Washful Waiting" is the title of a one-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedy, for release in the week of July 3. In it Luke gets an afternoon off and calls on his fair one. They have an untimely accident, however, and when they pick themselves out of the mud, hike to the nearest tailor-shop. The girl can't be accomodated by the tailor, because he's not that kind of a tailor; so she goes next door to a Chinese laundry to be washed and ironed. The places adjoin, there is considerable mixup and the film ends in a medley of trousers, and flat-irons. Luke, a firehose, Beb, a fire-hose, pig-tails, a fire-hose, and so on.

A Goldberg cartoon comedy, "Nutty News," comes next.

"Across the Malay Archipelago" is the title of a split reel scenic and educational picture following the Goldberg cartoon. The film treats in a casual way, the big, impressive, typical scenes of the peninsula. The use of elephants as transports; the building of flimsy-seeming bridges across great gorges, and coolies working on the roads and in the jungle, all make for a half-reel of unusual interest.

"The Kinkajou," on the same reel with "Across the Malay Archipelago," shows the Kinkajou, a carnivorous animal of the raccoon family, which is found in the wooded regions of Mexico and as far south as Brazil.

Two issues of the Pathe News, Nos. 54 and 55, released on Wednesday, July 5 and Saturday, July 8, respectively, wind up the Pathe program for the week of July 3.

OHIO LEAGUE TO CALL CONVENTION ON JULY 6-7

Cleveland, June 24.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors League met on Tuesday. A motion was made and carried, to request the state president, Lamont Smith, of Alliance, O., to call a state convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League at Mansfield, O., on Thursday and Friday, July 6 and 7, for the purpose of getting new recruits to join the league; also they will elect delegates to go to the National Convention in Chicago.

MURNANE, "CHIEF ASSISTANT VILLAIN" IN "MYRA," PLAYED WITH ANNIE RUSSELL AND LAWRENCE D'ORSAY

Allan Murnane, chief assistant villain in "The Mysteries of Myra," now being produced by the Whartons for the International Film Service, Inc., is the son of a prosperous Philadelphia merchant. Mr. Murnane's first engagement was with Annie Russell in "A Royal Family," where he did the juvenile lead. Associated with Mr. Murnane in this production were such stars as Lawrence D'Orsay, Charles Richman, Orrin Johnson, Richard Bennett, Mrs. Gilbert and William H. Thompson.

The year 1903 found him in "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," with Bertha Galland, followed by a season in "When We Were Twenty-one." The next year he scored successfully as Frank Fuller in "Mrs. Temple's Telegram."

Musical comedy then claimed him and he appeared in "Spangles." Then followed a long series of stock engagements which took him over the greater part of this country. During this time he played at the Bush Temple theatre, Chicago; the Davidson theatre, Milwaukee, the Princess, Toronto, the Chestnut Street Opera House,

Allan Murnane in the "Mysteries of Myra" Series, International

Philadelphia, the Keith, Portland, the Star, Buffalo and the Metropolitan, Minneapolis.

In producing "The Lottery Man" for the Shuberts, the Wharton Brothers chose Mr. Murnane for the juvenile lead. He then did the drug addict in "The City," also a Wharton production. His work in "Hazel Kirk" with Pearl White was productive of much favorable comment. He was then engaged for the part of Varney in "The Mysteries of Myra."

Los Angeles Preparedness Parade Brings Out Many Filmites

Members of Universal Take Active Part in Demonstration for National Defense—Marie Walcamp Impersonates Columbia, Riding on Beautifully Decorated Float

Los Angeles, Cal., June 24.

MANY members of the film colony participated in the Preparedness Parade given in Los Angeles, Flag Day, June 14. One section of the marching throng of seventy thousand was devoted to Actors and the Allied Arts, but in many parts of the line were representatives of filmdom.

Members of the Universal Film Company took a very active part in the parade. Marie Walcamp, leading woman of the producing organization, impersonated Columbia, riding on a beautifully decorated float, immediately following the marshal of the day and his staff. The actress wore a gown of silk, and from her shoulders hung a silken cape of the national colors. Throughout the two and a half miles of the march, she was cheered by the two hundred thousand citizens who lined the streets, filling windows and roofs on every hand.

The vehicle on which Miss Walcamp rode was the only one in the mammoth parade, thus giving a signal honor to the actress. Another feature participated in by the Universal was that portraying the spirit of 1916. Victor Potel marched as Uncle Sam pointing the way to the citizens and womens' training camp. Ernest Shields on one side of Uncle Sam and Marcia Moore on the other, represented the spirit of citizens ready to take advantage of the training camps.

There were a number of Weekly cameramen on the streets, and hundreds of feet of negative was made. The Universal photographers secured approximately five hundred feet, and had it showing a few minutes after the last of the parade had passed the Superba theatre. The exposed film was rushed to the laboratories of the Universal, a distance of thirteen miles, developed, a print made, and the latter delivered to the theatre in record time. Other companies had reels of the parade at other theatres the same evening.

The Universal part of the parade was handled by M. G. Jonas, manager of the publicity department and his aides, and their part was far more conspicuous than the representation of any other company. The motion picture division was under the command of Hampton Del Ruth, manager of production of the Keystone studio, who was assisted by John Glarey of the same company, and conspicuous among the marchers were Dustin Farnum of the Morosco-Pallas Company; William Burress, Fox Film organization; Harry McCoy, Keystone; Ruth St. Denis, Billy Elmer of Lasky Company, and many others.

Because of the great interest in the Preparedness Parade, theatre men paid particular attention to patriotic programs. J. A. Quinn of the Empress theatre, booked the Vitagraph patriotic picture, "The Battle Cry of Peace" for the week, which he renamed "Preparedness," and played to capacity business afternoons and nights.

KALEM WILL PRODUCE WESTERN SUBJECTS

The steadily increasing demand among exhibitors for productions of the Western type, noted by experienced exchange men for some time past, has caused Kalem to take steps in this direction that should meet with a ready response. The first of the Westerns announced by Kalem for forthcoming release is a single reel drama, "Notch Number Nine," scheduled on the General Film Program Wednesday, July 5.

Helen Gibson is among the stars seen in this story of a "two-gun man" of the old West.

EXHIBITORS SEEK FIRST RUN BOOKINGS OF "FADED FLOWER"

Though it is not expected to be ready for release until the first of July, "The Faded Flower," the Ivan play which is now in process of filming, is being sought for first-run showing by the leading circuits in New York.

It is the first all-star cast picture to be made by the Ivan film productions. Marguerite Snow, Alma Hanlon, Rose Coghlan, Arthur Donaldson and Edward Mackay, all well-known figures in the theatrical and screen world, have been assembled by Mr. Abramson to enact the roles in "The Faded Flower," his latest screen play.

From present indications, "The Faded Flower" should be ready for release about July 1, when it will be distributed as the regular scheduled Ivan release for July.

GENERAL OFFICES OF POPULAR PLAYS AND PLAYERS MOVED TO LONGACRE BUILDING

The general offices of the Popular Plays and Players, whose feature productions starring Mme. Petrova, Edmund Breese, and other artists, are released on the Metro program, have been removed from the Times Building to more spacious quarters in the Longacre Building, at 48 West Forty-eighth street. The principal studio of the Popular Plays and Players is located in West Thirty-fifth street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues.

Is the Film Business Prosperous? Ask 'Em in the Middle West

Or Rather, Watch the Exhibitors—They're Buying Automobiles (And a Man Isn't Likely to Do That in Slump Times) and Spending Thousands on Improvements

Omaha, Neb., June 24.

TWO things indicate prosperity with a middle western exhibitor. One is buying an automobile. The other is remodeling his theatre. Exhibitors in the Omaha territory have done more remodeling this spring than ever before, and they are keeping it up. J. E. Flynn, assistant manager of the General branch in Omaha, has just completed a trip through southern Iowa. "I found very few towns where something had not been done in the way of improving at least one theatre. N. Samish of the Willard, Creston, Ia., is almost making his house over, spending several thousand dollars. This is just one instance, too.

"By the way, I found exhibitors almost demanding the big stars in shorter pictures. Putting five reels of nothing around a star, just because he or she is a star, is getting tiresome. They want to show several pictures in each show, and they want a star in the show, too."

J. E. Kirk, of the Pathe exchange, has just returned from an automobile and train trip through Nebraska, stopping at the larger cities and a number of the smaller towns. "Corn is coming up too slow for a boom in the smaller towns," he said, "but in the larger places crowded houses are the rule. Everybody seems to have money. Cattle price records on the Omaha exchange have been smashed. Film price records are not being smashed, but records in the demand for films are."

To show how truly Kirk spoke, five minutes later Jake Mitchell, manager of the Laemmle branch, telephoned, wanting to borrow twenty empty film boxes.

"We've run out. They have to have the films, and there is nothing down here for us to send them in," he explained.

"By golly, Jake, we haven't got a single box in the house that is not going to be used this very night. We were talking it over not an hour ago and have to order some more. You know, old man, I'd let you have them if I had them."

Mitchell, half an hour later, was found up to his neck in work. "It is my first week as acting manager," he said, "and of course it has to be a record week in business. I have some dandy ideas for publicity I want to get out, but I can't find time to develop them. Besides, what's the use, with business growing like it is, anyway!"

Phil Goldstone, manager of the World exchange, never took a vacation last year, expecting to take one this year. "When'll it be?" he was asked.

"Yes, when'll it be!" he exclaimed. "Harry Heyman has been out in Iowa and sending in orders by parcel post. Honest, we never had so much business in such a short time before."

Max Weisfeldt, manager of the Mutual exchange, had to go to Lincoln for one day last week. He almost had nervous prostration, he said, at having to be off the job so long. The Mutual forces have almost had to work overtime every night handling the rush of business.

The rush means that several of the new theatres, already mentioned in the Motion Pictures News, have opened; that a number of houses are showing more nights a week or are putting on matinees; that more films are being shown, and, what is most important, that more people are going to see pictures.

Mutual in Washington, D. C., Touches Top-Notch in Bookings

"Our Books Show Greater Receipts, the Exhibitors Using Our Service Report Greater Patronage and the Outlook Is Better Than at Any Time," Says Cunningham

B. C. CUNNINGHAM, manager of the Washington, D. C., Mutual exchange, has made an announcement that is significant of the stability of the motion picture industry and intelligence of the exhibitor of to-day. "Our books show greater receipts, the exhibitors using our service report greater receipts, and the outlook is more prosperous to-day than in any time of the picture industry," says Mr. Cunningham. "And we are asking higher rentals and getting it without a murmur from the exhibitor. This shows that the theatre managers are satisfied and the public is satisfied, and when an amusement reaches that state there is full cause for rejoicing on the part of the exchangeman. Nor is this confined to the large exhibitor nor those in the large cities. It is a universal status of affairs.

"Another significant fact is that there is more advertising matter being bought than formerly. The more costly the rental a picture, the larger is the order for paper and publicity material. The managers of theatres are not doing this on a risk. They have passed the experimental stage in advertising. They are advertising heavily because it pays. So long as the exhibitor is getting the financial returns, he has no complaint to register.

"Despite the high rental of the Chapman-Mutual films, I can't fill all the orders. Think of three of the largest Washington houses using these films simultaneously on the day of release. I am buying seven Chapman prints and keeping them all the time. Such a thing is almost unheard of in the history of the motion picture exchange business.

"'The Secret of the Submarine' is booked solid through August with a waiting list for future bookings. The clamor for it by exhibitors has been phenomenal. The popularity of the Helen Holmes series has not astonished us, but has delighted us greatly. After all the personality of the players is the strongest element in the pictures to-day, simply because the public demands artistic and dramatic finish in that personality.

"Of course booking pictures to-day is much more simplified than it used to be because the exhibitor has found it profitable to retain his film of big productions for several days. It is not easy to get a return engagement of a film after an elapse of a few days, because that film, if it is popular, is already booked far ahead. Films are not lying idle on the shelves now, because they are better made and the art of salesmanship in the picture business has risen wonderfully.

"Yes, the business side of the exchange is a whole heap more business-like and substantial than it used to be. I know because I've watched it grow and have helped in the watching. The stability of the industry is very significant; as is also the standardizing of the theatres through the intelligence of the exhibitors. The public, to be sure, has a big share in this process. It is very critical, very particular, and wants to be entertained, amused and educated, with the best the picture industry can offer."

"PEG O' THE RING" DRAWS BIG HOUSES IN KANSAS CITY

Special to Motion Picture News.

Kansas City, Mo., June 24.

Arthur N. Ford, manager of the Marple theatre, Wichita, Kansas, broke all records for attendance in his house on the day of the first showing of the serial "Peg o' the Ring," with a crowd of 2,500 people the first day. The Marple opens at 10:00 o'clock and on days when the serial is run Mr. Ford has found two or three hundred people waiting to see the picture.

Another instance of the power of the serial, "Peg o' the Ring," is the case of the Auditorium theatre, Marion, Kansas owned by Harry K. Rogers. The Kansas rivers have flooded the town four times in the last two weeks. This worked destruction to Mr. Rogers' patronage, but when the day for the serial came around the house was crowded. The people came through water to see the picture.

"COURT SUMMONS" AS A FORM OF NOVELTY ADVERTISING

Here is a piece of novelty advertising, which some exhibitors have used already, and which others will find serviceable in booming an exceptional attraction. It is in the form of a court summons, and is calculated to hit the recipient between the eyes. The cost of this sort of advertising bars its use except when the exhibitor has some unusual attraction.

Why a Detroit Theatre Has Been Giving Children's Matinees Successfully for Nineteen Months

CHILDREN'S matinees have been one of the successful features of the Alhambra theatre, Woodward and Kenilworth avenues, Detroit, Mich., owned by John H. Kunsky. These children's matinees have been going on for the past nineteen months.

Each Saturday afternoon has been given up to a program of pictures especially selected for young people and children. Manager Thomas D. Moule has made a study of children's matinees, which has brought him to the conclusion that the modern child does not want nor enjoy the simple, childish or kindergarten subjects. There must be life and action and plausibility in the stories; and the purely instructive pictures must bring the world before their eyes, showing how big and wonderful things are accomplished. The point that has been striven for in these children's matinees is the elimination of dangerous themes, unpleasant action and uninteresting, tiresome instruction.

The Alhambra has succeeded where many theatres have failed, in providing a children's matinee that captivates, instructs and holds the young folks' interest. The children do not feel that they are being given a childish entertainment. They see the best and the newest in the picture world today in a program selected with the greatest care, and their imagination is properly aroused and satisfied. It is this that has made the Alhambra children's matinees a success.

Just around the corner from the Alhambra on Kenilworth avenue, stands the Van Leuven-Browne Hospital School for Crippled children. One of the treats for the pupils of this school comes every Saturday afternoon when, under the supervision of their "Mother," Miss Van Leuven-Browne, they file into the Alhambra theatre for their day of entertainment. Manager Moule has extended an invitation to Miss Browne urging her to bring as many of her charges as can come to the children's matinee every Saturday.

COMMUNITY THEATRE PLANNED FOR TOPEKA AS OUTGROWTH OF CHILDREN'S MATINEES

If plans under contemplation by the committee in charge of the children's matinees in Topeka, Kas., are successfully engineered, next fall will witness the establishment of a community theatre, where older persons and children can enjoy themselves in the proper atmosphere. This plan was recently conceived by the committee of women from the Federation of Women and the Good Government Club. That committee is now in charge of the children's matinees at the Iris theatre, Topeka, each Saturday and is considering the closing of these performances with the end of the school term. While nothing definite to take their place next fall has been decided on, it is said that the committee is planning either to rent a hall for the winter and put in its own equipment, or else start a campaign for a community theatre.

At the present time the most difficult thing which the committee has to contend with is that of selecting pictures suitable for children. The women find the same difficulty in selecting good subjects as do the theatre men, although they are probably a trifle more stringent in their requirements. One woman of this city, Miss Carrie H. Simpson, who is, incidentally, a member of the board of censors, has completed a list of desirable pictures for children, consisting of over two hundred pictures which she has personally reviewed. The committee will probably use subjects chosen from her list.

CHILDREN'S PERFORMANCES DURING VACATION ARE POPULAR IN MIDDLE WEST

Children's shows during the vacation months are so popular in the middle west that exchange managers are taking unusual precautions to keep a sufficient number of juvenile films on hand to supply the demand. Theatre managers in the most unexpected places suddenly announce a children's show—either matinee or night—and demand a film.

The woman's club at Tabor, Ia., have passed a resolution calling upon Manager T. A. Boatwright to give children's shows at least weekly. The women had heard of the idea and were unanimously in favor of it. Boatwright will give children's shows every Tuesday.

Tuesday afternoon and evening L. C. Kier and Smith of the Airdome theatre, Sac City, Ia., will give special children's shows. Manager John Cummings of the Apollo theatre, Twenty-ninth and Leavenworth streets, Omaha, earned the praise of the Improvement club and the Mother's club of his vicinity by the type of children's matinees he has been giving recently. Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha started Cummings to giving the matinees, even furnishing the films free of charge the first few times, to convince the manager they paid.

Letters arrive on every mail, said Manager C. W. Taylor of the General in Omaha, asking about juvenile films. "I am glad to answer that thirty-four or two thirds of the films selected by the national board as best for children, are General films," he said.

ACTOR'S PRESENCE AFFORDS TWIST TO PRESS STORY FOR PICTURE RUN

"Richard Travers, well known Essanay actor, who attended Omaha's movie ball," is the way Manager William O. Jensen of the Lothrop theatre, 3312 North 24th street, Omaha, Neb., began a good press story about a picture that was to be shown at his house. Manager Jensen has often employed this method of press advertising since the Screen Club ball.

"There seems to be a new twist to a picture when you realize the actor or actress is a sure enough person—especially one who has been in Omaha," he said. "The mere fact that Travers was here at the ball makes an exhibitor want any picture in which he appears. They realize it is a good advertising idea, even though very few of the theatre patrons went to the ball."

Paramount Exhibitors Get Together in Purchase of Space for Advertising, to Their Mutual Advantage

PARAMOUNT exhibitors in many instances are getting together in the purchase of newspaper space for advertising, greatly to their mutual advantage. It is interesting to notice the hearty co-operation which is being given by the large city as well as the small town newspapers to Paramount Pictures. George R. Mann, manager of Paramount's Washington Exchange, contributes the latest information on this subject to Paramount Progress.

"Recently Gardner Mack, one of the oldest editors of motion picture subjects and now motion picture editor of the Washington Times, requested me to let him know each week what our bookings in Washington would be the following week, in order that he might properly arrange his reading matter to fit in with our subjects presented at the time," writes Mr. Mann.

"This brought up the point that it would be a good idea to furnish each paper in Washington and Baltimore with the list of bookings in these two cities in order that their advertising men might work up business with the house using our subjects.

"In Washington I took up the matter with Ben Weisblatt, a progressive advertising man with the Washington Times, whose work resulted in a very comprehensive scheme of theatre advertising in this paper."

The piece of advertising mentioned was in the form of a heading using the Paramount trademark as a centrepiece and "The Trademark That Stands for Quality" as a slogan. A border with Paramount spelled out lengthwise was neatly arranged down the side. Ten theatres using Paramount Pictures were displayed under the heading, thus giving each one of these theatres the advantage of price given a large space contract.

ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT BURNS, BUT THAT DOESN'T FEAZE MR. SMITH

For real trials and tribulations, high honors will have to be awarded to H. C. Smith, exhibitor of Almena, Kansas. Mr. Smith had the "Battle Cry of Peace" booked for Decoration Day. On the previous Saturday night, much to Mr. Smith's disgust, the electric light plant of that city was destroyed by fire. This was the only source of power for miles around.

After calling up seven towns around and getting no help in any manner, Mr. Smith learned that an ice plant fourteen miles distant had a spare generator. Hopping into a Ford truck, he went to Horton, brought back the generator, hooked it up to an automobile engine, and supplied the power necessary to show the picture. The automobile was in the rear of a garage across the street from the theatre and it was necessary to stretch wires from there to the booth. Mr. Smith had a record house.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

Mutual Presents Two Additional Five-Reel Star Productions Featuring Helen Holmes and William Russell

MUTUAL for the week of July 3, presents two additional five reel Mutual Star Productions, in which Helen Holmes and William Russell are the feature players.

First of these productions, adapted for the screen by Frank Hamilton Spearman and produced under the direction of J. P. McGowan, who also appears in the role of Whispering Smith, will be released July 3, under the title of "Medicine Bend."

Miss Holmes, who is starred in the role of Marion Sinclair, is supported by the same large company of players which appeared with her in "Whispering Smith," first of the Mutual Star Productions in which she was presented.

Second of the Mutual Star Productions, "The Highest Bid," in which William Russell is the featured player, will be released July 6. This feature release is adapted for the screen by J. Edward Hungerford from the story of the same name by Arthur H. Gooden.

"The Highest Bid" is based on a story of love and high finance, the scenes of which stretch all the way from Wall street to the Sierras. Filmed under the direction of Jack Prescott, with Mr. Russell acting as co-director, members of the company spent several weeks in the heart of the Sierras and later in the Santa Ynez valley, where practically all of the exteriors were photographed. Charlotte Burton and Harry Keenan head the supporting company of Mr. Russell in "The Highest Bid."

"The Hidden Face," Mutual's three-reel offering of the week starring Iva Shepard and Alexander Gaden will be released July 6.

The two part offerings of the Mutual for the week of July 3 comprised three extremely interesting subjects, first of which, "Killed by Whom," with Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh essaying the chief roles, will be released July 3. This production is founded on the killing of the father of a youth who had been turned adrift because he had married below his station.

"The Taming of Wild Bill," for release July 7, is the Mustang two-part offering of the week. Jack Richardson, familiar 'heavy' of Mustang-Mutual dramas, is the hero, appearing in the part of a 'bad man' whose reformation is brought about by the girl, portrayed by Nita Davis.

Margaret Gibson is featured as the star of "The Good for Nothing Brat," a two reel Centaur-Mutual drama for release July 8. William Clifford and various members of the David Horsley contingent of players appear in her support. Miss Gibson, as the hapless litle motherless girl, has a most appealing and sympathetic role.

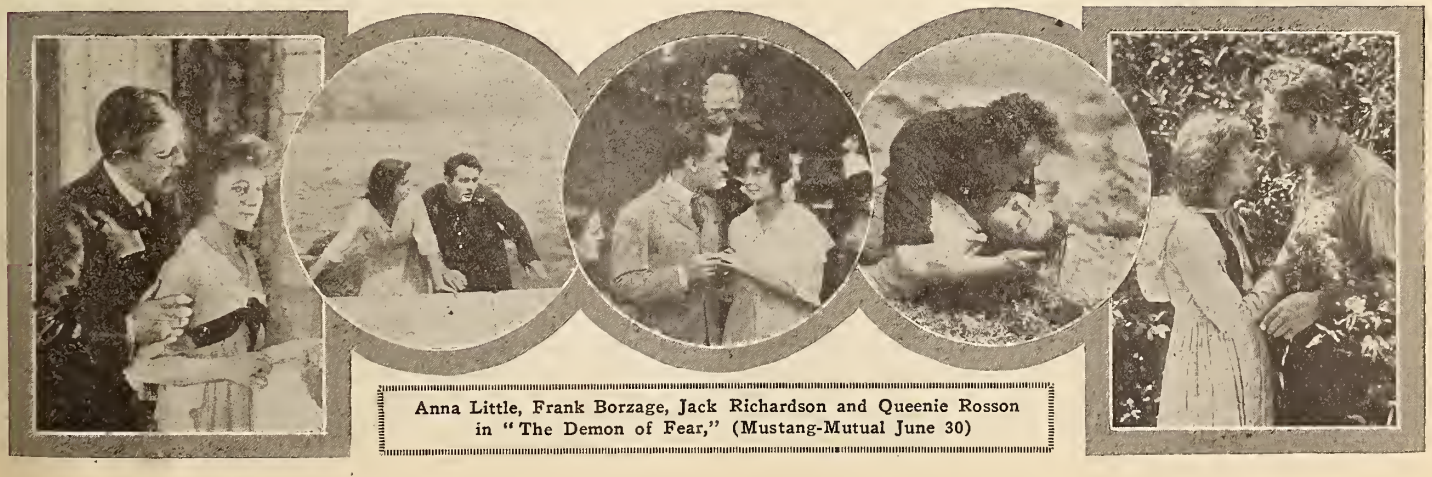
"The Chaser Chased," featuring Rube Miller, for release July 4, and "Hired and Fired" with Ben Turpin, to be released July 9, are the Vogue-Mutual releases for this week. "Beauty" offerings include "Billy Van Deusen's, Masquerader," featuring Johnny Sheehan, John Steppling and Carol Halloway to be released July 5, and "The Gink Lands Again," with Orral Humphrey, for release July 9. "A Merry Mixup" with George Ovey, is the Cub release. It will go to the public July 7.

MME. PETROVA IN 3 CHARACTERS IN A METRO

Mme. Petrova, star of the Popular Plays and Players appearing on the Metro program, will be seen in several distinct characters in a forthcoming production as yet unnamed. In a brief allegory Mme. Petrova is seen as Eve in the Garden of Eden. Later she appears in a gypsy camp, where several thrilling scenes are enacted. Afterwards she is seen in the role of a Quakeress. The scenes were photographed in a small settlement in Pennsylvania.

"CONFLICT," FROM VITAGRAPH ON JULY 3, FEATURES LUCILLE LEE STEWART

The combination of a Blue Ribbon Feature and a Frank Daniels comedy is again seen in Vitagraph's releases for the week of July 3 through V-L-S-E.



"The Conflict," the five-part subject for the week, features Lucille Lee Stewart, Vitagraph's new stellar light. The story is of the rivalry between two girls, Jeannette, rich; Madeleine, poor, for the affections of the same man. The rich one wins and thus is begun a lifelong feud. Huntly Gordon, Jane Mortimer, William Lyttel, Jr., Frank Currier, John Robertson and Richard Turner make up the balance of a capable cast. Ralph W. Ince produced the picture from the script by Edward J. Montagne.

Frank Daniels is seen as the temporary proprietor of a beauty parlor in "Kernel Nutt and the High Shoes." Alice Washburn and Ethel Corcoran support Mr. Daniels. C. Graham Baker wrote the scenario.

GIRLS' SEMINARY STORY IN AN E. & R. JUNGLE

A girls' seminary story held the attention of the E. & R. Jungle producing staff last week. The picture has not been named. It deals with a professor who would not permit his niece to marry the young man of her choice. The lad then secures two chimpanzees and turns them loose in the dormitory, an apartment of which is occupied by the professor.

A chase follows which leads the instructor through many parts of the dormitory, drives the girls from their quarters in night attire, and ends with the professor being found in the boudoir of the dean. The professor because of this is forced to give his permission to the marriage. Charles Carter, as the professor; May Cruze, as the niece; Claude Keys, juvenile, and Napoleon and Sally run away with a majority of the scenes.

MONTE CARLO REPLICA FOR "WOMAN'S REPUTATION"

A duplication of one of Monte Carlo's noted gambling parlors is among the scenes in Crane Wilbur's latest drama, "A Woman's Reputation," now being filmed at the David Horsley studios. The "set" was made after the plan of Technical Director Frank Crompton who was assisted by Scenic Artist Wiggins. Messrs. Wiggins and Crompton have both been in Monte Carlo and they admit having "looked some of the sights over and to the best of their recollection they have equalled the original."

As the frivolous young wife of an elderly millionaire, whom she does not love, Mae Gaston, the Horsley leading woman, is seen in support of Crane Wilbur in "A Woman's Reputation."

PHONOGRAPH AID IN AN E. & R. JUNGLE

An innovation at the E. & R. Jungle zoo is a high priced phonograph which is operated during scenes in which Napoleon and Sally, the chimps, act. By the aid of this, the producers have found much better work can be secured from the "near-humans." In one scene in which Napoleon appears alone, he worked for almost a minute during which time he disrobed himself and climbed into his pajamas. The scene lasted for thirty-seven feet of the finished subject and is said to be the longest single one in which an animal works alone. This will be seen in "When Jones Went Wrong."

A Clyde Fitch Adaptation from Universal Among the Offerings for Week of July 3; Some Comedy Subjects, Too, on the Bill

THE program of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for the week of July 3 is headed by an adaptation for the screen of one of the most famous plays of the foremost American dramatist, the late Clyde Fitch. "The Way of the World," cleverly adapted for the films, and presented as the twenty-third Red Feather, with a cast headed by Dorothy Davenport and Hobart Bosworth, was directed by Lloyd Carleton.

On July 4 Herbert Rawlinson appears in a Gold Seal comedy, "They Wouldn't Take Him Seriously," in which he is supported by Agnes Vernon. On the same day Ben Wilson, directing himself and Edna Hunter, follows Rawlinson with a Rex domestic drama, "The Head of the Family." To round out a program for Independence Day, there is an Imp comedy called "The Clever Mrs. Carter," with Edith Roberts and Harry Benham.

For July 5 Mary Fuller, the Universal star, appears in "Behind the Veil," a Victor two-reel drama, in which she plays twin sisters, of similar appearance but widely different character. On the same day there is an L-Ko Komedy, with Fatty Voss and Harry Coleman, called "A Gambler's Gambol." The program is completed by the Animated Weekly.

July 6 brings King Baggot, in an Imp two-reeler, "The Man Across the Street." Baggot plays a double in this. A juvenile comedy, "The Wishing Lamp," is provided for the younger members of the audience, and the performance ends with a comedy, "The Janitor," which was directed by the Universal's new producer, Wallace Beery. Joe Martin, the Universal ape, is featured with Beery in this comical one-reeler.

"The River Goddess," a typical Matt Moore and Jane Gail comedy, is the Imp offering for July 7. Following this comes an allegorical drama, entitled "Any Youth," written and produced by Allen Holubar. There are only three players in this, Holubar, Dorothy Phillips and Hector Sarno. Holubar plays the Youth, his better and his baser self. A real Nestor comedy, with Eddy Lyons and Lee Moran, called "Double Crossing the Dean," rounds out the program for the day.

July 8 brings an adaptation for the screen of another of the celebrated Peter B. Kyne stories, from the Saturday Evening Post, "The Committee on Credentials." On the same day comes the first installment of the travel pictures of the expedition of Doctor Dorsey, entitled "Sports of the Rajahs in Mysterious India." A typical Joker comedy, "An All Around Cure," with Gale Henry and William Franey, finishes the program for that day.

Sunday, July 9, is marked by one of Cleo Madison's society dramas, in which she directs and plays the lead herself. It is called "A Dead Yesterday," and she is supported by Hobart Henley, who managed to sandwich in this drama while he was at Universal City. The week finishes with another L-Ko, "Getting the Goods on Gertie," with Raggie and Dave Morris and Gertrude Selby.

Only Single-Reel Releases from Gaumont for Second Week in July; No. 10 of Mutual Magazine of Film Shows Blind Persons at Work

FOR the second week in July the Gaumont Company will have only single reel releases. Sunday, July 9, brings "Reel Life," Number Ten, to the screen. This time the Mutual Magazine in Film, as this reel is called, will show the work being done by the New York Association for the Blind. There will be pictures showing the trades and pursuits followed by blind persons who thus make themselves economically independent. These include weaving, chair caning, basket weaving and stenography. Number Ten will also show how anthracite coal is mined in Pennsylvania and how bituminous coal is sometimes mined on the surface with a steam shovel in the southwest.

As Glacier National Park provided so many interesting views for the official cameramen of the U. S. Department of the Interior, the Gaumont Company found it necessary to release these in two parts in its "See America First" series. Wednesday, July 12, the second part will reach the screen. Among the pictures will be McDermott Lake, Iceberg Lake, where the sun only shines twenty minutes during the day, and Blackfeet Glacier. There are over sixty glaciers in the park.

On the same reel with "See America First" is always one of Harry Palmer's Kartoon Komics. This time Mr. Palmer's contribution is called "Weary's Day Dream." The humorous pictures describe what many would call a tramp's paradise.

The third Gaumont single reel to be released during the week is The Mutual Weekly.

"MERRY MIX-UP" FOR RELEASE BY CUB ON JULY 8

"A Merry Mix-Up," a rapid-fire starring vehicle for George Ovey, will be the offering for July 8 from the Cub comedy company. Ovey is seen as a substitute husband. Claire Alexander is the chief support of the Cub comedian, while the rest of the cast is made up of Louise Horner, Janet Sully, Louis Fitzroy, George George, Jefferson Osborne, Margaret Cullington, Harry Jackson and many of the Cub comics. The story is by Hilton H. Fahrney, who is likewise the director of the Cub Comedy output.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

ANTONIO MORENO has begun work on a new five-reel drama for Vitagraph in which he will be starred as a heroic young mountaineer. The direction will be by H. Davenport. He has just finished his work in the Spanish drama in which he co-starred with Edith Storey. In the new drama other parts will be taken by an unusually large cast.

A pleasant diversion, combined of course with lots of real hard work, was the removal of Vitagraph's filming of E. H. Sothern release from the Brooklyn studio to Oyster Bay. Locations and interiors there are being used. This change was especially welcomed by Peggy Hyland, the pretty little English woman, both on account of the breezes and on account of a reminiscence.

"At the time I was playing with Cyril Maude," she said, "I had as maid a young woman who had never before been out of London. One morning she brought me in a newspaper with the usual front page item about Mr. Roosevelt. Pointing to it she sighed: 'That's where I'd like to live, mun—like him—in lodgings right on the water, mun, with the front yard full of h'isters!' If she were here now she would have her wish—at least the lodgings right on the water."

Kalman Matus, a Vitagraph player, was severely cut by flying glass while doing a scene in the open air studio at Brooklyn last week. Matus was playing the part of an office employe who, being left alone with the stenographer, Belle Bruce, attempts to make love to her against her will.

Realism to the Limit

According to the scenario, Miss Bruce was to throw the lamp beyond Matus's head so that it would be shattered against the wall of the set behind him, then, following a cut in the film, the office, filled with flames in the midst of which the unconscious man lay, would be shown.

In the struggle before the throwing of the lamp, Matus was thrown further to one side of a desk against the wall than was originally intended, so that when Miss Bruce hurled the lamp, it exploded almost directly above his head. He then slid to the ground, and his hand fell beside him, striking heavily on a thick piece of glass.

The burning scene followed, and then another in which Miss Bruce rushed in and dragged the supposedly unconscious man from the burning office. It was not until he was out of the set and the fireman had turned his hose on the flaming properties, that it was discovered how seriously he was injured. The first and second fingers of his right hand were almost severed by a deep gash, and were bleeding terribly. He was immediately taken to the Vitagraph Emergency Hospital in Studio No. 3, where his cut was treated with antiseptics and bandaged by the physician in charge.

On Saturday afternoon, June 24, Director William P. S. Earle took a company of Vitagraph Players to the church of Holy Innocence, at Beverly Road and East Fifteenth street, Brooklyn, to secure a realistic interior scene for "The Battle Cry of War," a sequel to "The Battle Cry of Peace."

Through the kindness of Father Costello arrangements were made for the opening of the auditorium to everybody who cared to see how motion pictures were made. The audience was asked to pose in the big scene and accepted with alacrity.

Following the taking of the scene a program of Vitagraph pictures was given. Some of the stars who appeared and were introduced to the audience were Harry T. Morey, Alice Joyce, Naomi Childers, Joseph Kilgour, Walter McGrail and Templar Saxe.

In the new Dorothy Bernard picture now being taken by William Fox, Glenn White takes the male lead. Mr. White has done good work in former Fox pictures, and will be seen in a few weeks in "A Tortured Heart."

Valeska Suratt completed her work in the new William Fox film in two weeks. Her director, Roland West, says this is the quickest time he has ever heard of, for a star.

Unusual historic interest attaches to the little village fifteen miles north of Savannah, Ga., in which are laid several scenes of "A Tortured Heart," the Fox photodrama in which Virginia Pearson will star.

Baptism Scene on Historic Spot

The baptism of a child in the picture, takes place in the Wesley Methodist Church so named because John Wesley, the great English evangelist, preached his first sermon in the United States from its pulpit. The Rev. Dr. Tieman, the eighty-eight-year-old pastor of the church, adheres to this day to one of its ancient customs. After the service each day, he hangs the door-key on a peg beneath the steps leading to the building. Constant use of the peg for this purpose has worn it down from a thick piece of wood to a thin sliver—so thin that it barely supports the heavy key.

It was in Dr. Tieman's church that Gen. Sherman and his staff stopped on the march to the sea. Outside, in the adjoining cemetery troops sat on the grave plots and cavalrymen hitched their horses to the tombstones. On the plaster wall of the church there are still visible the outlines of a map of Sherman's invasion, with the names of the routes.

The picturesque ox-cart used in "A Tortured Heart" served as a mess wagon for the northern army during the early part of the civil war. The coach which runs over the plains belonged to Gen. Poindexter. Under the name of The Half-Way Coach it took the route to Dewdrop Inn, where a relay began.

M. W. Rale, in "Mysteries of Myra" (International)

Harriet Beecher Stowe is said to have drawn her inspiration for "Uncle Sam's Cabin" from the plantation in the village on which stands The Old Hermitage, the building used for the hold-up in the picture. Mrs. Stowe was so impressed with the horror of selling slaves on the block here that she decided to write her immortal story. Before the home are trees, twenty-five to thirty-five feet in diameter, and none of which is less than 100 years old.

The home of Miss Darrell (Miss Pearson) was built in 1814, and from the wharf of the river bank nearby the Savannah, the first transatlantic steamer of the United States, sailed for England, and brought back the first English sparrows.

The street of the village itself, down which the original colonial belles once walked, are now overgrown with grass and foliage and dotted with thick patches of moss. The town is made to represent a small southern settlement in 1855, vacated by 1861.

Metro-Yorke Players Marooned on Island in Storm

Marooned all night on one of the smaller islands in the Thousand Islands near the lonesome Canadian mainland, while a terrific storm raged, was the harrowing experience of nine members of the Metro-Yorke Company of players, headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, according to word just received from them at the Metro offices. The captain of the boat that carried the players to the island refused to venture back in the violent storm, which continued throughout the night. A lean-to, fashioned of heavy branches and small pieces of canvas, was rigged up by Mr. Lockwood and Lester Cuneo, to protect the feminine contingent, while the men sought refuge under the trees.

Four motor cruisers sent out from Clayton, N. Y., failed to locate the party, and it was thought in Clayton that they had been lost in the storm. It was shortly after daylight before Captain George Baskerville, of the cruiser Nalmar, sighted the distress signal on the shores of the island, and went to their aid. Several members of the party suffered from exposure and required the services of physicians when they were returned to the mainland. All were suffering from hunger and thirst, and the scant supply of food and drink they carried with them the morning of the previous day was exhausted.

The company went to the island, which is about three acres in area, to photograph some scenes for "The River of Romance." They went in two speedy motor boats which were used for some thrilling scenes in the action of the story. When the storm came up Director Henry Otto suggested that they leave at once for Clayton. Captain Gordon Wilson of the speed boat, Spray III, the larger of the two crafts, said it would be foolhardy to venture out in the St. Lawrence with such small and unseaworthy boats during a violent storm. Throughout the night the storm increased until the wind reached a velocity of sixty miles an hour.

Captain Wilson provided Miss Allison with the only set of oil-skins to be found, but despite this precaution she suffered a severe cold. Her mother, who remained behind at the hotel in Clayton, was nearly prostrated when word came that her daughter was safe and on the way to the pier. Director Otto was the most disconsolate one in the crowd, because he was unable to obtain photographic material during the height of the storm for "The River of Romance."

O'Brien to Head Cast of "Return of Eve"

Eugene O'Brien, well known as a Broadway leading man, has been engaged by Essanay to head the supporting cast of "The Return of Eve," a new five-reel photoplay featuring Edna Mayo. Mr. O'Brien has had an interesting stage experience for a man so young, having played with the greatest stars of the American stage. Elsie Janis, Ethel Barrymore, Margaret Illington, Ann Murdock and Fritzi Scheff are stars opposite whom he has played.

Gertrude McCoy (Gaumont)

He was born in Dublin in 1888 and brought to this country when an infant, his parents going to Colorado. The stage attracted him before he could complete his medical course at the University of Colorado and he started in musical comedy. He gained the attention of the Frohmans and they took him out of the musical shows for straight dramatic productions.

The Dance of the Sprites in "The Daughter of the Gods," the Fox-Kellermann Multiple

Ann Pennington, the Ziegfeld "Follies" star who has recently joined the stellar forces of the Famous Players, flitted into the company's studio the other day just to say "Hello" to everybody, as she expressed it after the successful opening of the tenth "Follies" show at Atlantic City. The show is now duly installed on Broadway and Miss Pennington will shortly resume her work before the camera, which was interrupted by rehearsals for the stage production, in which she has scored another big personal success.

Marguerite Clark changes nationality with such startling rapidity that the mere hyphen would be frayed beyond recognition if it endeavored to keep pace with the little Famous Players star's national transformations. Yesterday she was a French girl in "Silks and Satins" and to-day she is an Irish lass in "Little Lady Eileen," to-morrow—but that is a matter for the producers to determine.

Because she thinks that nobody loves her on the screen, Pauline Frederick has decided that she would rather play the less important role of the self-sacrificing wife in the Famous Players adaptation of Clyde Fitch's celebrated play, "The Woman in the Case" than assume the title character, who is a deep-dyed "villianess." "When this picture goes out on the Paramount program people are going to see me in the guise of the sympathetic and devoted wife," says Miss Frederick. "I have not given up playing heavy characters, but simply want the sympathy of the audience to be with me for a change—if I can win it."

J. Sarle Dawley is delving deep into the subject of the Black Art, alchemy, necromancy, fairy lore, witchcraft and all other kindred subjects in preparation for the producing of "Little Lady Eileen" by the Famous Players. It is an Irish story starring Marguerite Clark, in which fairies play an important part. Mr. Dawley is seeking ways and means of gaining control of the spirits of the air, as they are essential to the success of the undertaking.

ESTABROOK, Howard, leading man star, Pathé Gold Rooster; b. Detroit, Mich., July 11, 1884; educ. Irving Prep. MOTION PICTURE CATALOG FOR EXHIBITORS FROM NATIONAL BOARD

The National Board of Review has just issued a catalog of the finest pictures that have been released between January 1, 1915 and April 1. Its primary purpose is to assist those who desire unusual entertainments which appeal to the entire family. There are 32 pages of listed films, giving the titles of some 1,500 films, the brand, the company, the number of reels, the character and when passed by the Board of Review.

There is much interest in the family group programs in a number of cities in the country and this seems to be spreading. Wide-awake exhibitors will do well to get a copy of this catalog which is sent out by the National Board of Review at ten cents per copy to exhibitors only, this price merely covering the cost of printing and postage; the regular price is twenty-five cents per copy. Orders should be sent direct to the National Board of Review, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City.

WORLD CAST ON BOARD WHALING SHIP TWO WEEKS FOR "MISS PETTICOATS"

Arrangements are going forward for the forthcoming cruise of the old whaler, Charles W. Morgan, which will sail from New Bedford, June 27, and which will take on board the World Film cast appearing in "Miss Petticoats."

A number of the scenes requisite to the production must be made at sea, out of sight of land with a horizon background, and in order to get the proper details, Miss Brady accompanied by her maid and her amanuensis, and fifteen World Film artists, including Arthur Ashley, will live on board for two weeks.

FROM TWO TO TEN, IS EXCHANGE RECORD IN NOVA SCOTIA

Special to Motion Picture News.

St. John, N. B., June 24.

Some idea of the growth of the motion picture business in the provinces and in Nova Scotia is afforded by the following facts. When the New Brunswick board of censors was appointed there were but two exchanges doing business in that territory, while at the present time there are ten, with indications of others coming in. Last year more than 6,000 reels of film were censored and indications are that the present year will make a still greater record.

Window Cards Issued for Pathe's "Guilty" Bring Patronage

Vice-President Berst Decides to Continue Idea with "Grip of Evil" Serial and the Cards Will Be Sold at a Cent a Piece

THE two and one-half cent window cards which were issued by Pathe for the first six episodes of the "Who's Guilty?" series prove such an instantaneous success that J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager, has ordered that they be continued throughout the entire series. These cards are being prepared under the personal direction of Mr. Berst.

It is also announced that Pathe will continue the idea on "The Grip of Evil," the first release on the five million dollar serial program. "The Grip of Evil" window cards, however, will be sold for one cent each. They will be issued for each of the fourteen releases.

Manager Osborn of Philadelphia found such a ready market for these cards that he telephoned to C. R. Seelye, business manager, urging that an increased supply be rushed to him without delay for all of the episodes. Manager Wessling of Cincinnati, telegraphed a hurry-up order for a new stock. He has also increased his standing order.

The cards were in such a graet demand in the Dallas territory that Manager Underwood's supply was quickly exhausted. He wired to the home office for more and in the meantime is using a reserve supply sent to him for the New Orleans office.

Manager Johnson of Cleveland and Manager O'Donnell of Washington has the same success. They sold the cards to almost every exhibitor who booked the "Who's Guilty?" pictures. All of these exhibitors reported that the new style cards were bringing them a large amount of new business. These cards ask big dramatic questions connected with each one of the releases. For instance, one of the cards was as follows:

"DON'T SERVE ON THE JURY"
Until you see Beyond Recall,
Pathe's "Who's Guilty?" series
Produced by Arrow.

Even in New York, where the city ordinance is very strict, Manager Abeles has a ready market for the cards. He requests that they be continued on all of the additional episodes.

Carrying out the same idea, it is announced that Pathe will have a series of advance slides announcing "The Grip of Evil," and excellent window cards, which will be sold considerably below cost.

Signed Articles from Stars of Selig Athletic Series

The "Stories," in Proof, Plates or Mats, and Not Exceeding Three-Quarters of a Column, Will Be Released to Newspapers Simultaneously with Each Subject of Series

IN connection with the release of the Selig Athletic features the first of the series of twelve to be released through V-L-S-E on June 26, the Selig Company has introduced an innovation. Simultaneously with each film released there will also be released to the newspapers of the United States a signed feature article in either proofs, plates or mats. These feature articles will not exceed three quarters of a column in length and will be copyrighted and will bear the author's signature.

For example, Joe Stecher, the wrestler, writes the first installment. Stecher was born and reared on a farm near Dodge, Neb. He tells of his early trials and triumphs and gives the secrets of success which has brought him world-wide fame and a fortune within the past three years.

Others who are expected to contribute to these Athletic feature series include Frank Gotch, the world's champion wrestler; Packy McFarland, the welterweight champion boxer; Bobbie McLean, the world's champion ice skater; Molla Bjurstedt, champion tennis player among women, and others leaders in all lines of athletic endeavor.

Many newspapers have asked for exclusive service. But one newspaper in each city will be served. Write to J. H. Herman, Selig Polyscope Company, Chicago, for complete details.

BOSTON EXHIBITORS PLAN OUTING FOR JUNE 28

Boston, June 24.

Many having returned safely from the outing held at Nantasket last year, the exhibitors are to tempt Providence again, and on June 28 they will move on Pemberton in force and proceed to unbend. Plans are not known in detail yet, but it is announced that the exchanges will furnish the prizes for the sporting events. William Farrell of the General Film exchange is contributing a pig as a prize. It is expected that the winner will have to catch his prize and carry him home.

Motion Picture Studio Directory "Stampede Contest" Arouses Interest in the Industry

Announcement That the Publication, Issued Semi-Annually by Motion Picture News, Would Hold Competition for Screen Actors and Actresses in Connection with the Event at Sheepshead Bay, August 5-12, Creates Enthusiasm Wherever Picture People Assemble—No Entrance Fee Charged—Contest Is Free to All Players

THE first announcement two weeks ago that the Motion Picture Studio Directory, published semi-annually by MOTION PICTURE NEWS would hold a contest for motion picture actors and actresses in connection with the big "Stampede" at Sheepshead Bay, August 5 to 12, New York City, has awakened tremendous interest all over the country.

This it seems is the golden opportunity to decide in open contest once and for all just who may lay claim to the championship and titles in the different western sports and pastimes.

Gold and Silver Medals

The list of gold and silver medals and free advertising in the Motion Picture Studio Directory follows with the list of events which will probably by augmented before the time of the big round-up:

Champion All around Motion Picture Cowboy—one solid gold medal.

Helen Gibson and "Black Beauty" at the Kalem Corral

We were surprised at the storm of inquiries which has followed our last two announcements and the interest taken by the different studios. Helen Gibson, the daring heroine of Kalem's "Hazards of Helen," in making her application for entry in the Motion Picture Studio Directory's Stampede Contest, writes, "If there is any way on earth that we can get far enough ahead on productions for me to steal the time necessary for me to make the transcontinental trip, you can count on me to be in on the big doings at Sheepshead."

Miss Gibson also states that should she be successful in completing arrangements to take part in the monster round-up, she will not confine her efforts to the Studio Directory contest but will also enter the professional lists in the events open to women. By so doing she will place at stake her title of "Pacific Coast Women's Champion," gained from emerging victoriously from three Los Angeles County rodeos.

Miss Gibson, who was born in Cleveland, learned to ride in a Western frontier town when her father became an official of the Santa Fe Railroad. She first threw her hat in the professional ring when she won the Woman's Relay Race and trick-riding events at the Miller Brothers 101 Ranch contest in 1910.

During 1913 Miss Gibson spent most of her time attending the big Western round-ups entering all contests in which she was eligible. During the season she was successful in capturing many championships for trick-riding, standing, Roman and relay races. Included in the big round-ups that she attended were those at Salt Lake City, Pendleton, Ore., and Boise City, Idaho.

Six Months' Experience

We want to hear from everybody. No one is barred who has had six months' experience before the camera, and we hope that some of the motion picture people will give the professionals a big run for their money. Let us hear from you. Remember that there is no entrance fee to the Motion Picture Studio Contest, and the entrance blanks are ready awaiting your application. Don't wait until it is too late; let us hear from you immediately, as it takes time for the mails to cross the country. For full information and entry blanks, which we reiterate are absolutely free, address Motion Picture Studio Directory, Stampede Contest Manager, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, care of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

Los Angeles, June 24.

TWO American companies spent a portion of the past week in Los Angeles. William Russell and associates, including Harry Keenan, Charlotte Burton, Rena Carleton, co-director Jack Prescott, and others, were here securing locations for "The Torch Bearer," and on Wednesday, "The Secret of the Submarine" organization, which included Director Frank Thorne, Tom Chatterton, Juanita Hansen, Lamar Johnstone, George Clancy, and others including Cameraman Middleton, took advantage of the great crowds which gathered to witness the Preparedness parade, and made a number of scenes. One required that Clancy, appearing in the part of Hook, walk through the crowds carrying a large banner worded to the effect that America needs no navy. The banner proved to be as maddening to the patriotic crowds as a red flag to a bull, and had the photoplayers not been protected by a squad of policemen, not only the scene would have been spoiled, but no doubt, the players themselves.

A change has been made in the Submarine Company, and the remaining episodes will be directed by Thorne, Director George Sargent having been transferred to the Richard Bennett company which begins production this week.

Thomas Ricketts, American director who filmed "Damaged Goods" last year, is now producing a five reel subject which will be titled "Gem of the Western Sea." Audrey Munson is star, N. deBrullier the lead, and Roy Stewart the heavy. William Stowell is also in the cast. Roy Stewart spent several days in Los Angeles during the past week when he had a short vacation from his work at the American studio.

President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Company, after spending four or five weeks on the coast dividing his time between the Santa Barbara studios, and those of the Signal and Vogue in Los Angeles, has departed for New York to direct matters in the opening of the company's new office in that city.

Lamar Johnstone to Leave Coast for "V" in East

Lamar Johnstone, at present filling a special engagement with the American Company as a member of "The Secret of the Submarine" serial cast, has contracted with the Vitagraph Company, and upon completion of the serial will go to the Flatbush Brighton studios to begin an engagement there. Mr. Johnstone has played with a number of coast companies, probably with the Selig a greater portion of the time he has been in the west.

William F. Hart, who has been connected with the Keystone scenario department, was recently engaged by the American Company to write scenarios, and went to the Santa Barbara studios last week. Mr. Hart has a number of magazine stories to his credit. He is a former Washington newspaper correspondent, and has been connected with some of the largest newspapers of the country in important positions.

The Monrovia Feature Film Company, producing "The Daughter of the Don," a story of early days in southern California, and principally about Los Angeles in the year 1846, last week gave an unusual reception at the beautiful ranch of Pierre Letchworth near Glendora, Cal., for scenes in this ten reel production. The mission residence and ranch patio served as excellent settings, and all guests were garbed in the Spanish costumes of the period. Letchworth is the son of the Buffalo steel magnate of the same name. The company has been working on this production for almost two months, and it will require several months more before it is completed.

General Manager H. O. Davis has found it necessary to return to New York to complete unfinished business there. Prior to his departure Mr. Davis stated the trip would not require more than three weeks, and he would then return to Universal City to personally supervise the production work there. "At the present time," Mr. Davis said, "we have twenty-eight directors and producing companies at work. Two additional companies will be added within the next day or two, and by July 1 the entire Universal organization, numbering in all about forty companies will be at work at Universal City. As fast as the producing companies that have been working at the Fort Lee studios complete their work, they will come west, and will all be here, unless something unforeseen happens, by the first day of the coming month."

Neva Gerber Directed by LeBrandt

The most recent directors to begin at U City are Joseph LeBrandt and George Burton. Mr. LeBrandt is to make program subjects, and Neva Gerber, former featured leading woman for the American, where she appeared in Beauty brand subjects, will be his leading woman, Miss Gerber having been engaged last week by Marshall Stedman, of the employment department.

Roberta Wilson has been assigned as leading woman for the George Burton company, and will begin work there at the completion of the present Lyons and Moran Nestor comedy in which she is playing lead.

Jacques Jaccard is to direct the filming of a serial of fifteen episodes, each of two reels, which will feature Marie Walcamp,

Fritzi Scheff and Adele Farrington; Dr. Alfred Hertz, Formerly of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York, Using a Motion Picture Camera

who has played in scores of 101 Bison dramas, and has been featured in several Red Feather and Bluebird pictures. The story is now being written and will be entitled "The Land of Tomorrow." Jaccard has been assigned to the filming of a number of serials and series pictures in the past. His first work along this line was as director of Jack Kerrigan in the "O'Rourke" series. Later he directed the making of the first several episodes of the American "Diamond from the Sky" serial. Returning to U City he made a series of western pictures with Harry Carey, an underworld series, and when the "Peg o' the Ring" production was discontinued by Francis Ford and Grace Cunard, he was assigned to the completion of this subject. The cast for the new serial has not been selected.

Charles Cummings has been engaged by the Universal, and his first work will be as juvenile heavy for the Rex Company in the five reel subject "The Chalice of Sorrow."

A caveman way for a wife to reform her husband, forms the plot for a one reel Universal subject entitled "The Finishing Touch," written by Harvey Gates and produced by George Cochran. The scenes are laid about the home of a poor family consisting of husband, wife and daughter. The woman completely sobers the husband by a sound thrashing administered after he is forced to hold up his hands while the child binds him. The whipping causes the husband to realize he was wrong, and a happy life follows. Rex Roselli, Marjorie Ellison, and little Buddie McQuoid play the only three important parts.

Director Cochran, who made this subject, is now filming "Never Too Old to Woo," a comedy from a story by John Fleming Wilson, adapted by Calder Johnstone. It pertains to a double triangle. The principals of this are Jack Nelson, Marjorie Ellison, L. M. Wells, Bert Law and Mrs. George Hernandez.

"Kate's Affinities," a Joker

The Allen Curtis Joker comedy of the week is "Kate's Affinities," being the story of a sober-going young man falling in love with a spinster, heretofore never wooed. Gale Henry, William Franey and Charlie Conklin play the leading parts.

The Joker company with Director Allan Curtis is spending a week at San Diego, where they expect to make one or more subjects at the beaches and exposition.

Oriental atmosphere is given the three reel subject, "The Caravan," written and being produced by Director Raymond Wells, recently added to the Universal staff. The plot deals with the order of a priest that a journey be made to far across the great desert to secure valuables for the temple.

Lena Baskette appears as the little daughter, Claire McDonald the wife, Jay Belasco the husband, Malcolm Blevins the heavy, and C. O. Bryden the priest.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are cavorting about as a pair of small town fops who visit a beach town, and there fall for the vampish ways of a female crook, who induces them to aid her in stealing some valuable paintings. All of this is for the one reel Nestor, "The Bunglers." Roberta Wilson appears as the "vamp." Her heart softens after the trio has been arrested, and she exonerates the country boys.

"The Rebound" is a woodsman story featuring Vola Smith, as the little crippled daughter of a woodsman. The father is forced to remain in hiding because he believes he is guilty of murder. In reality, the shot from another's gun inflicted the fatal wound, but the father never learned this until a sheriff comes to his mountain cabin and encounters the true murderer, who confesses. Besides Miss Smith, parts in this are taken by Ed Brown, Bill Nye, Marc Robbins and Charles Gunn.

The Virginia Terhune Van de Water novel, "If My Coutnry Should Call," has been adapted for the screen by Ida May Parks, and is now being produced by Joseph deGrasse, with Dorothy Phillips, a recent arrival from the Fort Lee studios, appearing in the star part. Jay Belasco plays opposite Miss Phillips, and other leading parts are taken by Helen Leslie, Gretchen Lederer, Adele Farrington, Lon Chaney, Frank Whitson, Albert MacQuarrie and Carl Von Schiller. The story deals with the inherent dislike against war by a woman born in war times. The picture will be in five reels.

A melodrama titled "Onda, of the Orient," is being filmed by the 101 Bison company from scenario by Ben Cohn and Walter Woods, and will consist of three reels. Scenes are laid in San Francisco, where a dying man confesses of crimes committed in the Philippines. Marie Walcamp appears in the name part, supported by E. N. Wallock, Duke Worne, L. C. Schumway, Eddie Polo, and the direction is by Henry McRae.

Director Otis Turner has completed the filming of a five reel Bluebird "The Undercurrents," which stars Flora Parker DeHaven as the daughter of a drunkard. She becomes a Salvation army lassie, and through this medium finds a home as nurse for a rancher, who later proves to be the father of a young man she had known while at the Salvation Army home, and from whom she tried to escape because of his likes for barleycorn. To win the girl, the lad reforms, and she becomes the bride and daughter. The supporting cast includes Bertram Grassby, as the girl's father, Nanine Wright, Charles Mailes as the rancher, Jack Mulhall the sweetheart, Jack Lott, Ed Hearn and Marjorie Blinn.

Director Wallace Beery is now finishing the fifth episode of "Timothy Dobbs" series, with Carter DeHaven as star, and the first of the week will take up the making of "He Almost Landed an Angel," which will be number six of the series. The same cast continues throughout.

Eugene B. Lewis has written a two reel comedy drama which will star Pat Rooney under the direction of Roy Clements, the title of this being "Some Medicine Man." Scenes are laid in a western town where the comedian gets into a number of unusual mixups, many of them with the Indians. Others cast for this production are Peggy Coudray, Ed Sedgwick, Jean Hersholt and Clyde Benson.

The Universal Company under the direction of Clifford Elfelt and with Vola Smith and G. Raymond Nye as principals, are home from spending two weeks in the mountains where they filmed scenes for a series of five one reel pictures.

"The Heritage of Hate" is a three reel photoplay written by Walter Woods, which will be the first picture produced by Director Burton George, recently added to the Universal producing staff. Roberta Wilson and Paul Byron will be the leads.

The Bluebird feature "L'Abbe Constantin" in five reels, has been completed by Director Rupert Julian, and preparations are now being made for "The Clique of Gold," featuring Elsie Jane Wilson. This picture will also consist of five reels, and supporting Miss Wilson and Julian will be Francelia Billington and Douglas Girrard.

"When the Light Came"

The scenario department has provided a one reel sea drama with scenes laid in a fishing village along the New England coast, for the first subject to be made by Joseph LeBrandt. It has been titled "When the Light Came." F. Brownlee has been selected to play the lead opposite Neva Gerber in the picture.

The William V. Mong Company will next take up the filming of "Little Joe," a three reel subject which is to feature Gordon Griffith, the boy actor.

The Universal juvenile company under the direction of Lule Warrenton, is making the one reel comedy, "Just Kids," with Irma Sorter and George Hupp in the leading parts. Following this the juvenile company will take up the filming of a series of fairy tales written especially for the children by Allen Watt, who is acting as co-director with Mrs. Warrenton. The subjects will be of a more or less educational nature.

Francis Power, U director, is engaged in the filming of "Brother Steve" in two reels, which was written by himself. Agnes Vernon, William Lowry, Beth Roland, T. D. Crittenden, and Lydia Titus appear in the cast.

Three new photodramas were put into production at the Morosco-Pallas studio last week. Director Frank Lloyd is filming

Mabel Normand, Now Heading Her Own Feature Film Company

"The Intrigue," which stars Lenore Ulrich, in the role of a government spy. An American inventing an x-ray gun, operated by wireless, whose proposition is turned down by his own government, interests another nation in the purchase of his invention. A second foreign nation learning of the invention, seeks to prevent the first from getting possession of the gun, and sends their most successful spy, a girl, to secure the information wanted and to gain possession of the invention. A very remarkable mechanism, operated by electricity, has been perfected for use in the picture.

Edna Goodrich is the star of another new photodrama titled "Body or Soul," which will be a Morosco release. William D. Taylor is entrusted with the production of this, and has Juan de la Cruz as leading man, Harold Holland, Lucille Ward, Kathlyn Kirkham and Herbert Standing as supports. The subject is a society drama with a decidedly new plot. An ambitious mother plans her daughter shall marry a successful dramatist, and while the daughter secretly admires the man, she fears he will wed her because of her beauty, and not her personality. To insure against this, the girl has a false scar placed on her cheek, and advises all she was burned with acid. Shortly afterwards she secures employment as a stenographer in the office of the dramatist, and in the weeks that follow, wins his love by her pleasing personality. Then the scar is removed.

Eve Strawn (Pallas)

Dustin Farnum at Work on "Son of Erin"

Dustin Farnum is working in the third new production taken up, titled "A Son of Erin," being produced by Julius C. Ivers. Farnum has just returned from another fishing trip to Catalina Islands where he had his usual luck. On his return to the studio, he brought three yellowtail, each weighing more than forty pounds, and presented them to the employees.

William Stormer, who produced "For the Good o' Humanity," and has been studio manager at the Equitable World plant in New York, has come to the coast with a contract for a five reel release each month by Pathe, and is preparing to begin production in Los Angeles in the very near future. Jane Novak and Wellington Playter are the only players engaged to date. The first subject to be made is titled "God's Super Man," which is by William Lippert, author of Fox's "The Nigger," and other successful photoplays.

The Triangle Film Corporation has engaged Grace Wilcox as special feature writer, and she will be assigned to work at the Keystone studio. Miss Wilcox has been connected with the Los Angeles Tribune for the past several years as a special writer, and while engaged here has gained an enviable reputation as a writer of clever feature stories. She was assigned by the paper to the more important social events.

The first Keystone Triangle comedy made by Director Harry Edwards, now in filming, will be titled "The Surf Girl," and features Julia Fay in the principal part. Many of the scenes will be taken at the nearby beaches, and considerable comedy is being secured in connection with the numerous concessions. Supporting Miss Fay in this will be Fritz Schade, and Ray Griffith as life-savers, Glen Cavender the girl's father, Alice Davenport the mother; Al Kaufman, the former pugilist, the strong man, and Iva Croswaite, his pretty wife.

Another Keystone comedy nearing completion will be known as "Wings and Wheels," with Baldy Belmont in the featured part, that of an aviator. Walter Wright is in charge of directing and the strenuous Keystone chases of the past will fade into insignificance when compared with the aeroplane and auto contests of this subject. The story deals with the son of a mayor and an aviator in love with the same girl. Ora Carew is the girl and other principals are Ray Russell, Billie Bennett, Joe Swickard, Harry Russell and Jack Henderson.

Charley Murray and Louise Fazenda are the featured players of the Keystone "Pills of Peril," being made by Richard Jones. Murray and Weyland Trask are rival doctors, the former suffering from lack of practice. Murray throws pills on the sidewalk in front of his office to cause passers-by to fall, but in the instances of people being injured, his rival fortunately passes at the time and secures them as patients. Murray, when rushing off to wait on a patient, falls in his own trap, and is so badly injured that he cannot take care of the small practice that he has. Others in this are Harry Brooker and Myrtle Lind.

Victor Herrman, who has been directing comedies for the L-Ko for more than eighteen months, has been engaged by Director General, Mack Sennett of the Keystone, and now has his first subject in rehearsal. Harry McCoy will be the featured player.

While working in scenes for "The Surf Girl," in the big tank at the Keystone studio, Dale Fuller, character actress, slipped on the edge of the tank and fell, causing internal injuries, the extent of which will not be known for several days.

A "Tip" on the "Ostrich Plume"

The David Horsley two reel subject made under the working title of "Ostrich Plumes," is to be released under the name of "The Ostrich Tip." This features William Clifford and Margaret Gibson.

The other story just completed, known under the working title of "A Woman's Reputation," is to be titled "For Her Good Name." The scenario is by Crane Wilbur, who with May Gaston, play the principal parts.

A successful way for eloping is to be shown in the Horsley Cub comedy "Jerry's Strategy," for in it the comedian, in order to safely get away from parents and officers of the law, does so in a stolen police patrol. The mad chase starts when Jerry, taken by George Ovey, is held captive, knocks out the police guards, and escapes with the patrol. Passing an athletic field, he comes upon archers practicing. A bow and arrow picked up here, later serve him to send a note to his sweetheart, Claire Alexander. Hand over hand she climbs down a rope, gets into the unpopular vehicle, and when the parents phone the police, they are not in position to make the chase for lack of a hurry-up wagon.

Artificial lighting equipment has been added to the David Horsley studio, and now there is sufficient lighting for the use of all stages at one time, if night work is required. Twenty new Winfield-Kerner lamps have been purchased.

William O'Connor, who has served the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company in the capacity of advertising manager, has arrived at the coast to spend two or three months here, to better acquaint himself with matters pertaining to film production.

The Rolin Film Company has just shipped Pathe a "Lonesome Luke" comedy laid in the South Sea islands, in which Luke is made the king of the cannibals. For the picture, Manager Dwight Whiting, secured a troup of Hawaiian singers, dancers, ukelele and mandolin players to appear in this.

The Rolin company spent several days of the past week in the mountain country where they took some wonderful scenes about waterfalls and mountain streams. While on this trip, Manager Dwight Whiting discovered a real for sure motion picture fan, who was willing they should use his property for locations on condition that they tell him where he could see the picture after it was released, and to make good their promise, he required a substantial deposit.

Harold Lloyd, the Lonesome Luke of Rolin Pathe comedies, and Bebe Daniels, ingenue, were awarded first prize at a dancing contest given at a beach cafe recently. The prizes were handsome silver loving cups.

Gertrude Short, a child actress, and her mother, have been added to the stock company for Rolin films, and will appear under the direction of Hal. Roach in the company's second brand, Phunny Philms.

Melvin Mayo, late director for the Lubin Western Company at Coronado, Cal., and Johnson McCulley, an author of several works of fiction, have formed a partnership for freelancing photoplays, and have opened an office in the Equitable Bank Building in Los Angeles. Both have had very wide experience, and have a number of original stories and photoplays to their credit.

"Some Liars," Vogue

The second Vogue two reel comedy has been named "Some Liars," and is nearing completion in the hands of Rube Miller and his co-director Henry Kernan. This pictures the stories two men told their wives after being pinched for jags and serving thirty days on the stone pile. Miller and Ben Turpin play the two leading parts, supported by the usual company.

Director Jack Dillon is beginning the filming of the third Vogue two reel comedy which will be titled "The Mix-up in Dry Goods." Arthur Moon as a newspaper reporter, is assigned to investigate conditions of the clerks and employes of department stores. Principals of this besides Moon are Gypsy Abbott, Paddy McGuire and Ed Laurie.

Al E. Christie is busy with the making of a burlesque on the legitimate stage melodrama of the past days, titled "Foiled." The scenario is by William E. Wing. A theatre has been built at the Christie studio for this one reel picture, showing the stage from front and back with auditorium. Billie Rhodes, George Leary, Eddie Barry, Stella Adams and Ethel Lynn appear in the cast.

The Christie studio was all littered up—literally stuck up—last week, for Al Christie made a comedy with four hundred sheets of fly paper serving as the principal props. It happened this way. Ethel Lynn and Billie Rhodes are sisters, the latter to be married. She has received many valuable wedding presents, and because of an epidemic of house breaking, she induces her brother, George Leary, to help her plan to save the presents. At night they spread fly paper in all parts of the house. Uncle, taken by Eddie Barry, has slipped out after he is supposed to have retired, in order to attend a quiet game. Coming home he is held up, and his watch, chain and keys are taken. Rather than wake the family, he climbs in a window, and then the fly paper begins to get in its work. A piece hanging to the window covers his face just as he plants his hands and feet on two others. His wanderings about the house add more to the collection. Everyone is awakened, cops arrived to see what the disturbance is. It ends in a free for all fight, the family trying to catch the burglar. At the quieting of all, the mistake is discovered, and the brother and sister receive their just reward.

"That Doggone Baby," Christie

"That Doggone Baby," is the one reel Christie comedy being made by Horace Davey. Newlyweds write her mother they have the cutest, sweetest, little thing at their house which they call Snooky, referring to a pup. But proud grandfather and grandmother immediately buy baby clothes and toys. The newlyweds are informed of their coming and intentions of giving the child a shower, and rather than disappoint their parents, go out and rent a baby from a photographer's wife. Grandfather insists that he shall have his picture taken with the child, and goes to the photographer's. From then on things happen rapidly. Betty Compson and Neil Burns are the newlyweds, Stella Adams and Harry Rattenberry the parents, and Dave Morris the photographer.

William Horsley, brother of David Horsley, who has been in Los Angeles where he had the contract for building Universal City, departed Saturday for the east, where he will take the management of the Centaur laboratories for the making of Horsley Mutual subjects and Christie comedies.

The Christie Film Company has purchased the properties, settings and scenery of the K. & D. organization, and also those of the National Film Corporation. These have been added to their big collection at the Gower street studio, and gives to the plant a very large variety of effects for comedies. The properties were originally made for feature productions, and are of the highest quality.

Another change is announced from the Kalem Hollywood studio, which is to the effect that Ethel Teare is to again play in Ham comedies, and begins with her former associates in the next picture. This will give to future productions the original trio that made the comedies so popular, and the change is said to have been made as the result of the many requests to the

George Cochrane and Tom Jefferson at U City

Kalem Company and General Film exchanges from exhibitors, for Miss Teare to play with the two comedians.

The last Ethel Teare picture has been titled "Quack Quakers," in which the worldly father and his daughter are to entertain his brother and family, the brother being a very strict Quaker. The visit is just at a time when Ethel has been wooed and won by the leading man of the Peaches and Cream, a light opera company, and the lead has arranged for the manager to star Miss Teare. He goes to see her when she and her father are in the garb of Quakers, and it requires lightning chances to hold up the name of the family in the eyes of the brother, and also to make a good appearance before the manager. Ultimately she weds the leading man, and decides she does not care for the life of an actress.

The Ham comedy of the week was named "The Baggage Smasher," in which the comedians contested with the Hazards Company to see who could make the most railroad thrills. In the end, the honor was given to the Hazards players. Ham and Bud employed a special train for several days and put on the hazards in which the giant comedian rode a horse alongside and leaped into the engine while it was running.

The Kalem base ball team, which has been defeated twice, first by the Horsley Cubs and second by the Rolin Lukes, has hopes of bettering their record, as they have just secured a new mascot—a Boston bull pup, the property of Manager M. E. M. Gibsone. The most recent defeat of the Kalem players was that of last Sunday, when the score stood twenty-three to six for Lonesome Luke and his associates.

Maude Emory (Universal)

Ince Studios Busy

The Thomas H. Ince studios at Culver City, last week had the busiest appearance since the company's move there, for last week was the first time that all companies, with the exception of that directed by William S. Hart, worked there at one time. It so happened that the companies had all finished the taking of scenes on exterior locations, and settings were in place for the interior scenes at the studio. Three of the companies have just returned from foreign locations, and the studio is a hot bed for stories of thrilling experiences, many of a hazardous nature.

Director Reginald Barker, with Frank Keenan, Robert McKim, J. P. Lockney, Leo Willis, J. H. Noble, Assistant Director Elliot Howe, Cameraman Charles Kauffman and Enid Markey, are back from Mt. Baldy. In ascending they took a trail that had not been traversed since the winter rain and storms, and they encountered many difficulties. One story is to the effect that the path was so steep, narrow and slippery, that one burro fell off a cliff, rolling down full three hundred feet. It was not so badly injured but what it could continue the trip to the top of the mountain. At another point, the trail was filled with a boulder said to weigh more than three tons. By main strength and awkwardness the men of the troupe succeeded in rolling it off the cliff.

It is said to have uprooted trees and left destruction in its wake as it tore down the mountain side.

However, to resume, a cabin was built on top of the mountain where one hundred and forty-seven scenes were made for the unusual mining drama being produced from a scenario by Lanier Bartlett.

"Somewhere in France" Company Back

Another company headed by Louise Glaum and Howard Hickman, who are appearing in the Ince adaptation from Richard Harding Davis' story, "Somewhere In France," came back from spending a week at North Island in San Diego bay, the location for the Pacific Ocean military aviation field. Director Charles Giblyn secured wonderful aerial effects by the courtesy of Colonel Glassford, in command of the army aerial corps, and Dal Clawson, the cameraman, made an ascension, and secured views from above of war scenes for the subject. The army birdmen remained in the air for twenty minutes, and views were taken from several different heights.

The third company to return to the studio, came after an absence of more than a week, and they did not bring back a foot of exposed film. Walter Edwards, the director, in charge of producing the desert island story featuring Dorothy Dalton and William Desmond, was at Monterey, Cal., and there found plenty of fog, which did not lift during his entire stay. The scenes will be made at a Southern California coast island, and the company will leave shortly for the making of these. As a token of their misfortune, each member of the company was presented with a copy of "The Spenders" by the author, Harry Leon Wilson, who resides at Monterey. While at the northern city, Edwards and the players were entertained on several occasions at the magnificent estate of the author.

Papoose Is Named for Tom Ince

Thomas H. Ince Thunderbull, first Sioux Indian born in California, was christened this week at Inceville. The child's godmother, Mrs. Frances J. Heney, wife of Santa Monica City Attorney, presented him with a great quantity of clothing and trinkets. The bronze-skinned infant is said to have accepted the ceremony in a matter of fact manner, remaining sober until he saw the presents from his godmother.

The most recent wonder of Inceville to be discovered, is that of a horse that attempted to commit suicide. The animal, known as a loco steed, while being ridden by a buckeroo named Stewart in scenes for a coming Hart production, dashed toward a cliff and leaped off head first. The rider was successful in jumping from the animal when he realized his danger.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Simmons, Manager of Mutual in Los Angeles, Brings a Dead Theatre to Life with Chaplin Subjects

M. L. MARKOWITZ, manager of the San Francisco, Cal., Universal Exchange, spent several days during the past week in Los Angeles at the exchange there. While he was in Los Angeles he made the announcement that J. V. Bryson, who has been in charge as manager of the branch there, has tendered his resignation in order that he might remain at Minneapolis, where he was formerly manager of the Universal Exchange, and also heavily interested in an accessory business. The resignation was accepted by the Universal Company, and Dave Burshon was appointed manager of the Los Angeles exchange.

Burshon has been connected with the San Francisco and Los Angeles exchanges for the past five years. He began as booking clerk, and worked up to the position of manager, later purchasing a large interest in the Los Angeles exchange, which was later sold to the Universal Company. Following the sale, Mr. Burshon remained a number of months as manager, and resigned to conduct concessions at the San Francisco Exposition. At the close of the exposition he returned to Los Angeles as assistant manager, and is now back in his old place. The exchange was very successfully conducted under Burshon's management, and he has the good will of all exhibitors of the territory. While in Los Angeles, Mr. Markowitz expressed himself as very well pleased with conditions at San Francisco and Los Angeles with respect to rental of Universal program and features.

A new policy was inaugurated by the General Film Company in Los Angeles recently in the closing of the exchange evenings. It has been the practice of all Los Angeles exchanges to keep open until about midnight, in order to receive returned films and make shipments to out of town points. The closing of the General may bring about a similar change at other exchanges.

The plan of giving Chaplin-Mutual comedies a four-weeks' continuous run at one theatre, in connection with five-reel subjects changed weekly, as inaugurated at the Garrick theatre, Los Angeles, upon the suggestion of C. M. Simmons, manager of the Mutual Exchange, has proven most successful. Such a program has turned a theatre with most unsatisfactory box office receipts, to the best paying investment of its kind on the coast. When Mutual Exchange Manager Simmons was notified of the Chaplin release, he formulated the plan for such a program and placed the proposition before every manager of down town Los Angeles theatres, and they rejected it. Simmons' next move was to induce Los Angeles business men to organize a company and purchase a theatre. The new company took possession of the Garrick theatre at the close of business on May 13, purchasing it from an investment company that had come into possession of it by foreclosure of mortgage.

By the opening hour on the following morning, new projecting machines had been installed in the operating booth, a new screen hung, and large electric signs appeared on the front. The same day, page copy was carried in the newspapers announcing the change of ownership and the new policy. Shortly after the opening hour, the house was sold out, and a line formed from the door. This line never broke until after ten o'clock that night. Extra police were needed to keep the sidewalks cleared on the first and several days following, so that patrons could enter another theatre four hundred feet down the block. Every day for more than two weeks there was a line. Every afternoon and for every one of the twenty-eight nights of the showing of the first subject, the seating capacity of the house, which is eight hundred, proved inadequate, and people waited on the edge of the sidewalk to gain entrance.

The policy adopted for the showing of "The Floorwalker," the first Chaplin picture is being carried out with respect to "The Fireman," and the attendance is even greater now than four weeks ago. In connection with the Chaplin picture, Mutual five-reel features are shown. It is estimated that more than one hundred and forty thousand people saw "The Floorwalker" during its run. During the month approximately two thousand dollars was spent for newspaper advertising. In addition to this, the bill boards were used.

The theatre is under the management of Teal Smith, who has decorated the house, installed many improvements during the first month, including a ventilating system and employed the best musicians.

NAUGLE MAKES TRIP IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Manager Harry Naugle of the V-L-S-E Los Angeles exchange has just returned from a trip of several days in the southern part of California. The Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "God's Country—and the Woman," has just completed a run of one week at the Cabrillo theatre, San Diego, Cal., where twenty-five, thirty-five and fifty cents admission was charged. The film played to capacity business every evening. It is booked for initial showing in Los Angeles at the Superba theatre on July 10.

CHANGE IN TRIANGLE EXCHANGE IN NEW ORLEANS

Arthur Lucas, from the New York office of Triangle, went to New Orleans last week and announced an important shift of managers.

Nat Ehrlich, of the New Orleans office, goes to Atlanta, while the Atlanta manager, Mr. Bromberg, goes to New Orleans. This shift, it is said, will be temporary, but there is every probability that it will be permanent.

Film men will regret Mr. Ehrlichs departure from the Crescent City, even though he will be in close touch with them.

Triangle was the latest big program to enter New Orleans. Through sheer merit of the pictures, it jumped to one of the most prominent and best patronized. It became a permanent institution in New Orleans when the Triangle theatre, a 2,200 seat house, opened. The Triangle is playing daily to S. R. O. houses, even though this is in the midst of the summer season, and there are numerous counter attractions.

Mr. Ehrlich was the first exchange manager in New Orleans, and through this fact and his genial personality, he is one of the best known film men in that city and territory. Mr. Ehrlich was the first manager Mutual placed in the territory.

O'BRIEN OF WORLD IN BOSTON BACK FROM MAINE TRIP

Simon Alexander has resigned from the treasurership of the Empire Feature Film Corporation, Boston, Mass.

William O'Brien, of the World Film Corporation in Boston, is back from a Maine trip and reports good business.

The Mystic theatre, in Malden, Mass., one of the largest theatres in the state, has signed for Unicorn service, through its manager, Clarence Robbins. Eastern Manager Fred. B. Murphy of the Unicorn is this week in Syracuse, N. Y. He is on an extended trip. Ike Schlank, general manager of the Unicorn, has sent a large portrait of himself to all Unicorn exchanges. David E. Dow, formerly manager of "Birth of a Nation" interests in New Hamphire and Vermont, is now traveling for Unicorn in Maine.

William Cowan has resigned from the World and has gone to the Paramount as head shipper.

CITRON WILL ATTEND MANAGER CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK

W. J. Citron, manager of the Fox Film Corporation, at 107 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, is working night and day in order to get ready to go to New York early in July, where he will attend a convention of the branch managers and get a chance to see some of the big films which his firm is now producing.

THREE MEN WITH WORLD IN KANSAS CITY, MO., CALLED TO COLORS

Three men connected with exchanges in Kansas City, Mo., were called to the colors June 19. And all of them were from one exchange, the World. They are: Howard Robertson, head shipper, who was about to be sent out on the road; he is a high private in Battery C; Louis Klar, booker and bookkeeper, lieutenant of Battery B, and J. J. Crandall, assistant shipper, a member of the crack signal corps of Missouri.

If they have to go to the border, their places will be filled by substitutes in the office, Mr. Richard Robertson, manager, making it a practice to have such substitutes familiar with the work and able to carry it on.

O'BRIEN OF CINCINNATI-BUCKEYE MARRIES

D. M. O'Brien, manager of the Charleston branch of the Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company, surprised his many friends on June 15 when he quietly married Myrtle May Perry of Charleston.

Mr. O'Brien is well known in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburg and Cincinnati, where he held responsible positions before opening the Charleston branch of the Cincinnati-Buckeye Film Company about two years ago.

Foland, Traveling Out of Kansas City, Mo., Places Pathe Pictures in Nearly Every Town He Visits; Bluebird Takes Well

J. E. FOLAND, traveler for the Pathe exchange out of Kansas City, has since April 15, when he entered the business, practically covered his territory with Pathe service—for practically every town now runs more or less Pathe films. Mr. Foland has visited every town where there is an exhibitor and has got contracts in all but a few—and these few, he is confident, he will line up in another week. Then it will be just a question of keeping in close touch with them, to supply their needs and give helps.

If any exchange manager thinks the exhibitors in the distant towns don't know him, they can think again. For C. S. Edwards seems to be known wherever there are exhibitors—and Mr Foland says the square treatment they have received from the Pathe exchange is usually credited by the exhibtiors directly to Mr. Edwards. And this makes easier sailing for the traveler.

An instance of the way Mr. Foland himself helps out the exhibitor was told recently by an exhibitor from a small town. The local newspaper had never done much in the way of publicity for the show. Mr. Foland happened into the office one day, when "The Woman's Law," by Harvey Thew, was about to be shown. He told the editor casually of the story of the man who illustrated this film story when it appeared in a magazine. Then he wrote the story—the editor published it, for it was a crackerjack story. And it not only gave a lot of publicity to that picture, but got the editor into the habit of thinking about the moving picture stories and publishing occasional synopsis of them.

The Bluebird exchange has been given one of the biggest honors received by an exchange in Kansas City—the placing in the theatres on Twelfth street of a first run feature for two days and a second run feature for two days, making four days in all. The Maze and the Wunderland are the houses that have taken the contracts.

An announcement from the New York office of the Bluebird Photo Plays, Inc., that the Bluebird features will be advertised in the Saturday Evening Post using a half page, except the first which will be a full page, has caused considerable comment among the Kansas City exchanges.

The following visitors were in the office of the Monarch Feature Film Co., Kansas City: J. H. Kamm, manager of the Odeon theatre, Coffeyville, Kan.; O. W. Tracy, manager, Royal theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., and Mr. Lloyd, manager of the Aladdin theatre, Springfield, Mo.

G. H. Bowles, of the Universal Film and Supply Company, editor of a paper called the Universal Weekly, which already has a circulation of 18,000, received a letter last week from the Cincinnati Post, Cincinnati, O., asking for admission to their exchange department. While the Weekly has had a good circulation in its territory, it surprised and pleased the editor to get the letter from territory so distant.

New Orleans Exchanges Find Business on Increase; V-L-S-E Arranges for Pre-Showing in Crescent City

IN co-operation with the New Orleans Press Club, five New Orleans exchanges presented a prize film program at 8 o'clock on the evening of June 23 in the Press Club's quarters above Kolb's Restaurant, to an audience composed of the Governor of Louisiana, the Mayor of New Orleans and other civic notables.

The five exchanges assisting the stellar entertainment were the Universal, Triangle, General, Mutual and Metro. Through their New Orleans managers each exchange presented its funniest one-reel comedy.

There were other stunts on the program. The newspaper men and the cartoonists were out in full force, and the pen and ink artists contributed their quota to the evening's entertainment with sketches of prominent men present.

Maurice F. Barr, local manager of Bluebirds, Inc., was in charge of the motion picture features of the entertainment. Members of the trade and daily press, prominent clubwomen and local ministers, were guests of Herman Fichtenberg at the Dreamworld theatre at an advance showing of "Where Are My Children?" its first showing in the South. As they left the special performance, those most prominent in the audience were asked for a written opinion of the picture. This matter was used in some effective advertising. "Where Are My Children?" opened for a month's run at the Dreamworld at an admission price of twenty-five cents. This will be the longest local run of a picture, with the exception of "The Birth of a Nation."

V-L-S-E, through New Orleans Manager R. King Evans, has made an interesting announcement. Hereafter all new releases will be given an advance showing at one of the Canal street theatres, at which a cordial blanket invitation is extended to all exhibitors, newspapermen and exchangemen. The hour of the weekly showings is eleven o'clock at night, after the regular show, and it is proving a popular hour with the morning newspapermen.

Anna H. Sessions, manager of the Southern World exchange, has just returned to New Orleans from her first trip through the territory since she was appointed to her present responsible position. She reports satisfactory conditions in Alabama and Mississippi.

Exchange men have extended their sorrow to Manager J. C. Ragland of the George Kleine office, who returned this week from Virginia, where he buried his father.

Al. G. Shear, manager of the Universal and Consolidated exchanges, got back in New Orleans last week from the convention of Consolidated managers held in Atlanta, and announced that he had secured State rights for Louisiana, Mississippi, and parts of Alabama and Texas on "Where Are My Children?" and "The Dumb Girl of Portici."

J. H. Charlotte, traveling auditor of the Fox Film Corporation, spent a few days last week at the New Orleans Fox office. He highly complimented Manager R. E. Barron on the manner in which New Orleans affairs were run.

The fourth episode of "Gloria's Romance" is being shown at Jac. Miller's Empire theatre. Increased patronage has been the rule with this Billie Burke picture serial.

DURNING RETURNS TO NEW ORLEANS AFTER MONTH'S TRIP OVER TERRITORY

Al Durning, Mutual representative out of New Orleans, has returned from a month's journey over a territory he knows as well as the inside of his own residence. He paid particular attention to new theatres, and brings in a batch of interesting items. He reports that J. N. Patten, Star theatre, Shabuta, Miss., contemplates building a new and up-to-date theatre in that town. Edgar N. Hatch, Gem theatre, Hattiesburg, Miss., is planning installation of a new cooling system. R. J. Scott, old time film man, has taken over the Ark theatre in Crystal Springs. In Birmingham, Ala., the Majestic, Birmingham's newest house, opened on June 4 to capacity houses.

LEONHARDT ON OMAHA VISIT

Harry Leonhardt, western representative for the Fox Film Corporation, visited Lester Sturm, Omaha manager, last week. Mr. Leonhardt admired the progressive spirit of Omaha and the middle west.

FRIENDS CONGRATULATE MITCHELL

Jacob Mitchell, whose appointment as manager of the Laemmle Film Service Company exchange in Omaha has now been confirmed by the home office, has received a large number of telegrams and letters from exhibitors and other film friends, congratulating him on his step up. No Bluebird manager has yet been appointed for Omaha.

NEW ORLEANS ASSOCIATION PERFORMS CONSTRUCTIVE WORK

Real constructve work has been done by the Associated Film Managers of New Orleans, organized only a few weeks. Nowadays an exchange manager hardly has to worry over a bad account. If he is at all suspicious about an exhibitor, he gets in touch with the secretary of the association, and all information is obtained in a few minutes over the telephone.

Under the tenents of the association, an exhibitor who has not kept faith with one exchange cannot deal with another until he has completely rehabilitated himself. In other words, he'll have to close up his theatre if he tries any tricks with an exchange. The percentage of bad accounts, it is expected, will be materially lessened within the next few months, and eliminated altogether in time.

The association has passed resolutions of regret over the death of Emmett Ragland, father of J. C. Ragland, manager of the George Kleine exchange. Al. G. Shear, manager of the Consolidated and Universal exchanges, has been appointed secretary, in place of F. S. Wilkes, of Paramount.

CALMY VISITS LOS ANGELES

M. Calmy, for a long time connected with the Golden Gate Film Exchange at San Francisco, and now operating the Comedy Film Exchange in the Bay City, spent several days in Los Angeles visiting the producing plants and exchanges. Mr. Calmy made the trip to and from Los Angeles by auto, visiting theatres while en route.

Dominion Exclusives, Ltd., Will Handle Fox Pictures in the Entire Western Canadian Territory

THOUGH arrangements just completed in New York by R. A. Scott, the Dominion Exclusives, Limited, of Vancouver, B. C., of which he is secretary and general representative, has just been awarded the distribution rights for Fox Feature films in the entire western Canadian territory, including the Provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, and Manitoba. The headquarters for this vast territory will be at Vancouver, where the exchange has commodious quarters in the Leigh Spencer Building, and a branch office will also be maintained in Winnipeg.

The Dominion Exclusives, Limited, was incorporated a short time ago by R. A. Scott and E. R. Fauser in association with several well-known business men of Vancouver, and the negotiations which have just been completed, have extended over a period of several months.

An announcement just issued by Mr. Fauser, who is managing director of the company, states that intense interest has been aroused by the coming of the Fox productions, none of which have ever been shown in Western Canada, and that negotiations are now under way with many leading houses for first run in their respective cities. The Royal Victoria theatre in Victoria, B. C., has already contracted for the service, and will play each subject for an entire week. The first picture to start was "The Two Orphans." It is pointed out that this subject was awarded the Gold Medal at the San Diego Exposition, in competition with various other manufacturers.

The two active members of the Dominion Exclusives have been connected with the industry in western Canada for many years. Mr. Fauser went to Canada from Detroit, Mich., conducting an office in Winnipeg as manager for the Gaumont Company of Canada. Some time later he opened the Calgary branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, and afterward had charge of the Vancouver office of the same company. His next position was general manager of the Pathe Film Syndicate of Western Canada, with headquarters in Vancouver, and he finally left this company to take over the management of the Dominion Film Exchange, which has now become the Dominion Exclusives Limited.

Mr. Scott spent six years in Winnipeg with the Sullivan and Considine interests at the Bijou and Empress theatres, and afterwards became manager of the Winnipeg office of the Pathe Film Syndicate, only recently going to Vancouver to become associated with the new Fox enterprise. Mr. Scott will leave shortly to give trade showings throughout the territory covered by the exchange and to establish an office in Winnipeg.

Activity Evident in San Francisco Film Circles; Davis Poster Exchange Sells Out to Globe

WEST Coast Division Manager W. W. Drum of the World Film Corporation has left San Francisco for a two weeks' visit to the Seattle office in the interests of the firm.

Mr. Kohn, manager of the Apex Feature Service Company of 114 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, has left for a ten days' visit to Los Angeles.

The Davis Brothers Poster Exchange at 158 Eddy street, San Francisco, has recently sold out to the Globe Film Exchange.

J. L. Warner has sold all of his stock and supplies of the New Film Corporation on Golden Gate avenue to the Nat A. Magner Company in the Pacific Building. Mr. Warner is going into the exchange business on his own account under the name of the J. L. Warner Film Attractions Company.

The Sun Photoplay Company has moved its offices from the Hughes Building to 100 Golden Gate avenue, where it occupies a portion of the store occupied by the Peerless Film Service Company, representatives of the Picture Playhouse Film Company. E. H. Emmick, manager of the Peerless Film Service Company, is now in Los Angeles for a two weeks' visit, looking after the interests of his firm's branch at that point. He reports that the comedies which he is now using are going very nicely. During his absence H. Solmson is in charge of the San Francisco office.

Among the recent visitors to San Francisco were L. Freitas of the Stockton Theatre Company, Stockton, Cal.; John Ratto, an exhibitor of Jackson, Cal., and C. Robinson of Monterey, Cal.

TAYLOR, IN OMAHA, INSTALLS PROJECTION ROOM AT GENERAL EXCHANGE

That his bookers may know the films, and thus be enabled to better balance up a program, and that his other employes may be better able to talk and write about the various pictures, Manager C. W. Taylor of the General exchange in Omaha has installed a complete projection room. It is fireproof and seats thirty people. The films are shown in the evenings and at noon, when the employes and interested exhibitors attend. Exhibitors considering the purchase of certain films may see them at the room.

Manager Taylor has been forced, like many other exchange managers, to go to the first theatre in the city showing a certain film, if he would see the picture. This plan was unsatisfactory.

WARNER ON TRIP IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

J. L. Warner, manager of the New Film Company, San Francisco, has left in his motor for a trip to southern California, where he will visit the exhibitors along the way. He finds that business is improving. Mr. Warner is also now the proud father of a fine seven-and-a-half-pound boy.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE" FOR BIG AUDITORIUM IN OCEAN GROVE, NEW JERSEY

"Gloria's Romance," with Billie Burke is going into what is said to be the largest auditorium of its kind in America—the Auditorium at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, which has a seating capacity of 10,000 and boasts that its patrons are the highest class, most intellectual and refined of any audience that assembles in a house of entertainment anywhere. Dr. G. L. D. Tompkins of Asbury Park is managing director of the Auditorium. He has signed for the picture the largest single day contract written by a film exchange manager in the United States, the contract having been written out of George Kleine New York exchange, it is said.

Only Large Cities for Premier Productions of Dixon Film

Director-General of National Drama Corporation Wants, in View of Crisis in Our International Affairs, Speedy Presentation of Patriotic Subject

WITH metropolitan engagements of "The Fall of a Nation" already in progress and Chicago and San Francisco to be entered in July, the selling plans of the Dixon-Herbert spectacle are being rapidly developed. Thomas Dixon, director-general of the National Drama Corporation, wired his representatives from the Coast:

"Reserve large cities only for premier productions of 'The Fall of a Nation.' In view of the crisis in our international affairs, I desire speedy presentation of my patriotic film everywhere. State right buyers and exhibitors controlling chains of theatres will be welcomed. Victor Herbert's original music can be supplied. Pictorial paper from the H. C. Miner Lithograph Company is ready. Shall be in Chicago June 26 and then return to New York to forward work of putting the play within reach of the myriads of Americans."

Pursuant to these instructions, quick arrangements were made to open the booking offices of "The Fall of a Nation" at 1480 Broadway, New York, on June 26. Edmond V. Giroux, for many years manager of the Northwestern theatrical circuit, was selected as booking manager. An indication of Mr. Giroux's ability is that he has handled the Oliver Morosco and John Cort offerings with great success. Among these have been many of the greater films.

The exploitation campaign, in careful cooperation with the purchasers of the film already greatly exceeds the gross advertising done in the first two months of "The Birth of a Nation," the scenario of which Thomas Dixon wrote. First-class productions of the music-spectacle are now being operated by the corporation to capacity business at the Liberty theatre, New York, and the Auditorium, Los Angeles, in addition to which the Illinois theatre, Chicago, will be opened on July 3 and the Cort theatre, San Francisco, on July 17. Several other of the big cities, where runs affect a big contiguous territory, will likewise be covered by special productions.

The writers in the publicity department, aiding the state right buyer or exhibitor, include Henry MacMahon and Wallace M. Powers, late of "The Birth of a Nation" and Triangle staffs respectively; Willard Holcomb, former motion picture editor of the Dramatic Mirror; Julius Hopp, an expert in foreign language publicity, and E. D. Price, a veteran Klaw and Erlanger press man who is covering Chicago.

Victor Herbert, the distinguished composer of "The Fall of a Nation," is putting the finishing touches to a condensation of the musical score suitable to small orchestras.

In the matter of paper "The Fall of a Nation" is equipped for immediate showing. The H. C. Miner Lithograph Company prepared a large stock of pictorial stands, eight-sheets, three-sheets, ones and halves illustrating the chief patriotic, thrilling and human-interest moments in the production. There are also illustrated heralds, press opinions from the leading cities, and unique toy novelties.

More than five hundred applications for time and territory were received before the New York production. Beginning June 26, Manager Giroux will give his immediate attention to these.

Something Besides Money Involved in Famous Players Offer

"Chief Point Is That It Marks First Big Effort of a Company to Get in Contact with the Foremost Writers of the Day," Says Zukor

THOUGH the amount of the total offer itself is the most striking feature of the announcement made by the Famous Players Film Company that it will pay $1,000 each for 100 photoplay ideas—making an expenditure of $100,000 for material—Adolph Zukor, president of the company, is inclined to think that the monetary consideration is only incidental.

"Though it is true that no other company has ever made such an offer since the beginning of the photoplay industry, still I do not consider that to be a particularly significant fact," declares Mr. Zukor. "The chief point to my mind is that it marks the first big effort of a producing concern to get into direct contact with the foremost writers of our day. Hitherto the larger concerns have devoted themselves chiefly to the adaptation of the successful plays and novels of the greatest authors. In the vast majority of cases, the negotiations for the rights to these plays and novels were obtained through arrangement with the different agencies representing the individual writers.

"The exceptions to this rule have been so few that Gabriele d'Annunzio's 'Cabiria' occurs to one at once—and not another big production. I should say, off-hand, that every other really big production has been the adaptation of some novel or play by a well-known author. In the case of the Famous Players, we have adapted Hall Caine's 'The Eternal City'; Mark Twain's 'The Prince and the Pauper'; Israel Zangweill's 'The Moment Before'; Robert Hichens' 'Bella Donna,' and the works of other equally distinguished writers. These photoplays have been succeses but they were not ideal because they were not written especially for the screen. In these, and in all other instances of a similar nature, it has been a matter of moulding the dramatic theme to fit the necessarily stringent requirements of the motion picture screen.

"What we are endeavoring to do is to have men of the mental calibre of these authors turn their imaginations directly to the devising of plots that are especially suited to the motion picture screen. Granting that the adaptation, when cleverly effected, represents the highest type of photoplay which we have had thus far, it is our belief that the alliance between the producers and the men of letters which we hope to perfect through the medium of this gigantic offer will mark the greatest upward step in the history of the motion picture since the introduction of trained stage players in the adaptations of stage successes and of great novels."

Ivan Announces Completion of Its First All-Star Picture

In "The Faded Flower" Are Marguerite Snow, Alma Hanlon, Rose Coghlan, Arthur Donaldson, and Edward Mackey

THE Ivan Film Productions, Inc., announces that it has completed the first photodrama to be made under its new policy of an all-star cast. The picture is entitled "The Faded Flower" and in the making of it several actors and actresses who have long been known as stars of both the screen and the spoken stage have been brought together in the one cast.

Work on this picture commenced early in May. Care was expended in the preparation of the story and its presentation, and the Ivan Company expresses itself as well satisfied with the result of its new policy. "The Faded Flower" brings together for the first time Marguerite Snow, the heroine of "The Million Dollar Mystery," and for a year a star of the Metro organization; Alma Hanlon, starred by Pathe and Fox; Rose Coghlan, one of the great actresses of the old school, who this year celebrates her golden jubilee of fifty years on the stage; Arthur Donaldson, the original "Prince of Pilsen," a role he played over a thousand times, and who later was starred by the Fox Company, and Edward Mackey, a star of the legitimate who achieved a triumph in the Lasky Company's "The Secret Orchard."

The vehicle in which these performers are presented is from the pen of Ivan Abramson.

"The Faded Flower" will be released through the Ivan exchanges as the regular monthly release for July, on the tenth of that month.

"BISHOP'S SECRET" WILL BE REVEALED BY UNITY

The Unity Sales Corporation announces the coming releases of a photodrama entitled "The Bishop's Secret." It is in five reels and the scene is laid in China and America. "The Bishop's Secret" deals with a story of a man's self sacrifice for what he deems to be the higher good. There is a girl in it too.

Film News From Foreign Parts

British Government Favors Censorship of Motion Pictures

London, June 8.

DURING the last few days the discussion of censorship proposals has loomed to the fore and the Home Secretary in a letter to the Preston Watch Committee makes it clear that the Home Office favors a central and independent censorship to be established by the Government. The proposals which have been made are that the local licensing authorities should include the following clauses as conditions on licenses for cinematograph exhibitions: (1) That no film be exhibited which the authority might prohibit on account of its objectionable character; (2) That if a film has not been passed by the official censorship, previous notice should be given to the authority, so that they might have an opportunity of examining the film before its exhibition. Films which had been passed by the official censorship would not be objected to by the licensing authorities. The letter added that from inquiries made, the Home Secretary believed that both local authorities and film manufacturers would welcome the suggested arrangements.

Absurd Accusations Against Films

The proposals, coming as they do with startling suddenness, can be traced to allegations, which to my mind require substantiation, that the abnormal increase in juvenile crime is attributable to the influence of the cinema. During the last half dozen years the cinema has enjoyed wonderful success in this country, and local authorities have constantly imposed new restrictions. If, as is alleged, the influence of the cinema has been pernicious, whose fault is it, but the licensing authorities, whose ineptitude has permitted the pollution of child morals. It is well known that the breadwinner in thousands of homes is serving with the colors, and during his absence there has been a relaxation of parental control. This, I venture to submit, is the cause of any increase in juvenile delinquency. While disagreeing with the circumstances under which it is proposed to establish the new board of censorship, one supports it if only for its utility and the official authority in adjudicating on the merits of a film. For the trade to have its own censors, without official status, can never be satisfactory to local authorities, whose fears sometimes are beyond human understanding. Manufacturers may be apprehensive lest, should the proposals attain to fruition, the censors in their zeal to eliminate the undesirable film, which admittedly is an evil, set up too exacting a standard before granting certificates, for it is argued a censor must censor."

May Meet the Desire of the Trade

While no announcement has been made as to the constitution of the new censorship authority, one ventures to think that the desires of the trade would be met by taking the existing British Board of Film Censors, under N. P. Redfern, under the wing of the Government and detaching it from the trade. Accumulated experience would then be carried forward to further account. It does not seem to be imperative that the film producer shall submit his subjects for the verdict of official censorshop. There is no doubt that the vast majority of films would be presented to the new censorship, for as the Manchester Guardian tersely puts it, "any sane producer would rather know his fate at once than run the risk of receiving several different ones, according to the outlook of particular Watch Committees. But it seems a curiously roundabout way of enforcing the authority of the proposed official censorship, and we do not see why all films which are to be exhibited in this country should not be compelled by law to reserve its final judgment."

Film Imports Reach 55,500 Pounds

During the month of April, England has imported film to the value of £55,500, of which £4,000 came from France, £46,500 from America and £5,000 from various other countries. There has been a big drop from the previous month, amounting to over £100,000. Of the £365,000 worth of film imported up to the end of April, £304,000 has come from America, the figures for the respective months being: January, £75,000; February, £42,000; March, £14,500 and April, £46,500.

The London County Council has adopted recommendations permitting of Sunday cinema entertainments, provided that the licensee proposes to pay in respect of each Sunday to an approved charity, a sum representing the actual profit for the day on the entertainment at the premises in question; no performance to begin before six o'clock p. m. or finish later than eleven p. m., and no person be employed who has been employed in connection with the entertainment for each of the previous six days. These are the principal provisions of the new regulations, to which one member objected on principle, to making the proprietors of picture houses give part of their takings on Sunday to charity. "It was little short of blackmail," he said. It would be just as logical for the Council's tramways, to be compelled to give part of the Sunday takings to charities. The regulations were only adopted by a majority of one vote.

Forthcoming Features

The first of the Lucocque films is entitled "Beau Brocade" from the novel by Baroness Orczy. This production was considerably delayed owing to war difficulties, but these having been successfully overcome, the delay will be compensated by superb settings. A forthcoming Broadwest film is "The Black Knight," featuring Arthur Collin, who distinguished himself in "The Answer," a subject by the same company. "The Mother" is another film in the studio stage and is occupying the attention of the London Film Company. The second of Gaumont's British productions is announced as "Ultus and the Grey Lady," 4,000 feet, to be shown for the first time in public next week. The Ideal Film Company, I understand, is having a picture play written for Ellen Terry, who has consented to play for the pictures. Mr. H. A. Browne, the principal of H. A. Browne and Company, has joined the Flying Corps, and for the duration of the war his business will be superintended by George Serra.

Another batch of new serials is announced. "The Perils of Pauline" (Pathe) is to follow "The Exploits of Elaine." The same firm, Pathe Freres, is also releasing "The Adventures of J. Rufus Wallingford," in fourteen parts. The story is to be printed in the News of the World, a weekly journal with a 2,500,000 circulation. The Trans-Atlantic Company's eighth serial is "Adventures of Terence O'Rourke" in eighteen parts, two to be released each week. A big advertising scheme has been prepared.

Noteworthy American Films

Among the noteworthy American films of the last few days are: "Thou Art the Man" (Vitagraph), "The Black List," "The Golden Chance" and "The Immigrant" (Lasky), "Butterfly on the Wheel" (World Shubert), "Devil's Brew," "Hero of D2 Submarine" and "Island of Surprise" (Blue Ribbon), "Her Great Price" (Metro), "Eternal Grind" (Famous Players), "Walls of Jericho" (Fox), "Out of the Big Snow" (Broadway), and "The House of Revelation" (Essanay). "Ovey" in Cub comedies is extremely popular with British audiences. Mr. Smith of the Vitagraph organization, has returned from the States and speaks very highly of Edna May in "Salvation Joan" (October release) and was much impressed with his American visit.

Triangle Pictures Are Well Received in Melbourne, Australia; Four-Reeler Made in Antipodes Meets with Approval in Sydney

AT the Emu Theater, Sydney, N. S. W., last week a four-reel feature, produced by Alfred Rolfe, for Australasian Films Limited, was screened. "A Man—That's All" is the title of the picture. The author's name has not been given, but he (or she) certainly deserves credit for developing an old plot in an entirely new way. The story deals with the regeneration of a captain in the British Army. By taking the blame in an affair of card cheating which had been perpetrated by his sweetheart's brother, the man is hounded out of society. He travels to Australia, and after sinking down to the lowest depths in a Chinese opium den, he meets a reformed convict whom he had helped while in England. The reformed crook induces the man to enlist, and they sail to the front together. The man proves the worth of his name by rescuing his new chum under fire, and in attempting to do the same thing for another, who turns out to be the girl's brother. The brother confesses his wrong, and the girl and the man are happily reunited.

The battle scenes, although not elaborate, are very convincing, and are perhaps the most realistic of any subject yet made in Australia. The settings, direction and photography are of high class order. Robert Inman, as the Man, Charles Villiers as the Crook, Maise Carte, as the Girl, and Percy Walshe as her father give performances worthy of the most experienced screen stars.

The Triangle program this week gives a fine variety of subjects. "The Lily and the Rose" (Fine Arts), "The Raiders" (Kaybee), and "Saved by Wireless" (Keystone). An important change has been effected by the management who will make a bi-weekly change of the matinee programs.

Fox contributes "Princess Romanoff," and "A Woman's Resurrection" to this week's attractions. Others include "My Madonna" (Metro), "Aristocracy" (Famous Players), "David Harum" (F. P. F.), "The Ransom" (Equitable), "One Oay" (Moss), which will be given a second week's run, and "A Man—That's All" (Australasian).

J. C. Williamson Limited has announced the conclusion of the "Nation" season, as this big attraction is booked to appear at a legitimate theatre in Melbourne. Thirty-six performances is not much of a run compared to the gigantic successes of the "Nation" in America, but the management will most probably have a return season of this picture, as since they announced the date of its concluding performance, "house full" has been the order of the day (and night).

Hoyt's Limited, a Melbourne firm, will open the Colonial theatre, Sydney, as a first-class picture house on the 1st of August. They have installed two 6-B Power's projection machines. The Colonial was one of the first theatres to be erected in Sydney by J. D. Williams.

The Triangle Films made their debut at the Majestic theatre, Melbourne, Victoria, on Saturday, May 6, with great success. The Majestic, which has been a legitimate theatre for a long time, has been entirely redecorated for the screening of Triangle plays. The lobbies have been paneled in oak with thick draperies in cream and black, a number of triangles supplying the necessary decorations. Marble from local quarries has been used extensively throughout the building. The stage has been designed on the same lines as that of the Strand theatre, New York. The total cost of re-decoration and fittings is stated to exceed £7,000. The opening program consists of "Fido's Fate" (Keystone), Billie Burke in Ince's production of "Peggy," and "The Golden Claw," with Bessie Barriscale and Frank Mills. Melbourne papers speak highly of these new brands of features and give extensive criticisms in their columns. So far none have found fault with "Triangles." A successful opening of Triangle pictures has already been made in one of the West theatres in Adelaide, South Australia, and the program being presented there this week includes "Let Katy Do It" and "Fatty and the Broadway Stars."

"Bob" Dexter, who has been associated with the advertising department of Australasian Films Limited, Sydney, for a number of years, leaves next week to handle Triangle publicity for this firm in Melbourne, Victoria. The growth of this enormous exchange is fully realized when one compares their spacious new offices in the Film House with those recently occupied. The offices of the firm occupy six floors.

"Murphy of Anzac," "Britain Prepared," "Jane Shore," and "The House of Tears" are current features at Adelaide theatres.

"Pardners," from a Rex Beach Story, Rewritten for Edison

Script, Long in Pigeonhole, and Found Antiquated, Is Remade in Quick Time by Sloane and a Director Engaged to Produce Picture with Star Whose Name Will Be Announced Later

A STAR whose name will be announced shortly, recently was taken under contract by the Edison company to appear in the leading role in a picturization of "Pardners," a Rex Beach story, to which the company had held rights for a number of years. The scenario of the story had been reposing in a pigeon-hole for two or three years, and, as it was the work of a prominent writer, it naturally was supposed to be in condition to start work on. But, when it was brought forth, it developed that no one had taken into consideration the fact that scenarios are subject to rapid deterioration. One casual reading of the old script of "Pardners" revealed the fact that the scenario was hopelessly antiquated and that there was nothing much left of it that could be used except the name.

Here was a situation that demanded immediate attention. With a star drawing salary every week under contract, it was highly essential that she (yes, it's a she) be quickly supplied with something to work on. E. H. Griffith, head of the Edison scenario department, being busy with other matters, his assistant, Paul Sloane, and the director engaged to produce the picture, were put to the task together. The director, by the way, is not only famous as a producer but is a well-known legitimate actor and a renowned scenario writer. An office was turned over to Mr. Sloane and Mr. Director and one morning they started in to write a new script from "Pardners." They worked incessantly, stopping only at meal times, until five a. m. the next morning. Then they took two hours rest and a lunch and started at it again, working until midnight.

After three hours' sleep, they felt sufficiently refreshed to continue their work and for five days more they toiled along, sleeping and working in approximately the same proportion that they did on the days described. The production will be one among a series of five-reel features that now are in progress at the Bedford Park studios.

QUIRK OFF TO PLAY IN PENNSYLVANIA TOWNS

Billy Quirk, president of the Screen Club, formerly a Vitagraph star, left for Pittsburgh Tuesday to play a short season in theatres in Pennsylvania. He will play a single in Pittsburgh, Altoona and other points.

OVOCA IN NASHVILLE ASKS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE FOR $20,000 STOCK SUBSCRIPTION

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Nashville, June 24.

Claiming that Nashville was unable to support them, the Ovoca Motion Picture Corporation through Charles R. Manier, appeared before the junior chamber of commerce in Chattanooga, Tenn., on June 16, and asked for $20,000 stock subscriptions. No action was taken. The Ovoca Motion Picture Corporation has maintained offices in Nashville since early in 1915, and so far has not produced a picture, being content to film a parade or two, the East Nashville fire and the Ward-Belmont pageant presented in the latter part of May.

The total amount of footage exhibited in Nashville would not exceed 2,000 feet. President Harry F. Green is also camera man for the company, and in connection with Al Fremont, conducts a school for photoplays. While announcement has been made more than once by President Green, that the Ovoca Motion Picture Corporation would begin work while endeavoring to sell stock for the company, so far no results have been visible. The offices are located at 623½ Church street, where some of the paraphernalia necessary for the production of films are kept. No action was taken by the Chattanooga organization.

New Laws and Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

WICHITA, KANSAS, EXHIBITORS FIGHT AGAINST SUNDAY CLOSING

The motion picture exhibitors of Wichita, Kan., lost their first two efforts to secure the repeal or modification of the Sunday closing ordinance. The first effort was to get the city commissioners to repeal the ordinance; they were turned down flat. They had meanwhile brought suit to enjoin the city officials from enforcing the ordinance. Judge Wilson, who heard the case, admitted certain defects in the measure, and said that maybe it was too broad. He denied that it was class legislation to the extent of invalidating it, and said that though it may be broad, the courts would doubtless interpret it as the ordianance-makers had intended it to be interpreted, and so it should stand.

The exhibitors have not been perfectly harmonious in their fight against the measure, a good deal of difference of opinion prevailing as to the proper course to pursue. Apparently, as one method of attacking the measure after another is tried and fails, they will eventually get together on a vigorous and acceptable method that may bring results, as results have been secured in other states.

SUNDAY OPENING FIGHT WON IN DANVILLE, INDIANA

"As the culmination of a long and a bitter fight at Danville, Ind., between the ones who want Sunday shows and those who do not, the council of that city recently met and voted to allow the shows to open on the fourth of June," says an editorial in the Lafayette Ledger of June 1.

"This decision is important as showing the different views prevailing on this mooted question in different localities. In comparison to the things that occurred there when the recent attempt was made to get Sunday shows, the Danville councilmen must be made of different clay from the sort used in aldermanic manufacture in Hoosierdom in the county of Tippecanoe."

EVERYBODY IN LONG BRANCH, N. J., EXCEPT POLICE COMMISSIONER, WANTS SUNDAY OPENING

Residents of Long Branch, N. J., are deeply stirred over the arbitrary ruling of Police Commissioner John Chasey, who announced last week that motion picture houses there would not be allowed to open on Sunday. The police commissioner's attitude is difficult to understand. Last summer and those preceding last season the police commissioner, Thomas V. Arrowsmith, permitted the showing of motion pictures on Sunday, providing the different managements were careful to select pictures that were not offensive.

More than fifty per cent of the present population of Long Branch are members of the summer colony, practically all of whom are patrons of the local picture houses. To their petitions and appeals for a reconsideration of his ruling, Commissioner Chasey has turned a deaf ear. As far as can be learned the permanent residents of Long Branch are not averse to Sunday openings. The responsibilty for the closing apparently rests wholly with the police department.

Residents of Long Branch are practically a unit in their criticism of the police department and its new ruling.

ATTENDANCE IN TORONTO IS NOT AFFECTED BY WAR TAX ON SEATS

The amusement tax has not decreased the attendance at moving picture theatres in Toronto, Ont., as far as can be ascertained by J. T. White, solicitor to the treasurer. It was said in some quarters before the tax went into effect that some of the smaller theatres which charge five cents for admission would be forced to close up on account of the tax.

So far from this being the case, Mr. White states that one of the large five cent houses has reported to him that the attendance since the tax became operative has been even larger than before. It is probable that some of the houses will have to close up, but other causes than the tax will be accountable. For instance, the recruiting has reduced the population of Toronto by at least 60,000. The attendance at picture theatres is bound to fall off about this time of the year. People cannot be at the beaches and at the picture shows also.

EXPRESS TRAFFIC ASSOCIATION OF CANADA WANTS CHANGES

Application has been made to the board of railway commissioners by the Express Traffic Association of Canada for approval of certain changes in regulations and increases in rates on various articles. An amendment to the item in the classification relating to the handling of films provides for the carrying of Pathescope or other non-inflammable films in metal cases when enclosed in fiberboard boxes, and it is also proposed to permit the shipment of advertising matter in the same containers with films.

MAYOR IN ST. JOHN, N. B., WANTS 30-CENT SEAT TAX

Mayor Hayes of St. John, N. B., brought up in Council meeting a motion to tax picture theatres and others at the rate of thirty cents a seat up to the first thousand seats and then fifteen cents a seat per annum in excess of that number. According to this schedule, the tax on the various theatres would be as follows: Star, $120; Palace, $75; Empress, $120; Gem, $240; Lyric, $235; Unique, $195; Opera House, $330; Imperial, $412.50; or a total revenue to the city of $1,717.50, as against the present $1,400.

There would be two cases of small decreases, but the mayor suggested that for the present year the $200 license for dramatic purposes be waived for at least this year. The new schedule was adopted. It was also pointed out by the committeemen that some minor improvements in safety regulations would also have to be carried out in some of the theatres.

MINISTERS SEE NO HARM IN "HYPOCRITES" BUT A "SAFETY FIRST" OFFICIAL ORDERS CUT OF "TRUTH"

Although passed in its entirety by the St. John, N. B., censors, "Hypocrites," shown at the opera house, has been objected to by the chief of police, who was instructed to pass upon the picture by the commissioner of public safety.

The picture was also witnessed again by two members of the censor board and a prominent clergyman, and despite the fact that these gentlemen expressed themselves as satisfied that "Hypocrites" could in no way be construed as offensive or immoral, the scenes showing "naked truth" were ordered cut out by the chief and a member of the police department was present to see that Manager McKay complied.

NORTH VANCOUVER MAYOR WANTS TAX ON THEATRES TO AID SOLDIERS

In North Vancouver, B. C., at a recent meeting of the Returned Soldiers' Aid Commission, Mayor Haines introduced a resolution providing for a tax on theatre tickets, as a means toward raising funds which will be required by the organization as the number of wounded soldiers returning from the front becomes larger. Although Reeve Bridgman was in accord with the views of the mayor, he refused to second his motion for levying the tax without considering the matter at further length.

FILM MEN AMONG CANADIAN TROOPS

Camp Borden, Ont., June 24.

Among the great army of Canadian volunteer soldiers gathered at this point, three Canadian film men are prominent. These are Lieut. Jim Stubely, formerly manager of the Princess theatre, Orilla; Lieut. Bill Duncan, for many years in charge of the Model theatre, of Midland, Ont., and one of the well known Duncan Brothers. Also Charlie Beattie, formerly of Barrie, Ont. These three men are just representatives of the many hundreds of film men who have volunteered to go overseas since the first call for troops began in Canada. Camp Borden, which is the largest training camp in America, is to have two motion picture shows, which will keep these three men from getting too homesick.

Grace Etchison of Shreveport, La., Wins Saenger Contest

This Entitles Her to a Trip to Los Angeles and Universal City—Lee Arthur Writes Scenario Featuring the Winner—Picture May Be Produced When She Arrives

THE Saenger Amusement Company of Shreveport, La., which owns and operates a chain of theatres in Louisiana and Texas, has just closed a beauty and popularity contest which has been conducted for the past six weeks in all its theatres.

Five young ladies of each of the towns in which the Saenger people operate theatres, were nominated by the most popular clubs and other organizations such as the Add Clubs, Chamber of Commerce, Elks Club and Rotary Club. After each town had five young ladies properly nominated and sponsored by some popular club, the contest was conducted by popular vote of the Saenger theatre's patrons. The mayor or some prominent official of each town was appointed to count the votes each week which were obtained at the box office of each theatre. On every Wednesday night during the entire contest the votes were counted in each of the towns and the standing of contestants given in to the general offices of the Saenger Amusement Company at Shreveport, La., over long distance telephone.

The main prize to the winner of the contest was a free round trip with all expenses paid to Los Angeles, Cal., and Universal City. The Saenger Amusement Company having made arrangements to have the winner or in case of a tie, winners appear in motion pictures at Universal City. In addition to the main prize, a $150 diamond ring was given to the winner in each of the towns. These were on exhibition at local jewelry stores in all towns during the entire contest.

Grace Etchison

Grace Etchison of Shreveport, La., sponsored for by the Shreveport Advertising Club, was the winner over all the towns and received the main prize, the California trip. On the last night hundreds of people in each of the towns crowded in front of the Saenger theatres waiting for the final count to determine the winner of the trip as well as the diamond ring prizes. Great interest was shown by the clubs which had been sponsors for the young ladies.

Grace Etchison, the winner, and her mother, will leave for California some time during the month of June. During the course of the contest the Saenger Amusement Company employed Lee Arthur, the well-known author of many big successful plays, including "The Auctioneer." David Warfield's former stage success, to come to Shreveport and write a special scenario around the contest and featuring the winner in the leading role. The title of this scenario, "The College Bells," incorporates a few local scenes in each town and these were filmed with all the contestants in the cast under the direction of Mr. Arthur. The Universal may consent to produce "The College Bells" at Universal City when Miss Etchison reaches there.

Max Figman and Lolita Robertson Will Produce for Metro

Players Already at Work on First One-Reel Comedy of a Series Called "Love Me, Love My Dog"—Actor and Actress Well Known to Stage and Screen Audiences

MAX FIGMAN and his wife, Lolita Robertson, have been engaged by the Rolma Film Corporation to make a weekly one-reel comedy feature which will be released on the Metro program. Mr. Figman and Miss Robertson have already begun work on the first comedy of this series called "Love Me, Love My Dog." The scenario is by C. Doty Hobart. The Figman-Robertson comedies will be in addition to the one-reel subjects which Metro recently added to its program of features. These new features include the Metro-Drew comedies, starring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, and the weekly Metro Travelogue. Other one-reel weekly features will be added in the near future, but Metro is not prepared to make a definite announcement as to their characters and the stars who will appear in them.

Mr. Figman enjoyed a successful career upon the speaking stage before he went into motion picture. He was playing in the all-star cast of "Fine Feathers" when Jesse L. Lasky induced him to sign a contract for the starring role in "The Man on the Box," which marked his debut in the silent drama. He has appeared in many features since that time, among them Pathe's series of George Randolph Chester's stories of "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," "What's His Name?" by George Barr McCutcheon, produced by Lasky, and "My Best Girl," one of the early releases on the Metro program.

For a time Mr. Figman produced and starred in pictures under his own management, during which time he made "The Truth Wagon," "Jack Chanty," and others. Mr. Figman was born in Vienna, and comes from a family of artists. Early in life he studied to be a portrait painter, but gave up because of his interest in theatricals.

His first public appearance was in amateur performances at the Philadelphia Drawing Room, in company of the famous Drew, Barrymore and Davenport families. Augustin Daly saw him act at one of these performances and engaged him professionally to appear with his famous company in New York.

Mr. Figman was then eighteen years old. He was successful from the start and besides Daly was associated with A. H. Palmer, Charles Frohman, Harrison Grey Fiske, and other noted managers of that day. He was later starred for seven years under the management of John Cort. He appeared in "The Man on the Box," "Mary Jane's Pa," and "Old Curiosity Shop," and is considered the best Dick Swiveller in America. While playing with Mrs. Fiske, Mr. Figman ran the gaunts of men's characters, from the leading role in "Divorcons" to Thorvald in "A Doll's House," and Assessor Brack in "Hedda Gabler."

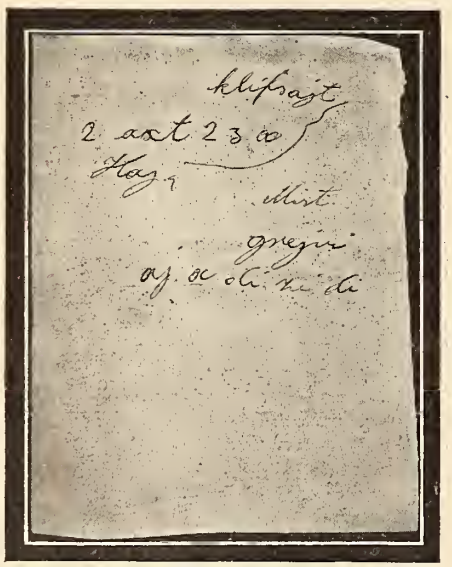
Miss Robertson hails from California and her first stage experience was with the Alcazar Stock Company in San Francisco. Later she played with Henry Miller in "The Great Divide" with Henry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard," and had the leading feminine role in Margaret Mayo's "Commencement Days," produced by Max Figman and John Cort. She also played with Mr. Figman in "The Substitute," and then became Mrs. Figman.

She has made a decided success since she went into motion pictures, and has a big following all over the country. She is fond of outdoor life and her favorite diversion is horseback riding, often remaining in the saddle for twelve hours at a stretch. The Figmans live at Great Neck, Long Island, where they have a country place, and where they can always be found when they are not working in the studio in the city. Mr. and Mrs. Figman have a daughter, Maxine Lolita Figman, four years old. Mr. Figman directs his own pictures, and is assisted by C. P. Huntington.

JOHN OAKER LEAVES THE SCREEN FOR STAGE

John Oaker, identified with the David Horsley studios for the past year as juvenile leading man and having been seen in support of Crane Wilbur, Margaret Gibson and William Clifford in the Horsley-Mutual productions, has abandoned the silent drama to return to the legitimate stage. Previous to his screen debut, Mr. Oaker was affiiliated with some of the best stock and repertoire companies in the country.

JUST TO MAKE TALK



By LONGACRE

WELLER, SR., we believe it was, who advised his son: "Shout with the mob." "And in case there are two mobs?" asked his son. "Shout with the largest," was the reply. Passing lightly over the fact that we may have misquoted, we may state that the advice is good enough for us; therefore:

"On to Chicago!"

And, at that, lots of us are already onto Chicago. Nothwithstanding which, July 8 is to be a big day in the industry. From what we hear it is to be followed by a big week.

Out in a certain suburban section of New York where motion picture people love to congregate and pay rent, the domestics are largely of the Polish persuasion; many of them know several words of English, and consequently the delivery of a telephone message is something of a feat. One evening last week, George Irving, Frohman director, telephoned to Jacques Monteran, his cameraman. Monteran was out, and Mr.

"Here's the Very Note—This is What She Wrote!"

Irving left his name and telephone number with the maid who answered the 'phone. The message she left for her employer is reproduced herewith. Monteran at first thought it was a black-hand warning, but after three or four other Polish domestics had been called in from the adjacent homes, the note was found to be written in "English," and with a definite purpose. Here is the translation:

"Cliffside (Bayside) 2 eight 2 3 party J. Mist. George i r v i n"

Very simple when you know the combination.

Comes a letter from A. Jules Benedic, our New Orleans correspondent:

"Dear Mr. Longacre: We own a Monarch. It is a good machine, and not any peskier than other brands we have owned. (adv.) And yet we are willing to wager our next Motion Picture News voucher that it isn't possible to write the word "Triangle" at a reasonable rate of speed without getting snarled up in 'trinagle' once out of every four times you write it. Try it yourself. We'll bet money, marbles or grease paint on this proposition."

Assuming that Mr. Benedic means by "a Monarch" a typewriter of that brand, we can't sympathize with him. We also own a Monarch—or hope to own it in the course of time—and we like it. So far, however, we have only tried to write "triangle" three times, and have batted 1000 on accuracy. If it works the fourth time we'll try to collect the bet—and please make it grease paint, as our nose is inclined to shine this weather. If it works we will also incline to the belief that Mr. Benedic is preparing an alibi for some of his copy.

"Mr. Carrington's father," says the Morning Telegraph, speaking of Hereward, the wakeful author of "Myra," "was an Anglo-Englishman." The idea being to convey, by inference, as it were, that Mr. Carrington has a trace of British blood in his arteries.

Actors, or anyone else, for that matter, who allow themselves to become the subject of such publicity as the appended, hardly deserve to get their names in print; which will explain the dashes:

"————, the famous director, known as a reincarnation of our ex-President Abraham Lincoln, * * * A man, every inch of him, if any member of his company is hurt the Big Heart shows you the kind of man he really is. * * * He never forgets a kindness. In his portrayal of Lincoln, and in this he has no equal, he shows all of his wonderful personality. * * * Truly, ————, the Man with the Big Heart is no other than a reincarnation of our ex-President. As a director his name stands above them all, not only does he direct his players, but he also plays his own leads, sharing honors with that wonderful little actress, known throughout the world as the sweetest little maid in filmdom, Miss ————, making the greatest team acting before the motion picture camera to-day. (please use)"

Signed simply "R" is a post card received by a number of persons in the trade last Monday; the context was: "Dear Sir —Stand at Broadway and 43rd street, Monday morning, June 19 between 9 and 12 and look intently north, you will learn something of vast interest to the trade." We tried it, and saw a big banner stretched from the Hotel Astor across Broadway to the New York Theatre, announcing the appearance of Alice Brady in "La Vie de Boheme." And as ever its torn folds rose and fell on loyal winds that loved it well, etc., we recognized the work of the white-haired boy of press-agentry in its establishment.

The Bayside Bugle

"Bigger, Busier, Brighter Bell Ave." Bayside, L. I., July 8, 1916.

A Good Deed

The Bugle and all good citizens are glad to commend our genial and popular fellow townsman, Jim J. Corbett for the wholehearted way he has taken hold of making the strawberry social and entertainment of the M. E. Church, which is to be held on June 30, and promises to be a great success. Although not a member of the M. E. Church, Jim has readily agreed to do his best in getting up the entertainment, and we all know what Jim's best is. He is to do an act himself, and in addition has got several regular performers from N. York to come out, including Doyle and Dixon, the famous dancers, and others. It is expected that Mrs. Farnum will sing, which will be a treat to all, and other actor folk of hereabouts will be there to make the program one of the best local talent. We will be there, Jim, and we can speak for scores of our citizens when we say they will also be likewise.

Local News

—Cliff Bruce is still trying to get his auto paid for that was smashed up when a w. k. actress ran into it the other Sunday. Cliff says he got the girl's name but no more as we go to press.

—Charley Logue Sundayed with the Jack Clymers, Sun. last.

—Quite a number from Bayside, including Ye Ed. motored out to Henri's at Lynbrook for dinner last Sun. eve.

—Bill Willis, our esteemed contemporary, who just got back from Mexico, had to go back again last wk.

—Tad Dorgan was running the phonograph at his house one night last wk.

News are rather stringent just now.

—Lots of the boys from hereabouts have been obliged to put on their uniforms and go to the front, because our well known Pres., Mr. Wilson calling out the militia. H. Reichenbach says if they call for volunteers he will be one of the first at the depot—to bid the boys goodby.

—Bert Green has moved to Bayside, his house being on Cocheron ave with a garden behind. Bert expects to connect with running expenses by drawing pictures of "Bringing up Father" for Mr. Hearst's film co. Welcome Bert, say we.

—Born to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Clymer, a baby girl, Fri., June 23, 1916. All hands doing well. Jack wears a wide smile these days, and the BUGLE extends congratulations.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

J. J. Allen, of Famous Players Exchange, has returned to Montreal.

Harry Cohn of Metro has returned from the Thousand Islands.

A. H. Sawyer, of Starfilms, Inc., Montreal, was in town last week.

H. O. Davis, general manager of Universal City, is back again in the east after a flying trip to the west coast.

Gertrude Selby and Max Asher, of the Universal forces, are in New York City.

Thomas H. Ince left New York for Chicago last Thursday.

Andrew J. Cobe, of the Unity Sales Corporation, has been in Chicago for a few days.

Mae Murray, of the Lasky forces, is in New York City for about a month.

Pauline Frederick, the Famous Players star, has left New York on an extended automobile trip.

Alexander Beyfuss, general manager of the California Motion Picture Corporation, is on his way East.

General Manager of the Fox Film Corporation Winfield R. Sheehan is expected to return from London with his bride in about two weeks.

Rita Jolivet (Countess de Cippico) of the Morosco forces has arrived in the metropolis.

Alan Dwan, Fine Arts-Triangle director, is in New York to work at one of the Triangle's eastern studios.

The Metro-Yorke players, headed by Harold Lockwood and May Allison, have returned from the Thousand Islands.

SCHAEFFER REMAINS IN THE EAST

Roscoe Arbuckle, the Keystone comedian, and his youthful technical director, Freddie Schaeffer, go separate ways after July 1.

Mr. Arbuckle goes back to the Californian Keystone studios and Freddie stays in the East. He doesn't care to leave New York this time, as his reputation has been much enhanced by his work in the Keystone Arbuckle comedies and he has received many lucrative offers.

Schaeffer studied three years under the tuition of Stanford White, and he was for many years designer and art director for William Baumgarten and Company, interior decorators. He has also been art director for David Belasco.

He entered the film industry about ten years ago wifh David Horsley and for several years was with the Gaumont Company. For the past two years he has been manager of the Willat Studios.

RAY COMEDY BUSINESS MAKES LARGER QUARTERS NECESSARY IN CLEVELAND

Cleveland, June 24.

The Johnny and Emma Ray pictures have become so popular that the Reserve Photo Plays Company has outgrown its present location, 717 Superior avenue. Consequently they are moving from their cramped quarters into the Wiltshire Building, formerly occupied by the Post Office, where they will have the entire upper floor.

A Pair of Vitagraph V-L-S-E Releases for Week of July 3: Frank Daniels in "Kernel Nutt and High Shoes"; Lucille Lee Stewart in "The Conflict"

Home of Pallas and Morosco Makes Rapid Growth

Nearly Three Years Since Birth of Bosworth, Inc., When Stage Measured Only 20 by 25—Plant Is Now One of the Finest on West Coast

IT is now nearly three years since the birth of Bosworth, Inc., on August 8, 1913. The growth of the studio has progressed from a small stage twenty feet by twenty-five feet to one of the finest studios on the coast, equipped with every feature to make it absolutely complete. From the inception of the story of a feature photoplay, whether adapted from a stage success, a popular book, or an original scenario, to the time when after a final inspection the finished five-reel product is released direct to the exchange—all the making or assembling of everything required is performed at the Los Angeles studio.

The first small studio, which was rather inaccessible, was given up in August, 1914, and the firm moved into a new fireproof studio erected to embody all the valuable features of the leading film plants. The assembly of structures consisted of a glass covered stage, a concrete fireproof laboratory with a capacity then thought to be greatly in excess of any future needs, a long double decked row of concrete, white enameled dressing rooms with running water in each room and finished in model fashion, a wardrobe building, a director's building and a "prop" warehouse.

The formation of the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company on November 9, 1914, necessitated a big increase in the studio grounds and in December, 1914, a big tract of real estate on the opposite side of Council street was purchased. Here was erected a vast open air stage on which the spectacle scenes, requiring a big assembly of men, vehicles and horses could be staged. A number of the big scenes in "Captain Courtesy," "Peer Gynt," "The Rug Maker's Daughter," "Davy Crockett" and other Morosco and Pallas photoplays were performed there. A big carpenter shop was also erected and fitted with every form of wood-working tools and machinery.

In January, 1915, and again on May 15, 1915, the glass covered stage was enlarged until it covered the entire property not occupied by buildings north of Council street. A reinforced concrete structure for the executive offices, bookkeeping and scenario departments, was finished in February, 1915, and on March 11, 1915, a building to house the lofty scene painting frames, together with a sixteen compartment scenic dock, was erected. Then a larger double warehouse to store "props" and stage fittings was completed August 1, 1915. This building was connected on October 19, 1915, by a trussed roof to the carpenter shop and afforded a large earth-floored space protected from the sun and unfavorable weather. This space has been useful for special equestrian stunts.

To house the increased force of directors and to take care of the employment bureau's ever increasing burden, a duplex building was erected to flank the big gates that protect the way to the stage. Here in October, 1915, were established the directors, each in his own office, the additional timekeeper at the office by the gate and the waiting-room connecting from the street directly to the employment office. Scenic dock No. 2 was added in December, 1915, doubling the capacity of the stalls for the rapidly accumulating scenery.

In the latter part of December, 1915, the adjoining property, together with a large bungalow was secured and this building was rebuilt to accommodate the drafting, title painting, model building, display painting and architectural departments. The scribes of the scenario department were housed on the second floor.

The present war necessitated the buying and accumulating of a large stock of supplies for future needs, and accordingly a big warehouse was erected in February, this year, on the property south of Council street. The purchasing offices were installed here. An extra projecting room or rather building was raised back of the art department structure in February, also an isolated armored film vault.

In March, an annex was added to the laboratory for the exclusive use of the directors when cutting down their productions. On April 15, a new department was established and fitted for blacksmithing and iron working.

GIROUX IN CHARGE OF "FALL OF A NATION" OFFICES

Edmond V. Giroux, for many years manager of the Northwestern circuit and booking agent of the John Cort and Oliver Morosco attractions, has been engaged by Thomas Dixon as general manager of the National Drama Corporation.

He will take charge of "The Fall of a Nation" offices on the seventh floor of the Longacre Building, following an important announcement as to the company's plans.

Billie Burke in Episodes Eight and Nine of "Gloria's Romance," Produced by George Kleine

Enthusiasm Over "Gloria's Romance" Reaches High Pitch

Kleine Exchanges Report Business for Billie Burke Subject on Increase and That Exhibitors Declare Audiences Are Impressed With Novelty of Picture

THE previous successes reported from cities and theatres where "Gloria's Romance" is running have been far exceeded within the past week or two by new reports coming in from various exchanges. A few reports follow:

Charles M. Thall, manager of the Kleine offices in Minneapolis, says that the preservice engagements of "Gloria's Romance" at the New Palace theatre, Minneapolis, and the New Princess theatre, St. Paul, have created new records in point of attendance at both houses. It is a fact that both the New Palace and the New Princess have been showing to hold-out business every day with this production.

H. J. Lego of the Majestic in Ft. Dodge, Iowa, reports that his city has the Billie Burke craze and the large capacity of his theatre has been taxed to the utmost at every performance of "Gloria's Romance." Frank Bryant, manager of the Plaza theatre at Waterloo, Iowa; J. Miloslowsky of the Palace theatre, Des Moines, Iowa; James Grange of the Strand theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and A. K. Pay of the Colonial in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, all enthusiastically endorse the value of Billie Burke in the new Rupert Hughes motion picture novel.

On Lake street, a retail thoroughfare in the residence district of Minneapolis, the downtown success of "Gloria's Romance" is reflected in the bookings at the Calumet, Lyric, Rialto and Garrick theatres. Towns of from one to five thousand population are meeting with equal success in the showing of "Gloria's Romance." Summy Brothers of the Star theatre, Spencer, Iowa, report an attendance equal to one-third the entire population of their city at every performance.

Harry Scott from the Philadelphia office of George Kleine reports that representative exhibitors such as Stanley V. Mastbaum of the Stanley Company, Alexander Boyd of the Arcadia theatre, C. Stapper of the Tioga theatre, Philadelphia, and the Burbank and Conover theatres of Germantown; H. Effinger of the Leader theatre, J. Delmar of the Jefferson theatre and numerous others, are unanimous in their expressions of approval regarding the increased receipts on Billie Burke nights, as well as the general satisfaction of their patrons in "Gloria's Romance."

In Baltimore E. J. Rosenstein of the Strand theatre has doubled his receipts. In Atlantic City the Colonial and Bijou theatres have increased their business from 100 to 150 per cent on Billie Burke days and the same applies to M. E. Comerford's circuit of theatres in Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Pittston and Carbondale. No complaints of "Gloria's Romance" were received and the smaller towns are signing up contracts daily at prices far exceeding any rentals that have been heretofore paid.

W. A. Ratz of the Indianapolis office says: "H. A. Keine of the Keystone theatre reports his business increased steadily each week. He is running four days a week and says that if the business on the other three days could compare favorably with the Billie Burke days he would have no cause for worry for the summer months."

George Hines, manager of the Auditorium at South Bend, Indiana, writes manager William H. Jenner of the Kleine Chicago office: "If you want any reference of the drawing power and pleasing qualities of Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance" tell exhibitors to write me. Despite the rainy days of the past week I have been playing to almost capacity business at every performance. I have made it my business to ask my patrons of all classes how they enjoy Billie Burke and I haven't yet found a single knocker. Most of them say 'Oh, she is too sweet for anything!' and 'It's great!' Billie Burke is in a class by herself and so is the story and the picture. It is away from all blood and thunder and sensation. Women and children in particular like Miss Burke and my matinees are great."

W. E. Raynor of the New York office reports: "The president of the Brooklyn Exhibitors League, Mr. Manheimer, Park theatre, Brooklyn, opened on May 23 and has been doing a turn-away business ever since. He is exceptionally well pleased with the production. Mr. Lou Smith, manager of the New Kingston theatre, St. John's Place, Brooklyn, reports that although his theatre seats but 600 people, he played to 1500 admissions on the opening night and was later compelled to show the film in his airdome in a drizzling rain in order to accommodate the crowds." Mr. Smith, incidentally, is a firm believer in advertising and has several stands 48 sheets long.

Resuming his report Mr. Raynor says: "B. F. Keith's Prospect theatre in Brooklyn, playing the picture three days a week, reports that it has drawn more business for the house than any vaudeville act secured this season. Shea's Hippodrome theatre in Buffalo, with a seating capacity of over 3,000, playing Billie Burke three days a week, has been turning people away. The management of the Regent theatre, Rochester, premier photoplay theatre of the city, playing "Gloria's Romance" four days a week, and is exceptionally well pleased and states that the picture is a lifesaver for the spring and summer business. The Globe theatre on Broadway, New York City, finds business steadily increasing as the story goes on. This is the first time in motion picture history that a serial picture has ever played a Broadway theatre, and when one considers that it is strictly a transient business the attendance at the Globe theatre is simply marvelous.

THEY JUST GOT TIRED OF SCREEN ROMANCE AND WANTED THE REAL THING

George Walsh, who is acting on the Pacific Coast for the William Fox Corporation, has just taken for his bride Seena Owen, one of the beauties of the screen world. And her talents are in direct proportion to her pulchritude.

Few thought that Mr. Walsh was not proof against romance. Fewer still ever suspected that Miss Owen's heart lay in Edendale, where the Fox studio is located. When Mr. Walsh announced his marriage, the studioites threw up their hands, gasped their surprise, then rushed to buy gifts. Mr. Walsh is now engaged in the making of a strong Western story, according to a recent announcement.

PICTURE ATTENDANCE LEADS ALL FORMS OF ENTERTAINMENT BY MANY THOUSANDS

According to statistics compiled by the social survey taken in Belleville, Kansas, 105,000 people attend moving pictures, 93,000 go to religious services, 8,696 go to church socials and picnics, 12,400 attend the farmers' institute and county fairs, 5,600 Chautauquas, and 2,870 are constant frequenters of ball games. Moving pictures therefore are the best drawing card of the city.

Abrams Denies McClure Entrance into Paramount

"We Have Nothing to Say Except That We Have Not Agreed to Sell Our Stock in the Corporation; We Do Not Want to Sell It and We Will Not Sell It—We Do Not Expect Anything to Happen But the Withdrawal of the Suit," Says President of the Picture Company

"WE have nothing to say except that we have not agreed to sell our stock in Paramount Pictures Corporation; we do not want to sell it and we will not sell it. The suit brought by the McClure interests cannot possibly come up for trial until October. Meantime we expect nothing to happen, except the withdrawal of the suit."

In these words Hiram Abrams, newly elected president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, through his attorney, summed up the attitude of the company and its directors toward the suit filed last week in the County Clerk's office of New York County, praying, on behalf of certain financial and publishing interests, for the enforcement of an alleged agreement of sale said to have been subscribed to by the McClure coterie and certain Paramount stockholders.

"The majority stockholders of Paramount have lately assumed the executive management of the company and propose to continue in control of its management," was the statement of Eldon Bisbee, of Rushmore, Bisbee and Stern, of 61 Broadway, attorneys for the majority stockholders, when seen shortly after the serving of the papers.

Beyond that the lawyer declined to go, nor would he enter into a discussion of the suit. Those named as defendants in the papers were the Paramount Pictures Corporation, Walter E. Greene, Frank Marion, Alice M. Long as administratrix of the estate of Samuel Long, deceased, William W. Hodkinson, Hiram Abrams, James Steele, William L. Sherry and Raymond Pawley, individually and as trustees for themselves.

Collins Issues Voluminous Statement

From Frederick L. Collins, president of the McClure Publications, Inc., came the most voluminous statement regarding the affair. The holdings in question constitute a majority of the stock of the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

None of the producing companies connected with Paramount would discuss the matter in any way. The attitude taken by them, individually and collectively, was that the matter was "an internal Paramount affair," as one of their officials expressed it, and in no way concerned the producing organizations at this time. The Famous Players Film Company resented the reference to that concern in the Collins statement other than as one of the concerns releasing through Paramount, but professed indifference besides.

Mr. Collins' statement was as follows:

"At last there is something doing in the moving picture merger situation. The Paramount Pictures Corporation, the big distributing organization that handles the product of the Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco, Pallas and other companies, has been sold, or is about to be sold, to Frederick L. Collins, publisher of McClure's Magazine and the Ladies' World, who is said to be acting for important financial and publishing interests. The purchase price involves several million dollars in cash and securities in a corporation to be formed by the buyer for the purpose of taking over Paramount and other film companies. This is, in a general way, the plan that has formerly been credited to Benjamin B. Hampton, vice-president of the American Tobacco Company. It can be stated definitely, however, that Mr. Hampton has nothing to do with the present plans.

"The purchase of Paramount stock is disclosed in a suit, instituted in the Supreme Court, New York County, against certain stockholders in the Paramount Company, asking the court to enforce the specific performance of a contract of sale, alleged to have been signed by these parties but now disputed by them. The action also involves injunction proceedings to prevent the sale of these blocks of stock to anyone else pending the court's decision.

"This suit, together with the sudden resignation of W. W. Hodkinson, founder and until Tuesday last, president of the Paramount Company, is taken to indicate that interests outside of Paramount are attempting to block the proposed sale. In this connection it is recalled that the proposed merger of Triangle interests with The Famous Players and Lasky companies has been held up by the existence of twenty-five-year contracts between the latter companies and the Paramount Corporation. The result is awaited with much interest by moving picture men.

"Mr. Collins, who is president of the McClure Publications, Incorporated, and of the McClure Book Company, was unwilling to discuss this situation in detail. He confined himself to this statement: 'We know nothing of moving picture politics and have no interest in them. We are publishers of magazines, books, and, of late years, moving pictures. We needed a distributing agency for our McClure Pictures so we arranged to buy the best we could find. I expect all the Paramount stockholders to stand by their signatures on our contract.

"The McClure Company's connection with motion pictures extends over a period of five years. They invented and produced in connection with Thomas A. Edison, Incorporated, the first motion picture serial, 'What Happened to Mary.' This was the first time that one moving picture had ever been connected in title and theme with another, and the first time that publisher's of magazines and newspapers cooperated in production work. The custom is now general. The McClure Company's more recent affiliations have been with the Essanay Company of Chicago. McClure's and Essanay are now engaged in a big serial, 'The Strange Case of Mary Page,' but it is not known whether the Essanay Company and its associates in the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay combine are interested with Mr. Collins in the present enterprise involving Paramount."

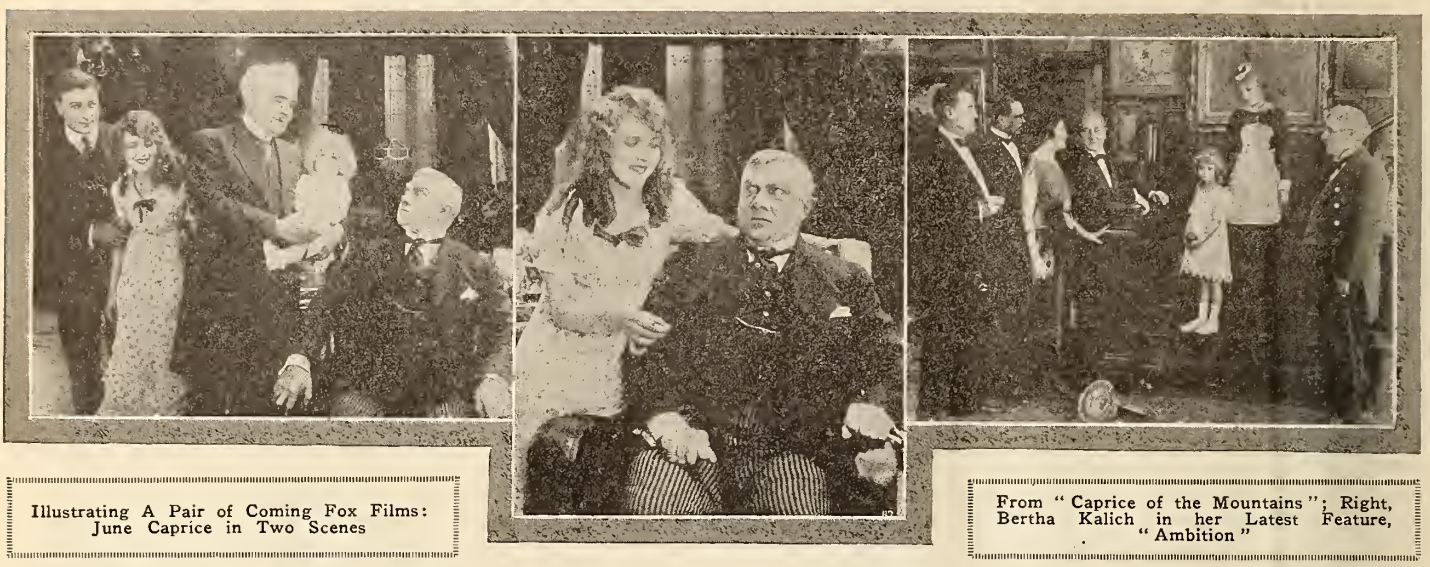
Cobe Plans Diversified Program for Unity Sales Corporation

His Company Will Provide Serials, Features, Comedies and Colored Photodramas, and Forms Nucleus for String of Independent Exchanges

DURING the past week, The Unity Sales Corporation, as announced by Andrew J. Cobe, vice-president and general manager, has increased its field of action. Mr. Cobe plans to provide a diversified program of serials, features, comedies and colored photodramas.

Mr. Cobe and Mr. Rosenbach of the firm are both making whirlwind tours of the country in the interest of the Unity Sales Corporation, and report that their efforts to bring together the interests of the manufacturer, exchangeman and exhibitor are being met with great success.

"The Yellow Menace," Unity sixteen-episode serial which was produced by William Steiner and directed by Aubrey M. Kennedy, is going well. Reports from the field by Mr. Cobe and Mr. Rosenbach indicate that this serial will be popular.



Edwin Stevens, Margaret Gale and Florence Malone have the most prominent parts in this serial. A lively and aggressive advertising and publicity campaign has been engaged on behalf of "The Yellow Menace," and arrangements have been made to syndicate the story in a serial in 1100 newspapers throughout the United States. This story is being specially written by Louis Tracy, the celebrated English author of "The Wings of the Morning."

The Nat C. Goodwin picture "The Marriage Bond" has also proven a seller. Mr. Goodwin is the author of several sprightly marital anecdotes, which will be issued in the form of a "herald" to theatres playing "The Marriage Bond."

The Unity Sales Corporation is also releasing "Tweedledum" comedies with Perez the eccentric European comedian.

Mr. Cobe announces that he is negotiating with a producing company for a series of big features, serials, comedies, cartoons and educational pictures, which will conform a complete service in themselves.

During the past week Mr. Cobe has been in Chicago, where he held a trade showing, to which exhibitors from many states were invited. The firm also announces its intention to open very shortly a New York exchange which may be the nucleus of a series of independent exchanges operated by the Unity Sales Corporation, throughout the country and also abroad. Through the success of "Diana" in the foreign market, the firm is convinced that in South America, Australia, and New Zealand, there is a market for such pictures.

LEANDER RICHARDSON ENGAGED BY INCE FOR "CIVILIZATION" PUBLICITY

Leander Richardson was engaged last Wednesday by Thomas H. Ince to join his rapidly-growing publicity staff as advance man for "Civilization." Mr. Richardson left Thursday night for Chicago to exploit "Civilization" in the "Windy City" in addition to J. L. Barnard and Lou Housman, who are also handling the press work there for the spectacle which opens at the Grand Opera House June 30. Mr. Richardson was formerly a member of William A. Brady's publicity force with the World Film. After a few weeks in Chicago, he will proceed to seven other leading cities of the country where "Civilization" is shortly to be shown.

At the rate at which State rights buyers are bidding for this picture, it is said at the New York "Civiilzation" publicity offices, in charge of Robert Grau and Beulah Livingstone, in the Times Building, that two other important advance men are shortly to be engaged for road work.

Mr. Richardson after his engagement with "Civilization" will resume his duties at the World Film Corporation.

LOS ANGELES SELIG FORCES IN CHICAGO NOT TO RETURN TO WEST COAST

Los Angeles, June 24.

All members of the Selig forces from the Los Angeles studios who are in Chicago, will not return here immediately as expected. It has been learned from letters from players that arrangements are being made for the filming of additional subjects in the East. According to letters, Director Marshall Neilan has been engaged to film "The Prince Chap" in five reels. No definnite information has been received as to who will play the leading part.

Two local companies working at the Selig Studio, continue on the same subjects: Director T. N. Heffron filming "The Old Man Who Tried to Grow Young" in three reels, with Al. Filson in the name part, and Director William Robert Daly is still on "The Germ Mystery."

Eugenie Besserer, who has been with the Colin Campbell Company in the filming of "The Crisis," has arrived in Los Angeles.

June Caprice, Fox Star, Will Appear on Screen Next Month

Seventeen-Year-Old Miss Who Is an Adept at Outdoor Sports and Will Make Debut Without Previous Acting Experience, Is to Be Seen in "Caprice of the Mountains"

JUNE Caprice, the little New England girl who William Fox himself discovered on her native heath—Boston—will make a debut in July before film fans. Miss Caprice is only seventeen years old and was born in Arlington, Mass.

The bright Arlington miss will have her premier next month in a story of the out-of-doors, when she plays the title role in "Caprice of the Mountains."

William Fox has brought this newest of stars into filmland as a result of his own keen observation. He decided that he would enroll the girl for his productions, regardless of the fact that she had no previous experience. Deliberately, Mr. Fox presented his plans for the development of the seventeen-year-old into an actress.

John Adolphi, director of "Caprice of the Mountains," is impressed deeply with the histrionic progress of the Fox protege. He attributes the work which she does in her first endeavor to her thorough interest and willingness to learn the rudiments.

"I will wager that she wins recognition immediately, for she is deserving it," Mr. Adolphi said a few days ago. "The films fascinate her, and she is bound to fascinate her audiences when they see her in action on the screen."

In "Caprice of the Mountains," by the way, the New Englander is introduced to her first glass of champagne. Miss Caprice has still to sip of the real thing, for the intoxicant in which she actually indulges—for the screen—is a beautifully translucent grape juice. In the picture, the result of the tipple is that Miss Caprice sees triple.

Long acquaintance with water-bound New England has made Miss Caprice an adept at swimming, rowing, and yachting. She is an expert tennis player, and when tired of the courts, she gets our her bag of mid-irons, drivers, niblicks and putters, and trots off to the links. Basketball, too, has no terrors for her.

Three-Reel Knickerbockers Will Continue on General

Melies Denies Reports Published in Theatrical Paper to Effect That Balboa Would Cease Making the Pictures—Horkheimer States Report Is False

MELIES Manufacturing Company issues the following statement in denial of the published report that the three reel Knickerbocker Star Feature, released every Friday in the General Film Service, will be discontinued:

"The report published last week by a theatrical journal, to the effect that the three-reel Knickerbocker Star Features will be discontinued at the request of the General Film Company, is false and without foundation in fact. The report, purporting to be a news dispatch from Los Angeles, states that the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, in whose studios the Knickerbocker Star Features are made, had released seventy-five persons engaged in the production of the three-reel features on the General program, because these releases were to be discontinued at the request of the General. While Knickerbocker Star Features are not expressly mentioned, it is well known that these are the only three-reel releases on the General program produced in the Balboa studios. The three reel Knickerbocker Star Feature will continue to be released every Friday in the General Film Service."

H. M. Horkheimer, president of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, also stated: "It is news to me that we have let out the members of the three companies producing Knickerbocker Star Features. The report is absolutely without foundation."

"FALL OF A NATION" OPENS IN CHICAGO JULY 3

Thomas Dixon who supervised and Bartley Cushing who stage-directed the production of "The Fall of a Nation," will be in Chicago next Sunday to take charge of the preliminaries for the run at the Illinois theatre. The engagement in Chicago will open Monday evening, July 3.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD"

(Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE chief charm of this, the first of the Turner series of pictures to be released by Mutual, is the charm of the British scenery and manners. The pictures were taken in rural Wales, and they offer quaint glimpses of landscape highways and byways which are distinctly foreign to anything in this country. For this reason the picture has a distinct value aside from its story.

This story has been adapted from Thomas Hardy's novel. It is more a study of persons and personalities than a dramatic work, and in the portrayal of an English girl who suddenly inherits a large country property, with no ideas on how to handle it, or no ideas on life at all, to speak of, Florence Turner excels. The characters are all played by English players, and they have given us a work of distinct British type and atmosphere.

Bathsheba inherits her Uncle's farm. She is pursued by Farmer Boldwood who owns the adjoining property, and she rejects her faithful lover, Gabriel Oak, who sought her hand in her days of poverty. Gabriel later loses his flocks, and takes a job as shepherd for Bathsheba.

The dashing Sergeant Troy enters the story; he has wronged Fanny, a dairy-maid, and then deserting her pays his court to Bathsheba, so successfully that she slips away and marries him.

With Bathsheba's money, Troy buys his discharge from the army, and settles down to run the farm—into the ground. When his treatment of Fanny is discovered, through the girl's death, Troy disappears. Boldwood renews his wooing, and exacts a promise from Bathsheba that she will marry him if Troy fails to return within seven years. Troy's reappearance, in search of money, so angers Boldwood that he seizes a gun and kills the ex-soldier.

Later, Bathsheba marries Gabriel, who has stood faithfully by all these years, and the two take over both Bathsheba's and Boldwood's farms.

Campbell Gulla, Malcolm Cherry, Marion Grey, Dorothy Rowan and Henry Edwards are also in the cast.

"THE LOVE GIRL"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ROBERT Z. LEONARD contributes this week's Bluebird. As usual Mr. Leonard has written his own story. He has based his scenario on what appears to us as an original idea, while his entire story is one which warrants nothing save commendation. It has a dramatic plot and a parallel theme, just as important if not more so, which is fraught with excellent comedy. Mr. Leonard's story is evenly balanced, free from that which the family exhibitor wishes to steer clear of, and possessing all the essentials which must be present in a picture to please the cosmopolitan clientele.

Mr. Leonard's good work has not stopped with his scenario; it proceeds straight on through the direction with little letup in merit. Some of the action, principally that in which the society matron is the central figure is somewhat exaggerated, but it is done for effect and the effect is gained without the element of ridiculousness. If exhibitors can call to mind this same director's previous pictures, they need not be told that the camera work of "The Love Girl" is superb. R. E. Irish is the man that does the cranking for Mr. Leonard and he has few superiors.

The story begins by transplanting, a carefree little girl of the country to a city family, the feminine head of which is under the influence of a Hindu Swami who is also somewhat of a fakir. The daughter of the house suffers from the foolish ideas of her mother and is separated from the man she loves. The little girl has a gay old time of it with the rich boy next door riding about in the latter's toy automobile. The climax comes when the Swami kidnaps the daughter of the house and plans to procure money for her ransom. But thanks to the inquisitiveness of the girl and the boy lead the way to his capture. The aunt is finally brought to her senses.

Ella Hall has no equal in playing child parts and her performance is exceedingly refreshing. Harry Depp, though really matured, gives a realistic portrayal of the rich little boy next door. Adele Farrington as the aunt is excellent, while Betty Schade and Kingsley Benedict are the lovers. Wadsworth Harris is the fakir Swami.

The Swami Tests His Power

"DESTINY'S TOY"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

"DESTINY'S TOY," written and directed by John B. O'Brien, and featuring Louis Huff, shows a clever adaptation of old plot devices to new settings. For instance, the heroine is recognized in after years by the scar from a letter seal on her arm, instead of the strawberry birthmark so well known to the theatregoers of a previous generation; and the fisherman who rescues the babe from the surf after a shipwreck is a bachelor instead of a married man. He undertakes the difficult task of bringing up a child of tender years without the aid of a skillful feminine hand.

Nevertheless the photoplay touches the chord of romantic appeal, showing that after all, a brand new plot is not always necessary to make a likable story. The turns and twists given the material by Mr. O'Brien makes "Destiny's Toy" just as original as if he had striven for an absolutely new theme. His has been a difficult achievement—melting down the old statues and pouring the metal into more graceful moulds.

The heroism displayed by the fisherman in risking his life among the breakers to reach the unconscious form of the child on a rock far from shore thrills the spectator. The old fellow's affection for the helpless little girl and his pitiful efforts to bring her up amid his desolate surroundings give the story some of its best moments.

A banker sends his wife and child abroad. The steamer goes down in a severe storm. Inquiries from the three known survivors bring only bad news to the despairing man. He is certain of the death of his wife and daughter. The child, however, is cast ashore and miraculously survives the ordeal. She is rescued by a fisherman, who by chance sees the limp form on a rock fast sinking below a swiftly rising tide. At great danger to himself he gets her ashore. The poor sea waif grows up a child of nature, as innocent of the ways of the world at twenty as she was at five. On the death of her hardy protector she goes to a city, acting on a vague impulse. Here she falls into the hands of a gang of thieves, who dress her in shabby masculine attire and compel her to act as a kind of Oliver Twist, entering houses by rear windows to open the doors to the men in wait outside.

In one of these desperate trips her confederate shoots the butler and is sent to prison for life. Nan, the girl, is taken into the household, without anyone suspecting her identity. Later when the convict, escaping and vowing vengeance on the girl for her supposed instrumentality in sending him to prison, shoots her, who she is becomes known from the mark on her arm, revealed while the doctor dressed the wound.

"THE FLOWER OF NO MAN'S LAND"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is Viola Dana's first picture with Metro. The story was prepared by John Collins, who also took charge of the direction. If we remember correctly, Mr. Collins' last feature with Miss Dana as star was rightly recorded as one of the best of the year's output. The trade could reasonably look forward to another good one in "The Flower of No Man's Land," but regretably such hopes, if entertained, are not realized in the finished product. And a novice could place his finger on the one weak spot, which, however is so large that it seems to cover the total picture. Again it is the story. Mr. Collins has taken for his principal characters an untainted girl of the west and a worldly opera singer. Their ways cross and West meets East on the latter's home ground. The combat is one-sided. The Flower is disillusioned and she goes back to a faithful lover. There are incidental embellishments to this theme, but despite them it looms up worn and is unable to carry the interest along for nearly one mile of fairly good celluloid.

"Come On Down to Supper, Roy"

In justice to Mr. Collins, his introduction, though unnecessarily long, is quite the brightest spot in the picture. It shows Echo, the Flower of No Man's Land, at play. She has what appears to be a most happy time playing with a couple of kittens. Miss Dana can handle such scenes to well-nigh perfection. Mr. Collins, on the other hand, has caught the animals in delightful poses.

Miss Dana gives a decidedly characteristic and pleasing performance throughout the whole of the film. Her support in respect to Mitchell Lewis as the old Indian, Harry C. Browne as the faithful lover and Marcus Moriarity as the butler are competent. Duncan McRae as Talbot, the easterner, fails to give a very realistic creation of the part.

Mr. Collins' direction, under the existing circumstances is average. He employs closeups and short flashes in abundance, sometimes when unnecessary. There is one scene that should be retaken or cut out; i. e., the one in which the Indian comes in for the doctor. The Indian is in a hurry and the doctor sits leisurely with his back to the camera evidently waiting for the director's call to move. This bit is rather artificial.

"THE SACRIFICE"

(Selig—Three reels)

REVIEWED BY THOS. S. MEAD

BASED upon the popular song hit code "I Did Not Raise My Boy to be a Soldier," the aim of this picture is to carry home the lesson that the suffering of warfare is not confined to the battlefield. It is the story of a mother, who having lost her husband in a prevous war, tries to inject the horror of warfare into her only son. Her efforts prove futile, for when the nation is again in danger seventeen years later, the son enlists and goes to the front despite the mother's protestations.

The Mother Hears of Her Son's Death

While bravely leading a charge, he is shot down and afterwards dies. Through the story runs the love affair of this boy, and the daughter of a neighboring veteran. The girl, who has enrolled as a Red Cross nurse, is at the young soldier's bedside to the last, and brings home the news of his death to his heart-broken mother.

It is a simple but touching story of particularly timely interest. Much of the picture is taken up with battle-field scenes showing the well-directed maneuvers of large bodies of troops.

The children in the first part of the picture make a good screen appearance. The passage of the seventeen years is well registered in the make-up of Eugenie Besserer and Guy Oliver. Harry Mestayer plays the role of the young soldier and Anna Luther is seen as his sweetheart.

"THE AMERICAN BEAUTY"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE is enough of originality of plot, drama, beauty and artistry to make this a good picture. It has been carefully scenarioized and produced, and the cast is capable, from Myrtle Stedman down to the silent and motionless beauties who play the heavy thinking parts of artists' models, but certainly do embellish the screen.

Although the atmosphere and story are as old as romance itself, there are unique situations, and skillful construction which has brought all the better part to the surface. Much credit is due William D. Taylor for his direction. The interior sets and lightings are up to the standard which we have recently learned to expect from these studios.

Miss Stedman portrays in admirable and charming manner the part of Ruth Cleave, a factory worker. She is discharged, and in order to support her aged and partly invalid mother, goes to work as a scrub-girl in an artist's studio. Just previous to this the artist, Paul Keith, has entered into a contest with artists of other nationalities, to paint a picture of the ideal American girl, thereby to prove that the American type is superior to the beauties of other lands. A prize of $1,000 is offered by Herbert Lorrimer, a wealthy libertine.

After trying many models in vain, Keith finds in Ruth just the type he seeks. His picture wins the prize, but on investigating, the committee finds that Ruth's parents were Canadians, and the picture is disqualified.

In the meantime, Lorrimer, who has taken a fancy to Ruth, lures her to his rooms, and drugs her, but Keith, who has fallen in love with the model, arrives in time to save her. Through the picture, which has created considerable stir, an investigation of the personality of the model is started, with the result that Ruth's mother confesses she is only the girl's foster mother, Ruth having been found in an open boat at sea when a baby. By means of the clothes found with her she is identified, and her real parents located.

Elliott Dexter gives a sincere study of Keith the artist, and excellent character work is furnished by Howard Davies, Jack Livingston, Adelaide Woods and Edward Ayers.

"FLIRTING WITH FATE"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE producing staff of the Fine Arts Company has the happy knack of making good pictures, no matter what material it is working with. "Flirting With Fate," from a story furnished by Robert M. Baker, is a good picture, not unusual, but good—and it is not Mr. Baker's script that is responsible; it is rather the direction of W. Christy Cabanne and the presence of Douglas Fairbanks that elevates the whole production above the level of its scenario.

Augy Searches for the Assassin

Mr. Fairbanks is cast as Augy, an artist who, in common with many motion picture artists, has no money. He loves a girl Gladys. But things go wrong. Getting in trim for a proposal, he practises on Gladys's friend. Gladys thinks him false, so hopelessly in love and penniless he hires an assassin to take his life as soon as possible. Then things change. Augy inherits a million, Gladys finds out she loves him after all. But Augy is constantly haunted by the thought of the assassin. This person has repented and joined the Salvation Army and finally, after Augy has been frightened out of his wits many times, he learns of the reformation and all is well.

Plots of this character have long been favorites and under ordinary circumstances the material offered in one of them would be lost when photographed on five reels of film. However, the treatment accorded it by Fine Arts is exceptional. The scenes are handled with an intelligent appreciation of their humorous possibilities with the result that the laughs are abundant. The subtitles again prove of great assistance to the picture. "Flirting With Fate" is a picture that can easily stand having fun poked at it by the subtitle writer. This has been done and with excellent results. Almost every subtitle is good for a laugh.

Mr. Fairbanks, it is hardly necessary to state, handles his role in excellent style. His support consists mainly of Jewel Carmen, who as Gladys acts very well and looks too pretty for words, and George Beranger, who carries the role of the assassin, Automatic Joe. Others are Howard Gaye, W. E. Lawrence, Dorothy Haydel, Lillian Langdon and Wilbur Higby.

"THE HEAD OF THE HOUSE"

(Knickerbocker Star Feature-General—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

FRANK MAYO plays a double role in this not very finished offering, which suffers from careless direction in some respects. The story tells how a wealthy bachelor gets a burglar, who resembles him, to play host to the bachelor's Aunt Mary and Cousin Lillian, in order to avoid marrying the cousin.

The bachelor makes his getaway in a motor boat, taking with him a girl reporter, who happened to be on hand when the burglar made his entrance. The girl falls overboard, and the hero plunges after her. After swimming an unknown distance they reach a desert island, and have little difficulty in rigging up a raft, on which they float back to the mainland. They arrive just as the burglar is making a spectacle of himself at a ball. The hero meets him outside the house, and pays him off, after which he introduces the reporter as his fiancee.

There is but one double exposure scene of any importance, and it is done well. The timing is very good. Mayo's work is quite acceptable, and Lillian West, Ruth Lackaye, and Jimsy Maye are fair in their several parts. The direction is by Reaves Eason, and is open to criticism on more than one count, notably when he starts the pair from the island on a raft that is plainly all but sinking, and then shows them a few minutes later floating quite securely on the waves.

As a whole, this is only fair entertainment, and offers virtually nothing which can be called really distinctive.

"A HUMAN ORCHID"

(Fields Feature Films—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A PLOT built along conventional melodramatic lines, not always logical or even possible, interpreted by a good cast, and well mounted, is the most succinct description of this offering which occurs to us at the moment. The story moves along evenly, in familiar channels, but there are no flashes of originality or surprise calculated to bring an audience up out of the seats.

The theme is politics, love, villainy—and a district attorney. There is Ruth, who leaves her foster parents because of the persecutions of one Varney, a corrupt political leader. She is taken in by the Colonel, another politician, who educates her, makes her his stenographer, and shows her the gay side of life. As his secretary, she overhears a corrupt deal between the Colonel and Varney, and later, after the Colonel, while intoxicated, has attacked her, she flees from his house, goes to the young district attorney, and exposes the plot.

The District Attorney is running for re-election, and he needs the proof of the "deal," so Ruth enters the Colonel's house again, pretends friendship for the man who attacked her, and then steals the incriminating evidence.

Later Varney is confronted with this evidence. He could easily have destroyed it on the spot, but he doesn't; instead, the District Attorney himself makes another deal with Varney to withhold the evidence for the sake of the District Attorney's re-election. Ruth also overhears this conversation, and branding both men as crooks, flees from this house also.

She eventually finds her parents and friends, and after becoming a nurse, is reunited to them, and the final curtain finds her in charge of a doctor's magnificent country estate.

Irva Ross is attractive as Ruth, without exhibiting any compelling screen ability; others in the cast are Charles Graham, Howard Hall, Walter Miller, Julia Calhoun, Jean Armour and Noah Beery.

"THE BATTLE OF VERA CRUZ"

(Educational Films Corporation—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

REVIVAL of the public interest in the Mexican situation has called forth the reissue of these scenes, which were made in Vera Cruz during the fighting of April 21, 22 and 23, 1914. The subject is most timely, and although the film is not new, it is an interesting and acceptable addition to the pictures of Mexican troubles now on the market, especially as it shows United States bluejackets and marines actually under fire, on Mexican soil.

The pictures were taken by E. F. Weigle, of the Chicago Tribune, at considerable personal risk. They have been used by Lieut. O'Mahoney in raising funds for the New York National Guard's new transports, and have been shown officially in many cities and towns of this state.

The scenes include the landing of marines and bluejackets, advance through the streets, firing in volleys and at snipers, and the use of field pieces against the buildings which housed Mexican soldiers and snipers.

The results of the fighting and the removal of dead and wounded are graphically pictured, and an excellent idea of what war means in a Mexican town can be gathered.

"THE SEEKERS"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture by Olga Printzlau has to do with a certain religious sect from which the subject derives its name. Its objective is to seek those that are needy and administer to them. In habits and dress these people much resemble the Quakers, only the men keep their hats on while in church. The language they employ is cluttered with "thees" and "thous," and their phraseology is Puritanical. The dialogued subtitles testify to this.

The story tells of Ruth Heck, a nurse of the sect. Her brother is jailed for a crime he did not commit. She is sent to a distant town to care for a gouty minister. She falls in love with his son John, the country sheriff. The brother escapes and Ruth protects him; even has recourse to violent measures to save him from John. The two are estranged. The time comes when The Seekers marry two of their congregation and send them out to do good in the world. The minister manipulates affairs so that Ruth and John are chosen. Even then they are estranged until Ruth tells John that the man she assisted to escape was her brother and then the clouds roll away.

Certain keys on the typewriter have become intimately acquainted with our touch. They are employed in pounding out sentences to the detriment of certain pictures, mainly or entirely because of their stories. They are ever staring us in the face and "The Seekers" does not possess adequate substance to down them. The interest is allowed to droop and droop during the picture's progress. The denouement only clears up a misunderstanding between the two main characters that could have been cleared by a mere word or two at an earlier moment.

The Nurse's Rule Proves Irksome

Otis Turner's direction is fine. His cameraman has gained some excellent light effects. Flora Parker (DeHaven) makes a likable figure of Ruth and Edward Hearn's John is done with appreciation of the character. Charles H. Mailes, truly a veteran character actor, appears as the minister and gives a sterling performance. Paul Byron is the brother. Old Edward Brown, familiar for some time in Universal pictures, blossoms forth in a small role under the reminiscent cognomen of "Edwin Booth."

"THE HIGHEST BID"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

AN ordinary, straightaway story built with such familiar material that nearly every climax and dramatic situation can be predicted, as the film unreels. It is, however, well presented, and acted by an acceptable cast; it is the type of a story which has proven popular in the past, and has shown itself in demand in a large market. Therefore, although it does not advance the status or development of the artistic side of picture-production in any respect, it should rank well up with many other offerings as a money maker.

William Russell, who one day may be one of the popular screen idols—and deservingly so— is featured. His work is pleasing, and he himself has small difficulty in holding the sympathies and dominating his scenes. He plays the part of Oliver Strong, a young broker who has amassed a fortune, and has fallen in love with Elsie Burleigh. Then Addison Grey, who also loves Elsie, forms a clique which succeeds in ruining Oliver in Wall Street. Owing to the influence of her sordid and grasping mother, Elsie rejects Oliver, although she still loves him, and he goes west to forget himself in the mountains.

Fighting the Forest Fire

Addison Grey pays his court to Elsie, and her mother accepts him for her. In the mountains Oliver falls in with Uncle Jerry, an aged miner, who has spent his life searching for a vein of gold of which a dying Indian told him years before. It is safe to predict right here that they will find the gold. They do; but not until Addison Grey has brought a gay party, including Elsie, to his hunting lodge in these same mountains.

Elsie wanders off into the mountains, and meets Oliver. To test her love, Oliver conceals the fact that he has discovered gold, and when she sees the humble hut in which he lives, she again discards him.

Elsie finds her heart when a forest fire starts and threatens to sweep the mountains. Addison Grey turns coward and refuses to go to the aid of the mountaineers, and Elsie, spurning him, mounts a horse and goes to find Oliver. The fire is quenched by a fortunate rainstorm, and the lovers are reunited.

Charlotte Burton, Marie Van Tassell, Harry Keenan and William S. Hooser are also in the cast. The production was directed by Jack Prescott and William Russell.

"THE HEART OF A CHILD"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is an English picturization of Frank Danby's novel, with Edna Flugrath in the role of Sally, who keeps her child-like nature in the midst of the glitter of stage life, and does not forget her cockney associates at the height of her stage triumph.

The picture was produced by Harold Shaw, and gains a lot of pleasing color from the London settings and types. The exhibitor need not be afraid that his American audiences will find this subject foreign to their sympathies, especially as it is characterized by quick action, and the acting is of the sort most generally seen on the American screen.

In addition, the interest is helped along by cockney humor, which has been translated to the celluloid with a pleasing degree of success. This is quite gratifying, and helps to make the whole distinctive, just when one begins to think that the old theme of the rich young nobleman who befriends the poor girl for an ulterior purpose, is about to get the upper hand. There are scenes of Hempstead Heath, music halls, London streets, the country-side, hovels and mansions; and these are brought out well by good photography and lighting that is far above the average.

Miss Flugrath suggests to an adequate degree the character depicted in the Danby novel, though she at no time rises to any great dramatic heights. Hayford Herbert has the role of the young Lord, and is acceptable. The other players are good types and do their work well.

"THE SHOP GIRL"

(Vitagraph-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

BASED upon a story by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, this subject draws more from the reputation of its authors than from anything new or novel in the story it has to tell, or the conditions it lay bare. The best thing in it is Tony Moreno, who plays strongly to the sympathies, and gives an excellent portrayal of a wealthy young man dissatisfied with a life of idleness, and anxious to do something worth while.

One of these things—and the one he is most anxious to do—is to marry Winifred, a dressmaker's mannikin, whom he meets on board ship while returning from abroad with his parents, his sister, Ena, and Lord Rayglan and the latter's sister, Eileen. His sister, a vain, proud and ambitious girl, hopes to marry Lord Rayglan, and wants her brother Peter to marry Eileen. To further this latter end, she tells Winifred that Peter is only playing with her, and is engaged to Eileen. Winifred believes her, shuns Peter, and when they land, she disappears.

Winifred loses her position in Madame Nadine's dressmaking establishment, and through a friend obtains another in the department store which is owned by Peter's father. She attracts the eye of Meigenson, the superintendent, who attempts to force his attentions on her, and instructs a floorwalker to get up a party of four, including Winifred, for a supper in Meigenson's apartment.

While Peter is searching for Winifred, she goes, unwillingly, to the party; there Meigenson attempts to drug her wine, and failing he attacks her, tearing her dress and leaving bits of it around on the rugs. At this moment, Peter, who has traced the girl to Meigenson's apartment, calls; Meigenson denies any knowledge of Winifred, who has locked herself in another room, but Peter recognizes the pieces of dress on the carpet, and the truth comes out. Winifred is convinced that Peter truly loves her, and they escape together.

There are a number of dramatic moments, and the piece is well constructed. As Winifred, Edith Storey gives a good picture of a super-prude, thrown among surroundings foreign to her, but which she recognizes. Lillian Burns is a good type for Ena, and Marion Henry is a pretty and magnetic Eileen. John Costello, Harold Foshay, Eddie Dunn, Josephine Earle, Claire McCormack, Emily Leaske, Thomas Mills and Templer Saxe handle other roles acceptably. The picture was produced by George D. Baker.

"WHAT HAPPENED AT 22"

(Frohman-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TO employ a descriptive phrase which has grown hackneyed through misapplication, this picture is "intensely interesting." These two words sum up the contents of "What Happened at 22" to a degree that hardly needs any accessory elaboration. The story deals with a professional forger, his activities and his downfall, and while crime is in a large sense responsible for much of the intensiveness of the picture, no evil-fearing censor need worry over the outcome, for naturally crime goes down in the dust before the strong arm of the law.

The reviewer is of the opinion that "What Happened at 22" will stand up successfully before any audience, no matter how critical from the standpoint of the fan. The story is full of action, which if not always plausible is plentiful in its elements of suspense. George Irving's direction is excellent as always. We do not remember having seen a production of Mr. Irving that was not exceedingly worthy, and as there is nothing more gratifying than giving credit where credit is due, it is hereby given to the director and his staff.

Paul Wilstach is the author. As a whole his work is so meritorious that a brace of incongruities seem of small import. These lie in the acts of the forger. It is not likely that a crook so experienced as Wilson should forget to dot his i's on three successive checks, nor would that crook prefer to run headlong into trouble by hiring himself as butler to a criminologist as against disappearing from the city, once the police and their allies were on his trail. However, so good is the ultimate effect caused by the picture that these points are relatively insignificant.

Louise Accepts the Bounty of the Crook

Added to the story of the capitulation of the forger is the romance of Louise, a companion to the wife of the criminologist, and the son of the house. Frances Nelson and Arthur Ashley are featured. Miss Nelson appears as Louise, while Mr. Ashley is the forger. The latter might have appeared to better advantage it he had applied a little more makeup to his face. His acting, however, is better than anything he has done before. Gladden James and Frank Burbeck complete the cast with pleasing performances.

"THE WORLD'S GREAT SNARE"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

IN "The World's Great Snare" Pauline Frederick plays an unattractive role in an attractive way. Myra, the dance hall favorite, was denied the right to walk through life in white, unspotted shoes, and was compelled by fate to tread heavily in its mire with very thin slippers. In Miss Frederick's hands she is something more than a soiled dove of the underworld giving reign to vampirish instincts. Myra is shown to be at heart a woman of noble impulses. Of course, her regeneration does not appear until she meets the right man—Bryan, the son of an English nobleman, in quest of papers that will establish his claim to the estate of the deceased peer.

The producer, Joseph Kaufman, wisely leaves the marriage of the pair in doubt at the end of the picture, avoiding too much strain on the credulity of even the most tolerant "happy ending" enthusiasts.

"The World's Great Snare" traces in detail pretty much the ways of life as Myra knows them; her whole manner of living is a "snare," for miners back from the diggings with pokes filled with gold dust and ready to scatter it in a fever of spendthrift abandon. But Myra wearies of the ceaseless round of artificial gayety, and seeks relief in quiet household cares as the companion of a man who offers her a home. Nothing mars their relations until one day she reads the private papers of Huntley, the former butler of an earl, who has paid him a monthly allowance for his part in disposing of his lordship's child. Myra has just read the marriage certificate of the Earl and Bryan's mother. The document means nothing to the girl at the time, though later her knowledge of its existence enables her to render assistance to the rightful heir. Huntley strikes her and grabbing the papers, abruptly leaves the house. Myra, incensed at the indignity, goes back to the dance hall. Huntley, in need of funds, offers the papers to Rutten, a gambler, as security for a loan. In the dance hall Rutten, who had been a persistent admirer of Myra for some time, and had tried to persuade her to leave the dissolute ex-butler, forces his attentions on the unwilling object of his hardy affection. His love making, conducted with all the unruly zeal of an early Roman seeking a wife among the Sabines, is not at all to the lady's liking. Bryan, hearing the tumult in the box from his place on the dance floor below, rushes up the short steps and attacks the strenuous gambler. A terrific fight between the two men follows, and the girl is relieved from the fierce love making of Rutten.

Bryan becomes the unwedded protector of Myra, and her new domestic affiliation lasted until Bryan accepts the offer of a partnership in a mine on the condition that he become "unattached." Sometime later, Myra, impelled by a genuine love for Bryan, seeks him out in the mining camp. Huntley, who had also gone to the mines, is shot by a man he had wronged, and the crime is attributed to Myra who, disguised in masculine attire, is found in the cabin with the injured Huntley. Through his confession before death, she learns that Rutten possesses the papers. After her flight from camp with Bryan to San Francisco, she hunts up Rutten and obtains the documents by promising to make the only kind of bargain with the gambler that could induce him to relinquish their possession.

Miss Frederick is supported by Irving Cummings in the role of Bryan. The other members of the cast are: Frederick Tidmarsh as Huntley, Frank Evans as Pete, Riley Hatch as Rutten and Buckley Starkey as Skein.

"MEDICINE BEND"

(Signal-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

THIS is a sequel to "Whispering Smith," the five-reel picture released from the Signal studios a short while ago. Because of this fact, and because the story necessarily takes up the fortunes of the characters at an advanced stage, the film will be best received in houses that have already shown the first release. Considered by itself, however, "Medicine Bend" should please many audiences because of the type of its story, and the favorite players who enact it.

In many respects this photoplay excells its predecessor. It follows Frank Spearman's novel more closely, the situations are more logical, there are a number of thrills, and the finale is satisfactory.

The film is more of a western than a railroad drama, although some of the best scenes are made possible by the looting and wrecking of a train. Helen Holmes has no hair-raising feats to perform, but is very good in her straight dramatic part. J. P. McGowan is happily cast as Whispering Smith. Supporting these principals is a large and competent cast that includes Paul Hurst, Thomas Lingham, Leo Maloney, William Brunton, F. Van Norman, N. Woods, and Chance Ward.

Sinclair is the husband of Marion, a former sweetheart of Whispering Smith, a railroad detective. Smith discovers that Sinclair is the leader of a gang of car looters. To save Marion, Smith does not have the thieves arrested. Sinclair finds that a large shipment of money is to be made on the Beaver Express. He and his crew hold up the train, obtain the currency, and escape. Smith knows that Sinclair is the man responsible for the theft, and with a posse starts on his trail.

Thinking that Marion still loves her husband, Smith decides to let Sinclair shoot him, if it is a question of the robber's life or his. Smith overtakes the thieves, and is stunned in the fight that ensues. Sinclair is about to kill him, when he is himself shot down. Returning to Medicine Bend, Smith finds that Marion loves him, and they are married.

"THE VALIANTS OF VIRGINIA"

(V-L-S-E—Selig—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IN production and in faithful adherence to the delightful color of the original story, this picture is so extraordinary that it deserves to rank with the best features the past year has produced. There are many of the smallest touches furnished, both by direction and the acting that go to make for an enjoyable whole. Not once has Director T. N. Heffron erred in the selection of settings and the detail so necessary to give the right atmosphere to the story.

The Valiant Home Once More is the Scene of Gayety

There can be little doubt that "The Valiants of Virginia" will please any collection of individuals that happen to see it, even though it be allowed to go out in its present state. The things mentioned in the above paragraph will see to that. However, even though it be without the bound of our task, we will offer a suggestion to the Selig company which we hope they will consider, for a fine picture that can be made better certainly should receive the improvement. The point in question results from an undeveloped episode in the first reel, to get to which the story must be told.

John Valiant and Edward Sasoon are both in love with Judith Fairfax. Sasoon insults Judith and is forced to a duel with Valiant. After the duel we learn that Sasoon has been killed and we also are led to believe that Judith has denounced Valiant. Twenty years after this comes the romance of Shirley, daughter of Judith and John, the second of the Valiants. It is a very pretty affair and is told in many pleasing episodes. Then it turns out that the older Valiant did not kill Sasoon. The man shot himself. And it also develops that Judith loved Valiant after all and this leads to a happy culmination of the latter day romance.

The fault is that it is not made clear that Valiant's letter to Judith was never delivered after the duel, and the manner of Sasoon's death is not shown. These points could be made clear to the observer and at the same time shielded from the members of the cast, who should not know them for logic's sake. One of the most valuable rules in dramatic construction is for the author to take the audience into his confidence. If this is done the audience feels it knows more than the characters and the effect is that the audience is proud and pleased of the fact. This done and "The Valiants of Virginia" will be almost matchless.

Arthur Shirley and Kathlyn Williams lead the cast with sterling performances. Shirley appears as both Valiants, while Miss Williams confines her fascinating endeavors to the role of Shirley. Edward J. Piel, Virginia Kraft, Guy Oliver, Fred Carufel, Billy Jacobs, Edith Johnson, Al Filson, James Bradbury and Harry Lonsdale are others.

The settings and scenes are magnificent. The greater part of the action takes place in the south and Mr. Heffron must have lived there to have obtained such excellent results.

"THE COMMITTEE ON CREDENTIALS"

(Bison-Universal—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PETER B. KYNE'S stories show up on the screen to excellent advantage. We have made that remark before and "The Committee on Credentials" lays added stress on it. His characters are drawn with rare taste—there is something original concerned in the makeup of each one of them. This is a story of the west and it is pictured in all its proverbial wild and woolliness. Its simplicity, its straightforwardness and its manner of dealing with strong attractions in adequate style are elements that will make it very well enjoyed.

The story of "The Committee on Credentials" need not be related here. Those who have not read it may rest assured that there is nothing wrong in its makeup. The co-directors, Harry Carey and George Marshall, have pictured it exceedingly well.

Thrillers always find a welcome place in western subjects and room has been made for one in this production. It is a genuine piece of sensationalism. Joe Rickson, who works in the heavy part, is the man who performs it. He takes a fall over a bank that is both steep and high. Perhaps the reader will think that such business is extremely conventional, but as done here it is only thrilling.

Harry Carey, Olive Fuller Golden, Joe Rickson, Neal Hart and George Berrel are the principals.

"AMBITION"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WILLIAM FOX has obtained a true drama for his second presentation of Bertha Kalich. It is strong without being in any sense offensive. The element of sex, which might have been unduly accentuated, is so subordinated that it is only once in the picture that it becomes at all prominent and then only through the medium of one brief subtitle. But no ultra-Puritan can find excuse for kicking over the traces because of "Ambition."

Mr. Fox is not conducting any prize contest nor has he openly made attractive offers to dramatists for five-reel scenarios, but "Ambition" almost leads one to believe that he has made the offer and been successful. Barring a subplot which is introduced once or twice and then flatly dropped never to be taken up again, the construction and development of the picture is excellent. Its underlying theme is the breaking up of a happy family through the husband's all-devouring ambition.

The husband, Powers, assistant district attorney, has covetous eyes on a larger job. He learns that the boss, Moore, is not in favor of him. Taking the advice of a friend he requests his wife to intercede for him. This she does and Moore is greatly attracted by her. Powers then continues his game and invites Moore to his home for the week-end, telling his wife to do everything she can for him. She does, still to please her husband. An accident purposely meted out to Moore by his host prolongs his stay and the attorney's wife still proceeds to entertain her husband's guest. In time Mrs. Powers comes to really love Moore and she sees the unworthiness of her husband. Moore, however, proves a gentleman and though he loves her, he leaves the house, influenced slightly to this course by the pleadings of Powers' little girl. Powers is afterwards deserted by his wife.

Bertha Kalich is most effective in the only feminine role of importance. Kenneth Hunter makes Powers the weak figure he is supposed to be and William H. Tooker gives Moore a pleasing personality. Kittens Reichert as the little girl is clever, as she always is. W. W. Black as one of Moore's henchmen has a small part and a few bits of comedy to do.

The direction is very good. The settings of the Powers country estate are really remarkable while the photography is excellent.

"PARAMOUNT SHORT SUBJECTS"

(Paramount—One Reel Each)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

PARAMOUNT Pictographs this week contain several valuable illustrated articles for the housewife and mother. One of these, entitled "Don't Cheat Yourself," illustrates the various methods used by dishonest grocers and market men for giving short weight and short change. The principal of careful shopping is strikingly exemplified. An interesting article on the training and use of police dogs, and a scenic picture of India, with the usual article on "Better Babies," this one dealing with the training of the senses, and a lesson in mind training by Prof Hugo Munsterberg complete the reel.

Burton Holmes' travelogue takes us into the little known Spreewald, a district of Germany, inhabited by the Wendish people, the original natives of Lusatia. The pictures give a charming glimpse of the canals which are gridled over this country, and the quaint costumes and manners of the peasants.

"Bobby Bumps' Fly Swatter" is the Bray Studios' contribution. The animated cartoon shows Bobby's ingenious method of keeping the flies off Pa's head while the latter sleeps by tying the swatter to the dog's tail, while Bobby himself escapes to play. On the same reel is Raymond Ditmars' study of "Zoolard at Dinner Time." This subject shows the table manners of animals which are little known and seldom seen.

"PIRATES OF THE AIR"

L-Ko-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE stellar feature of this rapidly moving L-Ko number is an aeroplane chase. Two machines take part and the passengers think nothing of sprawling all over the wings and dropping from one to another. Now anyone, with half a brain can tell that such action could never transpire on real aeroplanes, and the fact that the machines are palpably products of the L-Ko property department does not detract from the credit that should go to the director for attempting such a difficult bit of comedy. He has succeeded in making these scenes funny although the element of realty is not pronounced.

As a whole this picture is an average knockabout affair. There have been better L-Kos and there have been others that were not as good. A story, the various episodes of which adhere pretty well to another, has been provided and the incidental humor is of the usual L-Ko sort.

The cast embraces such names as Alice Howell, Fatty Voss, Billy Armstrong, Phil Dunham and Bill Bevan. Miss Howell has the role of chief importance and cuts a comical figure.

"APOSTLE OF VENGEANCE," KAY-BEE TRIANGLE, IS IN FIVE REELS

Owing to a typographical error "The Apostle of Vengeance," a five-reel Kay-Bee-Triangle Feature, was described in the caption over the review on page 4,086 as a "Keystone-Triangle, two reels."

Tabloid Reviews for the Busy Exhibitor

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Private Officer." (Essanay. Two reels. Re-issue. Tues., July 11.)—This re-issue not shown for review; the story follows: Harry Lampton and Lieut. Frothingham are rivals for the hand of Muriel March. Lampton discovers the army man to be a fortune hunter and tells the girl of his discovery. The Lieutenant enters the room at that moment, and Muriel declares she will marry him. In desperation Lampton joins the army. He is horrified to find himself in Frothingham's troop. The officer continually humiliates him. One night Frothingham goes on a debauch, and Lampton, to save him from disgrace, takes advantage of his facial resemblance to the officer, poses in his place and saves him. The Colonel discovers the affair, and the girl learns the truth. Lampton is promoted and wins the girl.

The leads are taken by Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and Thomas Commerford.

"The Fable of the Small-Town Favorite who was Ruined by too much Competition." (Essanay. Wed., July 12.)—This Geo. Ade comedy not shown for review; the story follows: The daughter of a well-fixed mortgage shark, living in a tank town, had all the component parts of a peach. She got her fashion hints, etiquette and behavior from the Questions and Answers Department of an Agricultural monthly. A gay young drummer from the city made a solid hit with the peach, until father sent his offspring to a finishing school. There she met her ideal, and with him came home for her summer vacation. "Don't you know me?" said the drummer when they met. "Truly," she said, "it seems that I have seen you somewhere. Are you the man who tunes the piano?" As he moved away, the drummer kept his hand on his solar plexus. Moral: Anybody can win unless there happens to be a second entry.

"The Secret of the Night." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., July 15.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"The Return." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., July 3.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Some Duel." (Selig. Sat., July 8.)—The type of story and method of development used in this picture, make it one of the best of the Tom Mix Western comedies. In addition to the superb horsemanship usually shown in this brand of picture, some exciting shooting and fighting scenes are also used. The alternation of thrills and laughs is admirably timed, and while the photography is occasionally indistinct, it makes a better than average Western release. The leads are taken by Tom Mix and Victoria Forde, supported by Pat Chrisman and Sid Jordan.

Two cowboys are deadly rivals for the hand of a ranchowner's daughter. They and their supporters are constantly engaging in fist battles and the enmity finally becomes so intense that a revolver duel between the two contestants is arranged. The girl, learning of the proposed battle, puts blank cartridges in the revolvers, but the fight never takes place, since one of the duelists has an attack of cold feet at the eleventh hour and cravenly flees, leaving his braver rival in full possession of the girl.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Kink O' Make-believe." (Centaur. Two Reels. Sat., July 1.)—Good old melodrama, impossible and thrilling, with Crane Wilbur in the appropriate role of a motion picture star. Mae Gaston plays the part of Hope, a young cripple, who has been left by her father's will to the care of an uncle; for the sake of her fortune, the uncle has conspired to marry her to Abner, a rough local character. A picture company is working in the vicinity, and Neil Stuart, the star, meets Hope. They are attracted to each other, and Neil, on leaving for the city, tells Hope to call on him whenever she needs aid. Soon after, the uncle brings matters to a climax, the girl's faithful negro maid is locked up, and Hope carried away for the marriage ceremony. The negress manages to break out and telephone Neil, who arrives in his auto to find that the ceremony has been performed, and Abner has carried Hope away in his buggy for the honeymoon. Neil gives chase, Abner's horse runs away, and the cowardly Abner, leaping for safety, is killed. Neil saved the girl, takes her to the city where a great specialist cures her, and they are married.

"Killed by Whom?" (American. Two reels. Mon., July 3.)—The familiar circumstantial evidence—a murder case has here been kneaded together with a good share of love interest, making acceptable entertainment. Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat, the principals, aided by an occasional bit of directorial adroitness on the part of Carl Leviness, succeed in holding the attention throughout the two reels.

Herbert Murdoch, son of Jason Murdoch, a millionaire, marries below his station and is disinherited by his father. Later when his wife gives birth to a child, Herbert goes to his father for assistance, but it is denied him. Later Jason Murdoch is found murdered, and a chain of circumstantial evidence points to Herbert. As the jury are about to bring in a verdict of guilty, a small boy is brought into the court-room, who confesses that Murdoch was accidently shot when some boys were "playing Indian" with a loaded gun. Since Murdoch, Sr., dies intestate, his estate goes to Herbert.

"The Chaser Chased." (Vogue. Tues., July 4.)—The locale of this slapstick farce is a bathing beach, and the eye-filling backgrounds of statuesque ladies in abbreviated garb will be appreciated. The plot is a jumble of mistaken identity, promiscuous flirting, and knock-down fisticuffs, culminating in a chase. This affords Rube Miller, Alice Neice, Arthur Travares and Madge Kirby ample opportunities for their particular brand of humor.

Rube takes his wife to the beach, but there sees so many pretty girls that he deserts his spouse to flirt with the fair strangers. The husbands of the girls appear on the scene, and Rube jumps into a nearby dressing room to escape. But the room is already occupied by a corpulent lady, and Rube is forcibly ejected. In the ensuing commotion, everybody else gets in the wrong dressing room, and a series of complications, too involved to detail, result.

"Billy Van Deusen, Masquerader." (Beauty. Wed., July 5.)—This is a good specimen of better class comedy, refined enough for the high-grade audience, and yet funny enough to get by with slap-stick fans. John Steppling, John Sheehan, Dick Rosson, Carroll Halloway and Robert Miller compose the well-balanced cast that puts over the laughs handily.

Bill Van Deusen, a middle aged society bachelor, dresses as a tramp, and starts for a masquerade ball. Some drunken friends of his capture him, put him in a stolen cab, and drive him out into the country. Next morning Billy wakens up near a farm-house, and saws wood for the farmer to get some breakfast. He makes a hit with the farmer's daughter, until he is arrested for the theft of the cab. Many other complications take place before Billy finally proves his innocence.

"The Hidden Face." (Gaumont. Three Reels. Thurs., July 6.)—This is an impossible murder mystery melodrama, with Alexander Gaden happily cast in the role of a young minister. He wants to marry Helen Claude, but her Uncle, a candidate for Congress, forbids it. There is a great mystery in the village, Judge Green having just been murdered by a man with his face masked. Mrs. Royal, the village innkeeper, undertakes to get Helen's Uncle to consent to the marriage, and this she does by revealing herself as the Uncle's deserted sweetheart, and the young minister as their son.

Immediately afterward the Uncle is murdered by the masked man, and suspicion now points to the young minister. The mystery is cleared when the real criminal is revealed as a young man of the village who was loudest in his denunciation of the minister. Iva Shepard, Mabel E. Trinneer, John Reinhart, Henry Pemberton, Lucille Taft, James Levering, Myles McCarthy, Fritz Orlamond, Charles W. Travis, James Davis and Albert Macklin complete the cast.

"A Merry Mix-up." (Cub. Fri., July 7.)—Jerry is obliged to look for work. He gets a job as substitute for a young husband who wants some one to impersonate him while he breaks the news of his marriage to a rich uncle. The mix-up comes when Jerry alarms the young husband by making love to the bride, and mystifies the uncle by making love to his daughter, the uncle all the while believing him to be the bridegroom. The young husband finally confesses that he is the groom, and things are settled satisfactorily. George Ovey, George George, Claire Alexander, Louis FitzRoy, Louise Horner, Harry Jackson, Gordon MacGregor, Janet Sully and Margaret Cullington compose the cast.

"The Taming of Wild Bill." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., July 7.)—While the story of this film will not be new to the fans, it is the kind of tale that seems to have a perennial appeal. The Western atmosphere is well created by well chosen locations, the good directing, and the efforts of the principals. The photography is excellent. The leads were given Jack Richardson, Hugh Bennett and Nita Davis.

Bill is a happy-go-lucky cowboy when sober, but a few drinks transform him into a wild man. One day an itinerant evangelist comes to town, and Bill plans to break up the meeting at the church by shooting up the place. When he arrives at the door, however, he meets Rita, the preacher's daughter, and she persuades him to give up his plan. Bill is so impressed by the girl's earnestness, that he goes to all the bars in town and collects a large audience for the minister. Bill resolves to lead a better life, so that some day he may be worthy to propose to Rita.

"The Good-for-nothing Brat." (Centaur. Two Reels. Sat., July 8.)—An unusual story, minus the expected happy ending. Davis, a town charge, is incorrigible, and the town board decides that a male school teacher is necessary; so they employ Robert Manning, who devotes himself to the correction of Daisy so assidously that a strong friendship springs up between them, and scandal starts in the village. Daisy is found hiding in the teacher's house when the town board calls for a consultation, and in order to save the situation, Manning announces that he will marry the girl next day. The board, from a sense of duty, inform him of Daisy's origin; the girl disappears, and when Manning seeks her, only traces are found, indicating that she has leaped to death in the lake. The cast includes Margaret Gibson, William Clifford, Frederick Montague, Marguerite Foss, Janet Sully and Myra Davis Dowling.

"The Gink Lands Again." (Beauty. Sun., July 9.)—There are a number of fresh and amusing bits in this comedy. The humor lies more in the character work of Orral Humphreys, Joe Massey, Guy Lundy, Eric Jacobs and Jo Taylor, than in the situations.

The Gink is a tramp. One day he is sleeping in a haystack when he hears the plans of a gang of crooks to rob Miss Grasse, a wealthy spinster who owns the local bank. The Gink goes to the spinster's house to warn her of the plans, but is astonished to see that the leader of the crooks is one of the lady's suitors. The Gink realizes that he will not be believed if he tells Miss Grasse of the man's intentions, and so decides to play a lone hand. That night he goes to the bank and waits until the robbers have arrived, holds them up with a revolver, and ties them together with a clothes line. He then tells the owner of the attempted robbery, and in her gratitude she wants to marry him, but the life of the hobo appeals to the Gink more, and he catches the next freight train for pastures new.

"Hired and Fired." (Vogue. Sun., July 9.) Not shown for review; the story follows: Bill and Bloggy, two bungling young men, get a job in a moving picture studio. They derive considerable amusement from tying the director's mustache into knots, stealing the tragedian's lunch basket, kicking down the scenes and other pranks. Their good time is finally brought to an end when the entire studio staff turns a fire hose on them. Appearing in the cast are Paddy McQuire, Ben Turpin, Arthur Moon, Rena Rogers, Jack Gaines and Ed. Laurie.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Dirty Work in a Beanery." (L-KO. Sun., June 25.)—Unblushing slapstick is the rule here, and nothing new is introduced. However, it will get a few laughs, if the spectator has not had enough of kicks, falls, and the like. Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris are the leads.

"Peggy and the Law." (Imp. Mon., June 26.)—Another light romance enacted for the most part by Edith Roberts and Harry Benham. William Addison Lathrop's story is too greatly imaginative to be convincing but it is still pleasing. George Ridgewell directed.

"God and the Baby." (Big U. Wed., June 28.)—The main situation in this picture is that in which the bank cashier decides to embezzle funds for the cure of his child. He is attacked by crooks and is changed to a hero in the eyes of his employers. A familiarly told drama which is done in such a manner that the interest ought to be more than average. Malcolm Blevins, Marjorie Ellison and Zoe Durae are the leads.

"Pirates of the Air." (L-KO. Two reels. Wed., June 28.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Human Cactus." (Thurs., June 29.)—The story of the ill bred girl of the slums being transplanted to a rich home and gradually absorbing the ways of her betters has here been utilized by E. J. Clawson as a scenario. There is a love element too, that is done convincingly. Rupert Julian's direction gets this picture over in more than ordinary style. The director, Elsie Jane Wilson and Douglas Gerrard are the leads.

"Blind Man's Buff." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., June 30.)—Matt Moore and Jane Gail have this time turned their attention to drama with results that are as satisfactory as in their comedy pictures. There is some comedy in this piece but the general tone of it is dramatic. Jane believes Matt is blind and cares for him. Discovering he isn't at all Jane is furious and leaves him. Later Matt is really blinded and this brings them together again. An operation proves successful. Harry Solter is the author.

"The Money Lenders." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., July 1.)—Henry McRae's railroad melodramas are always full of lightning action, so fast that most of the illogical phases of the story are eclipsed. This one is no exception to the general rule. The usual thriller is provided by way of an explosion and several hairbreadth escapes. Frank Wiltermood is author while in the cast appear Marie Walcamp, E. N. Wallack, Lee Hill and L. C. Shumway.

"Peg o' the Ring." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Ninth Episode. Week of June 26.)—"The Leap" brings in the Mexican War. Dr. Lund's circus is playing in this Southern country and after the performance every American in the place is attacked by the Mexicans. A furious battle wages. Dr. Lund, Jr., arrives to rescue Peg only to find that she has been kidnapped by a band of greasers bribed by Mrs. Lund. The installment opens with Grace Cunard in her role of Peg taking a long leap from a burning shack into the ocean.

"Twice at Once." (Big U. Thurs., June 29.)—A comedy by Craig Hutchinson, which is a very good imitation of an L-KO, done with Ernie Shields, Margaret Joselin, Harry Todd and Marcia Moore in the principal parts. The wild character of the plot and the roof top chase which brings the subject to a close are well worked out.

"The Way of the World." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., July 3.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of June 24.

"They Wouldn't Take Him Seriously." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., July 4.)—Herbert Rawlinson as the society man who is never taken seriously by the feminine members of his social set and Agnes Vernon as the girl he finally wins are the principals in this light romantic drama that is the brightset spots in this week's program. A supporting cast comprised of Charles Gunn, Betty Schade and Jean Hathaway also appeared. William Worthington directed from a scenario by Ben Cohn.

"The Head of the Family." Rex. Tues., July 4.)—The husband, tired of the social whirl and realizing that his wife loves his money and not himself, takes her away to the wilds forcibly, and there practices the cave man method of converting her into a woman. The conversion is not pictured very plainly and the reel, burdened with an ancient story, seems rather shallow. Ben Wilson and Edna Hunter are the leads.

"The Clever Mrs. Carter." (Imp. Tues., July 4.)—In which the wife cures her husband of the flirting habit by entertaining the new found object of his affections in her own home. This picture is no doubt meant to be subtle, but the observer will perhaps ask himself after its all over why the clever Mrs. Carter's scheme worked. Edith Robert and Harry Benham are the principals. George Ridgewell directed.

"Behind the Veil." (Victor. Two reels. Wed., July 5.)—This drama is too foolish to be taken seriously. Mary Fuller appears as twin sisters. As the selfish sister she tricks a blind man into believing she is the other and marries him. Miss Fuller's work is good, but her support consisting chiefly of Niles Welch and Johnnie Walker, is very poor. The sub-titles will no doubt be changed before the picture is released. Catherine Carr prepared the scenario from a story by Elizabeth Carpenter.

"A Gambler's Gambol." (L-Ko. Wed., July 5.)—Fatty Voss playing the wife of the gambler creates most of the laughs in this reel. She walks off with the net receipts of a poker game and none of the players are able to collect. Harry Coleman is the gambler. On the whole this is on the average chiefly due to the efforts of Fatty.

"The Man Across the Street." (Imp. Two reels. Thurs., July 6.)—An intense but rather disagreeable drama. The husband in the guise of his wife's lover, approaches her in the night and finding her willing to see him, kills her. The lover is convicted of the crime. King Baggot plays both male parts, while Edna Hunter is the wife. After the final scene of the story a view of Baggot, Miss Hunter and director Henry Otto is given. They are reading over the script.

"The Janitor." (Powers. Thurs., July 6.)—In this comedy Wallace Beery is seen as an eccentric janitor. Berry also directed and he has provided himself with ample means for creating laughs. As the janitor he is fine. This makes a comedy suitable for exhibition anywhere.

"The Wishing Lamp." (Big 4. Thurs., July 6.)—Blessed with a good idea this little light drama has been very poorly carried out and accomplishes practically nothing. Two boys, one rich and one poor, long to change positions in life and their guardians turn the trick in the dead of the night. But they are dissatisfied after all, and so they are changed back again.

"Double Crossing the Dean." (Nestor. Two reels. Fri., July 7.)—One of Al. Christie's boarding school comedies, in which the soda fountain clerks succeed in seeing their sweethearts despite the protestations of the dean. There's a lot of fun in these two reels. The situations are evolved with a fine consideration for their humorous possibilities, while the various players, chiefly Stella Adams as the dean do very good work. The rest of the important parts are played by Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons, Corrine Lesser, Jane Waller and Bess Holbrok.

"The River Goddess." (Imp. Fri., July 7.)—A picture in which a rich and a poor man meet and tell there woes to one another. It happens that they both were jilted by the same girl. Original twists make this picture surprising, but only fair in the ultimate effects it creates. J. Grubb Alexander wrote the scenario for Matt Moore and Jane Gail.

"Any Youth." (Victor. Fri., July 7.)—The most remarkable thing about this picture is its camera work. Alan Holubar in the title role is continuolly beset by his evil self who appears by way of double exposure, but finally the Evil Self is banished totally by the Better Self. Save for the fact that Mr. Holubar's Better Self is decorated with poor makeup, the subject should prove of unusual interest. Dorothy Phillips is the girl. The picture was made at Universal City.

"The Committee on Credentials." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., July 8.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Sports of the Rajah in Mysterious India." (Powers. July 8).—The first of the Dorsey expedition pictures showing various points of interest in India. Inserted between the usual pictures of temples, mosques, etc., are native scenes showing Indian sports and entertainments which offer relief sometimes of the genuine comedy variety.

"An All Around Cure." (Joker. Sat., July 8.)—This comedy, funny in plot, is made simply uproarious by the ridiculous business done by the Joker cast, headed by William Franey, Gale Henry, Charles Conklin and Lillian Peacock. Each husband and each wife believe their better halves to be dead and in reaching this situation and in untangling it complications of riotous humor result. William Farmer wrote the scenario and Allen Curtis directed.

"A Dead Yesterday." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., July 9.)—This picture by Tom Lewis, produced by Charles Giblyn, was originally much longer and as cut, it presents a jerky, unconvincing and strained story. The man in the case marries secretly, then betrays another girl, is forced by his wife to marry her and later she dies, leaving the way clear to a reunion between the man and his first wife. Such a story if told well would fail to convince and as presented in "A Dead Yesterday" it is unusually bad. Hobart Henley, Cleo Madison and Agnes Vernon are the leads.

"Getting the Goods on Gertie." (L-Ko. Sun., July 9.)—Dave Morris and another gentleman who shows fair promise set up as detectives and double cross their clients by burglarizing them. They are employed by a Frenchman to watch his flirtatious wife and Dave poses as the husband's father and consequently receives a full supply of daughterly affection before the riot starts. This is average, although Dave Morris isn't as funny as he has been. Gertrude Selby and Reggie Morris are the other players.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

We are telling you again, as we have told you scores of times before that NO PROGRAM ON EARTH BEGINS TO EVEN COMPARE WITH THE MIGHTY UNIVERSAL PROGRAM. Proof of this assertion piles up mountain high every week. The latest is the extraordinary addition of the Famous Dorsey Expedition Travel Pictures on the REGULAR UNIVERSAL Program, which users of the entire Universal Program secure without one extra cent of cost. For variety of subjects, stories, plays, stars and unusual novelties the Universal Program stands head and shoulders above anything on the market. The REAL proof of the vast superiority of the Universal Program is the mass of letters from all parts of the world received daily in which Exhibitors tell of how they ARE GETTING THE MONEY WITH IT week in—week out, all year round. If you can get the Universal Program for your House grab it,—if you can't get it now watch your first opportunity. Any Universal Exchange will give you more facts and figures.

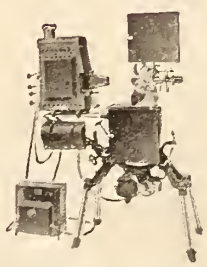
GIVE MORE TIME

TO THE SELECTION OF YOUR

MOST VALUABLE ASSET

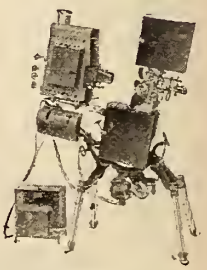
Decorative effects do not make the Play House any more than clothes make the man.



Success lies in the stream of light that flows from lens to screen, when luxuriant surroundings are lost in darkness.

The quality and consistency of this light depend absolutely upon the machine from which it is projected.

Don't wait until the last moment to hastily select the most important item of your equipment—the Projection Machine.



Power's Cameragraph

is invariably selected by those who take time to investigate its many exclusive features of design and construction. It reproduces the natural life-like motion pictures that compel profound interest and undivided attention.

114—What is a transformer and what is it used for?

Ans.—The term Transformer is generally applied to an inductive electro magnetic device which is composed of a laminated iron core having as a general rule a closed magnetic circuit upon which there is mounted one or more magnet coils or windings usually termed "primary" for the line side and "secondary" for the lamp side in inductive relation to each other.

The purpose of a transformer is more particularly to reduce a given line voltage of an Alternating Current system to a lower voltage suitable for the devices to be operated. Another purpose of the transformer on A. C. is to protect the user of the current from excessive voltage. It is a well known fact that the main reason for the introduction and use of the A. C. lies in the fact that currents of very high voltage may be generated and sent out over the distribution system requiring very small wires, meaning low cost for copper. The high voltage is then put through a transformer at or near the building where the current is to be used through the means of which the voltage is then reduced from the high and dangerous potential to a much lower voltage suitable for the operation of the various devices at a potential maybe not exceeding 220 volts, the common voltage being 110 volts for lighting with 220 volts for ordinary power service. An A. C. of 220 volts, while being unpleasant to come in contact with, may shake you up but it will not injure under normal conditions and 110 volt potential almost anyone could stand without injury.

If you go back to the answers to questions 48, 49 and 50 you will find how a transformer of special construction is applied for the control of a projector arc and that there are practical and economical reasons for using a specially constructed transformer in place of a rheostat or choke-coil for the control of an arc. You are recommended to read the answers to the foregoing questions again to refresh your memory before proceeding to read the answers to the following questions which all concern transformer design, construction and operation.

Perhaps before going into the details of transformer construction it would be interesting to you to have brought to your attention the simplest form of a transformer or induction coil, at least the type most commonly handled by the average person which is the medical household battery.

Every reader has, I am sure, at sometime or other, experienced the sensation of a shock from a medical battery. The shock is produced, as a general rule, from the secondary of a small transformer, the primary of which is exited by an interrupted D. C. provided by a dry battery.

In some instances the medical battery is provided with connections which also include part of the primary circuit. For our purpose of demonstrating the principle of the transformer with the household medical battery as a medium, I refer to the primary and secondary windings as being separate and not interconnected, for simplicity and convenience.

In Fig. 51 submitted herewith "A" is a dry battery of one or more cells as the case may require. "B" is the primary winding composed of a few turns of comparatively large wire, one end of the coil being connected to the battery, the other end to a metal post " C " which supports an iron armature " D " through the medium of a flat spring " E " which is provided with a silver or platinum contact " F," normally in closed circuit relation, with a similar metallic contact on screw " G " which is connected to the other pole of the battery as illustrated.

Within the coil " B " there is a core " H " made up from soft iron wires which are assembled so as to form a cylindrical body. The ends of these iron wires may be dipped in solder so as to hold them together, unless they are as is usual in the higher class induction coils, enclosed in a hard rubber tube which holds them together.

It is evident that when the current flows through the circuit described and illustrated, the core " H " becomes magnetized. It attracts the iron body " D " which on account of the spring " E " moves towards " H," but at the same instant the circuit is broken at contacts " F " and " G " which causes the current to cease flowing through magnetizing coil " B." The stopping of the current through " B " allows the core " H " to become demagnetized and as a result the core " H " no longer attracts the iron body " D " which is immediately pulled away from it by spring " E " and the electric circuit is then again closed through contacts " F " and " G " which repeats the operation as described above.

It will become clear to you that by adjustment of the screw " G " the speed of the make and break between " F " and "G" can be altered because the spring "E" has less tension when you loosen screw " G " which makes the tremble of the iron body " D " slower. This slow movement of " D " when the spring " E " is weak produces low frequency or breaks in the electric circuit.

If we tighten screw " G " and stiffen the tension of spring " E " the frequency of the make and break device at " F " and " G " will be increased and as a result the frequency of the interruptions of the electric circuit will be increased.

Now, we have the core body " H " subjective to a constantly falling and increasing magnetic influence and if we put a secondary coil " I " on the same core there will be induced in the secondary coil electric potential, the voltage of which will depend upon the magnetic strength of core " H " and the number of turns in the secondary coil " I."

To complete our description of the family medical coil I show the two handles " J " which are for the purpose of delivering the current to the patient.

BELL AND HOWELL COMPANY PLANS OPENING OF STORE IN LOS ANGELES TO SUPPLY STUDIO EQUIPMENT

Los Angeles, June 24.

DONALD J. BELL of the Bell & Howell Company at Chicago, spent several days of the past week in Los Angeles while enroute from looking after personal interests in southern California to his home in Chicago. While in the city Mr. Bell was an interested visitor at a number of the studios where he found Bell & Howell equipment in use at every turn.

"The Los Angeles studios seem to be decidedly busy, and at all those I visited, I noticed that permanent improvements were being made," Mr. Bell said to the "News" representative.

"I find there has been quite a change among the producers in the past year or two. Previously it was the habit of many of the industry to boast about the large earnings of their company. This caused many of the wealthy to invest in the motion picture business, and has resulted in over production. Managers, I now find, are reticent with respect to the prosperity of their respective organizations, and in most cases are anxious to give the opinion that they are losing money instead of making it.

"All in all the industry here looks as though it were in a very healthy condition, and my visit at this time has convinced me that this field should have a branch of our business. We are planning now to open such a store in Los Angeles later in the year, to supply studios and theatres with our equipment."

CLEVELAND MUSEUM OF ARTS SETS STANDARD FOR THEATRES

THE new Cleveland Museum of Arts has arranged to take care of the growth of the motion picture in a very unique way. The auditorium is constructed along lines which might be applied to the very expensive theatres which are now being planned throughout the country.

The comfort of all those attending pictures and other entertainments has been cared for by the installation of special air cushion seats which, though too expensive for most theatres, could be used advantageously in those seats for which a special price is charged, as for example, in the boxes and balcony which in many houses is at a premium, for it is only here that smoking is allowed.

Another novel feature is that the roof of the auditorium is of glass, upon which water is continually kept playing. This reduces the temperature of the auditorium materially and together with a special device for the doing away with the humidity makes the auditorium comfortable at all times.

A completely equipped projection booth constructed entirely of marble has been so installed as to do away with all distortions and other troubles which arise when the theatre builder is not careful about the position of the booth.

The latest type Motiograph machines are being installed under the personal supervision of O. F. Spahr, general manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company of Chicago.

SIX CANDIDATES FOR LICENSES IN OPERATOR EXAMINATION AT ROCHESTER, NEW YORK

Special to Motion Picture News.

Rochester, N. Y., June 22.

SIX candidates for licenses for motion picture operators tried the city commission's test here today. An even dozen operators had served the required six months apprenticeship and had registered with the commission, but of this number only seven appeared for examination. One of these was rejected before his examination had proceded very far.

Th other half dozen were given an opportunity to show their familiarity with motion picture machines, both by a practical test and by a written examination. Renewals of licenses are being made at this time by the city authorities.

HALL THEATRE, COLUMBIA, MO., A $60,000 HOUSE, IS OPENED BY WOODS

Columbia, Mo., June 24.

THE new Hall theatre, erected at a cost of $60,000, will be opened here on July 20. This will be one of the finest houses in central Missouri and will have cooling, heating and ventilating systems of exceptional merit.

The house has a capacity of 1,300 seats. One feature is a row of loges in the front of the balcony. H. G. Woods, for some time past manager of the Star theatre here, will take over the management of the Hall, turning the Star over to some other manager.

Better Light

Less Current

The DC Compensarc lowers the voltage of a direct current supply to that required at the lamp without needless waste.

The AC Compensarc cuts 2-3 from your lighting bill if you use alternating current.

The AC to DC Compensarc will transform alternating into direct current and reduce the voltage at the same time without needless waste.

THE COMPENSARC
For Moving Picture Machines

Free Descriptive Booklet

Special screens, projection machines and first run films won't give results with poor light; therefore, what's the use of paying extra money to secure the best in films, screens and projection machines if the whole result is to be spoiled by poor light?

To have clear, white pictures such as everybody now demands, it is necessary to have the proper light. The Compensarcs will enable you to secure the proper light, no matter what kind or quality of current supply you have. They change your current supply to that proper for use at the projection arc and therefore give you

STEADY LIGHT—no flickering, no sputtering, even when changing intensities or from one machine to another.

BRIGHT LIGHT—Bright, clear pictures even under unusually strong house lighting.

WHITE LIGHT—no yellow streak, no ghosts.

Compensarcs are Safe, Efficient, Easy to Operate, Fool Proof, Reliable

Projection Questions Answered

Operating Electricity — Repairing Equipment

Edited by J. H. Hallberg

Who will answer all questions you may send in, no matter how simple or difficult

NOT SATISFIED WITH THE PROJECTION IN HIS HOUSE

L. B. F., Trent, S. D.—I am using a Power's 6-A, D. C. 45 foot throw and picture 8 by 10. I am not satisfied with my projection and am using 60 to 80 amperes, while I am supposed to use 20 to 30. In fact I am notified to this effect. Now, what can I do to come within the demands. I am using a small rheostat, supposed to be 25 to 40 amperes. Carbons are ½ and ⅝ inches. Where can I get a good work on projection, in fact, on operating a motion picture machine.

Ans.—Your condition is evidently not explained exactly as it exists. Just how you can use a Power's 6-A with D. C. and a rheostat which is adjustable from 25 to 40 amperes, and how you can draw 60 to 80 amperes through this rheostat if it is made for the voltage of your circuit I cannot conceive unless you keep your carbons almost together and then, of course, you would not get the light and your amperage would be considerably higher than it ought to be and your rheostat would be red hot.

Now, in order to put you right and in order to be able to solve your problem, I want you to answer the following questions. I. State voltage of your D. C. circuit. 2. Do you receive the D. C. from the electric lighting company's mains or do you generate your own D. C.? 3. If you have your own plant state the size, style and make of engine, with the h. p., and also specify the make, size and style of generator as marked on the nameplate. 4. How do you know you are using 60 to 80 amperes? 5. Why are you supposed to use 20 to 30 amperes and who notified you to that effect? 6. What style rheostat are you using which you claim to be 25 to 40 amperes capacity? State the make of your rheostat and what is stamped on the nameplate, that is, the voltage and the capacity in amperes. 7. Give make of carbon used and whether cored or solid.

If you answer the foregoing questions I can put you right. In the meantime, I want to say that for your distance of 45 feet, with a picture 8 by 10, you should, as stated, receive good illumination with about 30 amperes D. C. at the arc with the carbon points about ¼ to ⅜ of an inch apart, which gives a potential drop of about 50 volts, using a ⅝-inch cored carbon in the upper holder for the positive and ½-inch solid or cored carbon in the lower holder for the negative.

Perhaps your arc is burning upside down. To determine this, start your arc and let it burn for about 20 seconds and pull the switch. If the upper carbon is the hotter you are all right. If on the other hand the lower carbon is the hotter pull your switch and reverse the leads so that the upper will always be the hotter, as it should be with D. C. and which signifies it is the positive.

The book "Motion Picture Electricity" is the latest and most complete work on all matters pertaining to the illumination and control of various electrical devices for projection. The price is $2.50. Each manufacturer issues a most complete instruction book which is always up to date for the various type projectors manufactured. If you will kindly signify to this department the machines in which you are interested I will be glad to see that you get the right information and instruction books without charge.

Note.—We reproduce the above from page 3,622 of the June 10, 1916, issue in order to properly connect the answers to the above by L. B. F. with further comment.

Trent, S. D., June 19, 1916. Dear Sir:—As you requested, I am answering your questions as best I can.

No. 1—Voltage is 110.

2—D. C. from electric light company.

4—Company so claim.

5—The plant is small and they cannot allow us more than 30 to 35 amperes.

6—Rheostat is Power's No. 21, 220 voltage, but so arranged that we use 110 volts with a maximum amperage of 35.

7—Bio Carbons, cored, ½ and ⅝. Machine is Power's 6-A. Will you kindly see that I get the proper instruction book?

The "expert" in putting up the machine attached current from below, consequently our lower carbon is the hottest. Should this be changed?

(Signed) L. B. F.

Ans.—In response to your last letter containing answers to questions asked in reply to your original request which was published on June 10 in the Projection Department, I want to comment as follows:

Concerning question No. 1 we understand your voltage is 110, and question No. 2 is answered by your stating that the company furnishes D. C. from the electric light station.

Question No. 3 naturally does not concern us as you do not have your own electric plant, but about Question No. 4, to which you answer that the company so claims, I want to remark that the statement that you are using 60 to 80 amperes by the company cannot be reconciled with your answer to question No. 6, where you say you have a Power's No. 21, 220 volt rheostat, but arranged so that you use 110 volts with a maximum amperage of 35.

Now, for your information I want to say that it is possible to take one of Power's No. 21 rheostats and connect the coils in parallel for operation on 110 volts to get about 60 to 70 amperes out of it, but you state it is connected to give 35 amperes on 110 volts and that settles it.

Your answer to question No. 7 explains that you are using good carbons, the sizes being ⅝ and ½ cored which are satisfactory, although you could, if you wanted to, use a ½-inch solid in the lower holder.

Your machine, Power's 6-A, is as good as the best and will give perfect satisfaction if properly installed and operated. I have taken steps to see to it that an instruction book for the Power's No. 6-A machine is sent to you at once.

I am interested in your statement that "the expert in putting up the machine attached current from below, consequently your lower carbon is the hottest." If you are a student and a reader of this department as well as of Motion Picture Projection Simplified you would know that it is absolutely necessary with D. C. that the upper carbon be positive or the hotter. This matter is so important that it should be almost self-evident to anyone handling the arc lamp.

If you had asked yourself the question, as you now do in your letter of me, it seems to me it should have occurred to you that the larger carbon ought to be the hotter or the positive and should be on top. Don't depend upon these so-called "Experts" and "Projection Engineers" who are so only by self appointment. Your case proves conclusively that you were a better observer of conditions than the "Expert," and if you had only exercised your own judgment you would have made the change yourself by merely shifting the two wires feeding the carbons so as to, as you say, feed from above, which would have made your installation correct and your light absolutely perfect and steady.

If in your first letter you had told me that the lower carbon for you to place your orders for SPEER Projector Carbons. Our factory operating day and night with three shifts of men has succeeded in almost catching up with our orders. We are still a little behind but after July 1st we hope with the new increased capacity of our plant to be able to fill your orders with fair promptness. Protect yourself by placing your orders now. Don't delay. The investment for a case of carbons is small compared with the expense and annoyance in having to pay extra express charges or having to wait for the slow freight shipments now caused by the tremendous traffic in the freight departments of our railway system. The SPEER Projector Carbons have been thoroughly tried and have met the specifications of all particular operators and exhibitors.

We will have an exhibit at the National Exhibitors League Exposition in the Coliseum in Chicago. Give us a visit.

FILM CANNOT BE IGNITED IN REWINDING

M. Nosti, Tampa., Fla.—Is there any possibilty of setting the film on fire while in the process of rewinding. There is an argument and we wish to settle it. Some of the boys think that a film can be set on fire by rewinding with considerable speed and then holding the back reel stationary, thus sliding the film.

Ans.—Your question, Brother Nosti, is one which has come up several times during the past year and to my knowledge it is practically impossible to ignite the film during the process of rewinding unless possibly the grossest carelessness should be exercised. The normal friction of the film even though the reel should be stopped very suddenly would not ignite it. It was argued from all points of view between several of us and the conclusion we came to was that there would have to be some unusual foreign particle lodged on the film in order to produce a spark to ignite it. Film will not ignite by friction under any normal condition even to the extent of sudden stopping of the reel on the tail stock of a rewinder because when you suddenly stop the reel which is being unwound the friction is distributed over such great area. It is not merely one turn of the film which is subjected to friction, but the slippage of film is distributed over maybe 50 feet, including several turns. This was tested by putting in marked paper slips checked against the side of the reel.

In an enclosed rewinder it was argued that where the case is made of metal or any other substance which can produce a spark, if a reel badly bent should be used at high speed, it might be possible to produce a spark to ignite the film.

However, to my knowledge at least, there is not on record report of a fire starting from either of the above mentioned causes.

It is a fact that the Interstate Commerce Commission has ordered all of the reel shipping cases and containers to be fiber lined so as to make impossible the ignition of the film due to the creating of a spark between the metal reel and the carrying case in case the box or container should be dropped or roughly handled while in transit.

My personal opinion is that the film could not be ignited by the sudden stopping of the reel even though the speed be considerably above normal while rewinding.

THEATRE MEN AND OPERATORS IN VANCOUVER, WHY NOT GET TOGETHER AND SETTLE YOUR DIFFERENCES AMICABLY

THE embargo against union operators in most of the Vancouver, B. C., motion picture theatres which still employed union men, went into effect as planned on June 12 and at present the Orpheum and Colonial theatres are the only picture houses there which are being conducted with members of the labor organization as operators. Union men are at work at the Pantages and Columbia, however, as these houses play vaudeville in conjunction with motion pictures, and on account of the close affiliation between the operators and stage hands were not included in the agreement looking toward the weeding out of the union men. It is stated, however, that no trouble is anticipated in the picture houses in which union musicians are playing, with non-union men in the operating rooms, as this condition has obtained for a long time in some of the theatres.

As a matter of fact only three houses were involved in the change—the Globe, Princess and Bijou, all operated by the National AmusementCompany—and only six union men were dismissed, as a great majority of the theatres have for a long time been run with non-union men. With the exceptions of Managers James Pilling, of the Orpheum, and Hector Quagliotti, of the Colonial, however, all exhibitors have entered into an agreement not to employ union operators in the future.

Mr. Quagliotti also signed this agreement, but afterward withdrew, as the operators assigned to his house as substitutes acknowledged that they were not competent to run the machines at the Colonial, pulling a very high amperage, and preferred not to take the position. He therefore put his union men back to work, and will probably retain them.

The union men who have been dismissed (members of Vancouver Local No. 348, I. A. T. S. E.) are accepting the situation philosophically and state that they look for an early solution of the difficulty. They point out that their contention for an extended period of apprenticeship for operators is upheld by the facts brought out in connection with the substitute operators tried out at the Colonial. Although these men had had considerable experience it is said they were unable to handle the Colonial's equipment.

The exhibitors have taken a determined stand on the union question, and in all ways are infinitely stronger than the union organization in Vancouver, so it is altogether likely that the present condition will continue indefinitely.

EXHIBITORS, OPERATORS AND FILM MEN GENERALLY, AT HOUSEWARMING OF VAN HUSAN'S NEW SUPPLY DEPOT

EXHIBITORS, machine operators and film people of Omaha generally met at the new offices of the Western Supply Company, in the National Building, Twelfth and Harney streets, Omaha, when F. A. Van Husan, Jr., formerly manager of the Universal exchange, opened the new business. It was a regular house warming.

Bob Plauck, Bob Hoen and Mrs. Neilson acted as a committee from the exhibitors in presenting a huge floral piece. Exhibitors played and sang. After the motion picture theatres of the city closed the operators and exhibitors gathered in greater numbers. Refreshments were served and the new offices were turned into dancing floors. All the operators of Local 343, who attended in a body, brought a beautiful loving cup, on which was this inscription:

EXAMINATION FOR MOTION PICTURE OPERATORS SET BY WINNIPEG OFFICIALS

A. HEDLEY GARLAND, Winnipeg inspector of public amusements, announces that an examination of moving picture operators will be held in the Manitoba parliament buildings, beginning on June 26, at 9 in the morning. Each candidate will have to fill in an application form, in which he will be required to give all particulars in regard to himself before he will be allowed to take the examination.

Each candidate will have to present a medical certificate which will show that he is free from epileptic trouble. The inspector will take no chance of operators collapsing while their machines are running. The medical certificates must show that candidates are not affected with weakness of sight or hearing.

Another requirement is that each candidate must bring with him two small photos of himself. One of these will be attached to his application form, and the other to his certificate. This will be a check on any possible exchange of certificates and will also serve to show that the holder of the certificates is always the same man who passed the examination.

Artistic Making and Vignetting in Film Photography

Many Pictures of Indifferent Dramatic Quality Are Redeemed by a Few Artistic Touches on the Part of the Photographer—It Is an Artist Who Knows the Right Spots to Place the Camera in Taking a Scene, in Order That a "Picture" May Be Secured Instead of Merely a Photograph

WE may at some future date discuss in the columns of the Camera Department the subject of pictorial composition as applied to motion photography. The sense of artistic perception is inborn in some photographers, but if the average motion picture is any criterion this gift is totally lacking in the majority of cameramen.

Many a film subject of mediocre dramatic quality has been redeemed by a few artistic touches on the part of the photographer. It is an artist indeed who knows the right spot to place the camera in taking a scene, in order that a "picture" may be secured instead of merely a photograph.

The work of the foremost producers is generally identified by just such earmarks as these little artistic touches here and there.

A great deal can be done to beautify the scenes and settings in motion pictures by the occasional and well thought out application of masking and vignetting.

Kinds of "Masks" in Use

The mask (which would probably be termed a mat in still photography) and its function in motion camera work is doubtless fairly well known. Briefly, a mask for use in a cinematograph camera is a small, generally rectangular, piece of sheet brass or stiff black cardboard. Masks are inserted across the field of the exposure aperture of the camera, sometimes so that the film at the exposure point is pressed into contact with them and sometimes being slightly in front of the focal-plane of the film, their position being generally determined by the make or type of camera used. If the film is in contact with the mask its outline will be sharp in the negative images, whereas if the mask is situated slightly in front of the surface of the film the outline of the mask will be slightly softened or diffused. Both of these conditions are tolerable according to the nature of the scenes in whose making the masks are employed.

To resume our description of these little assistants to the artist cameraman—the mask generally has the metal (or cardboard) cut away in the center to form an opening of some shape or other. The most common mask shapes perhaps are the circle (used for field-glass effects), two circles side by side (opera-glass effects), the keyhole mask, and others such as heart shape, diamond shape, etc., all of which have been frequently seen.

While the proper masks for securing field and opera-glass effects are still in mind it may be well to suggest that the most natural looking result is secured, when using these, by placing them in the camera at some little distance in front of the film. This softens the outlines of the image which is proper, as when looking through a telescope of any kind the extremities of the field of view appear vague to the eye.

We particularly desire to emphasize in this article, however, that the great value of masks in the work of artistic film making lies in the fact that they may be made up in special shapes to meet all sorts of conditions of the subject to be photographed, and masks offer the chance for cameramen and producers to display their creative ability.

Nowadays huge sums are expended daily in producing pictures on a large scale. The films are advertised and spoken of as possessing supreme artistic quality. But the writer, who has been making, showing and viewing motion pictures for many years, cannot concede that the photographic quality of present day film subjects is equal technically or artistically, to that of the less pretentious subjects of five or six years back.

As evidence of the quality of cinematographic work prevalent at that time we submit in conjunction with this article three actual reproductions from motion picture films released not less than five years ago. These reproductions are specially selected (from many of equal merit possessed by the writer) with reference to the subject in hand—masking.

Figures 1 and 2 are from a one-reel Gaumont French-made picture of six years ago, while Figure 3 is a reproduction from a split reel scenic subject of the Cines Company (Rome) and shows a well composed view of the ruins of the Claudian Aqueduct in Italy. It only requires a glance at these genuine reproductions of former day motion pictures to make one realize the value of the mask in high class camera work. The writer also believes that a closer study of the views shown will tend toward the support of his contention that the motion picture camera work of today is lacking in inspiraton ,and that large numbers of the cameramen (so-called) are mechanical clods who might better be pushing a lawn mower.

Illustrating the Value of "Masks"

Perhaps the busy producers have never seen a good demonstration of the possibilities in mask effects, so the examples here shown may be the means of introducing some new effects to the picture-house patrons.

To get back to the technical side of the proposition, it would probably be found a difficult task to produce masks of the somewhat intricate character shown in Fig. 3 from sheet brass. With the aid of a sharp and pointed knife-blade and the exercise of a little patience, howevr, equally difficult dsings could be cut out of cardboard, and would be found just as efficient as brass masks in practice.

Another way of making a mask for a special effect, and frequently employed by veteran cameramen, is to cut an opening of the desired shape in a piece of jet-black leader stock, a sharp knife being used in the operation to secure a clean outline. The edges of the piece of film, containing the sprocket holes, are cut away below the design to prevent the claws of the camera from engaging it and drawing it past the aperture, as was illustrated in Figure I of the article on title-making which appeared in the Camera Department last week. The piece of film is now fastened to the aperture plate of the camera with its cut-out design centered before the exposure window. The camera is then threaded in the usual way and all film run through behind this improvised mask will show images having the shape intended. This procedure of course is open to the objection that the negatives thus secured may show some signs of scratching.

None of These Maskings Secured in Printing Machine

We also desire to point out to our readers that none of the maskings illustrated here were secured in the printing machine. It can easily be comprehended that any mask inserted in the printing machine aperture would give a white surrounding to the printed images instead of a dark ground as here shown. The adaptation

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

MUSIC FOR THE PICTURES GIVEN IMPETUS BY SCORES ACCOMPANYING "RAMONA," "THE FALL OF A NATION," "CIVILIZATION" AND "BIRTH OF A NATION"

THIS spring has shown rapid advance for music and the picture in and about New York City. During the year past, music has certainly demonstrated its intrinsic value to the picture theatre, to the theatre managers and to the exhibtor. With five theatres showing pictures having orchestras of twenty-five and more men and music sponsored for by such noted men as Victor Herbert and Victor L. Schertzinger, there is no telling what the ultimate end of this musical demand may be.

It has been rumored that the Musicians' Union has foreseen a wonderful prosperity in this new innovation of music and the picture and is seriously contemplating placing an eight dollar to ten dollar per week higher value on the musician's services when playing for productions demanding the higher admissions.

We have always predicted in these columns that the picture theatre would open a new and extensive field for musicians giving their best musical efforts to this new work.

In and about New York, in certain residential districts where no one ever dreamt a large and commodious theatre could do business, there are photoplay theatres employing orchestras of from eight to fifteen pieces, which has all come about in the last fifteen months during which time the feature photo plays have so greatly developed.

"The Birth of a Nation" has done a great deal toward creating a similar musical condition throughout the entire country, and stands a monument to the energy and inclination of its producers and the advanced manner of presenting a feature photo play. We have consequently "Ramona," "The Fall of a Nation" and "Civilization" all presented with the very best efforts for their proper musical accompaniment and synchronization. All of these show every sign of repeating the success of "The Birth of a Nation" film.

While the producers of all films are strongly inclined to claim the credit for the success of these large feature photo plays, nevertheless the public and musician know to what extent music has been a necessary factor. Had any of these magnificent photoplays been presented in the meagre way known to the exhibitor a few years ago they would not to-day be heralded as wonderful achievements. Music has surrounded the feature photo play with a something, which while not directly understandable, gives an unmistakable and impressive atmosphere that removes the harshness from the screen and creates a submissive mood among the audience, making the screen ten fold more expressive. Aside from this, advanced musical conditions lend bigness to the picture theatre which caters beautifully to the eye and removes that now obsolete impression so long imbedded in the minds of the public, namely, "The Moving Picture Dump."

No screen productions, scenarios, or stories, have done half as much as music to make the photo play theatre stand out more majestically among theatrical enterprises.

HEAVY DRAMATIC AND PATHETIC NUMBERS

IN the last few years there has been a great lull in the publication of original numbers having a more or less serious appeal. This has been caused by the dance craze which has made a great demand upon music publishers for entirely different style of numbers. With the oncoming music and the picture, the demand for numbers of romantic and pathetic appeal with the more serious dramatic effect will surely be great, and I note that the publishers are not at all averse to the publishing of worthy numbers of this kind. While such numbers are scarce among the new copyrights, I mention here some older publications which I know to be good, not difficult to play and numbers that cannot be considerd reminiscent, as they have not been played to death.

"Edris and Hyperion," by R. Gruenwald, is a 4/4 number having both a heavy dramatic and agitated effect. "Love's Confession," by Klemmer, is a 3/4 number, very melodious, having a positive heavy and agitated movement. "Forgetmenots," by H. Engelman is a 4/4 number similar to the first mentioned but having an entirely different theme. "The Arietta" in E Flat, by Pabst, is a very good number for maintaining a dramatic effect. "A Pasing Fancy," by T. H. Rollinson, is a 3/4 number of similar effects as those above mentioned. "Faith and Hope," by R. Gruenwald, is another 4/4 number used to good advantage for heavy effects.

All these numbers are to be played in slow tempo and should only be used when serious high tension is to be maintained. Every number contains one or more strains of agitatio effect which is very valuable for maintaining a dramatic tone in music and makes the use of melodramatic numbers unnecessary unless such action is definitely pronounced on the screen. All of the above mentioned numbers are published to Oliver Ditson and Company, Boston, Mass., and can be obtained through Charles Ditson, East Thirty-fourth Street, New York City, or Lyon and Healy, Chicago, Ill.

SOME LONG NUMBERS THAT CAN BE USED TO GREAT ADVANTAGE IN MANY PICTURES

IN many feature photoplays, the screen action quite often continues in similar vein for a great length of time, making it very tiresome for the player to use short numbers, at the same time making him exhaust his repertoire of music too quickly in trying to avoid frequent repetitions. When such action is of a high tension nature and continues for sixteen or more minutes, the following numbers and arrangements thereof can be used to good advantage. You will find that they interest the player, as well as the audience, to a greater extent than the playing of four or five short numbers during the same interval.

Selections of "Lucia di Lammermoor" and "La Traviata," arranged by Roberts and taken from the Grand Operas composed by G. Donizetti are both numbers that play sixteen or more minutes and will perfectly portray romantic tension with interspersed dramatic interpolations. The music of both operas is very melodious and much appreciated by the public.

When playing numbers such as the above for pictures you must not play them in a bombastic style. Play them very much subdued and allow the different solos to be played by string or wood instruments only.

The selection taken from Puccini's "La Boheme" as published by Ricordi and Company, 12 East Forty-third street, New York City, is beautiful music and well adapted for obtaining and maintaining a sorrowful or plantive tone for a long time. While the music of "La Boheme" is appealingly melodious nevertheless its dramatic value is pronounced. By omitting the numbers between letter "R" and "W" the selection plays over seventeen minutes.

"Puccinianni" is another selection of Puccini operatic melodies, published by Ricordi and Company. This number is especially dramatic in its effect. Great care should be taken not to overwork the brass in any of these numbers. In dramas having a regal setting and story, when heavy romance or pathos are lengthy, no better numbers than selections of the two Wagnerian operas, "Lohengrin" and "Tanhauser," can be used. In "Lohengrin" the wedding march should always be omitted. The arrangements by Theodore Roberts are the best.

The above-mentioned numbers should only be used when the screen action is of high tension and long duration. In all of the numbers here mentioned grandioso effects should be avoided. The proper use of these numbers in picture playing are very much at the mercy of the musician's intelligence.

NUMBERS SUGGESTED FOR HEAVY OR HIGH TENSIONED PICTURES WITH ORIENTAL SETTING

FOR heavy or high-tensioned action in pictures with strictly oriental setting, when the action continues similar for a great length of time, the following numbers are very valuable:

"The Ballet Egyptian" by Luigini, consisting of four very good character numbers, will add class to any program while maintaining a positive and characteristic suggestion. The entire suite plays about fourteen minutes. Care should be taken that the screen suggests the oriental uninterruptedly. Any one number can be used separately. Every enterprising picture musician should be acquainted with this music.

"The Scene de Ballet" by Egener, published by Hamilton S. Gordon, is another lengthy oriental number sustaining heavy action and suggesting pageantry or the accumulation of many characters on the screen.

The "Cleopatra" suite by Oehmler, published by Carl Fischer, is a suite of oriental type which is more appropriate when interspersed romantic appeals are necessary. Its style is less dramatic than the former two mentioned. This suite also consists of four numbers and plays about fifteen minutes.

"Arabian Nights" by R. Gruenwald, published by Oliver Ditson and Company, is a suite of five numbers, all of which are of good character suggestion. This suite combines the East Indian and known Arabian character. The suite is of a lighter musical style than the three aforementioned suites. In using such suites for character or temperamental screen suggestion care should be taken that the usual bombastic openings and endings should be avoided when necessary to synchronize with the screen. In picture playing it is a good rule at all times to avoid extreme grandioso effects as they are very likely to disturb the audiences rather than interest them.

Many of our readers have sent us communications making inquiries regarding music rolls for picture playing.

The following item clipped from the San Jose Herald will in a meager way demonstrate what the Smythe Jay Music Company of Los Gatos, California, has accomplished in the making of music rolls for motion pitcures:

"Something out of the ordinary in the music line was given at Ford's opera house, Los Gatos, on the evening of May 24. Alice Smythe Jay gave a complete demonstration of inspirational improvising; this is to satisfy critics who say it can't be done, and entertain those who know that it can be. This talented little lady gave the entire program, using three distinct types of pictures, dramatic, educational and historical, fitting the pictures to music as they were thrown on the screen. She also played in roll form to the same pictures one of the demonstrations made by her at the P. P. I. E., when she improvised the music at sight, it being cut at the same time on the recorder. A moving picture magazine speaks of this work of Alice Smythe Jay's as The New Era in music and of her gift as an inspirational player as the talk of the hour."

I have before me a letter signed by a committee of four from the United Theatre Exchange of San Francisco, Cal., which speaks very highly of Alice Smythe Jay's demonstration.

NO OPEN AIR PICTURES FOR MONTCLAIR, NEW JERSEY

MONTCLAIR, N. J., will have none of the open air motion picture theatre. Last week two citizens of that city asked the municipal authorities for permission to conduct one in the residential section of the town. They asserted that their motive was not so much a commercial one as to keep servant girls contented, there being no place of amusement near.

Yesterday, however, it was announced by the authorities that the permit would not be granted.

Music Notes:—The two last reels are melodramatic and the music must be selected to accent this fact. The entire second reel can be covered by using a suite of numbers which have a positive romantic suggestion. It can, however, be set up with three different numbers as suggested in the plot.

Nos. 1, 4, 6 and 9 must be slow numbers with a romantic appeal and of dramatic effect. Nos. 2, 5, 12 and 18 must be slow waltzes with legato movements predominant. Nos. 3, 7 and 10 must be light 2/4 or 4/4 numbers. These numbers are your relief numbers and care should be taken to select light and melodious numbers.

No. 8 should be a concert waltz with a slow introduction of romantic appeal and dramatic effect.

Nos. 15 and 16 must be slow numbers having a positive pathetic appeal, yet a positive dramatic effect. The organ can be used to good advantage throughout the entire picture.

Some instruments cost more than

PICTURE THEATRE MAN IN GALVESTON EXTENDS HIS ACTIVITIES

G. K. JORGENSON, the premier exhibitor in Galveston, Texas, the island city, some time ago interested capitalists in an enterprise which is of particular interest to the motion picture people of the country.

Mr. Jorgenson has operated a number of theatres in Galveston, several on the beach and a few downtown—all of which had the name of Crystal—the Beach Crystal, the Crystal Airdome, the Crystal theatre and the Crystal Vaudeville theatre. He erected the Crystal theatre in Dallas, which is now operated by P. G. Cameron.

Mr. Jorgenson's new enterprise has many novel features. Under the general heading of "Crystal Palace" a huge structure has been erected and is now almost completed. In this building is a hotel, a theatre, bathhouse and dancing pavilion.

The property on which the building stands is valued at $150,000, and the bare concrete structure represents a cost of over $100,000. When completely equipped it will run $75,000 more. In design the Crystal Palace is a decided departure from the usual bathhouse and pavilion found along the Gulf coast. There is no wood in the Crystal Palace. It is built of solid reinforced concrete and is fireproof throughout. In addition to the private bath rooms and lockers, the building contains a big swimming pool, gymnasium, Turkish baths, hot salt water baths, rest rooms and facilities for ice skating, in addition to the hotel and picture theatre. The skating rink is 75x75 feet, and during this Fall ice skating, a decided novelty in the warm Southern climate, will be an innovation.

The picture theatre seats 700 in comfortable upholstered chairs. A large unit style, electrically operated musical instrument furnishes music for the theatre, in addition to an orchestra, which alternates in the promenade of the pavilion and the theatre. Throughout the theatre represents all that is modern in seating, heating, ventilation, cooling, music and projection equipment.

COHN INSTALLS MANY TYPHOON FANS IN NEW ORLEANS THEATRES

Special to Motion Picture News.

New Orleans, La., June 24.

THE Metropolitan Ventilating and Cooling Company is the newest supply house to open in New Orleans. The address is 407 Carondelet Street, and Sam Cohn is in charge.

Mr. Cohn is achieving remarkable success in the city and surrounding territory with his installations of Typhoon systems. There will be more Typhoons installed in New Orleans this summer than ever before. In the past few weeks Mr. Cohn has made these installations:

Triangle theatre, Isis theatre, Portola theatre, and several others in New Orleans. In addition, he has contracts ahead that are keeping him pretty busy.

METCALFE MAKES SUCCESSFUL DEMONSTRATION OF BAIRD MACHINES IN SAN FRANCISCO

G. A. METCALFE, 117 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, has been carrying on a successful public demonstration of the Baird machines at the German House in San Francisco. The exhibitors were invited to take in some of the war films, and they were much interested in the demonstration work.

This firm reports also that Kahn and Greenfield have just installed in the box offices of their new Fillmore and Progress theatres, the Caille Ticket selling and change making machinery. They had tried the machine out at their New Mission theatre with success.

of the shape of the mask to the location of the principal subject in Figure 1 is worthy of study, as is also the lighting employed. Quite evidently the producer and cameraman took the time to do the work right. Figure 2 is likewise a creditable and painstaking piece of work, while as before stated Figure 3 is a good example of pictorial landscape photography.

Masks for use in conjunction with the motion picture camera are not always of the type which are placed in close proximity to the exposure aperture, however.

With a Double Exposure Box or Mask box attachment on the front of the camera, larger masks cut from black cardboard may be employed. Being at quite some distance from the lens and exposure-window they of course give a diffused outline to the images recorded upon the film. This diffusion of the outlines of the image varies with the distance from the lens at which the cardboard mask is used. When the mask is close to the lens the outlines of the image will be very soft, while placing the mask farther in front of the lens renders the outlines more distinct.

Masks of the character just mentioned (used in front of the lens) could probably be more correctly termed vignetters as they vignette the film images.

Mechanical Devices Specially Constructed for Vignetting

This brings us to the mechanical devices specially constructed for vignetting the film pictures which are nowadays seen attached to the lens mounts of most all cameras used in production work. An article descriptive of a variety of such devices (made by the C. P. Goerz American Optical Company) appeared in the Camera Department of the "News" of May 6, so it is not necessary to describe them in detail here.

The Round Closing Shutter or Round Vignetter is perhaps the most frequently employed and enjoys great popularity among the picture makers.

Some good effects may be secured with the Round Closing Shutter aside from the customary closing or opening up of a scene by its use. For instance, the device may be shifted sideways with relation to the axis of the lens and the commencement of a scene may show the iris slightly open, revealing one of the characters at one side of the view. As the scene progresses the iris is opened more and reveals more of the view embraced by the lens and other characters are also seen.

Many Taken With Round Vignetter

Many scenes in the films of the best producers are taken with the Round Vignetter (mounted centrally to the lens) just slightly closed, thus rendering the edges of the picture obscure. This is quite a relief from the brilliant rectangular form in which an unvignetted picture appears when projected. The writer had a discussion with a well known stage director, at one time, as to whether or not a motion picture could be projected so that its margins would blend into a suitable setting surrounding the screen and the exact boundaries of the projected image be therefore imperceptible. A setting was constructed according to ideas jointly suggested and some motion pictures were photographed by the writer using a Round Vignetter, set quite close to the lens and just cutting the edges of the film images all around. A positive print was made having good density around the margins of the film pictures, and when the same was projected the result was a brilliant screen image whose boundaries were not perceptible.

Pleasing effects may be secured in great variety by the use of Round and Square Closing shutters and other devices made for such work, but as stated in the earlier portion of this article we do not think that the capabilities of masks, used to secure original effects, have as yet been fully appreciated.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

CALIFORNIA

AS an indication that work will be rushed on the moving picture house to be erected at Fourth and Market streets, San Francisco, contracts have already been awarded for some of the steel work. Some slight changes are now being made in the plans for the exterior of the structure but the general plan is in a completed form. When the building now on this site is removed the Pastime Theatre, a five cent house, will be torn down and it is unlikely that any small house will be fitted up in the neighborhood to take its place.

The Hayward theatre, located at Hayward, has been given a thorough overhauling by G. F. Madsen and now presents a more inviting appearance than at any time since it was originally fitted up. The house was closed for three weeks to enable workmen to make the necessary changes without interruption.

A theatre to cost $25,000 is to be erected at Redding by M. Lonardini, owner of the Paragon block on California street. The Chamber of Commerce has raised a bonus to assist in the erection of the house, which is badly needed.

James Cox, former theatre owner at Utica, N. Y., has purchased the house at 2,129 East First street, Los Angeles, and renamed it the Library theatre. It opened last week.

George C. Rau, former owner-manager of the Rex and World theatres, Kansas City, has purchased through Leo Ryan, Los Angeles broker, the Navarre theatre, at 738 West Pico street, of K. W. Kilburn.

F. B. Hanawalt is the new owner of the St. Andrews, at 1,873 West Jefferson street, Los Angeles. The new manager has adopted an all feature policy.

J. A. Minnard, owner of the Brooklyn theatre, at 2,134 Brooklyn avenue, Los Angeles, has perfected a new screen which he has installed in his own theatre and several others in and about Los Angeles. The screen is so made that it holds all the light, making it possible to greatly reduce the amount of current necessary for a good picture. At the Brooklyn theatre the throw is one hundred and thirty feet, and but twenty-five amperes is required.

The Queen theatre, on Polk street, San Francisco, will be made over, as far as the front is concerned, so that the house will present a very attractive appearance, particularly at night, as the lighting effect has received special attention.

The new ice skating rink, which is being constructed by the Techau Tavern, and located at the site of the old Arcadia dance hall, at Jones and Eddy streets, San Francisco, will, when in full operation, install a motion picture machine and show some of the lively reels. The place will be known as the Techau Tavern Skating Rink.

The walls are up on the new theatre which is being constructed by J. W. Cline, of Santa Rosa. It is to be a very fine brick building and when completed will seat 1,500 people. Mr. Cline expects to have it in operation by the latter part of August and has engaged the services of C. W. Reavis to operate it. Mr. Reavis was formerly of the Berkeley theatre in Berkeley.

J. G. Knapp has sold the Lyric theatre at Santa Ana to A. S. Hulbert, and Knapp has purchased the Temple theatre at San Bernardino of Baufinger and Field, the exchange being made through Leo Ryan, Los Angeles theatre broker.

GEORGIA

The Real Estate Development Company plans to build on the north side of Broad street, Augusta, between the Empire and Chronicle buildings, a modern fireproof theatre, four stores, and offices above the stores. The theatre will be reached by an arcade with two stores on either side of the arcade. The total investment, including a fireproof warthouse in the rear of the block, facing Reynolds street, will aggregate $100,000.

Work has been started by the Palmer-Spivey Construction Company tearing down the building next to the Merchants Bank, Augusta, preparatory to the erection of a modern fire-proof theatre for the Modjeska Treatre Company on this site and the one next door to it.

The new theatre will be absolutely fireproof. It is to cost $35,000 exclusive of the furnishings, which will amount to from $12,000 to $15,000 additional.

Basil Stockbridge has purchased the Regent theatre, at Peachtree street and Ponce de Leon avenue, Atlanta.

He is directing it personally. The Regent is a popular suburban house, showing Triangle programs, and is devoted to children and lovers of high-class picture attractions.

The contract for the erection of the new Modjeska theatre, Augusta, has been awarded to Palmer-Spivey Construction Company. The building which will be erected on R. O. Lombard's property, 815-17 Broad street, will be one of the most beautiful structures in the city. The building, alone, will cost approximately $35,000, and the Modjeska Theatre Company will expend between $10,000 and $15,000 equipping it with the necessary motion picture paraphernalia. Besides the theatre, the building will have two store rooms on the ground floor. The construction work will be begun immediately by the contractors, and the building will be ready for occupancy by October 1. The Modjeska has rented the building for a term of ten years. The building will be of fireproof construction with reinforced concrete floors and roof. It will be equipped suitably to accommodate both motion pictures as well as vaudeville and theatrical companies. League and Duvall are the renting agents.

INDIANA

Harley Hornbeck, manager of the Majestic theatre, Monticello, has bought the interests of Frank Mathews, manager of the opera house at Monticello, including the airdome and the lease on the opera house. While Mr. Hornbeck has not announced his plans, it is probable he will continue to run pictures at the opera house and at the airdome when the weather is suitable. Mr. Mathews expects to go to California, where he contemplates going into the picture show business there.

The Northern Amusement Company, of Indianapolis, an organization formed by business men and residents living in the vicinity of Forty-second street and College avenue, recently incorporated, plans to operate a motion picture theatre in a new building on the east side of College avenue, near Forty-second street. The plan under which the theatre will be operated is unique in the history of motion picture enterprises of this sort in Indianapolis, as the company is made up of more than fifty stockholders. The amount of stock which any one person can hold is limited, the object being to interest financially as many of the residents of the district as possible. The result is that from one hundred to one hundred and fifty persons will be directly interested through ownership. One hundred of the one hundred and fifty shares to be sold have already been taken or pledged and only fifty are yet available. The theatre building will be erected by Ross Lockwood, who will lease the building to the company for a term of years. It is expected the theatre will open about the first of September.

The Princess theatre, at Huntingburg, is again dark. The theatre has changed hands several times since it opened as a picture house, but has closed each time after being operated for a few months.

The Royal theatre, of Cynthiana, of which Alva Montgomery is the manager, has been wired for electricity. Mr. Montgomery has put in a four horse power oil engine and dynamo.

The Gaiety theatre, Howard and Walnut streets, Muncie, which recently opened, is one of the neatest motion picture theatres in the northern part of Indiana.

Every detail has been carefully looked after to make the place as comfortable for its patrons as possible. Everything in the theatre is new. The seats have been so arranged as to give the best possible view of the screen. The place is well ventilated and a sanitary drinking fountain has been placed near the entrance. J. B. Olmsed is proprietor and J. S. Snell is manager. Bryan Howard, a member of I. A. T. S. E., Muncie, of Local No. 292, is operator.

Manager Lindsay has installed ventilating fans in his theatres at Logansport. Two large fans have been put in the Paramount theatre. The Grand theatre, Logansport, has been equipped with a 42-inch fan, which draws the air through the building with such force that every three minutes the air of the room is changed.

Tad L. Johnson has opened the Cozy theatre at Rockville. The room has been newly papered and painted and a new motion picture machine installed. Bailey Bracken is the operator. The Empire theatre at Auburn has been repainted and presents a pleasing appearance.

Ora T. Cronk, manager and operator of the Iris theatre at Seventeenth street and Wabash avenue, recently was married to Dorothy Raidy, who has been cashier at the American theatre at Terre Haute for the last five years.

A Kirtman system of ventilation, built specially for the theatre, has been put in the Bucklen at Elkhart. The system consists of an arrangement of suction and blow fans which keep the air in continuous motion. The Strand theatre, Muncie, of which Arthur Bennet is the manager, recently opened. Mr Bennett has incorporated several devices which will add materially to the pleasure and comfort of the theatre goers. The lobby and exterior with its large central motif, where the entabular of the side bays comes up to form an arch, a feature characteristically French, is dignified yet still retins the lightness a building of this type requires. A crystal fire screen is being used. One of the finest organs in the state has been installed in the theatre.

A contract will be let soon for the erection of a motion picture theatre on the site of the Star theatre, Vincennes, and the new building, when completed, will be one of the most modern motion picture houses in that section of the state. The plans for the building were drawn by Jack Bayard, a Vincennes architect, and have been accepted.

The Bartola theatre, West State street, Hammond, of which Charles W. Van Sickle has been manager for the last two years, has been sold to William Craick, of East Chicago, who has taken charge of it.

Manager Martin, of the Lyric theatre, Richmond, has installed an electric orchestrion in his theatre. This is one of the new musical devices which is being put in many of the leading motion picture theatres in the United States.

Edward W. Pierson, an attorney, has been appointed receiver of the People's Amusement Company, owners of the Talbott theatre, Talbott avenue and Twenty-second street, and a theatre at Central avenue and Twelfth street, Indianapolis. The appointment was made by Judge John J. Rockford, of the Superior Court, Indianapolis, on the application of Daniel C. Scheible, treasurer and a stockholder of the company. The company did not contest the appointment. The receiver is to operate the shows.

The Lyric theatre, North Illinois street, Indianapolis, which has been running photoplays for several months, opened June 12 with a stock company for the summer, discontinuing the picture program.

Hornbeck Brothers, of Monon, have opened an open-air theatre on a vacant lot, between the Reeder Baker and the Hobbs garage, at Monticello, and plan to give shows every evening in the week.

C. M. Spray, of Frankfort, has bought the Lyric theatre, Covington, and has taken possession of the place. Mr. Spray is an experienced motion picture manager, having formerly had charge of a theatre at Sheridan. Mr. Spray has announced he will run five cent show three nights in the week and run feature shows the other three nights.

A new motion picture theatre recently opened at Greensburg. The Lyric theatre, Marion, which is to be completed in the early fall, has signed a contract for World Film features. The St. Joseph Valley Theatre Company, South Bend, has filed with the Secretary of State of Indiana a preliminary certificate of dissolution.

W. F. Braybrook, owner of the Lowell opera house, Lowell, is to be one of the largest investors in a $60,000 hotel, opera house and motion picture theatre to be erected at Crown Point. The property is located on Main street, nearly opposite the Commercial hotel.

Clarence Hill, formerly of Sullivan, but recently a resident of Indianapolis, has leased the Sherman theatre, Sullivan, from Mr. and Mrs. Roy Shanks, who have returned to their home at Rochester. Mr. Hill operated the machine in the first motion picture theatre opened in Sullivan.

M. M. Ocker, of Medaryville, who has been engaged in the motion picture and confectionery business there, has sold his interests and moved to Glen Mere, Mich.

O. M. Snellen, of Jefferson, Ohio, has bought the Lincoln theatre, on South Main street, near Franklin street, Elkhart. Mr. Snellen, who is an experienced motion picture theatre owner, plans to make several changes in the theatre.

The Orpheum theatre, Plymouth, under the management of L. J. Dunning, opened recently after having been closed for two weeks for repairs and improvements. The entire interior has been redecorated, the seats revarnished and a new ventilating system put in. Five large exhaust fans keep the air circulating. A new screen has been put in, which has improved the projection.

Work on remodelling the old Henry opera house, at Auburn, owned by the Court Theatre Company, will commence as soon as the post office department makes a report as to the removal of the post office to a new location. When it is known what the government decides to do, members of the club will determine on the kind of a building they will erect. The architects drawing the plans for remodeling the theatre recently went over the building and will have the plans ready within a short time. The old wooden floor in the basement of the building and the dressing rooms have been torn out and within a few days a cement floor will be laid. The furnace has been torn out and a steam heating system will be put in. The stage and interior of the building will not be changed until the plans and specifications for the remodeling are completed. Manager Thomas hopes to have the theatre remodeled in time to open early in the fall. He will go to Chicago in July to attend the national exhibitors convention and make arrangements for a program of pictures. The lot where the new building will be erected is owned by James Lewis, of Bridgeport. Theodore Charles, owner of the Star theatre, has a long lease on the location, and will operate the new theatre when it is completed. The new building will be a two-story structure, and will be built of brick and concrete. It will have a frontage on North Fourth street of 60 feet and a depth on Busseron street of 70 feet. The front of the building will be of Castle design, with separate entrances for colored patrons of the theatre. There will also be a separate ticket office for the colored people and special exists and balcony.

Letters Patent No. 890,101 were granted June 9, 1908, to the Simpson Solar Screen Company, covering the manufacture of all screens made with a metallic surface. In the process of manufacturing Minusa Gold Fibre Screens we discovered that we were unconsciously infringing upon these patents.

To make a long story short—as a result of the suit instituted against us by the Simpson people, we wish to announce the purchase and complete ownership of the Simpson Solar Screen Company, its patents and property. We will hereafter manufacture and offer to the trade the Simpson Solar Screen in addition to our regular line.

This means that all former and future purchasers of Minusa Screens will be afforded protection from any litigation or prosecution arising from infringements on this patent.

Exhibitors!

Special juvenile performances at the regular motion picture theatres received more attention at the recent Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in New York City than any other one topic.

The club women are right up on their toes and they are going to be mighty active from now on!

You are going to hear from them. They are coming to you to ask you to work with them in providing what they want, and we have tried to show them the reasonable way to approach you.

To do this, the Motion Picture News prepared a pamphlet called the Juvenile Motion Picture News for distribution at the Convention. Thousands of copies are already in the hands of the club women. There are a few left. Every wide-awake exhibitor should have a copy. So long as they last you may have one.

The pamphlet tells of the co-operation necessary between the local exhibitor and the women's club, and just remember that there are 9,000 of these clubs including 2,500,000 women in their membership.

The main feature, however, is the list of films adapted to juvenile programs, with the name of the producer and of the exchange.

Better write to-day for a copy, if you want to be sure of getting one.

EXHIBITOR'S SERVICE DEPARTMENT

IOWA

The Allerton theatre, Independence, has been sold to Mr. Clatt. The Baker-Dodge Theatre Co., Keokuk, will shortly erect a new and up to date motion picture theatre on the site of 505 and 507 Main St.

ILLINOIS

R. T. Race is to erect a store, office, theatre, and apartment building at the southwest corner of Irving Park boulevard and Crawford Avenue, Chicago, to cost about $325,000. It is to contain twelve stores, eight offices, and thirty-eight one room apartments. It will be of fireproof construction.

Bids are being received for the erection of a theatre to seat 500 persons in the one hundred block on North Monroe street, Clinton. Manager Sudduth, proprietor of the "K" theatre expects to build a $15,000 structure to accomodate the business, the second floor to contain two suites of rooms, all modern, for tenant purposes. The building will be completely finished by the first of November.

LOUISIANA

The Ideal theatre, Dryades and Cadiz streets, New Orleans, formerly under the management of Mrs. Anderson, and closed for two months, probably will be remodelled by Messrs. Jacobs, Landry and Marks.

MAINE

The Maine Amusement Co. of Rockland have purchased the Star Theatre, Portland. George Thompson of Augusta is to be the manager of the Belfast Opera house which has been leased by William B. Williamson of that city. Mr. Thompson has been manager of the Colonial in Augusta, one of the houses operated by Mr. Williamson. The house is to be thoroughly renovated and will be opened about July 1.

MARYLAND

Eugene M. Daly, formerly with the Lyman Howe organization has been made resident manager of the Strand Theatre, North Howard street, Baltimore. Harry Woods of Lowe's Hippodrome is the new general manager of the Strand, but Mr. Daly will have charge of the bookings and all house matters. Mr. Daly is a Baltimorean but for the past five or six years has been touring the country with the Howe pictures.

On June 5 the active management of the New Pickwick theatre, Baltimore, was taken over by G. Horton Gaffney, while Edwin Powell, the former manager, left Baltimore for New York. Mr. Gaffney purchased the theatre recently from J. Howard Bennett. The purchase of the New Pickwick was recently consummated through the Commercial Exchange. Mrs. W. B. Bamburger, president of the Exchange, declined to give the purchasing price, but intimated that the deal represented an amount around five figures. Mr. Gaffney is contemplating a number of improvements during the summer. The rearranged program will probably be put in operation within the next few weeks. Mr. Powell will go to New York and take up his profession as constructing engineer.

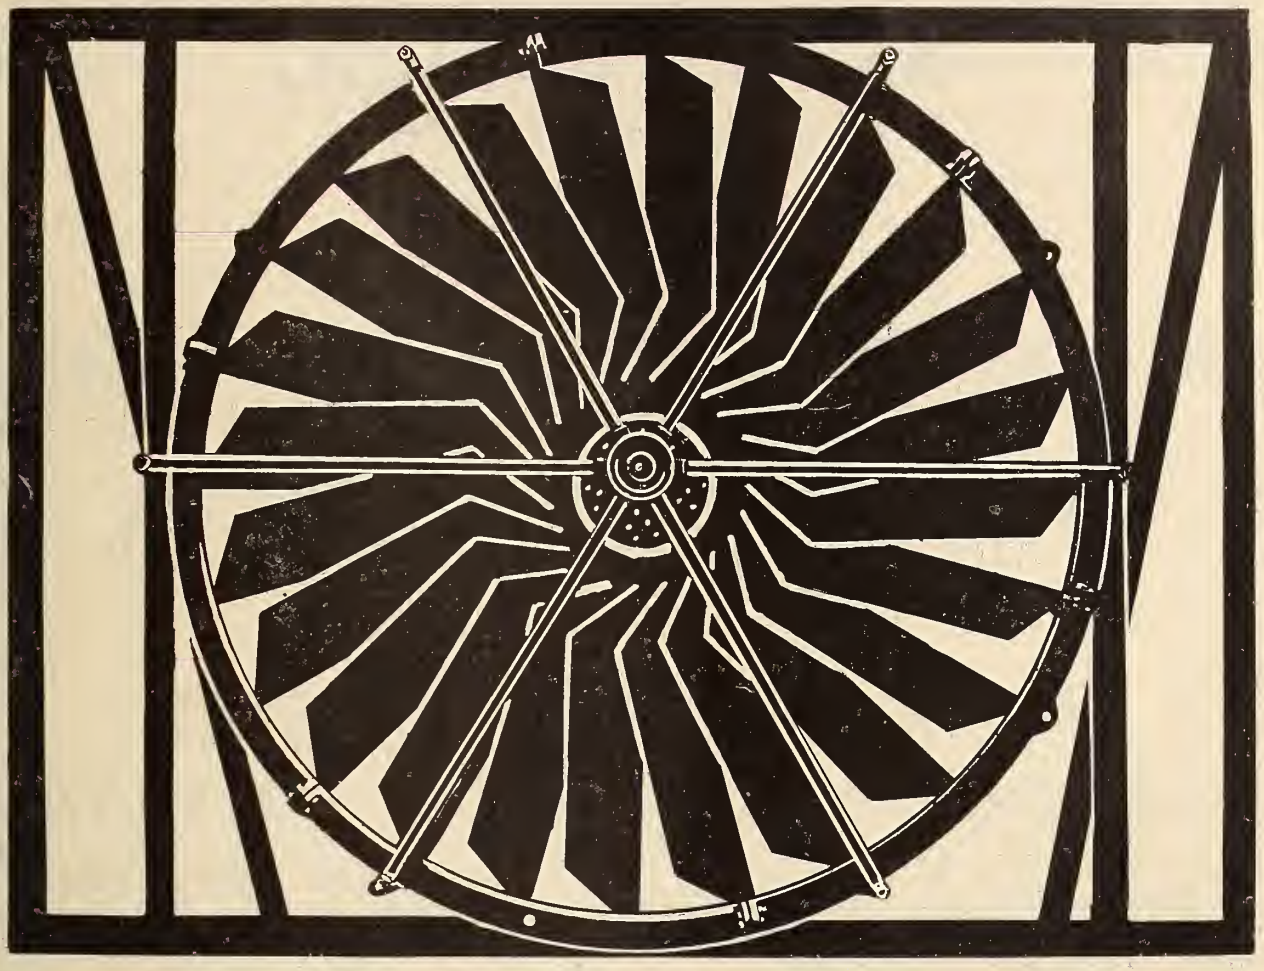
MISSOURI

F. R. Young, of Brookfield, having a metal covered building, 41 x 100 feet, located in Perryville, desired to sell it, and has adopted a very novel plan. The following is a part of his advertisement which will tell the entire story: "Perryville is now ripe for an open-air summer garden and motion picture show. Who will furnish machine and equipment against building. Here is a fine opportunity. Start an air-dome. Run every day, out of rain and storm dangers." The last report from Perryville does not indicate that the building has as yet been sold, but with such suggestive advertising as this, it should not remain idle very long.

Another suburban picture house has been opened in Kansas City. The Strand theatre, Thirty-sixth and Troost avenue, showed its first picture on Saturday, June 24. E. A. Finch, manager, is installing a concert grand piano —the largest in the city. The theatre also has music from the Orpheum Circuit. Nestor R. Chittohini is the leader and has charge of a five-piece orchestra.

Mr. Lewis, of this city, who owns the large picture house of Independence has recently started work on a new Airdome. The house has just booked a full program of features supplied by the United Feature Service, of Kansas City, Missouri.

Cameron is to have a real opera house. A. E. Jarboe, who owns and operates a string of theatres, has contracted for a modern building which will be ready for opening in the fall.



The Diamond Picture Show, Paris, was formally opened to the public on June 8. The place has been remodeled from one end to the other and Manager Sebastian now has one of the finest little picture houses found in that section of the state.

All necessary requirements have been met and preliminary plans laid for the construction of a new theatre in Springfield. S. E. Wilhoit has announced that he will erect another house there. It is probable that motion pictures will be carried, but if so they will be of travel and educational subjects. T. C. Lash and E. R. Lash, owners of the Lyric theatre, Charleston, have purchased from O. W. Joslyn, trustee for the American Photo Play Theatres Company, the American picture theatre here and will operate it in conjunction with the Lyric. Feature pictures only will be run, contracts already having been signed with the Mutual, Paramount and Triangle.

The motion picture theatre in Delmar Garden, a popular summer amusement park in St. Louis, has become one of the favorite attractions at the garden. The management of the resort nicludes admission to the theatre with the entrance fee. Many high-class features have been bookd for the motion picture theatre, and there is no other show in the garden, as in past seasons.

Hector Pasmezoglu, proprietor of the Congress theatre, Olive at Sarah street, St. Louis, is giving a four page program containing the bill for an entire week at a time, with cuts of the stars in the features he is using. The advertising of the features fills three pages, and a question and answer column, concerning plays and players, occupies the fourth page.

NORTH END AMUSEMENT COMPANY

Evansville, Ind., June 22, 1916.
Mutual Film Corporation,
Indianapolis, Ind.
Gentlemen:

At the time of the showing of the first three chapters of "The Secret of the Submarine to the local exhibitors, I remarked that it undoubtedly would prove a winner. A look at our box office statements for the four Tuesdays we have run this serial will prove that I was not mistaken; in fact, I have been very agreeably surprised at the returns the serial is showing and every indication points to it proving one of the best paying as well as most interesting of the many serial subjects we have run.

In conclusion, I wish to add that no exhibitor will make a mistake by booking this wonderful subject as it is of timely interest, splendidly cast, replete with strong dramatic climaxes and, in short, everything that a serial subject should be.

Wishing you every success with "The Secret of the Submarine," I beg to remain.

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) CHAS. SWEETON

Far Superior to Anything Ever Booked!

Omaha, Neb., June 11, 1916.
Mutual Film Corporation,
Omaha, Neb.
Dear Friends:

I am now running "The Secret of the Submarine" picture with greater success than I dared anticipate and causing more comment than any serial I have ever had the pleasure of running.

Taking it from a photoplay standpoint, it is far superior to anything I have ever booked. Adding the educational factor, it is way beyond anything on the market. The teachers, principals and scholars of the schools and high school have taken hold of it as it enlightens the pupils to the inner workings of one of the great wonders of our age, "The Submarine," and I anticipate, with their co-operation, that it will be a record-breaker from a box-office viewpoint.

I thank you for your co-operation in working up the public interest, through newspaper publicity, etc., and beg to remain, Yours respectfully
(Signed) HARRY V. SIDE.

Dear Sir:

In reply to yours of the eleventh in regards to "The Secret of the Submarine" serial, I find it is a great drawing card—not only the children, but older people as well, are taking a wonderful interest in it—personally I have not had a chance to watch a number through.

As to my advertising, all I did was to use a slide in advance and some one-sheets.

Yours very truly,
MRS. NICHOLAS AMAS.

CONFIDENCE—

THE V-L-S-E believes in the superiority of its pictures.

It proves this by permitting its exhibitors to select those which suit them best. Only features of high general average could stand such a test.

Exhibitors believe in the superiority of V-L-S-E pictures.

They have proven this by giving to V-L-S-E an avalanche of business without being forced by contracts or deposits to "stick" to it.

The public believes in the superiority of V-L-S-E pictures.

It has proven this by the "extra" support it gives exhibitors on "Big Four" nights.

The exhibitor who believes that "confidence" is the greatest asset which any business organization can possess, would do well to give these facts the consideration which they deserve.

"'Live and Let Live' Policy of V. L. S. E., Boon to all Exhibitors," Says Big Western Manager

O'Klare Theatre

EAU CLAIRE, WISCONSIN

HOME OF GOOD PICTURES, SANITATION AND PURE AIR

HOUSE OF ALL FEATURES AND STRONGEST ATTRACTIONS

V. L. S. E. Inc.,
1600 Broadway,
New York.

Gentlemen:

Having been one of the BIG FOUR FAMILY for a period covering more than six months, I feel it my duty, in behalf of the O'Klare Theatre to express to you what we think of V-L-S-E service.

I can frankly say that I do not know of any film service in existence that is better equipped to meet the demands of the Twentieth Century "up-to-the-minute-exhibitor" in every way, shape and manner than you people are.

First: Your policy of making a distinction in price of your features; namely, classing them in "A" "B" and "C" order, grading the rentals accordingly, has not only appealed to me as one of the greatest assets for the exhibitor, but I believe I share the unbiased and unanimous opinion of all exhibitors who are using your wonderful service.

Second: Your idea of making larger features; i. e., eight, nine and ten reels for special service, and selling same according to their box office value, will prove one of the greatest stimulants that has ever been accorded any exhibitor, providing said exhibitor has awakened to this fact, and understands how to properly conduct and run large special features.

Third: The ever courteous treatment we have received from you, demonstrates that you do business on the square You have not taken issue each time some opposition house has offered you more for your service and made life miserable for your present customer; but that on the contrary you stick to your customers and allow them to breathe and live with you.

This is one point upon which I cannot give the BIG FOUR FILM CORPORATION too much credit and I believe thousands of exhibitors in different parts of the country have met with these same conditions and if they are looking for HIGH GRADE FEATURES, SQUARE TREATMENT, together with "LIVE AND LET LIVE" PRICES, they can surely find relief by joining your FAMILY.

With best wishes for your continued success, I beg to remain

Very truly,

Which woman does he sacrifice?

MARY ANDERSON
Featured in "Waters of Lethe"

After Alan Moore was divorced, he married again, but he could not forget the woman he had lost. The lady that was born from his second marriage seemed only to deepen the love he bore his first wife. If only she had been the mother of the child! Memories of her obsess him completely and he neglects the girl to whom he is now wed for the idol of his dreams.

Then one day she comes back to him—the woman he has lost—claiming him by all the strength of their love.

One woman must be sacrificed. Is it the first wife—or the second?

Your audiences will be spellbound as this question comes to them in

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS
in "Flirting With Fate"

Again TRIANGLE exhibitors are offered the opportunity of presenting to their patrons that irresistible star, Douglas Fairbanks. For the week of July 9th one of the releases will be "Flirting with Fate," with Douglas Fairbanks as the star. Here he again repeats the success he attained in his previous TRIANGLE PLAYS—"The Habit of Happiness," "His Picture in the Papers," and "Reggie Mixes In."

When this picture was shown at the Rialto Theatre in New York recently New York critics declared it to be one of the best in which Fairbanks has ever appeared.

The popularity of Fairbanks is unquestioned. Many exhibitors have proved that the prominent display of Fairbanks' name will do more to increase box office receipts than almost any other one thing.

That irresistible "pep" and personality of the star, so long famous on Broadway, is intensified on the screen. So vivid are his pictures that you feel you are right on the screen with Fairbanks during every moment of quick action.

TRIANGLE

"Flirting With Fate" is far different from any other play in which Fairbanks has ever appeared.

Disheartened and discouraged because the girl he wanted to marry found him practising proposing on another girl and in pique became engaged to another man, he decided life wasn't worth while and hired a professional assassin to end his life.

But when the girl changed her mind Fairbanks discovered that he didn't want to die, but then unaware of the disguise his assassin would adopt he was unable to locate him. His adoption of a disguise of his own, and his flight from all apparent danger will keep your audience laughing for a solid 100 minutes.

Pictures in which Douglas Fairbanks appears are released only by the Triangle Film Corporation. If you are an exhibitor and have not received information regarding the cost of their presentation at your theatre why not use the attached coupon for information. There will be no obligation on your part and it is just possible that it will show a way to secure increased profits. Suppose you mail in the coupon today.

HOW BRITAIN

A Drama of Fact More Thrilling Than Fiction!

BECAUSE OF THE PRESENT CRISIS IN OUR INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS, AND THE CONSEQUENT UNIVERSAL INTEREST IN THE PROBLEM OF AMERICAN PREPAREDNESS, IT HAS BEEN DETERMINED TO PLACE

"HOW BRITAIN PREPARED"

ON EXHIBITION THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY AT THE EARLIEST POSSIBLE MOMENT. TO THIS END, OFFERS FOR THE RIGHTS TO THE VARIOUS TERRITORIES ARE SOLICITED. ALL COMMUNICATIONS WILL RECEIVE PROMPT ATTENTION, BUT IT IS ADVISED THAT BIDS BE TELEGRAPHED.

Following are the comments of the daily newspapers where the picture has been shown, and the criticism of the trade press

New York "Times".....Absorbing—Graphic.
Chicago "Examiner".....What the American Public wants. No red corpuscled American should miss it.
Boston "Transcript".....Vivid—Gripping—Stupendous.
Washington "Times" (Editorial) Entitled to live as long as a film may be preserved.
Providence "Journal".....Exceedingly interesting—aroused much enthusiasm.

Motion Picture News.....Stands out—excellent entertainment.
Moving Picture World.....Excellent.
Exhibitors Herald.....Magnificant—will be tremendous success.
Telegraph.....Could scarcely be surpassed.

"HOW BRITAIN PREPARED" is now being shown in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Providence, Washington, Memphis, and other important cities in the East. It may be profitable for you to see it.

PREPARED

A Motion Picture Warning To America!

"HOW BRITAIN PREPARED" has aptly been called " at once a motion picture message and a warning to America." It is the official record of the activities of the British army and navy, produced under the direction of Mr. Charles Urban, by the authority of the English War Cabinet.

It shows how Lord Kitchener transformed a body of over 5,000,000 civilians into an efficient, well-trained army, and the Great North Sea Fleet on guard and in action, under Admiral Jellicoe. Interposed in the picture are scenes of pathos, comedy, and human interest. The production not only teaches an invaluable national lesson; it is wonderfully entertaining.

The peculiarly analogous position which this country bears to the England before the war, and the nation-wide demand for adequate preparedness (endorsed by both of the great political parties) makes "HOW BRITAIN PREPARED" the strongest box-office attraction ever offered on the state-rights basis.

It is most timely. The newspaper in your town that has been urging preparedness for the past year, has unconsciously been building up a publicity campaign for the production. Editors throughout the country have been more than pleased to give space to "HOW BRITAIN PREPARED"; one said: "the picture is doing a splendid national service in showing the country the dangers of unpreparedness."

The picture has all the elements necessary to the greatest success—entertainment, timeliness, and extraordinary publicity value. Its extended run at the Lyceum Theater, in New York, and its simultaneous engagements at the leading theaters in the more important cities of the East are sufficient guarantees of the value of this attraction.

We advise that you wire your bid for your territory, or request for booking, immediately, to

2 PART DRAMA

Full of thrills and intense situations — no padding.

A vivid history of the deeds of bravery of the American nation in three wars. Realistic in its truth and portrayal of the horrors of war, this film expresses the spirit of patriotism that has set the country aflame to-day. It revives the Revolutionary War with the War of the Rebellion in splendrous fashion and furnishes, in the third war, a sensational departure from pictures of battle. Without doubt, this film runs the gamut of human emotions in an unparelleled manner.

What Will the Chicago Convention Do?

AT the Ochs dinner the other evening one of the speakers, William A. Brady, sounded a note of warning in connection with the proposed new trade organization.

He said that if cliques were formed, if politics entered the ranks in any way at all the usefulness and strength of the organization would be lessened in an exact proportion—if indeed the organization did not actually dissolve.

SPEAKING as he does from many years' experience with an older amusement business his words have a solid, practical value. We would be short-sighted indeed, in organizing a motion picture association if we did not take guidance from an entirely similar and older industry.

Those who are diligently and painstakingly laying the foundations of the new trade association are keenly aware of the danger of politics. They are proceeding upon the assumption that the entrance of politics will automatically destroy any industrial association, and they are trying hard to close every possible door in advance.

I AM citing Mr. Brady's warning only in connection with the order of events about to take place at the Chicago Convention of exhibitors.

We had a convention in New York in 1913 which was dominated by politics with the result, in brief, that when Fred J. Herrington was made President of the League in 1915 he had to look about and collect the remnants.

Politics were played at this 1913 convention and at Dayton in 1914 which would do credit to a game holding forth a much greater candle than the League and its officers then offered. Probably those concerned had in mind the future possibilities of such an organization; and we well know that a strong and complete organization of exhibitors has possibilities for its members and the whole industry which are great and untold.

THE same ability and energy still exist within the ranks of the League. We assume that at Chicago these qualities will be engaged in constructive work only.

We believe they will be.

There's going to be a vigorous convention at Chicago; and there will be a lively election.

But knowing the candidates as we do, we believe that each is content to let the winner win and then swing in behind him with genuinely sincere assistance.

EACH candidate is out on a platform of construction. Each is an organization man. They all put organization first and offices afterwards. This, in fact, is obvious since each one of them well knows that the office of President in itself gives no adequate return whatever in the way of honor or material rewards. It is a stiff and thankless job.

So we believe that the Chicago Convention will be primarily an organization convention, one that will lay well the groundwork of the greater exhibitors league and indicate just how the exhibitor organization may also lend its strength to and reap all the benefits of a national alliance of the industry—one that can go far to settle, amicably and with profit to all, all internal disturbances and present the solid united front without which we cannot make successful progress.

THE past offers a grave lesson in league politics. Politics disrupted the exhibitor ranks. But worse than that they actually instituted state censorship in Ohio. Let us not forget this glaring fact. It is a question whether we should have state censorship at all to-day, facing us in four states and menacing the industry in many more, had Ohio not shown the way.

AND Ohio would not have started this menace had we had a national league free from politics and personal domination and able enough to have killed the censorship movement through organization, strength and intelligence.

It is strange to think that the thing we are now forming organizations to kill, was actually instituted through an organization. It was, but only through organization politics, the kind that favor the individual at the expense of the organization.

THERE is just one more thought in closing—a very important one, however—and I emphasize it here before the convention opens.

The Exhibitors' League wants and needs the membership of the prominent exhibitor, the man of influence and large holdings—I could mention two score of names—who has never taken the active interest he should in league organization.

If the exhibitors at Chicago indicate not only their desire and ability to build up a strong, influential league but also their intention to become a part of a national trade alliance or federation which will join together all branches of the industry and which will develop each branch distinctly while making each a factor of a powerful whole these exhibitors will enter the National League.

They will have to enter; they cannot afford to stay out of a national comprehensive association and they can only enter the body through the National Exhibitors' League.

It behooves every League member to think clearly about these matters before and at the Chicago Convention.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

Where Should the Headquarters Be?

"IT seems to me," writes William Brandt, secretary of the Brooklyn Exhibitors' Association, "that one of the most important questions for the consideration of the delegates about to assemble in Chicago, is the establishment of permanent headquarters to conduct the business end of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

"In the past it has been the custom to maintain the executive offices in the city from which the president was elected, so that one year they were in Cleveland and the next in Pittsburgh, etc., with the result every year there were complete changes according to the whim of the incoming administration, which entirely upset the regular order of business.

"I URGE the establishment of permanent headquarters in the City of New York as the executive offices with a paid secretary who shall give his exclusive services to the organization, a man who is trained in such work. I urge New York because it is the film mecca of the world. Practically every exchange has its principal offices in the metropolis and fully 95 per cent. of the producers, even those manufacturing in the West or in Florida have their offices so located. It would be the work of a moment for those in charge of the exhibitors' affairs to adjust any difference which may arise between exhibitor, exchange and manufacturer. With that office moving year after year, however, and located away from the center of things it is readily apparent how negligent the work of the presiding officer may become however sincere he may be.

"The executive secretary should be under the jurisdiction of the national executive committee, and by them held responsible for his acts.

"Every large organization in the country have their permanent headquarters in New York, to wit, The Brewers' Association, the Hardware Association, Piano Dealers, Stationers and many others.

"I believe a move of this kind would be consistent with the policy of better business practice which all exhibitors' locals are endeavoring to install."

MR. BRANDT'S observation is so timely that it should be made part of the regular business of the convention. There is every reason for discontinuing the antiquated practice of making the "capital," so to speak, of the exhibitors' league the home city of the national president. As well have designated Oyster Bay the capital of the United States when Roosevelt was president, or Princeton, N. J., during the last administration.

New York is undoubtedly a strategic point at which to locate National exhibitors' headquarters. Chicago is another. No city in the United States, besides these two, offers the advantages to be found in either one.

Temporarily Discontinued

OWING to war conditions abroad the British Edition of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be temporarily discontinued. Plans are already under way to reissue the publication under a new and improved editorial form as soon as conditions within the trade in London warrant it.

In the meantime the British circulation of the regular American edition of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be considerably extended to cover completely the British market.

We take this occasion to thank a very large number of British exhibitors who have evidenced their warm interest in our British edition and also the American manufacturers who have extended their support; and we invite their continued interest over the gap which precedes the reissue—a gap which we trust will be short.

What the Merger Signifies

THE merger into a single corporation, as announced this week, of two of the oldest and best feature producers, is a matter of considerable consequence and significance. As an instance of business organization along more economic lines it may mark the beginning of a new and more healthy era in this country. It ought to and undoubtedly will accomplish two extremely important results: First, the advancement of the art of the photoplay and secondly, the curtailment of needless waste in the production of pictures. If these results are secured this merger will mark an important milestone in the history of the motion picture.

July 10-July 18 Is Right

A MISUNDERSTANDING seems to exist throughout the trade as to the exact dates of the Chicago Convention and Exposition. The dates of July 10 to 18, and July 12 to 18 have both been referred to. We are informed from Chicago that the Exhibitors' Convention will be held from July 10 to 18. The Exposition in the Coliseum will open on July 12 and continue until July 18, inclusive.

Mass Meeting Held to Promote Convention Co-operation

Chicago Exhibitors Gather in Colonial Theatre, Wednesday, June 28, to Perfect Plans and Arouse Enthusiasm for the National Event in the Coliseum—Crowd Between Six and Seven Hundred in Attendance—Alfred Hamburger Presides Over the Meet—Judge Cooper Tells Exhibitors to Show Greater Independence on Censorship

Chicago, July 1.

ONE of the most important meetings ever held by Chicago exhibitors was the mass meeting staged in the Colonial theatre, Wednesday morning, June 28. The object of the gathering was to promote co-operation, to perfect plans and arouse enthusiasm for the big convention in the Coliseum, July 12 to 18.

Hundreds of exhibitors, together with exchangemen, trade paper representatives, and others connected with the industry, totaled a crowd between six and seven hundred.

Alfred Hamburger, owner of the theatre chain that bears his name, presided over the meeting and talked briefly on the benefits of co-operation. With him on the stage, among others, were Aaron Jones, Peter Schaefer, John D. Shoop, Judge William Fennimore Cooper, Joseph Friedman, Jack Miller and I. Van Ronkle.

John D. Shoop, superintendent of Chicago schools, outlined the progress that pictures have made. He was heartily cheered when he referred to the exhibitors as educators, and when he expressed his appreciation of the theatre manager's value to the community.

Aaron Jones, of the Jones, Linick and Shaefer circuit, urged that all minor consideration be disregarded, and that only plans for the convention be discussed. Mr. Jones said that Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players Company, had promised him that Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick and Hazel Dawn would come to Chicago to take part in the convention. J. Louis Selznick also has promised Mr. Jones that Clara Kimball Young will be here for the occasion. "Their entertainment," Mr. Jones said, "will be by contribution toward the success of the Convention."

Jack Miller, president of the local Moving Picture Operators Union, was the next speaker, and since he is also an exhibitor, was able to speak from both angles, and to give a very pertinent talk on the financial end of the business.

Judge Cooper Speaks Against Censorship

Judge Cooper, whose decision handed down from the bench made the Chicago showing of "The Birth of a Nation" possible, discussed censorship, and pleaded that the exhibitors show great independence. The power of the picture house to influence public opinion in civic questions and as a medium for promoting or recalling political candidates was also mentioned by the judge. He suggested as a fitting emblem for the industry the old flag picturing a snake, with the caption below, "If you touch me I will bite."

Joseph Friedman of the Celebrated Players exchange, read a speech presenting the exchangemen's views.

The meeting was scheduled for ten o'clock, but there were so many things of interest to be discussed that the gathering did not break up until long after noon. Those who attended were filled with a spirit of co-operation, and the effect is visible in the increased enthusiasm being shown in boosting the big show.

As the opening day draws nearer, one is confronted everywhere with posters net hangings, ad signs advertising the huge film event. Every theatre in Chicago is flashing on its screen a specially prepared slide announcing the convention. Next week these theatres will run at every performance, one hundred feet of film showing the stars who will attend the show, with subtitles urging the patrons to see these luminaries in the flesh. Besides the favorites already mentioned, Alice Brady, Theda Bara, Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo, Dolores Cassinelli, Bryant Washburn, Marguerite Clayton, Richard Travers, Ernest Maupain, and hosts of others will be on hand to greet their admirers.

Transferring Coliseum into Artificial Garden

The Coliseum is already being transformed into a beautiful artificial garden. Several well-known illumination experts are collaborating on some original lighting effects. The advance guard of the various companies that are to maintain booths is beginning to arrive and arrange for the elaborate exhibits.

In the Coliseum Annex, there will be a model picture studio in which popular players can be seen in actual studio routine. As soon as pictures are taken in this plant, they will be immediately developed, printed, and shown in the 500 seat theatre especially arranged for this purpose. In this theatre will be demonstrated the best projection, seating, music and screen equipment.

A daily news film of the doings of convention delegates and visitors will also form a part of this theatre's program.

The Coliseum Annex also boasts one of the best dancing floors in the country, and continuous music will be furnished for the ball-room experts.

The Reel Fellows Club of Chicago will maintain its reputation for being one of the livest film societies in the world. This club has already sent out 200 invitations to leading screen clubs and exchanges, asking that the representatives of these organizations be the guests of the Reel Fellows while in Chicago. Delegates will be received at the club headquarters on the "B" floor of the Morrison Hotel, and upon presentation of credentials will be given cards entitling them to all member's privileges for two weeks.

The Reel Fellows have arranged for continuous day and night tallyho service between the Morrison and the Coliseum. At the convention the Reel Fellows will maintain a comfortable booth and the prettiest amanuensis in Chicago will give free stenographic service. The club is also planning to hold either a ball or a banquet during convention week.

"Alice Brady Day"

World Film and Brady-made subjects will be well represented at the convention and exposition at Chicago, in July. July 17 has been set aside by the committee as "Alice Brady Day" and under the auspices of one of the leading Chicago daily papers, Miss Brady will conduct a series of talks and lectures to aspirants for screen honors. The lectures and interviews are to be conducted at the Blackstone Hotel, from ten to noon each day, and for the benefit of working girls who cannot get around at that time, a half hour will be set aside at night at the World booth.

The Reel Fellows Club will hold a formal ball, at which Miss Brady will be the guest of honor and a number of exhibitors acquainted with her by reason of their having played her pictures for the past two years, will tender her a luncheon on Thursday of convention week.

The Wisconsin Exhibitors League will tender her a banquet at the Wisconsin Hotel on July 14, at which time she will make a visit to that city and attend every important theatre in the city.

Harry L. Reichenbach, head of World's exploitation department, will have charge of the campaign at Chicago and will have the entire Chicago branch office associated with him.

Miss Brady will arrive in Chicago July 9 via. Pennsylvania on a special decorated car.

S. L. Rothapfel of the Rialto theatre, New York City, and Charles Steiner complete the list of the exhibitors from New York State.

GAUMONT KARTOONS ARE POPULAR IS VERDICT OF MUTUAL EXCHANGE MANAGERS

Branch managers of the Mutal Film Corporation were recently asked to furnish the Gaumont Company with the opinions of exhibitors in their territory upon the Kartoon Komics which emanate from the Gaumont Laboratories, the work of Harry Palmer. The replies were most gratifying. It was found that Mr. Palmer was a great favorite through his work upon the screen. The inquiries were sent to determine what exhibitors believed most interesting, cartoon series or comments upon current events. The replies were by no means unanimous, confirming the Gaumont Company in its previous opinion that both should be continued.

Comments of some of the cities showed, however, that the appeal of animated cartoons was genuine and continuous. In speaking of the Gaumont offerings, Chicago wrote, "Popular and booking solid." From other cities, the Mutual has culled these pointed comments: Denver, "Very popular"; Columbus, O., "Keep up the good work"; Milwaukee, "Serves purpose very fine"; Salt Lake City, "People clamoring for more"; and Minneapolis, "Generally liked."

"WANTED, A HOME," AN EARLY RELEASE FROM BLUEBIRD

"Wanted, a Home," produced by Phillips Smalley, will be among the early releases on the Bluebird program; "Little Eva Edgarton," taken from a popular novel of the same title, will be another, and Mendelssohn's "Spring Song," artistically appropriated to screen exploitation, will be a third of the mid-summer attractions. Other plays to come include "The Girl of the Lost Lake," "By Fate's Decree" and "Saving the Family Name"—although there may be changed titles in some of these instances.

In two of these pieces Mary MacLaren will have prominent roles, to follow up her appearance in "Shoes," the sociological production, made by Lois Weber, that is just now attracting attention. Ruth Stonehouse will be introduced to Bluebird patrons as the leading player in "Spring Song"; Myrtle Gonzalez and Val Paul will be seen in "The Girl of the Lost Lake," and Herbert Rawlinson and Ella Hall have been cast as leading man and leading woman in the screen version of "Little Eva Edgarton."

MME. WALSKA, OPERA SINGER, IS METRO PLAYER

Mme. Ganna Walska, the Polish Grand Opera singer, who recently lost her singing voice, has arranged to appear in motion pictures while she is undergoing treatment with a throat specialist. Immediately upon presenting herself at the Metro-Rolfe studio, Director William Nigh, when engaging players, arranged for her to appear in his company. Irene Fenwick, who was last seen on Broadway in the successful play, "The Co-respondent," is the star in the new Nigh picture in which Mme. Walska will make her screen debut. It is as yet unnamed.

Ochs, New York League President, Dined by Host of Friends

Exhibitors, Exchange Managers, Producers and Prominent Executives Sit Down to Beefsteak Dinner at Reisenweber's Casino, Brighton Beach

Dinner Given to Lee A. Ochs, President of the N. Y. Exhibitors League, at Brighton Beach, N. Y., June 28

LEE A. Ochs, president of the M. P. E. L. of New York State and candidate for president of the M. P. E. L. of America, was tendered a beefsteak dinner at Reisenweber's Casino, Brighton Beach, on June 28 by some two hundred of his friends, including exhibitors, exchange managers, producers and prominent executives.

The utmost cordiality and good fellowship prevailed. Judging from the enthusiasm shown by the large number of exhibitors present the New York delegation will "whoop it up" at Chicago for Lee A. Ochs.

The speeches were inteerspersed with entertainment numbers including the "Splash Me" review of 1916 from the Hotel Shelbourne and some other presentations of a lively, not to say daring character.

Toastmaster J. Robert Rubin introduced the following speakers: W. W. Irwin, William A. Brady, W. Stephen Bush, Arthur James and William A. Johnston. All of the speakers dwelt upon the importance of the Chicago convention and urged the matter of cooperation between the exhibitor and other branches of the industry, emphasizing however the importance of exhibitor organization in itself.

Mr. Irwin reviewed briefly the plans and progress of the new trade organization, the sub-committee on which has been very actively at work the past few weeks. He pointed out the fact that the exhibitor is a vital element in a national organization and that after studying the plans very carefully he should either endorse them or some similar plans. "The producer and exhibitor," said Mr. Irwin, "are of equal importance in this industry and a systematic organization embracing conferences these two important branches must be arranged and maintained for the sake of the whole industry."

Mr. Brady also dwelt upon organization. He recited the experience of the theatrical business which for twenty-five years had lacked organization and suffered greatly therefrom. There was every argument in the world, said he, for organization and nothing that one could say against it. It was necessary for the universal good of every business. He sounded an emphatic warning against politics and the formation of cliques. "If that happened," said he, "it would automatically dissolve the best trade organization." Mr. Brady closed his remarks with a ringing warning to the exhibitor against the special producer and the boosting of star's salaries. He spoke warmly in favor of the regular program.

Very handsome presents were made to Lee A. Ochs, Sam Trigger, I. N. Harstall, and Ben Titel, the presentations being made by Toastmaster Rubin.

Among those present were:

Lee A. Ochs, I. N. Hartstall, L. J. Selznick, J. Sampliner, J. Coleman, M. H. Hoffman, Joe Brandt, Mr. Bamberger, W. W. Irwin, Sam Spedon, Morris Needle, Charles Haring, Al. Jutkowitz, F. Famous Players and Lasky in $12,500,000 Combine

Concern Will Be Known as the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation—Adolph Zukor Is President; Jesse L. Lasky, Vice-President; Samuel Goldfish, Chairman of the Board of Directors; Arthur S. Friend, Treasurer, and Directors Are Cecil B. de Mille and Daniel Frohman

Jesse L. Lasky Samuel Goldfish Adolph Zukor Cecil B. DeMille Daniel Frohman

THE greatest merger of producing interest in the history of the motion picture industry was consummated on Wednesday, June 27, when the Famous Players Film Company and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company formed a $12,500,000 producing combination to be known as the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. By this act the resources of these two great producing concerns are united under one administration and will be employed in the production of photoplays to be released on the Paramount Program as well as the presentation of special features of greater magnitude.

The officers of the new corporation are Adolph Zukor, president; Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president; Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the board of directors; Arthur S. Friend, treasurer, and Elek J. Ludvigh, secretary. The directors are, in addition to the officers named, Cecil B. de Mille, William C. Demorest, Daniel Frohman, Albert A. Kaufman, Frederick G. Lee and Emil E. Shauer.

All the directors are well known in the film industry and have been identified with either of the two companies with the exception of Messrs. Lee and Demorest. Mr. Lee is president of the Broadway Trust Company and Mr. Demorest is president of the Realty Trust Company. The officers of the corporation emphasize the fact, however, that despite these affiliations, none of the capital stock will be offered to the public.

Will Release Through Paramount

The consolidation of these two oldest feature film producing companies definitely settles the various rumors with which they have been connected during the past few months, tending to indicate other affiliations. It is authoritatively stated that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will distribute its productions, as the two companies previously have done, through the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

The statement issued by the officers is as follows:

"The essential purpose of the consolidation is to meet present conditions in the industry and anticipate the demand for better and more artistic productions. The consolidation will make it possible to utilize to the best advantage, the producing facilities and equipment of the Famous Players studios in New York and the Lasky studios in Hollywood, California, and therefore offers a vastly increased efficiency over the former conditions. We will thus be enabled to obtain any atmosphere needed for our subjects, however widely separated the geographical requirements may be.

"These two companies were the first to present stage stars and plays in motion pictures, having introduced this policy four years ago, when they effected affiliations with David Belasco, Daniel and Charles Frohman and Henry W. Savage for the exclusive rights to produce on the screen the plays controlled by these legitimate managers."

The Famous Players Film Company has released forty-eight productions a year and the Lasky thirty-six, making a total of eighty-four feature photoplays a year for the new corporation in additon to the special productions already referred to.

This consolidation brings under the one banner of the new corporation a noteworthy aggregation of stage and screen stars, among whom are Mary Pickford, Geraldine Farrar, Marguerite Clark, Marie Doro, Pauline Frederick, Blanche Sweet, Hazel Dawn, Lou-Tellegen, Fannie Ward, John Barrymore, Mae Murray, Victor Moore, Donald Brian, Ann Pennington and others.

Enlargement of Studios

Both the eastern and western studios of the newly formed corporation will be immediately enlarged to enable them to cope with the extended producing activities which are planned by the concern and to facilitate the handling of the more elaborate photoplays which are contemplated in addition to the regular releases.

The consolidation of the Famous Players and Lasky companies for producing purposes is a most natural result, as both these concerns have followed the same general policies ever since their formation, becoming even closer in their relations when the Paramount Program was instituted. Hitherto the association has been simply a mutual one for the facilitating of distribution outside of the United States, the two concerns having formed an agreement in 1913 for the joint marketing of all their product in Canada, England, Australia, South Africa, and on the Continent. The new combination will mark the beginning of a big campaign for the opening of an Asiatic and South American market by the united companies. Plans are already under way for the circling of the globe through a chain of distributing points covering every important city in the world not embraced by the Paramount Corporation, through which the production of the new corporation will be marketed.

Pioneer in Stage Stars Presentation

The Famous Players Film Company was formed in April, 1912, and was the first producing organization in the world to be devoted to the presentation of a yearly program consisting of stage stars in adaptations of successful stage plays and great novels. At that time the motion picture industry had only reached a state of development which comprised the presentation of one, two and three-reel productions and the occasional filming of a multiple reel feature.

The first production made by the new concern was the presentation of the divine Sarah Bernhardt in "Queen Elizabeth." In quick succession James K. Hackett, Mrs. Fiske, Lillie Langtry, William Farnum, Mme. Bertha Kalich, William H. Crane, Maclyn Arbuckle, Florence Reed, Edward Abeles, May Irwin, Arnold Daly, James O'Neill, John Mason, Charles Cherry, Cyril Scott, Henrietta Crosman, H. B. Warner, Tyrone Power, Marie Doro, Gaby Deslys, Marguerite Clark, Pauline

Annette Kellermann (Center) and Two Striking Scenes from "A Daughter of the Gods"

Glimpses of William Fox's Oriental Spectacle, Soon to be Offered to the Public

Frederick, Hazel Dawn, John Barrymore and other celebrated stage stars were introduced to the motion picture world by this one concern. It was also under the auspices of the Famous Players that Mary Pickford was presented in her first five-reel production, an adaptation of David Belasco's play, "A Good Little Devil."

The strength and efficiency of the organization of the Famous Players Company was demonstrated in September last when the company's studio at 26th Street, New York City, was completely destroyed by fire, but the exhibitors on the Paramount Program were saved from any loss or inconvenience whatever by the prompt action of the producers who had secured and placed in operation a new studio before the smoking ruins of the first establishment had been cooled.

The work of preparing its features for distribution went on uninterruptedly and through the co-operation of the Lasky company, which filled the release date immediately following the day of the fire, the Famous Players organization were enabled to cope with the situation.

The Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company was organized in November, 1913, and was dedicated to the same principles as those which governed the Famous Players—the starring of stage celebrities in big productions. Under the Lasky management there have been many notable stars introduced to the photoplay screen, the most celebrated of whom is America's greatest prima donna, Geraldine Farrar, who was introduced in the adaptation for the screen of the popular opera, "Carmen." Others who have appeared for Lasky are Robert Edeson, Edith Taliaferro, Dustin Farnum, Edmund Breese, Edna Goodrich, Rita Jolivet, Donald Brian, Edward Abeles, Wallace Eddinger, Victor Moore and many more.

The Lasky studio at Hollywood, California, is one of the best equipped producing plants in the world. Cecil B. De Mille has made his elaborate feature productions there.

More Laboratories Are Planned for Universal City

Transferring of Eastern Producing Companies Makes the Addition Necessary—Building Will Also Be Erected to House an Extensive Library

Los Angeles, July 1.

As the result of the transferring of the eastern producing companies to "U" City, it has been found necessary to enlarge the laboratories, and plans for a new building to house this department are now being prepared. A definite location for the new laboratories has not been made, but it is very likely the building will be erected in the side of one of the foothills to the south of the film city. This will conserve space suitable for stages and other buildings, and also place the dark rooms in the best possible location. The new laboratories and dark rooms will be approximately three times the size of the present ones, which will be sufficient for the company to later add a finishing factory if they should so desire.

Superintendent of Photography John M. Nicholous, is using every bit of available space in the present laboratory, which is in operation twenty-four hours every day. At the present time, E. G. Ullman, manager of the cameramen, has thirty-two men at work, and during the past week they averaged twenty-five thousand feet of film daily, the total for the week being a trifle more than 150,000 feet. Additional directors and cameramen are being added almost daily, and within the next two weeks the number of directors working will be increased to forty, which will greatly tax the present facilities, pending the completion of the new laboratories.

Within the past few days, the Universal studios have received a shipment of twenty new Bell and Howell cameras, together with a great quantity of other photographic equipment, which will enable the company to continue the production work without loss of time on account of facilities. The laboratories are now shipping more than thirty reels of finished negative and positive prints to the New York factory weekly.

Another extensive improvement being planned is that of erecting a building to house a complete library. This building is to serve as a community center building for players, extra people, and all employes of the city, and will have an exceedingly large reading room. Arrangements have been completed with the trustees of the Hollywood municipal library, and a large portion of books from here will be circulated through the Universal institution. George Ingleton, who recently came to the city from New York, is to be librarian. He brought with him a large private collection which is to serve as a nucleus, and to this will be added all books of reference pertaining to photography, costumes, architecture, art, literature, and such books as have been published pertaining to the cinema art. It is planned to make this the most complete library possible, and as such it will probably be the most complete of its kind.

FEDERAL THEATRE TAX MAY BE ABOLISHED

Special to Motion Picture News.

Washington, D. C., July 1.

Numerous inquiries have come in from exhibitors all over the country, regarding the failure of Congress to abolish the stamp and special taxes, including those on theatres, as predicted in Motion Picture News of June 3.

Pressure of more important business is generally considered here to be the paramount reason for the postponement of Congressional action in the matter. It is rumored that the Ways and Means Committee of the House will very shortly present the new general revenue bill for enactment prior to July 10. There is, however, no definite assurance of this.

The bill in question will provide, it is understood, for increased income taxes, inheritance taxes, taxes on war munitions and the retention of certain other imposts. The stamp taxes so bitterly complained of, however, will be omitted, and this is taken to include the taxes on theatres.

SUNBEAM COMPANY OPENS IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., July 1.

The Sunbeam Motion Picture Corporation has opened a Detroit, Mich., office at 405 Kresge building. John D. Raridan, secretary of the company, is temporarily in charge. Mr. Raridan for sometime managed the Cleveland office of the Fox Film corporation and was at one time editor of the moving picture department of the Cleveland Leader.

Short Films the Backbone of the Industry—Spoor

"Public Wants the Varied Programs of One, Two and Three Reels, with Features Thrown in as an Occasional Banquet," Is Belief of Essanay President—"Patrons Desire the Pleasant Informality of Dropping Into a Theatre at Any Time Instead of Making It a Ceremony, Like Stage Play"

"STRONG one, two and three-reel photoplays mean the backbone of the motion picture industry," declares George K. Spoor, President of the Essanay Company. "In making this statement, I do not wish it understood, however, that I am discounting the value of features of more than three reels. Both have their place in the field, but they have somewhat overlapped recently, and each must get its proper footing.

One man declares that everything must be features. Another that the short reels are paramount. The ground, I believe, lies between. While many theatres will do well with the large features, the vast majority will do best with varied programs.

"As everyone knows the motion picture playhouse sprang into successful existence when the 1,000 foot film was born. For some time the majority of playhouses exhibited but one reel, running sometimes as high as thirty or forty shows a day. Those were the halcyon days for the exhibitor who got in on the ground floor.

"Expenses were small and the returns large. This was because the business was new and the novelty great. Then the public began to demand better pictures and the exhibitors went on increasing the number of reels, until three was called a feature. There began to appear more definite plots and something of artistry in the pictures.

"But the picture business was still in the informal stage. As when only one reel was run, the people never thought of going to a theatre at a particular time. They went when they felt like it, or they dropped in when they saw a poster that attracted them, or the name of a star that they were interested in.

Picture Going a Pleasant Informality

"There was no planning or getting ready to go to a picture show as there was to the opera or a stage production. It was all a pleasant informality, a come-and-go-as-you-please. This was largely what gave the charm to the pastime.

"Then came the super features with their many reels, that practically were an evening's entertainment. The country suddenly went feature mad. Everyone was turning out features regardless of whether they had facilities or strong stories. Fly-by-night companies got into the field and turned out indifferent or poor pictures, but they had the stamp of features and for a time some of them got by. But again the public began to discriminate. The market was flooded with features and the poorer ones had to go.

"The picture playhouse began to lose its informality. The people began to count on a time when to go to the theatre. Naturally no one wanted to begin in the middle of a big feature. Yet it was hard for the exhibitor to set a definite time for his show or for the public to keep track of the time.

"The theatres, especially in the outlying districts of the large cities and in the small towns, must run continuous performances. The public could not judge exactly what time the new show would begin. Sometimes they would have to stand in line until the new show commenced. Many would wander away. Others would pass by altogether, not knowing how long they would have to wait. Still others who could formerly run into a theatre for half an hour when it was less formal, would not take the trouble to plan, to get ready to go to a show.

Features and Short Plays to Strike Normal Basis

"The time rapidly is coming when the feature and the short reel plays are going to settle to a normal basis. Each has its place and each is going to occupy that place in the picture play world.

"I believe that this will make both the feature and the varied programs stronger than ever, because each will settle into its rightful field, without encroaching upon the other.

"Stronger features, plays that are great enough to stand the prolonged length, will be more in demand, as the weaker features will be pushed out. The features that should normally be two and three reels, but which have been padded into a larger number, will be eliminated.

"This does not mean a weakening of the two and three reelers, for there are just as strong subjects that do not require the extreme length, are better for being concentrated into short subjects. These should be strengthened still more, and the best stars of photoplaydom used in them. The public should have just as good action and just as high a class of players to see in short plays as in features.

"The features naturally cost more and will demand a higher price. To be of financial advantage to the producer, also it is necessary for these to have longer runs. In the small town playhouses where everyone can see it in one night, it cannot bring in big returns. Not that these theatres can run no features, but they will confine their houses to a varied program so many nights a week, and occasionally give a strong feature, one that has finished its run in the larger houses of the city. It will then be profitable to producer and exhibitor alike.

Planning Features for Profit in Small Places

"The large theatres of the big cities will naturally have these features first just as they have the large stage productions, which afterward go on the road. Many of the theatres in outlying districts of large cities and in moderate sized towns also can plan for so many runs of features with profit.

"But as I first stated, the small exhibitor who expects to make a success of his house will base his business on the varied program.

"I believe there is a crying need for more varied programs, for the old informal, come-and-go-as-you-please theatre. I am firmly convinced that the public wants it for steady diet, with the occasional banquet thrown in.

"This will work to the mutual advantage of all. It will aid the manufacturer of the strong and legitimate feature picture plays to realize an adequate return on his investment. It will permit the exhibitor of large features to profit more by a concentration of the field.

"The manufacturer, again, will be able to profit on his shorter productions, and the exhibitor of the varied program will get away from the onerous burden of running too many features, and will reap large rewards through establishing the informal playhouse, with its continuously moving throngs.

"This I believe is the pulse of the public, and the public pulse must be felt and its indication followed if exhibitor and manufacturer are to succeed."

New England Landmarks for "Nathan Hale," World Film

Company Under Direction of Chautard Work in Concord, Lexington and Marblehead for Scenic Locations in Episodes in Career of Revolutionary Martyr

UNDER the supervision of William A. Brady, producing companies of World Film have, within the past four weeks, been busily engaged in securing correct atmosphere for coming productions.

For the story of "Nathan Hale," which is now in the making under Emile Chautard's direction, Robert Warwick, Gail Kane, Clara Whipple, Alec B. Francis, and thirty-five players went to Boston. Mr. Brady accompanied the organization, and secured the consent of the Boston Museum to allow Chautard to use the old prints, relics, uniforms and costumes of Revolutionary times as patterns for his property and wardrobe departments.

The historic landmarks of Concord, Lexington and Marblehead, Mass., were the scenic locations for the episodes in Nathan Hale's career, and Boston Common was turned over to the company each morning for a week, so that the picture might be atmospherically correct.

For "Miss Petticoats," in which Alice Brady is starred, an old whaler was engaged by World Film and with its crew, it was taken out to sea. There scenes incidental to the picture were filmed.

In "Sally in Our Alley," in which Carlyle Blackwell and Muriel Ostriche appear jointly, the production was delayed six days in order that a few alleys and streets in lower New York could be used. McDougal Alley, Newspaper Alley, and another street, which was being repaired, were licensed to World Film.

Saranac Lake, Moose Jaw, Can., New London, Can., and several other points of interest are to be locations of various World companies.

Omaha Has Its Eye on National Convention in a Year or Two

Ball Was Such a Success That Its Organizers Believe It Possible for the Screen Club to Induce the Big League to Hold An Annual Event There

Special to Motion Picture News.

Omaha, July, 1.

SUCH a signal success marked the efforts of the Omaha Screen Club at its recent ball that the organization, at a midnight "stag" luncheon June 23 laid the initial plans for a convention of exhibitors and other film men from all this section of the United States.

"Our ball was such an unequalled financial success that we believe Omaha can swing any convention this side of the national event, and we'll be able to go after that in another year or two," said B. L. Oliver, business manager of the recent ball and motion picture editor of the Omaha Bee.

A special car of exhibitors and exchangemen will go from Omaha to Chicago for the national convention, July 12 to 18. "If we do, and it is an undisputed fact that we will, everybody there will know Omaha is on the map," declared President F. A. Van Husan of the Screen Club.

The midnight banquet—a new venture for the Omaha club—was an undreamed of success. A score of new members were registered, a dozen enthusiastic speeches were made, interspersed with orchestra music and cabaret entertainment, because it was a purely stag affair.

It was at the banquet that a committee was instructed to call on the Commercial Club and get its aid for the interstate convention planned for next year. The plan is get exhibitors and exchangemen from Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Colorado, Wyoming, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Kansas and probably from still farther away to meet in Omaha and establish a middle western district. Thereafter annual conventions will be held.

Manager E. V. Parish of the publicity department of the Commercial Club is working with President Van Husan of the Screen Club, investigating the feasibility of such an event. If their investigations result favorably, and it is expected they will, the two organizations will co-operate in boosting the event for next year.

The plan is still only a pian, and has not become definitely established. But Omaha, says the boosters, is in the field for the event and lays first claim for such a convention. It is hoped to have the idea fully developed for distribution at the national convention.

The banquet Friday night had another new phase. Newspaper men were the chief speakers. President Van Husan called in turn upon George H. Dodds of the World-Herald; C. C. Buchannan of the News, and G. W. Preston and B. L. Oliver of the Bee. In brief talks they gave the new newspaper idea of the motion picture industry, declared it was now recognized as an established business and pledged their support to any movemnt the Screen Club saw fit to promote. They also predicted a glorious future for the industry and pointed out the benficial features of a co-operative policy betwen the motion picture men and the newspapers. The newspaper men, as a matter of fact, made a decidedly favorable impression as orators.

Jake Schlank of the Hipp and Gayety theatres; Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World Film exchange; Harry B. Watts of the Rolfe; O. H. Finch of the Diamond; F. C. Freeman of the Palm and several others made brief talks. They admired the acomplishments of the club along the lines of promoting social benefits among the members, and pictured the time when the Omaha organization would have beautiful quarters of its own.

Film men in Omaha have come to look upon a social organization among themselves as a necessity and are wondering how they ever got along without one. The club will meet every Thursday at noon for a luncheon and short busines session. Other banquets and similar events will be held in the future.

The outstanding feature that has impresed itself upon the members of the club, is the fact that it has tried nothing that has not been an unqualified success from every viewpoint.

Frank Powell Productions Will Make Features

Creighton Hale and Linda A. Griffith Will Co-Star in Its Pictures—Officers of the Company Besides Frank Powell Are Doelger, Buhler and Barry

THE Frank Powell Productions, formed under the laws of the State of New York to produce features, announces the acquisition of Creighton Hale, seen in "The Iron Claw," "The Exploits of Elaine" and other successes. Mr. Hale will be co-starred in Powell productions with Linda A. Griffith, a former Biograph actress.

Frank Powell, president of the new concern, will direct personally all the pictures.

Frank Powell Creighton Hale

Work has already been begun on the first at one of the most modern studios in the East, it is announced. A permanent studio will be built later.

The officers of the company, besides Mr. Powell, are: Frank G. Doelger, vice-president and treasurer; Joseph S. Buhler, secretary; and William Barry, general manager. The last named has charge of the company's offices, located in the Times Building, New York.

Mr. Powell, who is one of the best known directors, began his career with Biograph, and then went to Pathe where he directed many features, both here and abroad. He was later associated with William Fox, for whom he produced forty-eight reels of feature photoplay in fifty-two weeks. His most conspicuous success probably was "A Fool There Was." Mr. Powell will have with him his entire working staff, with whom he has worked for several years: George Barber, assistant director, Alfred P. Hamberg, studio manager, and David Calcigani, a photographic expert, who will be assisted by Arthur Boerger and Caesar Ponci.

KANSAS CITY SCREEN CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Kansas City, Mo., July 1.

The Kansas City Screen Club at the meeting held Friday night, June 23, elected its first officers and directors. Frank Newman, proprietor of the Royal and Regent theatres, will be the first president; R. C. Cropper, first vice-president; J. W. Hicks, second vice-president; W. B. Glasser, secretary; E. H. Pearson, treasurer; and George H. Bowles, historian. The five directors are C. Harden, Metro Picture Service Company; E. E. Richards, Richards and Flynn; L. S. Landau; F. L. Kiltz; and F. I. Buckingham.

Mr. Buckingham, who is the proprietor of the Apollo Theater, was appointed at the first meeting to draw a constitution and by-laws, and the constitution and by-laws were read at the meeting Friday night. The president, Mr. Newman, will appoint a house committee of five to make arrangements for entertainments and social meetings of such a calibre as will give the Screen Club a recognition of being equal to the Commercial Club and other clubs of Kansas City. There will be a meeting of the directors on Friday to decide on the permanent place of meeting.

Pathe Plans Greater Activity, Berst Announces

Some of the Largest Independent Producing Companies in the Industry Will Contribute to the Gold Rooster Program—Two Features a Month May Be Released Beginning in August or September—The Five Million Dollar Serial Program Provides for Unbroken Chain of Two Continued Photoplays INDICATION of increased activity by Pathe was contained in a statement just issued by J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager regarding plans for the early fall.

Although no definite announcement has been made, it is reported that beginning in August or September, Pathe will release two features a month on its Gold Rooster Program instead of one, as at present. The Five Million Dollar Serial Program, approved by Mr. Berst, provides for an unbroken chain of two continued photoplays. Among the other features on Pathe's greater program are the Lonesome Luke comedies, Goldberg cartoons, Pathe News, Heinie and Louie comedies, colored scenics and educational subjects.

Pathe is getting its features on the open market policy. Some of the large independent producing companies in the industry will contribute to the Gold Rooster Program. Foremost is the Astra Film Corporation, recently organized by Louis Gasnier, formerly vice president and general manager of Pathe. Associated with Mr. Gasnier are Edward Jose, formerly director general of the Feature Film Corporation which produced "The Iron Claw," George Fitzmaurice, whose Gold Rooster successes include "Via Wireless," "New York," and "At Bay;" Donald Mackenzie, who with Mr. Gasnier produced "The Perils of Pauline;" George B. Seitz, author of "The Iron Claw," and a number of other big serial successes, Ouida Bergere and Anthony P. Kelly, two of the best known photoplay writers in the country today. Among the artists who will appear in the Astra productions are Pearl White, William Courtney, Grace Darmond, Mary Nash, Ralph Kellard, Leon Barre, Jane Gray and Macey Harlan.

Fitzmaurice Completes Two Features

Mr. Fitzmaurice has already completed two new features for early release on the Gold Rooster Program. Both are original stories by Ouida Bergere. Mary Nash is featured in one production, which is described as a modern story dealing with conditions of the present day. Mr. Fitzmaurice's other production, featuring Mr. Courtney, is based on a story of adventure.

It is announced that the next Gold Rooster will be "The Shadow of Her Past," featuring Lina Cavalieri. July 17 is the release date of this picture. "A Woman's Fight," produced by Blache and featuring Geraldine O'Brien will be released on August 14.

In addition to the Fitzmaurice productions the list of features for the fall includes: "The Test," from the A. H. Woods' success; "The Light That Failed," Rudyard Kipling's famous story, featuring Robert Edeson, and two other Woods' productions.

Mr. Jose's first contribution to the Astra offerings will be a five-reel feature production with Pearl White, who has just concluded her part in "The Iron Claw." Mr. Kelly, who is the author of "The Soul of a Woman" and a great many other photoplay successes, has written this story for Miss White. It deals with life in the '50s, and is being produced with the idea of having it treated in Pathecolor, which proved successful with "A Matrimonial Martyr," the most recent Pathe Gold Rooster release.

Two Scenes from "The Grip of Evil," Pathe's New Series

Donald Mackenzie, under the supervision of Mr. Gasnier is busy on a new serial for release in the fall under the title of "The Shielding Shadow." Mr. Seitz is responsible for the plot of this serial. Miss Darmond, Mr. Kellard and Mr. Barre head the cast.

"Mary Sunshine" Features

The Balboa Company of Long Beach, Cal., will also have an important place on Pathe's Gold Rooster Program. Arrangements have just been made for a series of feature productions with "Little Mary Sunshine." Work has already been started on these productions under the direction of W. A. Douglas of the Pathe force, who is making his headquarters in the Balboa studio. Mr. Douglas is also looking after the production of "The Grip of Evil," Pathe's newest continued photoplay scheduled for release on July 17.

From the Blache studio in Fort Lee, N. J., comes the announcement by Herbert Blache that he is in the market for good dramatic scenarios for which he will pay $1,000 apiece. Mr. Blache has annnounced that he will produce dramatic features for the Pathe Program.

Pathe serial activities have been extended so rapidly that active work is going on now on three continued photodramas. Scenarios for other serials for release this year are in active preparation, it is announced.

John R. Freuler Is Re-elected President of Mutual

Livingston Leaves Chairmanship of Executive Board for Vice-Presidency, Hall Is Made Second Vice-President, Hutchinson Is Treasurer and Field Is Again Secretary

JOHN R. FREULER was relected president of the Mutual Film Corporation at the annual meeting of the directorate of the corporation held at the offices of the concern in New York, Tuesday, June 27. A number of changes were made in the lesser offices. Crawford Livingston, former chairman of the executive board, was elected first vice-president; George W. Hall of Chicago, second vice-president, Samuel S. Hutchinson of Chicago, treasurer. Samuel Field, general counsel for the Mutual Corporation, was re-elected secretary.

The new executive board is headed by Mr. Freuler as chairman. The other members are Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Field, J. C. Graham who occupies the position of assistant to the president, and T. H. Cochrane of Portage, Wis.

At the meeting the directors voted for extension of the activities of the Mutual to include the establishment of executive offices for the corporation in Chicago.

"Chicago is the logical center for national distribution," observed Mr. Freuler, "and it offers special advantages for some purposes. For instances we can call meetings of our sixty-eight branch managers in Chicago with a minimum loss of time. I will maintain my office in New York and as usual I will be 'commuting' on the Twentieth Century. The New York offices will concern themselves more particularly with the problems of production while the Chicago offices will deal with distribution. Growing business in the middle west demands Chicago offices.

"At the session to-day the Mutual has been committed to a policy of all star production, meaning that for its features only well-known and well established artists will be employed.

"The prospects of the corporation are decidedly cheerful. The 'unrest period' which has obsessed the photoplay business for the last year has passed for the Mutual at least."

"JAFFERY" SHOWING SET FOR STRAND, JULY 6, AT 10 A.M.

"Jaffery," the latest of William J. Locke's novels, has been filmed by the Frohman Amusement Corporation, with C. Aubrey Smith as Jaffery, and will be given a premier complimentary showing for exchangemen, exhibitors and those interested in the motion picture business, at the Strand theatre next Thursday, July 6, at 10:00 o'clock, A. M., sharp. The entire Strand orchestra will be used.

This story has outsold even "The Beloved Vagabond." As a playwright Mr. Locke has many successes to his credit, including "The Morals of Marcus," in which Marie Doro and C. Aubrey Smith, the English actor, created the leading roles.

The choice of Mr. Smith as Jaffery was at the author's request, as the actor and the author were boyhood friends in England and Mr. Smith's strong personality was the living figure in Mr. Locke's mind when writing this book.

A cast headed by Eleanor Woodruff supports C. Aubrey Smith. The director was George Irving.

FREE BANQUETS TO BOOM OMAHA SCREEN CLUB MEMBERSHIP

The Omaha, Neb., Screen Club held the first of a series of bi-weekly banquets at 11:30 p. m. Friday, June 23. The banquets will be free and are a part of a membership campaign started by the Omaha club in an effort to get a membership that will make it possible to possess its own quarters.

A steady gain in numbers is reported. At these banquets there will be talks by exchangemen, prominent exhibitors and once in a while by film celebrities from outside who may be in the city on a visit. The Omaha club has not yet decided whether to admit people outside the business to membership.

WAR RELIEF PICNIC HELD AT SELIG ZOO

Los Angeles, June 24.

The biggest day in the history of the Selig Polyscope Company zoo, was that of Sunday, June 11, when a picnic was held by the German-Austrian-Hungarian Relief Fund. The attendance was estimated at from twelve to sixteen thousand. Manager Tom S. Nash has a number of engagements for the zoo during the remainder of the summer, and this gathering emphasizes the fact that Los Angeles and Southern California people are just beginning to appreciate the wonderful place of amusement Colonel William S. Selig has prepared for them.

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE" DRAWS CROWDS TO SAN DIEGO THEATRE

Manager Bush, of the Broadway theatre, San Diego, Cal., writes of unusual attendance at his house as the result of the showing of the Billie Burke-Kleine serial, "Gloria's Romance." In Los Angeles, this is given first run at Pantages theatre, a vaudeville house, and Manager Carl Walker attributes the increasing business of the theatre to the showing of this subject.

Cameramen Swarm Like Bees at Pennsylvania Militia Camp

They Have "Mobilized to Full War Strength" From Numerous Motion Picture Companies to Get Views for Local and "Foreign" Exhibition

Special to Motion Picture News.

Division Headquarters, Pennsylvania National Guard, Mt. Gretna, Pa., July 1.

BY no means the least active of the thousands of men who are making the mobilization camp of the Pennsylvania National Guard one of the busiest spots in the United States since President Wilson called the militiamen to arms, are the representatives of many motion picture houses. They, too, have "mobilized full war strength."

From the time the troops began arriving, in the latter part of last week, the motion picture cameramen have been working every bit as hard as the soldier boys of the guard, and as a result some wonderful "war films" have been obtained. The cameramen are taking views for general as well as local consumption—that is they are filming camp scenes both for the sake of the general warlike settings, good for exhibition in any part of the country, and for the sake of catching views of particular companies and individuals that will be of tremendous interest when displayed in the home cities of the men of these particular commands.

Already many of the pictures of local interest to particular Pennsylvania communities have been completed and are being exhibited in cities in all parts of the state. The friends and relatives of the soldiers are thus enabled to see the guardsmen of their own acquaintance engaged in the interesting military duties of camp.

One of the first of the motion picture cameramen to arrive in Camp Brumbaugh was Jack Burnham, from the Pittsburgh office of the Pathe Weekly. He spent two days in camp, taking the arrival of the troops and "rookies," scenes around Division Headquarters, General Clement and staff, troops at mess and at drill, the erection of tents, the laying out of camp streets and all the other interesting details of camp life. Incidentally he made the first motion picture film of the State's first war bride and wedding.

The Universal Company sent a cameraman here from Pittsburgh, who made both general and local scenes, and announced before he left camp that he had sold $500 worth of rights before he had started to wind up his films.

C. Floyd Hopkins, of Harrisburg, representing the Wilmer and Vincent theatrical interests which control a score of theatres in Pennsylvania, including three houses in Harrisburg and theatres in Philadelphia, Reading, Allentown and elsewhere, brought the Wilmer and Vincent company's star cameraman, Robert Horning, with him to camp, and took views of troops from the various home cities which his company caters to. These are among the films that already are being exhibited, notwithstanding needless delays caused by the fact that the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors insisted on passing on all camp films—this despite the fact that the value of such films depends so largely upon their being shown to the public at the very earliest possible date, while the interest in the movements of the troops is greatest.

Many independent film men have been active, as well as every amateur who could obtain the use of a motion picture camera.

Prospect of War Arouses Patriotism in West Coast Studios

Members of Practically Every Organization Volunteer Their Services If Situation Becomes Acute, and Many, Already Enlisted, Are Serving in the National Guard Camps

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 1.

MEMBERS of practically every studio staff have volunteered their services in the event the Mexican war scare becomes a reality, and a number have already enlisted.

Scout W. H. Taylor, who serves in an advisory capacity for the Universal directors in the making of Western and military scenes, and who served as scout for General Miles in 1870, wired the Secretary of War he was ready to serve.

The Horsley studio has perhaps lost a greater number of men so far when the size of the producing staff is considered. The number from this studio who left at the first call numbered seven. Claude Mortensen became a member of Battery A. Leonard Smith and Claude Lampson, Santa Monica Guards. Jack DeWitt was assigned to the field hospital corps, George Sun and William Cook the Seventh Regiment, and Roy Osterman the California Cavalry.

George Elwell, known as Thos. H. Ince's boy actor, remembered for his work in "The Raiders," enlisted in Company E, Seventh Regiment, N. G. C. He was compelled to enlist twice. After passing the necessary test given by the recruiting officer, he was sent to the medical examiner. En route he met his sweetheart who endeavored to persuade him not to go, and finally tore up his enlistment papers. He returned to the recruiting office, and enlisted again.

Fred Mace of the Keystone Company wired General Williams at Lexington, Ky., offering his services to the Kentucky State Guards.

Charles deFrancis and Charles Casey, both of the Universal Company, have enlisted with the California National Guards, and will leave for Texas shortly.

MYERS WILL PRODUCE FOR "U" ON FOOTAGE BASIS

Los Angeles, June 24.

Cecil B. Myers, who was a co-director in the making of a number of juvenile subjects for the Universal last year, has organized a producing company, and will produce for the Universal on a footage basis. Included in the list of players are Gordon Griffith, Irma Sorter, Frank Buuterworth, Mrs. Katherine Griffith, and Johnnie Cook. The company is working at a studio on Gordon street, formerly occupied by the American Woman's Film Company.

Some Interesting Off-Screen Glimpses of Marin Sais, the Kalem Star

She Will Be Starred in Kalem's New Series of the West, "The Girl from 'Frisco"

NIEL TAKES MANAGERSHIP OF MAJESTIC, BIRMINGHAM

William F. Niel, a well-known Southern exhibitor and recently representative of the Essanay Company for "The Strange Case of Mary Page" in the Southeastern States, has assumed the managership of the Majestic theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Niel has been an exhibitor for ten years, and formerly owned a string of eight houses in the South.

FULL PAY FOR MOSS EMPLOYEES IN MILITIA

Following in line with the rapidly increasing procession, B. S. Moss, the motion picture producer and showman, has issued an order that all employees responding to the call of the colors, will suffer no diminution of pay throughout the period of their absence and that their positions will await their return.

"The Girl from Frisco" Is Kalem Serial After "Pirates"

The Continued Feature Will Consist of Fifteen Episodes, Each in Two-Reel Length, and Following the Policy of the Company, Each Release Will Tell Complete Story

KALEM announces that arrangements have been completed for the production of "The Girl from Frisco," a new series from the pen of Robert Welles Ritchie, writer of Western stories. The new continued feature will consist of fifteen episodes, each of two-reel length, and, following the well established Kalem policy, each of the episodes will tell a complete story. Marin Sais, star of the "Social Pirates" series will be featured in "The Girl from Frisco," with an all-star supporting cast headed by True Boardman.

Woman's growing independence, added to the romance of the new West, the West of irrigation projects, oil fields, mining interests and ranching form the theme of Kalem's latest series. Mr. Ritchie known in the literary world as a contributor to Short Stories. The Saturday Evening Post and other publications of that class, presents for his heroine Barbara Brent, a Western heiress, and a product of woman's new environment. In defending her father's vast interests against his powerful enemies Barbara meets men on their own battleground and proves by her deeds her contention that woman is man's equal in any undertaking.

National publicity will be given "The Girl from Frisco" by the publication of the stories in Short Stories, the widely read Doubleday-page monthly publication. Because of the standing of Mr. Ritchie in the literary field, Short Stories has made a novel departure in magazine co-operation with film productions. Not one story but four will appear in the magazine, covering the episodes released simultaneous with the publication of the magazine.

The role of Barbara Brent will make exacting demands on the versatility of Marin Sais, the featured star of the new series. From the brilliant gowns and society atmosphere of the city she will be transported to thrilling horseback riding and outdoor life in the course of the stories.

True Boardman, who will appear opposite Miss Sais, is perhaps best remembered in the title role of "Stingaree," Kalem's series by E. W. Hornung, which General Film exchanges report as still booking strongly though it is over six months since the release of the final episode. Boardman has been a familiar figure in screen dramas of the West for a number of years and makes an ideal selection for "The Girl from Frisco," in which he is seen as Congressman Wallace, an admirer of Barbara Brent who does not however believe in her theories of woman's independence.

The production of "The Girl from 'Frisco" will be under the direction of James W. Horne, who gained laurels by his success with "Stingaree" and "The Social Pirates."

"The Fool's Game" Is a Picture with Only 3 Principals

Horsley-Mutual for July 15 Release, with Wilbur, Mae Gaston and Oaker in Cast, Is Based on Theme That "Enforced Familiarity Breeds Contempt"

"THE Fool's Game," a Horsley-Mutual Photoplay to be released the week of July 15, presents Crane Wilbur in what is said to be a powerful role. There are but two other principals in the cast, Mae Gaston and John Oaker, and with Mr. Wilbur they enact this story:

A middle-aged millionaire returns to his home unexpectedly one night to find his wife in the embrace of a man whom he believed to be his friend. Acting upon the theory that enforced familiarity breeds contempt, he locks their wrists together with a pair of handcuffs and drives them under the lash of a whip to a secluded spot in the mountains, leaving them to the consequences of their wrong doing. Mr. Wilbur is seen as the millionaire.

Many of the scenes for this were made in the picturesque environs of Newhall, Cal. The direction is by Robert B. Broadwell and the story by Mr. Wilbur.

Another offering from the Horsley studios the same week will be a one reel Cub Comedy, "The Hero of E. Z. Ranch," with George Ovey, assisted by Claire Alexander, Louise Horner, George George, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully, Louis Fitzroy, Arthur Mund and Gordon MacGregor. The story is by Hilton H. Fahrney, also the director.

MYERS AND ROSEMARY THEBY GO TO PITTSBURGH CONVENTION

Harry C. Myers and Rosemary Theby, the Vim comedy stars, made a special trip from the Jacksonville, Fla., studios to Pittsburgh, Pa., to be present at the opening of the state convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania on June 26.

At the urgent request of James Delves, secretary of the organization, the Vim stars arranged to suspend operations at the studio for a few days, and made a short stop-over in New York before proceeding to Pittsburgh, where they were welcomed by a committee of the League and escorted to the Moose Temple headquarters of the convention.

Billie Burke, Star of the George Kleine Serial, "Gloria's Romance," in Her Latest Poses

"GLORIA'S ROMANCE" FOR VIEW BY SWIMMERS AND ROCKERS

"Gloria's Romance" with Billie Burke, has just been booked into a unique theatre —the Brighton Baths at Brighton Beach. Patrons can view the films seated in rocking chairs, or they can swim in the surf and enjoy the pictures at the same time. The screen is so arranged that it can be seen both by swimmers and rockers.

The George Kleine serial was booked into the Brighton Baths by Manager W. E. Raynor of the Kleine New York Exchange.

WORK OF JESSIE MILLER WINS HER IMPORTANT "V" ROLE

Ralph W. Ince was so pleased with the work of Jessie Miller in "The Conflict" that he engaged her for the heavy role in his new spactacular feature, which will be dome at the Vitagraph studios at Bay Shore.

Unicorn Announces Appointment of Directorate

The Board Will Consist of Joseph J. O'Donohue, William V. Creighton, Louis M. Heminway, William H. Baker, George C. Comstock and George F. Shaver

THE Unicorn Film Service Corporation announces the appointment of a board of directors, comprised of men whose names have long been prominent in other industries. Joseph J. O'Donohue, William V. Creighton, Louis M. Heminway, William H. Baker, George Carlton Comstock and George F. Shaver compose the board of directors. A number of them will work actively along with the officers of the company, the personnel of which has remained the same since the corporation's inception.

Reports come from the New York office of Unicorn stating that business in the various exchanges of the company has increased largely during the past few weeks. Exhibitors, it seems, have been quick to realize the value of short length subjects, enacted by players, the majority of whom are now stars of the greatest magnitude. The sales forces of the corporation in the cities handling the Unicorn offerings report increased business and competition for the prizes offered by the home office has resulted most favorably, according to the sentiments voiced by the officers.

Tom Moore, one of the most prominent exhibitors in Washington, D. C., praises the pictures of Unicorn, both for their drawing power and the results gained from their exhibition. Says Mr. Moore in a letter to the capital city exchange: "Since using your service to fill in around our features at the Garden and Strand (or for picking subjects that can appropriately be used as "fillers" on a big program) we are really delighted with your program — especially since the Unicorn service includes so many of the famous stars of today, such as Mary Pickford, Blanche Sweet, Henry Walthall, Florence Lawrence, Owen Moore, Wilfred Lucas and many others. These pictures all being produced by D. W. Griffith are indeed a find for the purpose for which they serve us."

It is the belief of the Unicorn officials that the advertising opportunities offered in their pictures are unbounded. In almost every instance the casts that appear are deserving the term "all star." It was only a short time ago that the corporation offered a prize of $1,000 to the exchange bringing in the most business covering a period of approximately eight weeks. This sum is divided equitably between the sales force responsible for the increase in orders. Competition has been rife for the prize privilege. There is also a prize of fifty dollars offered to exchange managers each week, thus giving every manager the opportunity of increasing his own profits, and at the same time creating a stimulus for him to bring in more business for his company.

As yet Unicorn has not established exchanges covering the entire territory of the United States. With the passing of the summer it is believed that the few cities in outlying districts will possess a supply of pictures, but just at present the corporation has all it can do to handle the business already established.

Jackie Saunders Posed for Artists as Well as the Camera

Actress in Lead of "The Grip of Evil," Pathe Serial, Was Model for Well Known Magazine Illustrators—Bottomley, in Chief Male Role, Is English Actor

THE leading characters in Pathe's new series, "The Grip of Evil," are interpreted by Jackie Saunders and Roland Bottomley.

Miss Saunders was a model for such artists as Harrison Fisher, Howard Chandler Christy and Clarence Underwood. Her charming face and figure appeared on many magazine covers. It was at the suggestion of Mr. Underwood that she entered screen work.

For the Balboa Amusement Company, Miss Saunders appeared successfuly in many productions, with the result that she was chosen for the feminine lead in the new series.

After examining the qualifications of many actors, Mr. Bottomley was selected for the chief male role. An Englishman by birth, he appeared in many London stage productions, among them "Hamlet," with Forbes-Robertson, the original production of Shaw's "You Never Can Tell," and later as Redbrook in "Capt. Brassbound's Conversion."

JENNINGS JOINS FOX FORCES

De Witt C. Jennings has joined the William Fox film forces, and started to work on a new picture. Bertram Bracken is directing the film, which deals with sporting life.

In this picture Mr. Jennings takes the part of a race-track king. He uses his checked-suit and cigar stump quite as effectively as he did the Government blue in "Under Cover" last year.

"NEWS" GETS TO HIM TWO DAYS BEFORE OTHER FILM PAPERS

Motion Picture News,
New York, N. Y.
Dear Sirs:—

As regards the value of Motion Picture News: I had only examined the first copy when I was thoroughly convinced that no exhibitor could afford to be without the "News."

The reason I value the "News" more than any of the rest is on account of its getting here at least two days ahead of the other film papers.

Yours very truly,
J. R. von Almen,
Olney, Ill.

"Trade Marking" the Theatre: Its Importance to the Exhibitor and a Concrete Example

WE have urged the exhibitor many times to "trade mark" his theatre, establishing the theatre's name in the minds of his patrons as a synonym for quality. To do this successfully, the exhibitor must, of course, show good pictures, first; but he must also keep reminding his clientele that his house is modern, that his music is appropriate, and that his methods are progressive. The place to do this is in the house organ, by means of the "house talk."

Our Little Lesson in Advertising

Since its initial opening two years ago, The Stanley Theatre has been a 100 PER CENT SUCCESSFUL HOUSE. WHY?

Because it was able to secure a selection from all the photoplays first, and present them in new, novel and attractive fashion and in an environment of refinement.

Advertising space was used lavishly—all kinds—to make the people aware of these facts. They came as the result of the advertising and they remained as patrons because of the quality shown.

At no time has there been shown anything that was old or anything that was copied. The unparalleled success was firmly established on

Is Not Merely a Favorite Theatre.
It is a Standard Philadelphia Institution.
A Leader by Right. A Guide for Others.

For the past few weeks, the greater part of the Lasky stage has been occupied by a huge court room set for the Blanche Sweet production of "Public Opinion." The person engaged to preside as Judge so closely resembles Ex-Governor Hughes of New York, the present Republican consideration for President that several people went up and assured him they intended to vote for him.

Miss Marguerite Clark finds the inspiration for her most popular roles in the unconscious acting of children. "The greatest dramatic instructors in the world," she declares, "may be found in the nursery and the screen characterizations which have made the tiny star one of the most popular idols in the country are perfected by a careful study of the movements of children."

Trademarking the Theatre: From the Stanley Theatre News, Philadelphia

The Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, furnishes a concrete example of what we mean. And we can give no better illustration than to reproduce a house talk from the June 26 issue of the Stanley's house organ. We call special attention to the way in which the theatre's name is "played up."

THEATRES IN MIDDLE WESTERN TOWNS GET OUT PROGRAMS

It is getting popular in the middle west for the theatres in even the smallest towns, to get out programs. The pleasing feature of it is, the programs are without outside advertising, being devoted entirely to motion pictures. Bousman and Boyd, proprietors of the Royal, LeMars, Ia., "Where Everybody Goes," according to their advertisements, get out a card that can be hung on a convenient nail. One side of the card is for the address and the admonition to "Hang this program up for future reference," and on the other side the week's or month's bill, the name of each picture, the date and a brief bit of description.

Guy A. Curtis gets out a neat little folder for the Isis, Independence, Ia. The folder can be carried in a vest pocket and frequently referred to.

J. W. Ballenger of the York, Neb., opera house gets out the "York Theatre News," which he says is "Devoted to the serious business of supplying good entertainment," and which carries the programs for the week of the opera house and the Dean theatre of York.

Every week sees many new programs issued, in the Middle West at least fifty per cent of the houses getting out some sort of a program at the present time.

PATRONS SELECT ALL STAR BILL FOR N. Y. HOUSE

"The theatre that tries to please its patrons" is the slogan of the McKinley Square theatre, New York, which recently showed an all-star program, consisting of seven one-reel pictures, with famous stars, in addition to the regular five-reel feature. The seven stars were selected by McKinley patrons, who handed in their votes for their favorites on blanks distributed by the theatre.

The following were selected: Mary Pickford, Clara Kimball Young, Francis Bushman, Anita Stewart, Earle Williams, Lillian Walker, and John Bunny.

AVOIDING WASTE CIRCULATION IN DISTRIBUTING HOUSE ORGANS

It is one thing to publish the right kind of a house organ, and quite another to distribute it in the most effective way. After you have gone to the expense of having your house organ printed, you hardly wish it to become a more or less sightly ornament for the sidewalks of your town. Here is the plan used by the Manring and Amuzu Theatres, Middlesboro, Ky., to avoid waste circulation in the distribution of house organs:

"Cards are being distributed this week for the purpose of compiling names for our Reel News mailing list. We already have a circulation of twelve hundred in the city, but desire to increase to the point where every man and woman in Middlesboro will receive a copy regularly by mail. If you are not receiving this little magazine regularly each week, do not fail to fill out one of the cards which will be handed you when you visit the theatre this week.

"To keep you regularly informed of our attractions we must have your address, as we have discontinued the practice of sending Reel News around by delivery boys. This system was inefficient and nine times out of ten the magazines would land somewhere in a ditch or in the canal. By mailing your copy to you, we are reasonably sure that you will receive it."

OVALS OF MISS YOUNG GIVEN AWAY FOR SOUVENIRS

Oval pictures of Clara Kimball Young are given away weekly at the Strand theatre in Lincoln, Neb. How young women delight in this kind of a decoration was revealed in a chance visit to the home of a groceryman's daughter in Stuart, Ia., recently.

Her room was decorated with pennants, photos, and big colored pictures of motion picture stars — both actors and actresses. Confidentially she said every girl of her acquaintance prided herself on her picture collection.

NEWSPAPER SPACE FOR NAMES OF THEATRE PARTIES

The society columns of Omaha newspapers print the motion picture theatre parties whenever the exhibitor sends the names in. Occasionally the parties themselves give in the items, but more frequently it is the exhibitor. This is a species of publicity to which every exhibitor should give attention.

PENHOLDERS AND PERFUME BOTTLES PULL BUSINESS FOR HIM

A unique advertising stunt was put into effect by manager W. H. Wassman of the Knickerbocker, Nashville, during the run of "Gloria's Romance."

Before the picture was billed to appear, Wassman secured some ten thousand red feather penholders, also a like amount of sample bottles of perfume, each bottle being encased in a little tin foil box tied with a bit of gold cord. To each lady patron a little bottle of perfume and a red feather penholder was given.

The advertising stunt proved to be one of the greatest drawing cards ever pulled off at the Knickerbocker.

PROGRAM ANNOUNCEMENT FLASHED BY SIMPLEX SIGN TO 1,000 AUTOS PASSING THEATRE IN AN HOUR

The Gilman theatre, Kansas City, Mo., is using the Simplex electric sign for announcing programs, with good effect. This theatre is close to a much travelled boulevard and on a street car line, Thirty-first street being one of the main east-and-west traffic thoroughfares also.

Manager Rhoades has counted vehicles, and an average of one thousand automobiles pass the house every hour, the number being greater between 4 and 7 p. m. The Prospect theatre also uses the Simplex.

ALL GUARDSMEN IN UNIFORM ADMITTED FREE TO KANSAS CITY THEATRE

The New Rialto theatre, Kansas City, has quietly made it a practice, since the National Guard was called out, to admit soldiers in uniform free and the ladies who accompany them. There was no publication of this announcement, but the word of it got noised about quickly. Most of the companies were sent out at once to Nevada, Mo., so the free feature did not cause overcrowding of the little theatre.

PRESIDENT WILSON ISSUES ORDER CALLING OUT THE NATIONAL GUARD

145,000 TROOPS ARE TO BE MOBILIZED

Secretary of War Baker, Notifies all Governors of States that Militia Must be Ready

Washington, June 18 (Special).—President Wilson has called out the militia of every state for service on the Mexican corner.

Brigadier General Alfred Mills, chief of the division of militia affairs, estimates the minimum militia force to be called out at 145,000 men.

The proportionment of the militia which will be sent to the border has been determined upon by the War Department, and a statement now is being prepared that will be issued soon, showing just how many troops from each state will be taken into the federal service.

The president's decision was announced late today in a statement issued by Secretary of War Baker, and wired to the governors of all the states. The statement is as follow:

"Having in view the possibility of further aggression upon the territory of the United States from Mexico and the necessity for the proper protection of that frontier, the President has thought proper to exercise the authority vested in him by the constitution and the laws and call out the organized militia and the National Guard necessary for that purpose.

Uncle Sam Goes After Villa and Bandits in Most Determined Way at Palace Theatre

Today at the Palace theatre you can see how Uncle Sam is going to get Villa, a special picture has been secured that shows what the United States Army is doing. This picture shows the cause of the present crisis, just what the followers of Villa has done to cause Uncle Sam to get peeved.

In this picture you will also see:

Some of Villa's followers. Supply base of the U. S. Army at El Paso.
The girl Ranger.
Troop trains running to Mexico. The Volunteer Boy marching.
Unloading of troops. The U. S. colored troops.

A Glimpse of the "War Extra" Issued by the Manager of the Palace Theatre, Vinton, Iowa

ADVERTISING that links up the theatre to an event of national or local importance is good advertising, because it has the element of timeliness. Many exhibitors seem to have their eyes open for opportunities of this sort. Arthur J. Stolte, manager of the Palace, Vinton, Iowa, is one of the number. Let him tell his own story:

"Here is an advertising stunt that brought good results. Receiving my films on the morning train, I found a single reel picture showing "The Stars and Stripes in Mexico"—a very timely film. I had read in the Chicago papers that there was trouble with Mexico again, so I went at once to a print shop, and had an extra printed. I set the type according to my own ideas, getting the body of the news from the papers.

"The 'extra' was on the streets and in many homes an hour before the evening paper was off the press. It pays to advertise."

You will get a good idea of Stolte's stunt from the accompanying cut. We should like to hear from other exhibitors who tied up their advertising to the National Guard mobilization by unique live wire stunts of any description.

Another very clever stunt was put over by Manager C. Floyd Hopkins of the Wilmer & Vincent interests in Harrisburg, Pa. He arranged with The Morning Patriot to film the mobilization activities of the Harrisburg guardsmen. Robert Horning, the Wilmer & Vincent special cameraman, was brought to Harrisburg to make the films. He caught the militiamen in all their activities about the armories and while they were marching to entrain. After they arrived at the mobilization camp at Mt. Gretna, he filmed them in all phases of camp life, preparing a series of pictures of great interest to the people of Harrisburg, when shown at one of the Wilmer & Vincent theatres.

The plan has the merit of being most timely in that it deals with the one topic which grips the minds of everybody; is of general as well as local interest; gives the theatre a great amount of free advertisement; and also, because of the newspaper's end of the arrangement, provides for front page stories daily calling attention to the plan.

Puts Book in Public Library and Tells Patrons to Read It, Before Film Founded on Story Is Shown

ONE of the cleverest ideas used by Paramount exhibitors in advertising their features is that adopted by the Grand theatre, Mattoon, Ill., when it was showing the Paramount picture, "The Call of the Cumberlands." Mr. Uran, of the Grand, used the book as an additional advertising feature in boosting this play. He writes to Paramount Progress:

"As an advertising suggestion I beg to advise that I have just placed the new edition of 'The Call of the Cumberlands' on the shelves of the Mattoon Public Library, and as the picture comes to my theatre in about three weeks, I am putting on a slide reading.

READ
"THE CALL OF THE CUMBERLANDS" best of the new books at
The Mattoon Public Library.

"I am confident that I will, by this method, create an unusual demand for the book," comments Mr. Uran, "and those who read it as well as their friends will undoubtedly be anxious to see the play when we put it on."

H. I. Day, editor of Paramount Progress, says of this scheme: "Did you notice the line where this progressive manager says that those who read it as well as their friends will undoubtedly be anxious to see the play when he puts it on?

"Don't forget this point. Advertising experts all over the world have dreamed for years about plans to get 'word of mouth' advertising for the products they advertise. There is a thousand times more value in having Mrs. Smith say to Mrs. Brown over the proverbial cup of Ceylon that 'The Call of the Cumberlands' is a picture she really ought to see, than there would be if you sent Mrs. Brown a hundred pieces of advertising literature."

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"Her American Prince" Is Romantic Drama with Ormi Hawley from Mutual in Week of July 10

Illustrating "Dust" and "Her American Prince," Mutual Masterpictures De Luxe

"HER American Prince," a five-reel romantic drama by Carl Herbert and adapted from the popular novel and play of the same name, in which Ormi Hawley and Bradley Barker have the leading roles, and "Dust" a five-reel sociological drama featuring Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie, are the chief feature offerings of the Mutual Film Corporation for the week of July 10. Both will be released as Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe edition. "Dust" will go to the public July 10, and "Her American Prince," July 13.

"Dust," which brings to public attention the horrors of the sweatshop evils, was written by Julian Lamothe and filmed at the American-Mutual studios at Santa Barbara under the direction of Edward Sloman.

Miss Greenwood is presented in the role of Marion Moore, aristocratic daughter of a wealthy factory owner, who has nothing in common with the hundreds of poor employees of her father. Mr. Ritchie essays the role of Frank Kenyon, author, investigator and later a member of the State legislature, whose untiring efforts bring about a reformation of working conditions. Harry Von Meter, Margaret Nichols and Louise Lester have the chief supporting roles in the company.

"Quicksands of Deceit," with Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh in the chief parts, is the Mutual three-part feature of the same week. It will be released July 13. This "Flying A" release was directed by Frank Borzage. Others in the cast are George Periolat and Queenie Rosson. The story of "Quicksands of Deceit" has to do with the strange adventures that befell an orphan, adopted by a wealthy farmer.

Topping the two-part releases of the Mutual for the week of July 10, is "Love's Bitter Jealousy," an American production for release July 10, featuring Edward Coxen and Lizette Thorne. "Nugget Jim's Pardener," a Western story to be released July 14, is the Mustang contribution to the week's releases. Frank Borzage, who directed the filming of the drama is the featured player, supported by Anna Little and various other members of the Mustang-Mutual studios.

Crane Wilbur, as the star of "The Fool's Game" for release July 15, is offered in the second of the new two-reel features. Included in the Mutual comedy offerings for this week are "Stung, by Gum" with Rube Miller and "A Deep Sea Liar," starring Ben Turpin, from the Vogue studios for release July 11 and July 15, respectively. The Beauty contributions include "Two Slips and a Miss" with Carol Halloway and John Sheehan, for release July 12, and "The Rummy Act of Omar K. M." with Oral Humphrey, to be released July 16. George Ovey is the star of the Cub comedy "The Hero of the 'E. Z.' Ranch," in which this comedian appears in the role of a cow puncher.

Mutual Weekly, No. 80, for release July 12, presents a number of exclusive pictures taken in the various mobilization camps throughout the country and along the Mexican border. "See America First," the Mutual's popular scenic for release the same day, includes the second part of the trip through Glacier National Park in Montana. Reel Life, the Mutual Film Magazine in pictures, for release July 16, is composed of a number of subjects.

SELIG PRODUCING "IN THE HOUSE OF THE CHIEF"

"In the House of the Chief" is the title of a new Selig drama in three reels now in course of production at the Pacific Coast studios. The cast includes Charles West, Vivian Reed, Eugenie Besserer, Sidney Smith, Al W. Filson and Harry Lonsdale.

LAST "IRON CLAW" EPISODE SET FOR RELEASE ON JULY 10

July 10 comes in with the final episode of "The Iron Claw," "The Triumph of the Laughing Mask."

"A Trial of Souls" is the title of the latest chapter of the "Who's Guilty?" series, featuring Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore and released in the week of July 10. "A Trial of Souls" shows the criminality of parents' attempts to use their children as pawns in the furtherance of their own desire.

The Lonesome Luke comedy for release in the week of July 10 is "Luke Rides Rough Shod" and features that India rubber comedian, Harold Lloyd as Lonesome Luke.

"The Bang Miu Gold Mines" and "Some Ports in Catalonia" make up an industrial and scenic reel on the Pathe program for release in the week of July 10. "The Bang Miu Gold Mines" shows every process of gold refinement, from the time the pneumatic drill makes way for the blasting powder, to the casting of the precious metal into ingots. "Some Ports in Catalonia" shows the town of San Feliu de Guixols, the Death's Head Grotto, the road to Palamos, the Giant Rock, Estardit and the Medes Island, all points of interest in Catalonia, Spain.

The Pathe News No. 56 of July 12, and the Pathe News No. 57 of July 15, takes us up to the week beginning July 17 on the Pathe Program.

ADDITIONAL NUMBER OF SELIGS THROUGH GENERAL SERVICE

The Selig Polyscope Company announces an additional number of comedies and dramas for release through General Film Service. "The Conflict," a Selig Diamond Special, will be released on Monday, July 24. Fritzi Brunette, Jack Pickford, Charles West and Vivian Reed enact the leading roles. "The Conflict" is a drama having to do with the sacrifice of a clergyman. Offered the pastorate of a fashionable church, he refuses the advancement in order to accept a mission church in the slums.

"Local Color," is another of the Tom Mix Western comedy series and will be released on Saturday, July 29. The comedy has to do with an Eastern girl who goes West in search for local color for a magazine story.

On Monday, July 31, the Selig Company will release through General Film service a Selig Diamond Special, entitled "The Old man Who Tried to Grow Young." Al W. Filson, the Selig character star, enacts the leading role supported by Charles West, Vivian Reed, Harry Lonsdale and other stars.

On Saturday, August 5, the Selig Company will release another Mix Western Cowboy comedy, "An Angelic Attitude."

"GATES OF DIVORCE," MUTUAL, STARS GERTRUDE McCOY

Gertrude McCoy will signalize her appearance as a star in Mutual pictures, following her success in the Mutual Masterpicture, "The Isle of Love," by playing the leading role in "Gates of Divorce." This photoplay will be released by the Gaumont Company in Mutual Service July 20. Miss McCoy has been specially fitted with the part by Robert Burns, author of a number of screen successes. It is that of a petulant, foolish wife who is wrapped up in trivial society affairs and in her pet dog to the exclusion of her home-loving, hard-working husband. The name of the photoplay is symbolical of the anguish through which the wife must go before she finds that her true happiness is not through the "gates of divorce," as she had thought once.

Miss McCoy is supported by practically an all star cast. Alexander Gaden plays the husband. Iva Shepard plays the society friend. Lucille Taft appears as the apparently simple maiden into whose clutches the husband is thrown by the social blackleg, an unsympathetic role in the capable hands of John Reinhard. The scenes are laid in society in New York City.

As in "The Isle of Love," Miss McCoy has been directed in this feature by Edwin Middleton.

FIVE THOUSAND FEET OF FILM FROM "V" IN WEEK OF JULY 10

Five thousand feet of film from Vitagraph are on the General Film program for the week of July 10. "Waters of Lethe" is a three-part Broadway Star Feature drama from the Western studio, and "Wrong Beds" and "The Man from Egypt" are each single part comedies.

Mary Anderson is the lead in "Waters of Lethe." Jack Mower, Corinne Griffith, Carl Von Schiller and Otto Lederer are seen in the support of "Sunshine Mary." The story was written by Mrs. Owen Bronson and directed by William Wolbert.

"Wrong Beds" is a comedy of errors in which William Dangman takes the leading role. George O'Donnell, Lucille Crane, Harry Mayo and Florence Natol are also seen in this picture which was written by James A. Stiles and produced by Frank Currier.

Hughie Mack, in "The Man from Egypt" finds himself pursued by an Egyptian sheik who is determined to recover a priceless ruby, the eye of the sacred God Amut. Jewell Hunt, John Flatow, Kate Price and William Shea supported Mr. Mack. The story was written by C. Graham Baker and Lawrence Semon, and the latter also directed the action of the story.

"FATHERS OF MEN," NORTHWEST DRAMA, IS A "V" FOR RELEASE ON JULY 10

"Fathers of Men," a six-part drama of the Northwest, from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, is Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon Feature release for Monday, July 10. On the same day "Kernel Nutt, the Piano Tuner," a one-part comedy featuring Frank Daniels is also offered through V-L-S-E.

"Fathers of Men" tells a story of the strict standard of morality in the great Northwest, where men are held accountable to each other and not to the law, for their actions. Robert Edeson is seen in dual roles and is supported by Naomi Childers, William Humphrey, Bobby Connelly, Harry Northrup, Stanley Dunn, Kalman Matus, Logan Paul, Robert Gaillard, Carolyn Birch and Betty Howe. William Humphrey also directed the filming of the production.

Frank Daniels in "Kernel Nutt, the Piano Tuner" is mistaken for a doctor, a burglar and various other things, just because he had found a black satchel. Olive Trevor, William Shea and Donald MacBride are seen in Mr. Daniels' support. Charles Dickson directed the action from Bide Dudley's scenario.

"PRIVATE BANKER" FROM SELIG ON 17TH

Following the release of the Selig Diamond Special, "A Milk White Flag," on Monday, July 10, another Selig Diamond Special is announced for release on Monday, July 17. This latest release is entitled "The Private Banker," and features Wheeler Oakman, Edith Johnson, Leo Pierson and others.

"Shooting Up the Movies" is another of the Tom Mix series of Western comedies released by the Selig Company every Saturday through the General Film Company Service.

THE BABY'S FIVE SENSES AT WORK IN PICTOGRAPHS

How the five senses of the child are trained in the Montessori schools is one of the latest subjects added to "Better Babies" releases of Paramount Pictographs.

MAE MURRAY PICTURE FROM LASKY CAN'T BE KEPT "UNDER COVER" ANY LONGER

Paramount Pictures scheduled for release during the week of July 17 will be "The Dream Girl," a Lasky production in which Mae Murray will be featured, and "Under Cover," from the Famous Players studio, starring Hazel Dawn and Owen Moore. Both are five-reel features. "The Dream Girl" will be released on July 17 and "Under Cover" on July 20.

Travel, romance and the "magazine on the screen" will be included in the three single reel subjects completing this week's program. They will be the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Picture, "Down the Danube to Vienna," the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoon, "Colonel Heeza Liar's Courtship," and the Pictographs.

One of the midsummer screen diversions provided for film audiences by the editor of the Paramount Pictographs is a motion picture feature on "Ice." This edition of the screen magazine will also contain glimpses of men in public life caught as they are addressing large audiences in "Oratory"; the business feature "System"; "Better Babies," "Ant vs. Man" and "Juggling" in Hugo Munsterberg's series, "Testing Your Mind."

"Down the Danube to Vienna," in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures, continues the screen journey which Paramount audiences are making with Burton Holmes through Europe as it existed before the war.

PRINT OF "PURITY" IS ON WAY EAST FOR SPECIAL SHOWING

A print of "Purity" the six-reel art feature starring the celebrated artist's model, Audrey Munson, is now on the way East where it will be shown to the trade at a special showing, the date of which will be announced later. Miss Munson is now at work on her second American-Mutual feature, a five-reel drama, the title of which is as yet undecided.

Thomas Ricketts is directing the feature and great interest centers around the interiors of the sculptor's studios, built on an island in the far Pacific in which Miss Munson, portraying the part of a noted model, is shown in numerous nude poses.

POSTAL SERVICE IN PICTOGRAPHS

"Speeding up the Mail," a camera study of efficiency methods employed in Uncle Sam's postal service, is one of the novelties announced for future release in the Paramount Pictographs.

Gertrude McCoy and Alexander Gaden in "The Gates of Divorce," a Gaumont Production for Mutual Patrons

Scenes from Universal Offerings: "The Crimson Yoke," "No. 16 Martin Street," "God and the Baby," and "Flirting with Marriage"

"Nature, Incorporated," Stamped with the "Gold Seal" of Comedy, Is a Universal Offering in Week of July 10

THE Universal program for the week of July 10, opens with Red Feather on Monday. This is a dramatization of the famous novel "The Heart of a Child," by the well-known author, Mrs. Braukau, who wrote under the pen name of "Frank Danby," and whose books, including this one, and the two others of great reputation, "Pigs and Clover" and "Baccarat," were read wherever the English language is understood. The leading role is played by Edna Flugrath, who is a sister of Viola Dana, and is at present the star of a feature company making pictures in South Africa.

On the same day a typical Nestor comedy, "Henry's Little Kid," the story of the awful predicament of a young man who is called upon to produce a wife and child at a moment's notice, is said to be laughably told.

On Tuesday, July 11, the feature will be "Nature, Incorporated," a Gold Seal two-reel comedy drama, in which Herbert Rawlinson is starred, with Agnes Vernon playing opposite him. This is a screen adaptation of the story by Sinclair Lewis which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. There will not be any more of these Rawlinson comedies for some time, and perhaps forever, for he has been made a Bluebird star, and will appear in that organization from now on. The Rex release for that day is a special one reel, called "War Ridden Mexico," depicting some scenes in that country, secured by the Animated Weekly cameraman upon the scene of the fighting. The program will close with another Matt Moore and Jane Gail comedy, entitled "A Stranger in His Own Home," released in one reel under the Imp brand.

On Wednesday, July 12, the feature will be a drama of artistic life, called a "Conflicting Conscience," in which the leading parts are taken by May Emory and Bertram Grassby. The story is in one reel, and will be released under the Victor brand. An L-KO will be released in two reels on the same date. It is called "Ignatz's Icy Injury," and features Billy Armstrong and Lucille Hudson. Armstrong was so badly hurt in making this picture that he has only just returned to work. The program for the day closes with the Animated Weekly.

"No. 16 Martin Street" is the title of the Laemmle two reeler for July 13, featuring Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson. This is a mysterious detective drama of the Sherlock Holmes variety, and is as impenetrable as any mystery ever filmed. It is followed by a Big U juvenile comedy called "The Three Brave Hunters," a screen version of the old fairy tale. The program closes with a comedy cartoon by Pat Sullivan, one of his "Sammy Johnson" series, called "Sammy Johnson Gets a Job," and a Ditmars Educational split-reel which is entitled "Mexican Natural History."

"The Little Grey Mouse" is the title of the Imp Feature for Friday, July 14. It is in two reels and features Edith Roberts and Harry Benham. A version by Rupert Julian, of Eugene Field's deathless poem, "Little Boy Blue," is the Victor release for that day.

On Saturday, July 15, "The Human Pendulum," a three-reel Bison, with Marie Walcamp and Lee Hill, will be released. The program is completed with a Joker called "The Harem Scarem Deacon," in which William Franey is introduced into an Eastern household, bathing pool and all, and finds Gale Henry, the president of the Anti-Sin League, in the guise of one of the harem wives.

The releases for Sunday, July 16, include "The Crimson Yoke," a two-reel Mexican drama under the Rex brand, which was produced by Cleo Madison and in which she plays the leading role, supported by William Mong, who also assisted in the direction.

Another episode of the comedy series "Baseball Bill," called "Flirting with Marriage," a one-reel Laemmle written and produced by "Smiling" Billy Mason, follows the feature. The program ends with an Imp comedy, directed by William Garwood, in which he plays the role of a young plumber. It is called "Two Seats at the Opera."

"SHADOW OF HER PAST," PATHE, FEATURES LINA CAVALIERI

"The Shadow of Her Past" is the sombre title of the next feature on the Pathe Gold Rooster Program, slated for release in the week beginning July 17. The film features Lina Cavalieri, and her husband Lucien Muratore, who directed the production of the picture also. This is Miss Cavalieri's second appearance in photodrama, her first having been that of Manon, in the production of "Manon Lescaut." The story is an American one, filmed in Italy, and enhanced, so far as sets and backgrounds are concerned, by the classic beauty of Italian architecture.

WRIGHT DIRECTS "PARDNERS" FOR EDISON

It has been announced from the Bedford Park, N. Y., studios of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., that George Wright, who has been added to the staff of Edison directors, is directing Charlotte Walker in the coming production of "Pardners," a dramatization of a story by Rex Beach.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

ESSANAY believes it has proved that the concentration of its productions in Chicago has been shown to be of the greatest advantage since filming of two new feature plays, for Henry B. Walthall and Edna Mayo, respectively, was begun. Since the time he was a pioneer in pictures, President George K. Spoor believed that Chicago and the territory adjacent thereto offered as wonderful locations as any other section of the country. While he led the way in the original rush to California and for years divided production between his Chicago, Niles and Los Angeles studios, he never lost faith in the former city. He is yet to be disappointed in his selection of Chicago early in the year for every foot of his pictures.

In filming "The Sting of Victory," Henry B. Walthall's next feature, now half completed, beautiful mansions of Southern design were to be found in numbers at Lake Forest, Chicago's millionaire suburb. Just north of this is an excellent battlefield location, Camp Logan. In normal times there are the soldiers of Fort Sheridan in the same locality, and the boys of the Great Lakes training station, together with numerous Chicago guard regiments to draw on.

Just as the beautiful north shore can furnish Southern homes or Italian villas with equal ease, so can the city proper give any desired architecture. William Gillette found in Chicago locations which duplicated the worst parts of London for his "Sherlock Holmes."

Lake Michigan can look like an ocean any time a camera is trained on it, and if other acquatic scenes are desired the most beautiful lake region in the country lies only an hour or two away in Wisconsin.

Fine Scenery in Wisconsin

In northern Wisconsin the primeval wilderness stands preserved in state parks. Thus, when such a setting was required for "The Return of Eve," Edna Mayo's next feature, it was a simple matter to transport a company to the famous Dells of the Wisconsin River, where the territory still is to be seen as it lay when the Chippewas roamed over it before the coming of the white men.

It is possible with Chicago as the center, to film the bustling twentieth century business activities and nature at the simplest with one camera all in the same day.

For rural beauty central Illinois, especially that portion around Starved Rock, is famous throughout the country. Essanay has used the locality scores of times.

Essanay has never yet found a play for which an ideal setting could not be located within a night's ride of Chicago. This is as President Spoor predicted.

From the motion picture angle it would seem that with the thousands of available locations in and about Chicago hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent to make ideal backgrounds for the film.

For indoor scenes Essanay has found that artificial lights produce just as beautiful photography as that of the sun. And with the advantage of Chicago as a distributing center, Essanay believes its argument for the central west has been proven.

E. H. Calvert, Essanay actor and director, is attempting to organize a volunteer troop of cavalry amongst the employes of the Essanay studios, actors and others. Mr. Calvert, after long service in the Philippines following the Spanish-American war, resigned with the rank of captain of cavalry, and is therefore qualified to command such a unit if the President believed volunteers are required in addition to the militia for duty in Mexico. Beyond the fact that he was a cavalry officer, he would select that arm of the service because most of the actors who would join the troops are accomplished horsemen.

Richard C. Travers has returned to the Essanay studios after a successful vaudeville trip of ten weeks, in which he visited the principal cities of the country. He personally met thousands of motion picture followers and was delighted with the reception he received. However, pictures are far more interesting than the stage, he declares, and he is glad to resume work at the studios. He will appear in several two and three-reel productions now being planned.

Trick Canes Need Watching

When Sidney Olcott, who is directing Donald Brian's appearance in "The Smugglers" at the Famous Players studio, called for a trick cane in which to hide a necklace from the prying eyes of the customs officials he scarcely realized just how tricky a cane can be if it is not properly watched.

The idea in using such a cane was to have the necklace concealed in it and then to have somebody touch the spring at the wrong moment, thus exposing the necklace to view right before the official's eyes. One sees at once the exquisite humor of the situation—Brian's knees melting into wax at the sight and even his mustache drooping with consternation. On this necklace there was a very ornate clasp, the other end being, of course, perfectly plain.

When the necklace was placed in the cane it was so arranged that the heavy clasp was nearest the opening and therefore was exposed to view first. This also had a tendency to pull the rest of the jewels into the limelight, thereby increasing the agony of the hapless Brian. This "exposure" scene was photographed just before noon and a recess for luncheon purposes was then declared immediately afterward.

When the cast was re-assembled an hour or so later, the subsequent scenes in which the cane and the necklace figured were put into rehearsal. After Brian and the inspectors had rehearsed a heart-breaking scene in which the inspectors gathered around the terrified man and waved the cane threateningly at him, demanding that he confess immediately to whatever other jewelry he might have concealed about his person, Olcott called for the camera. Just as the scene started his eye caught the open end of the cane from which there hung, not the clasp, but the small end of the necklace.

"Whoa," shouted Olcott. "Too much trick stuff is plenty. Reverse the necklace and bring the clasp out. We are not going to have that clasp hopping in and out of the cane like a trained snake when this picture is put together."

Of course, the explanation lay in the fact that someone had taken the necklace out to try it on during the noon hour and had reversed the position of the imitation jewels in putting them back. But the company could not very well have placed a leader on the screen to explain this point.

Lillian Walker in "Blue Envelope"

At the Vitagraph studios Lillian Walker has been chosen as the star for Sophie Kerr's story "The Blue Envelope," which is now running in the Woman's Home Companion, and of which Vitagraph has engaged the motion picture rights. Incidentally the story as prepared for the screen will harmonize with the movement for better films inaugurated by the magazine.

The part of the heroine, a rich young woman thrown unexpectedly upon her own resources and into a maelstrom of stirring experiences, was assigned to Miss Walker and is being directed by Wilfrid North, and work has already begun on the important scenes.

Earle Williams and the other members of the company directed by Wally Van of Vitagraph spent most of the week of June 26-July 1 at Briarcliff filming an episode in "The Scarlet Runner," the forthcoming serial in which Mr. Williams figures as the hero. Some spectacular effects were introduced in the work done there.

Helmer W. Bergman, who is picturizing "The Battle Cry of War," from the story by Cyrus Townsend Brady and J. Stuart Blackton, is at work on the last two reels of this sequal to Vitagraph's "The Battle Cry of Peace." To date he has written more than seven hundred scenes and also assisted in their direction.

Hard to Regulate the Snow Scenes

Producing Manager Rollin Sturgeon of Vitagraph's Western Company has finished his Cleveland Moffett picture, and is trimming it. That this will be a much simpler task than was the trimming of "God's Country and the Woman" is already apparent. The latter took weeks to get into shape, every scene having been taken on an average of three and a half times. There were many difficulties in the way. Sometimes there was falling snow; then about four inches on the ground; and scenes in the forest with snow on the ground and none on the trees." The scenes connected with a time sequence had to match as to the snow—it was no part of Mr. Sturgeon's idea to have people walk out of one scene in foot-deep snow—and come into the next in four feet of it, though this seems a common failing with "snow stuff."

Director Paul Scardon has just completed a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature in which James Morrison is starred. The story is a picturization by George H. Plympton of a book by George Allan England, the well-known novelist, whose books are in such great demand at the present time.

Earle Williams and Edith Storey are working in another chapter of the famous "Scarlet Runner" series by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, being produced for the Vitagraph by Wally Van. Julia Swayne Gordon, another Vitagraph favorite, also appears in the cast.

In a five-part Blue Ribbon release featuring Lillian Walker, Vitagraph's popular star, many well-known spots of the Greater City are used as backgrounds. Wilfrid North, who is directing the filming of the picture, also wrote the story.

A three-part Broadway Star Feature by Edgar Cove, dealing with life in the theatre, is now in course of production under the direction of Van Dyke Brooke. Leah Baird is the featured member of an all-star cast.

Evart Overton, whose work in Vitagraph photoplays has won him a place in the foremost rank of screen stars, is seen as a member of a band of hoboes in his latest release. James Oliver Curwood is the author of the story, whose filming was supervised by Eugene Mullin.

Antonio Moreno is working in a picturization of one of Harriet T. Comstock's widely read novels being produced by Vitagraph Director Harry Davenport. When completed, it will be in five parts and released through the V-L-S-E.

Emily Stevens, the Metro star, who was last seen on that program in "The House of Tears," is a patient in the Woman's Hospital, New York, where she recently underwent an operation for appendicitis. Miss Stevens was in the West playing the stellar role in "The Unchastened Woman," after its long run on Broadway. Immediately upon her return to New York she suffered an attack and hurried to the hospital. The operation was successful and Miss Stevens will soon be able to leave the hospital, the surgeons say. In all probability Miss Stevens will be starred in another Metro play before she begins her regular engagement on the speaking stage on Broadway.

Alan Hale, who has just completed a special engagement with the Famous Players, where he played the role opposite Pauline Frederick in "The Woman in the Case," and Niles Welch, widely known as a juvenile leading man, have been engaged, through the Amalgamated Photo Play Service, for two of the important parts in the next Pathe production to be directed by Edward Jose.

Mr. Jose, it will be recalled, is the man who produced the Pathe serial "The Iron Claw." His next production will be a five-reeler, written by Anthony P. Kelly. Alan Hale will play opposite Pearl White in the production, while Niles Welch will have the leading juvenile role.

Marguerite Snow has completed her special engagement with the Ivan Company. The latter company will feature her in "The Faded Flower." Her future plans will be announced shortly.

Cash Prizes of $1,000 Will be Given at Motion Picture Studio Directory Stampede Contest

It Will Be Noticed from the List of Prizes Offered That the Events Include Actor Horsemen, Depicting the Best Cowboy Type, and Actress Horsewomen, Depicting the Best Cowgirl Type, So That Actor Cowboys and Cowgirls Who Do Not Perform Stunts Are Eligible for These Events—Stampede Management Offers Horses for Contestants to Make Selection of Mounts

THE Motion Picture Studio Directory Stampede Contest, which will be given under the joint auspices of Motion Picture Studio Directory and "The Stampede" management, will be a big feature at the coming World's Championship Frontier contest to be held at Sheepshead Bay, New York City, in August. Realizing what an immense attraction it will be for the crowds who will attend this big round-up to see in real life and action the many familiar faces and figures of the well-known cowboys and cowgirls whom they have hitherto seen performing these daring feats of horsemanship and Western art only on the screen, Motion Picture Studio Directory is giving Gold and Silver Medals and free advertising space, as previously announced, in order to insure the largest possible representative gathering from the motion picture field, and the management of "The Stampede" now announces that in addition to the prizes for the events in their open competition, they will offer one thousand dollars in Cash Prizes for events in Motion Picture Studio Directory Contest.

The complete list of events and prizes follows on the opposite page. Anyone who has seen six months' active service before the camera is eligible to compete for these prizes, and let it be understood that entering this contest will not prevent anyone from competing in the open events in the larger contest for the big prizes offered. The same judges will officiate for the motion picture contest as for the big events in the open contest, and the motion picture contestants are sure to be received with rounds of applause from the crowds of fans. This, it seems, will be a golden opportunity for the motion picture cowboys and cowgirls not only to win the Motion Picture Medals and prizes, but to decide once and for all in open contest before competent judges and an audience of a hundred thousand people daily, just who may lay claim to the title of champion in the different branches of Western art and sport.

Screen Cowboys and Cowgirls Who Do Not Do Stunts Eligible

You will notice from the list of prizes offered that the events include actor horseman, depicting the best cowboy type, and actress horsewoman, depicting the best cowgirl type, so that actor cowboys and cowgirls who do not perform stunts are eligible for these events. Also that there are two events for motion picture actors and actresses listed as "Champion Motion Picture Actor-Horseman" (not professional horseman) and "Champion Motion Picture Actress-Horsewoman" (not professional); these events should interest well-known people in the motion picture art who ride well but who do not profess to be "riders."

The Stampede management has kindly offered horses for you to select from and has ample accommodations to care for your own horses, if you desire to furnish your own mount. Remember that there is no entrance fee and that it costs you nothing to be seen and compete for the prize and medals.

GETS MORE OUT OF THE "NEWS" THAN ANY OTHER TWO PICTURE PUBLICATIONS

Motion Picture News,
New York City.
Gentlemen:—

Some time ago I accepted your trial subscription offer for three months and having become accustomed to the "News'" weekly visits, I am going to renew my subscription at once.

I am sincere when I say that I get MORE OUT OF YOUR MAGAZINE THAN ANY TWO OTHERS that I know of. This is due, in my opinion, to the short but very comprehensive manner in which you handle the subjects contained in it. I have been trying to find a weak point in the "News" so that I might criticise a little, but I must confess that I have never looked for a certain subject or sought information on anything that I did not find it in the "News."

I have saved each number I have received for the past three months and when I am looking for information, these issues are invaluable to me. I feel that if I miss a single number it would very likely contain something that I, as an exhibitor, should know.

Yours very truly,
J. H. Kurtz,
Pastime Theatre,
Stewartville, Minn.

No event at the Stampede will be called a tie or draw. All contests go to a finish for a decision. All rules and judges are to be chosen by a popular vote of the contestants.

Art Acord Will Be There

Art Acord wired Guy Weadick, director-general of "The Stampede" last week that he would be on hand to compete for the World's Championship events, and also for Motion Picture Studio Directory Contest. Immediately on receipt of this wire the editor of the Stampede Contest for Motion Picture Studio Directory, wanting to get Mr. Acord's complete record, turned to Motion Picture Studio Directory for information, and found Mr. Acord's biography heading the list, the first biography in the entire book. His biography we reprint herewith:

ACORD, Art, leads, American; b. Stillwater, Okla., 1890; educ. p. s., early career, cowboy and ranchman; stage career, Dick Stanley Wild West Show in 1910, with Buffalo Bill in 1911, rode second at Pendleton, Ore., Cheyenne and Salt Lake round-ups, won championship in broncho riding at Klamoth Falls in 1912, in 1914 managed shows at Nelson, B. C., and Klamoth Falls; m. p. career, 1911, Bison company, direction Thomas H. Ince, also with Selig and Universal, played in "Heart of California," Independent feature, with Bosworth in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," "Nearly a Lady," selected to play Buck Parvin in the Van Loan series of that name. Studio ad., Santa Barbara, Cal.

Judging from Mr. Acord's record, he should play a big part in not only the motion picture contest, but also the open events.

Let us hear from you all—the more the merrier. Isn't there some event in this list to which YOU are eligible? Remember, it costs you nothing to enter, and we are only waiting to hear from you. Eleanor Woodruff will shortly be seen on the screen again. Although Miss Woodruff's recent vacation has taken her away from active work she has not been absent from the picture houses, for many pictures in which she played leading parts have been shown, notably "Big Jim Garrity," on the Pathe program, and "The Island of Surprise" and "Britton of the Seventh" on the Vitagraph program. The vehicle chosen for her by the Frohman Amusement Company is "Jaffrey," dramatized from the novel by William J. Locke, in which she plays opposite C. Aubrey Smith.

Bennett Southard, leading man on the dramatic stage and in motion pictures, has been engaged to play opposite Mabel Taliaffero, in the Metro production now being made under the direction of Edward Carewe. Mr. Southard's latest engagement was arranged through the Amalgamated Photo Play Service.

Mme. Petrova, the Metro star, who began her professional career as a dramatic critic in London, has written her own scenario for a forthcoming production which the Popular Plays and Players will make for the Metro program. Aside from announcing that it is a vital story of to-day, laid in America, and dealing with the new value of sex standards, Mme. Petrova would not discuss the story.

Mme. Petrova would not consent to have the production made until she was assured everything she had written in the story will be presented upon the screen. The star recently sold a three-act play, "Salvation," in which she deals with the question of marriage and divorce. It is a breezy document, after the order of the Bernard Shaw plays, in which Mme. Petrova sets forth that a wife should be paid for the work she does in the home, and be considered a business partner in her husband's general affairs. "The Heart of Things," a volume of poems from the pen of Mme. Petrova, will soon be published.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

Los Angeles, July 1.

DIRECTOR GENERAL AL. E. CHRISTIE has found need of additional studio space for large sets, and has acquired possession of the quarter of a square facing on Sunset Boulevard, Hollywood, immediately west of the present studio. This is being enclosed, and will make possible the enlargement of the present stage, and give room for more dresing roms. The present studio, which served for the original Universal companies in California, later the home of the Sterling Motion Picture Company, and more recently the studio of the Quality Pictures Corporation, Mr. Christie has found too small to accommodate the activities of the two producing companies. He is using much larger sets than heretofore, as he is adapting the feature picture finish to one and two-reel comedies. The studio, when completed, will be ideal for such work.

"The Making Over of Mother," claims the attention of the Horace Davey Christie comedy company, and gives Neil Burns and Betty Compson the roles of newlyweds, who fear their happiness is to be blighted by her mother coming to make her home with them. But a friend, Ethel Lynn, aids the wife to overcome the difficulty. Hubby is away when mother arrives, and she is rushed off to a beauty parlor, and the work done there, changes her to a "bewitching young thing." Hubby sees her at a cafe, and there is a flirtation. Stella Adams appears as the mother.

One of the David Horsley Zoo elephants, has been rented by Al. E. Christie to be used in the comedy, "Some Legacy," in which a would-be married man inherits an elephant which serves to persuade his prospective father-in-law to hastily give his consent to the marriage of his daughter to the new owner of the elephant. Tootsie, the elephant, performs some good stunts, including that of pulling Harry Rattenberry, the father, through a window. The players are Billie Rhodes, Nolan Leary, Harry Rattenberry, Eddie Berry, Harry Hamm and Ethel Lynn.

A photoplay story has been furnished the Jesse L. Lasky Company by W. J. Hurlburt, entitled "The Big Sister," for Marie Doro, and shortly will be put in production in the hands of William C. deMille. Elliott Dexter will be leading man.

Wants Oil Well, Olive or Castor, But Must "Gush"

Director George Melford for the photodrama "The House of the Golden Windows," found the need of a gushing oil well, and then his troubles began. The need of such a well is delaying the completion of the subject. Melford advises he is not particular as to the brand of oil, stating it may be olive, coal, or castor, but he does want one that will gush. Several wells have been found, and a quantity of nitro-glycerine used in order to cause them to pour forth in a salubrious manner, but so far the director has been able to secure only a wheezy cough.

A very valuable curiosity has been added to the Lasky collection in the purchase of a Normandie spinning wheel. Cecil B. deMille discovered it in an antique shop in New Orleans recently. It is said to be more than three hundred years old, and the Lasky director-general prizes it so highly that he personally packed it for shipment to the studio. It now occupies a conspicuous place in his private office.

Director Frank Reicher has been selected to film the first Lou-Tellegen story, and Cleo Ridgely will play the opposite lead.

Upon the completion of "The Storm," now being filmed with Blanche Sweet in the stellar role, Lasky Director James Younge, will take up the making of "The Unconquered," with the same actress. Both of these subjects were especially written for this actress by Mrs. H. C. deMille, mother of Cecil B. and William C.

Anita King and Tom Meighan are to be co-starred in an early Lasky production, scenario for which is now being prepared. Miss King has been for the past several weeks, as the result of a strenuous tour on the McGaffey-Chautauqua circuit.

Fannie Ward, who has been in the East for two months purchasing new gowns, is expected to arrive in Los Angeles in the next day or two, and will immediately begin work in a picture under the direction of George Melford. The story for the photodrama was written by Edmund Mitchell, author of a number of successful novels, and has been adapted for the screen by Charles Sarver of the Lasky organization. Stars of the Lasky Company will give a tea in the star dressing room building green room, which will afford Miss Ward an opportunity to make a thorough display of her new wardrobe.

L-Ko Comedy Companies Greet Stern

All members of the four Universal L-Ko comedy companies, and those engaged in the production of the "Peg o' the Ring" serial, together with office, laboratory, and technical staff, assembled in front of the studio recently to greet the new general manager, Julius Stern, upon his arrival. Those who could double in brass were in great demand, and the battered instruments that have helped to make comedy in hundreds of reels, were very much in evidence when the new chief arrived. At the head of the receiving line was Abe Stern, brother of Julius, who presented him with a gigantic key to the film world's producing center. Stanley C. Kingsbury, who was formerly the New York representative of the L-Ko Company, and is now at the studio as business manager, was at Mr. Stern's elbow, and beside him were the directors, players, cameramen and others. The L-Ko and Stern companies now occupy the entire plant formerly used by the Universal Film Company at Sunset and Gower street, Hollywood, and while the new organization, which is composed of the Messrs. Stern, has not made an engagement, it is generally understood that following the "Peg o' the Ring" serial, they will star Francis Ford and Grace Cunard in five reel subjects.

At Universal City: (Left to right) Managers of Newspaper Enterprise Association Visit the Plant; Director Elfelt and His Company at Lunch; Harry Carey and His Cowboys

A new motion picture company has been formed at Santa Cruz, California, by Fred W. Swanton and W. D. Dalton, known as the Diamond S. D. Film Company. Leon D. Kent, former director for Western Lubin and the Universal, has been engaged, together with Nan Christie as leading woman; Jack Connally, leading man; Fred Unger, heavy; Peggy Rogers, ingenue, and others. The company has already made four subjects entitled "The Sea Urchin," in two reels; "Cyndia Lane's Sacrifice," "The Feud," and "The Spirit of The Breakers," each of one reel. The first four subjects have been sold to the Universal Company. The company now has in production "The Smuggler's Awakening," "The Renegade," and "Traced on the Sands."

Mr. Swanton has had many years experience as a theatre manager, having been engaged in that work all his life. It was at one of his theatres that William A. Brady gave his first theatrical performance, under the firm name of Brady-Webster Co., which produced "She."

Two Fatalities in Film Colony

Accidents of the week resulted in two fatalities, and two other members of the film colony being seriously injured. Monday evening, while returning to Santa Barbara from Los Angeles, Donald W. Rayburn, former Los Angeles newspaper man, who for the past eight months has been with the American Company as publicity writer, and manager of the publicity of "The Secret of the Submarine" serial, was killed. Rayburn came to Los Angeles with George Sargeant, now directing for the American, to witness the premier of Dixon's "Fall of a Nation," in the making of which, Sargeant served as director. After the performance, the two started by auto for the northern film city. While ascending Cahuenga Canyon grade between Hollywood and Universal City, Sargeant lost control of the car, and it dashed into a telephone pole. The pole broke and the upper portion of it fell, striking Rayburn on the head, killing him instantly. The body was brought to Los Angeles, and the funeral was held Thursday morning.

Ethel Burke, Who Has Just Joined the Universal Forces

Page Peters, an actor who has played juvenile parts for Balboa, Lasky, Morosco-Pallas and other companies, was drowned Thursday while swimming with friends at Hermosa Beach, California. He was caught by the rip tide when a short distance from the shore. The body was recovered after three hours. Peters leaves a wife who resides in Los Angeles.

Francis McDonald, playing an important juvenile part in the Universal three reel production "The Caravan," was injured Monday evening, while returning to his home from attending a dinner given at the home of Grace Cunard in Hollywood. He has since been unable to resume his work. The driver of the taxi, who was later found to be in an intoxicated condition, drove the machine into another one in the business district. Belle McDonald, not a relative of Francis, an actress in the same car at the time of the accident, was also injured by glass when she was thrown through the windshield.

George Wight, who has been in charge of the publicity department of the American Film Company at Santa Barbara,

Myrtle Gonzales and George Hernandez in "The Secret of the Swamp," Bluebird

Calif., has been transferred to the head of the scenario department, succeeding William Piggot. With the new work, Wight will continue to direct the publicity. He is a former New York and Chicago newspaper man, and came to the American studios from the San Francisco Examiner in February. Upon taking up his new position, Mr. Wight immediately sent out a call for good stories by trained or well known writers.

Arrival at U City

Arrivals of the week at U City from the eastern studio include Billy Garwood, Hobart Henley, Edith Roberts, George Felix, Ben Wilson, Irene Hunt, Florence Roberts, Howard Crompton and others. Manager Marshall Stedman of the employment department, has also added a number of new names to the stock list. Among these are Edith Johnson, for more than a year leading woman for the Selig Company, who will play leads for the 101 Bison Company; Edward Brady, late of Pathe Balboa serials, who will be under the direction of Billy Garwood; and Roy Stewart, for the past year with the American Company, who will play in the new Jaccard serial, "The Daughter of the U. S. A."

Fred Gambol has been added to the Lyons and Moran Nestor Comedy Company as character man. He has played at a number of coast studios, and is well known in photo play circles. Mrs. E. M. Ingleton, who has been scenario editor for the World Film Corporation, came to U City, and will there serve as assistant to Editor E. B. Lewis. Her work will consist principally of adapting well known novels for the screen.

Three new directors were added to the Universal staff besides those who arrived from the eastern studios. George Rice, who directed the productiosn of the Blazon Film Company at San Francisco, whose subjects were released on Paramount, is in charge of one company; Frank D. Ormston, art director, has started work filming a series of comedies; and Beverly Griffith, who has served in several important capacities at the studio, most recently in charge of securing material for the Animated Weekly, is making animal comedies featuring Victor Potel—and prominent members of the zoo. The title of the comedy is "The Missing Link."

A new policy has been adopted by the Universal, which will mean a continuation of changing of names. The rule provides that when a new player, who has not had previous motion picture experience, becomes a member of the stock company, the company will rename them. It is also provided that the player shall never use the name with any other company should they leave the Universal organization. Little Zoe Back, child actress, is to be known as Zoe DuRae. This is the only change announced for the week.

Cast Picked for "N" Patriotic Serial

The patriotic serial to be made by Jaques Jaccard for the Universal, originally known as "The Daughter of Tomorrow," has been titled, "The Daughter of the U. S. A.," and this title, it is thought, will be retained permanently. The cast has been selected for the serial, and includes.

Some Typical Scenes from "The Taming of Wild Bill," a Mustang-Mutual

Marie Walcamp in the star part, Jack Holt, Neal Hart, Bertram Grassby, Raymond Nye, L. M. Wells, Maude Emory, Roy Stewart, and a score or more of Universal champion cowboys. The story throughout the serial will deal with the abduction of an American heiress from a vast estate in Mexico left her by her father.

Director George Rice has taken up the making of a one reel stone quarry subject, with George Pearce, James L. Farley and Jane Bernoudy as principals. It has been entitled "Hard Rock."

William Garwood, who upon coming to the west coast was made director of a company, is in charge of filming "The Worm." It is a story of a "grind" at college, the butt of many jokes by his schoolmates, who finally turns and wins the day. Besides Garwood, who plays the leading part, Lois Wilson has been cast to appear as leading woman, and Edward Brady as heavy.

While waiting the arrival of his wardrobe, Ben Wilson has taken up the filming of a five reel picture for the Universal entitiled, "What Doth It Profit A Man?" It deals with a present day business man who overlooks giving his family the attention they should receive, in order to complete his conquest in the financial world. Neva Gerber, Malcolm Blevins, Carl Von Schiller, and A. B. Ault will be the principals in the picture. Tom Walsh has been named assistant to Wilson.

Frank D. Ormston, art director at the Universal, has become a director, and will film a series of one reel comedies with Edith Roberts and Gorge Felix as principals. Miss Roberts has played in a number of Imp and Red Feather subjects, and is spoken of as the youngest leading woman of the screen, she being but fourteen years of age. Felix, with this series makes his debut to the screen, his previous experience having been on the vaudeville stage. He is a brother of Joseph deGrasse, Universal director, and Sam deGrasse of the Fine Arts stock company.

The first picture to be made by Joseph LeBrandt, who recently arrived at U City from New York, is to be entitled "As The Candle Burns.'" It is to consist of one reel, and the principals will be Irene Hunt and Gene Hersholt.

It's "Easy Money" for the Nestorites

The Nestorites are filming "Easy Money," in which Eddie Lyons appears as the young man sent from home by his father because of his escapades. He falls in with Moran as Potts, the detective, who is working on an investigation of the rise in the price of beer for the association of stevedores. This brings to light that the young man's father is the cause of the beverage going up, and he pays his son and the detective well to forget what they have discovered. Incidentally this makes it possible for the son to continue his love affair with his father's ward, Marcia Moore. With the completion of this, Lee Moran will dig out his favorite corset, for he is next to appear in "He Maid Me." It's all about an election bet in which one agrees to do any stunt the other suggests if he lose, and so Lee becomes the maid in the home of the winner.

The "Timothy Dobbs" series, number seven, takes the would-be photoplayer, Carter DeHaven, to the role of a ribbon counter clerk. As such he sells a quantity to a movie star, and gets into the studio to deliver it, thus securing another opportunity to show the directors what he can do as an actor.

Two of the series of one reel stories featuring Vola Smith, made by Director Clifford Elfelt, have been completed. One is "The Song of the Woods," and the other "The Poet's Story." The supporting cast for both of these include Raymond Nye, Mark Robbins, Edwin Brown and Charles Gunn.

A burlesque, "Her Dramatic Career," is being filmed by Joker Director Allen Curtis from a scenario by Ben Cohn, which gives Gale Henry the part of an amateur playwright with great ambitions. An actor without funds learns her secret, and she becomes angel, leading woman, and dramatist as the result of his persuasion. He leaves with the box-office receipts, and she is then forced to find her former lover, the small town undertaker, constable and squire.

Another one reel picture being filmed is titled "The Devil's Own." It is a western melodrama with Harry Carey, Olive Fuller Golden and Joe Rickson. George E. Marshall is in charge of filming the subject.

Director George Cochran is making a one reel subject "By Conscience' Eye," a drama in which an ambitious wife starts to elope, but finding a plaything of her child, is brought to realize the importance of her act and returns home and there is a happy reunion. Rex D. Roselli, Marjorie Ellison, Maxfield Stanley, and Little Virginia Corban are the principals.

Cleo Madison Gives Up Her Company

Cleo Madison, who has been directing for more than a year has given up her company and is to appear in five reel Universal photoplays. The first is titled "The Chalice of Sorrow," or "A Reincarnation of Tosca," which was written, and is being produced by Rex Ingram. Miss Madison appears in the part of an American prima donna singing at the City of Mexico, where she becomes the central figure in an international difficulty, because of a Mexican governor becoming infatuated with her. A particularly strong cast has been selected as supporting members in this, the list including Charles Cummings, John McDermott, Blanche White, Wedgewood Howell, Howard Crampton, Albert MacQuarrie and Rhea Haines.

May Gaston, who has always appeared in parts depicting a sweet disposition, is portraying another characterization for the camera as the woman who married the first man she met to spite her lover. This photoplay is titled "The Spite Husband." The woman has wealth and lets the man know he is to be husband in name only, but Crane Wilbur is an artist, appears as too good a lover, and so, they fall in love. Robert Broadwell is being held responsible for the direction, and Jessie Barnett and Claude Mortenson make up the cast.

Elsie M. Kallahan, who recently came out from New York, has contributed her first scenario to the David Horsley staff. It is "Fate's Decision,' and teaches a lesson to Mr. Business Man who forgets he has a family until he discovers another man is taking his place. William Clifford is the husband, Margaret Gibson, the butterfly wife, and Fred Montague appears in the character role.

Bessie Barriscale is next to be seen in the role of an ambitious daughter of a small town mill worker, in the Ince Triangle drama "The Payment," which is referred to as among the strongest works of C. Gardiner Sullivan. The moral of the drama is "No matter how small the price demanded for wrong-doing, it is too high." The drama deals a blow to married men who bargain with struggling girls, and also to the girls themselves who sacrifice their honor for earthly success. Charles Miller, Kathlyn Kirkwood, Thos. S. Guise, and Gertrude Claire are to be seen in "The Payment." It was directed by Raymond B. West, and an important feature is the new and artistic manner in which the "dissole" has been used by West and his photographer, J. D. Harriot. West is himself an expert cameraman, he having first learned that part of the cinema art.

Since the filming of "The Payment," West has had a four weeks' vacation which he has spent in Honolulu. He arrived home this week bronzed to the hair, anxious to get back of the megaphone. A story is being prepared for him now. With West back on the lot, all Ince producers will be at work, the total being six.

Business Manager E. H. Allen and Scenario Editor C. Gardiner Sullivan of the Ince studios, this week added Olga Printzlau to the scenario department at this studio. Miss Printzlau has been affiliated with several of the most prominent coast companies, and has written a number of very successful photodramas.

"Rocky Mountain Canary" Wins a Home

While working near the crest of Mt. Baldy recently, a baby burro walked into the scene being made under the direction of Reginald Barker, and by this act, the long eared infant, which weighs less than fifty pounds, won a home. The action of the burro added realism to the scene, and Barker borrowed trouble by keeping it in additional scenes. As other scenes of the same atmosphere were to be made at the studio, it was necessary to purchase the animal and take it to Culver City. There it is the pet of many of the players, and Enid Markey, playing opposite Frank Keenan in the mountain story, has adopted it as her playmate.

Ince Director Walter Edwards and a company of players including Dorothy Dalton, William Desmond and others, who were presented from making exteriors for a desert island picture by fogs at Monterey, have now gone to St. Clemente Island, off Lower California, and are now braving the dangers that threaten because of the Mexican difficulties. The troup will be absent more than a week.

All members of the Thomas H. Ince producing staff at Culver City paid honor to the American flag, when workmen finished the erection of a one hundred foot flag pole. In the presence of the army of film folk gathered at the instructions of Business Manager E. H. Allen, Bessie Barriscale, dressed in the costume of a daughter of Ireland, hoisted the red, white and blue to the top of the pole, while the studio orchestra struck up "The Star Spangled Banner."

Inceville cowboys have organized a baseball team, and recently defeated an aggregation representing the Los Angeles Burbank Theatre, by a score of ten to one. The Ince Triangle players are all members of the Inceville staff.

What is said to be the first photoplay synopsis ever written in the first person, was completed this week by J. G. Hawks, and shortly is to be put into production at the Ince studios. This style of composition was followed by the writer as he found he could in this way, better portray the principal character, which is that of a young Englishman.

Margaret Gibson in "The Good-for-Nothin' Brat," Horsley-Mutual

J. C. Taylor, cameraman of several years experience, has been added to the staff of the Morosco-Pallas organization.

Fritzi Brunette, the beautiful Selig leading woman, has been cast to play the part of an artist's model in a three reel subject titled, "Out of the Mists," which has been assigned to Director Robert Daly for production. The early scenes of the story show the separation of parents, and a child being placed in a foundling asylum. The mother falls to the lowest ebb of human morality, ultimately forced to sell newspapers for a livelihood. The girl grown to womanhood becomes the model of the artist, and her life is about to be wrecked by her father, who does not know her. The mother learns of her former husband's attention to the beautiful woman, and prevents him from wasting her life. Supporting Miss Brunette will be Guy Oliver as the arist, Jane Keckler, the mother, and Frank Clark the heavy.

"The Beast" Shown to Carlos

A Carlos, general representative of the Fox Film Corporation, who is spending some time at the Los Angeles studio, was a critical witness of the showing of Director Richard Stanton's first production, "The Beast," which has George Walsh and Anna Luther in the featured parts. The film shows a part of the hardships that befell the players. The story is that of a young rancher who accompanies his cowboys to the village on payday to see that they do not incapacitate themselves by too much celebration, and there he imbibes too freely.

Under the influence of liquor he becomes the beast, kidnaps a beautiful girl, and attempts to carry her off. Followed by roughs of the mountain country, he attempts to ford the Colorado River at the rapids, and is carried far down stream. The water revives him, and makes amends for his fiendish behavior. The current of the Colorado River was so swift that the players found it necessary to tie themselves together. The cameraman stood in water up to his neck to film many of the scenes. Every member of the company suffered sunburn, several members being unable to work for two or three days.

Director R. A. Walsh and company playing in "The Honor System," which is to be of ten reels, from a story by Henry Christine Warnack, dramatic editor of the Los Angeles Times, has made scenes to be added to the subject. They chartered two trains and worked four days in the vicinity between Los Angeles and Redondo.

Stock at the E. and R. Jungle Film Company dropped to sea level literally and figuratively—this week, when the company was working at the ocean front in the making of scenes for 'Perils of the Beach." Napoleon, the chimpanzee, decided to explore the hills nearby and when the back of Lou Bristol, the trainer, was turned, Nap made his get-a-way. It was several hours before he was recovered. The current picture shows what the chimps can do on the beach. Constance Johnson as the water nymph, takes a bumpy trip down the sand when she hides inside a barrel, and Napoleon starts it for the water's edge. Virginia Bayes, Virginia Ames, and Charles Carter are the principals with Joseph J. Franz as director.

A new California corporation, to be known as Superior Films, Inc., will soon file papers with the Secretary of State for the operation of a commercial studio in the Knickerbocker Building in the business district of Los Angeles. Robert Brackett, an experienced cameraman, producer, and enterprise manager, is to be general manager. The studio will have all kinds of natural and artificial light effects, and will specialize in commercial photography, titling, novelty and educational subjects to order.

The success of W. H. Clune with the state rights picture, "Where Are My Children," handled by the All Star Feature Distributors, has been such that he has booked the film for the fourth consecutive week at Clune's Broadway, Los Angeles. This is the first picture to be shown more than a week at this theatre in the past three years, and marks a new record for this section of the city for this size of house.

"NEWS" IS SUPERIOR TO OTHER PICTURE TRADE PAPERS IS HIS VIEW

Motion Picture News,
New York City.
Gentlemen:—

It gives us great pleasure to add our name to the already long list of those who realize the superiority of the "News" as a motion picture trade journal. It reaches us before any of the other publications and we consider it a valuable asset to our business.

With best wishes for your continued success, we beg to remain,
Very truly yours,
The Nolen Amusement Company,
Richard Nolen, General Manager,
Haskell, Texas.

Manager G. H. Atwood of Los Angeles International Film Service, has booked the Hearst News Pictorial for Miller's Theatre, and Clune's Broadway house.

Production Record at Signal Studios

The Signal studio producing staff believe a new record for efficiency production has been made in the filming of "Judith of The Cumberlands," by Director J. P. McGowan, he having completed the filming in exactly two weeks' time. The film has in no way been slighted in an effort to finish it at an early date, but progress was possible, because everything needed for the production was ready before actual filming was commenced. With but one exception, all members of the cast appear in character parts, the one exception being that of Leo D. Maloney, who plays the part of Creed Bonbright. Helen Holmes, in the stellar role, portrays the most decided character part she has ever attempted, and the result, studio folks say, is most gratifying.

Director J. P. McGowan will next take up the filming of "The Manager of B. and A." Wallace MacDonald has been specially engaged by the American Company to play juvenile lead opposite Mary Miles Minter, in her first Mutual release, "Youth's Endearing Charm," now in production.

J. Farrell Macdonald has been added to the producing staff of the Keystone Company, and will shortly take up the filming of comedies. He will be remembered as a director for the Biograph, following several years of experience with other coast companies.

William S. Hart, when asked for a story regarding his present international boundary soldier of fortune story, gave out the fact that he is making the most spectacular scenes for what he declared to be "the biggest drama I have ever done." This story, which is by Monty M. Katterjohn, is said to give timely treatment of preparedness against attacks such as the recent Columbus, New Mexico, assault. Hart and all his cowpunchers are working in the Santa Monica Mountains for remaining scenes.

Ince Culver City property men are having more trials this week, they claim, than befell Job, and the cause is an Irish story by C. Gardiner Sullivan which features Bessie Barriscale as the sweet-faced colleen. Pigs, cows, donkeys, chickens, ducks, geese and dogs are required for barnyard scenes, and Director Charles Miller is sharing in the difficulties in trying to persuade the animals and fowls to de their parts right. Besides Charles Ray, who plays the lead opposite Miss Barriscale, Charles K. French, Agnes Herring, Alice Taffe, Marjorie Lawrence and Peggy O'Connell have roles in this.

The second annual rodeo given by Thomas H. Ince, is dated for July 2, 3, and 4, and all cowboys of the film colony have been invited to participate. The net proceeds will be given to the Actors' Endowment Fund, and the rodeo will be held at the Roller Coaster enclosure at Venice. The winners of first prizes here will be sent to rodeos held in Washington and Colorado, and the winners at these will participate in the national rodeo at Sheepshead Bay.

Lavele Is Appointed Manager of "U" Exchange in Clarksburg, W. Va.; Miners Strong for Pictures, Says Carrick

JOSEPH LAVELE, formerly of Exhibitor's Film Exchange of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., has been appointed manager at Clarksburg, West Virginia of the new Universale Film Exchange branch of the Interstate Film Company. This exchange will supply all the territory around the Blue Ridge east of Huntingdon and west of Cumberland. This is all soft coal region and C. V. Carrick, district manager of Interstate, whose recent trip through the country resulted in the formation of this new exchange, has much of interest to relate.

Mr. Carrick says motion pictures are the principal relaxation of the miners. Every town, however small, has its picture house, no matter how crude. Even a village of 400 to 500 inhabitants will have one or two shows a week and these exhibitors make money at that.

Their films need not be new, hence their service price is small. A tin pan piano makes music that sounds luxurious to these horny handed sons of toil.

As the price charged is invariably ten cents and as every soul in the town who can walk, hobble or crawl goes, it can be seen readily that to him a princely profit accrues every open night to the thrifty proprietor.

Although "Dollars and the Woman," the Lubin V-L-S-E release, was triumphantly passed by the Court of Common Pleas over the censors edict of disapproval recently, it has not yet been shown in Pennsylvania. It was advertised for the Victoria theatre beginning June 19, but another picture was substituted at the last minute.

It is reported that the censors, not relishing their defeat, are trying to get the Lubin Company to modify the picture according to censorial ideas, which the producers are not willing to do. The censors having the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, can prohibit the showing of a film with such an appeal pending. Unless a compromise is effected shortly the case will doubtless be appealed.

"Where Are My Children?" is still in the hands of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors. In New Jersey it is beating all records. About one hundred New Jersey theatres have already booked it. Philadelphians can take it in at Atlantic City, where it is having the second week's run at the Nixon theatre.

Pavlowa, in her "Dumb Girl of Portici," is booked in fifty theatres up to date. The Supreme Feature Film Service, Inc., which handles these features, finds itself so pushed for room already, although only a few weeks at 1,325 Vine street, that Manager Harry Grelle is looking around for additional space. "Business," said he, "is so much better than we anticipated we must have more room at once."

Some of the towns in which Leon Netter has booked "Spoilers" are Altoona, New Castle, Wilkes-Barre, Bethlehem, South Bethlehem, Scranton, Pittston, in Pennsylvania; Hoboken, West Hoboken, Union Hill, Montclair, Dover. Others are bobbing up daily.

Hall, Kansas City, Will Attend the Chicago Convention; Young Formerly in Cincinnati, on Road for Mutual

E. H. WACHTER, manager of the Fox Film Corporation, Kansas City, Mo., recently went to Nevada, Missouri.

George Kleine books Billie Burke serial for the Willis-Wood theatre. A. C. Melvin, manager of the Kleine office, left June 27 for Wichita, Kansas, to be gone the rest of the week.

The Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces that it has the "Iron Claw" running in forty-one houses in Kansas City, and the serial "Who's Guilty?" for which it recently took the agency, is now booked in nineteen theatres.

M. A. Levy, president of the United Film Service, Chicago, Ill., and his brother, Joe Levy, Los Angeles, California, went to Kansas City last week to look over the office, of which A. A. Chatkin is manager. M. A. Levy announced that Joe Levy would succeed Mr. Chatkin, who will be given an office in some larger city.

G. B. Howe, Associated Film Service Company, has been trying to secure a contract for the "Hans and Fritz" serial for the vicinity of Missouri and Kansas. Mr. Howe recently put William Sillman, formerly properietor of the Lyric theatre, Kansas City, Kansas, in charge of the poster department. Mr. Sillman is an experienced exchange man, and with his addition to the company, Mr. Howe expects success for that department of the exchange.

E. J. Hall, Western Film Exchange, will attend the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America Convention to be held at Chicago in July. Other exchange men will probably go.

E. E. Young, formerly of the Cincinnati office of the Bluebird Exchange, is now working on the road for the Mutual Film Corporation. Frank E. Owens, formerly with the Kansas City Feature Film Company, is also traveling for the Mutual Film Corporation.

The wife of "Nate" Block, president of the Center Amusement Company of St. Joseph, Missouri, died last week.

FULLER CONCEIVES ADVERTISING STUNT FOR WORLD FILMS

George W. Fuller, in charge of the World Film Exchange at 3626 Olive street, St. Louis, conceived the idea of advertising World Film pictures in the Sunday Globe Democrat in the issue of June 18, giving a list of the World features to be shown during the week at local houses, giving the names of the theatres, and the dates on which the pictures were to be shown. The advertisement appeared at the head of the "Movie Directory" column, which is made up of a number of leading neighborhood motion picture theatre advertisements.

The Mutual Film Corporation Exchange, at 1311 Pine street, St. Louis, has decided to discontinue the handling of supplies and various lines of motion picture theatre accessories. Fred A. Keller, manager of the exchange says that all the time and energy that was formerly devoted to several lines of manufacture, will now be concentrated on the matter of placing the Mutual program.

EXHIBITORS BOOK WORLD PICTURES FROM "NEWS" ADVERTISEMENT, SAYS GOLDSTONE

Manager Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha says his is the only exchange in that part of the country to get additional copies of each picture on all releases at this time. "Business is so good we need them to supply the demand," he said. Goldstone is delighted with the reception given the Brady-made World Film pictures.

"I am convinced the advertising they did in MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been a great aid to our efforts," he said. "Orders began coming in for them almost before our salesmen were on the road. I am convinced more every day that exhibitors read the advertisements for pictures, and go a whole lot by what the advertisements say."

GENERAL EXCHANGE IN OMAHA NOW A BUYING CENTER

Edward A. Schuster, traveling auditor for the General, spent a week at the Omaha exchange recently. He commented at length on the remarkable gains made in business since the exchange recently came under the management of C. W. Taylor and ceased to be only a distributing center. The Omaha exchange is now a buying center.

How Will You Go?

WILL you attend the Chicago Convention? Will you exhibit at the exposition there?

If you can't do either or both there's still an excellent alternative.

You can be there the moment the exposition opens; you can mingle freely with exhibitors and territorial buyers, etc.; you can show your product to them and talk to them—

Through the pages of the Convention Issue of Motion Picture News.

Moreover you can talk to your customers not only during Convention week but over their desks for many, many weeks to come; for this issue will have a permanent value, a constant reference value rarely given a regular issue in this field.

Remember—the Convention Issue of Motion Picture News, date of July 22, will be in Chicago Wednesday, July 12—earliest at the exposition with all the latest news and announcements.

COMICAL CARTERS
CLEVER COMEDIES

CARTER DE HAVEN—The Inimitable—is working in a series of brilliant comedies, soon to be released by the Universal, that are so clean, wholesome and different—so far ahead of the cheap, the vulgar and the suggestive, as to be a genuine revelation.

Great comedy acting; screamingly funny, intensely human situations; lavish production and brilliant supporting cast give to the entire series a distinction never before attained in film comedies. Beat your competitors to it. Wire your nearest Universal Exchange NOW for full information.

Universal Film Manufacturing Co.

CARL LAEMMLE, President

"The Largest Film Manufacturing Concern in the Universe"

The Universal Film Mfg. Co. announces copyrighted titles of recent and forthcoming releases as follows: "American Home," "Harvest," "The Whispered Name," "Preparedness." These have no connection with the Carter De Haven Series.

BALDSDON ADDS EHRGOTT TO HIS STAFF IN BOSTON

Manager Balsdon of the V-L-S-E in Boston has added A. L. Ehrgott to his staff. Mr. Ehrgott is popular throughout New England and especially Maine. He was formerly in charge of the general office at Bangor, and later at New Haven, Conn. Mr. Balsdon is booking Big Four films consistently at the Beacon, Park, Orpheum, Bijou, Fenway and Globe, Boston. He reports good vacation business.

The Eastern Feature Film Corporation, Inc., Herman Rifkin, manager, reports the addition to the sales force of Mr. Rambonnet, formerly star salesman of the General Film Company. The Eastern is pushing "One Day," sequel to "Three Weeks" and also films featuring John and Emma Ray. Their serial, "The Yellow Menace," will be on the screen August 21, and bookings are being made. They have the New England rights for "Diana," recently playing at the Strand, New York. "Better pictures" is the slogan of Manager Rifkin.

R. D. Marson, manager of George Kleine and Kleine-Edison features, reports signing twenty-two new houses for Billie Burke in "Gloria's Romance" the past week. The theatres report unprecedented success for the film.

Walter Preston, manager of the New Bedford theatre, gave a clambake to exchange men and exhibitors last week. Forty-five attended and later repaired to the New Bedford theatre where the general good time was continued.

Fred M. Murphy, eastern manager of the Unicorn, left Boston the middle of the week to open a new Unicorn exchange in New Haven, Conn. He had just returned from a trip through New York and Canadian territory.

J. W. Mullen, formerly manager of the Mutual in Albany, is the new manager of the Universal for New England, vice Mr. Shepard.

BILLY MORAN MARRIES IN DENVER

Billy Moran, well known among the exchange men and exhibitors of the Intermountain territory, and Nellie Fishback were married in Denver the latter part of June. Moran has served in the capacity of exchange manager for the Mutual in Salt Lake City, later went to Denver to manage the Universal exchange.

With the news of his marriage came the report that he will manage the Kleine-Edison exchange at Salt Lake City. Moran has many friends in the territory and is one of the youngest exchange managers in the business.

PICTURES MAGAZINE IS HELP TO EXHIBITORS, SAYS BUGBEE

Circulation of The Pictures Magazine, the Metro "house organ," has jumped to more than 20,000, according to Karl A. Bugbee, Metro manager in the Crescent City, throughout the states of Louisiana and Mississippi. Ten thousand copies, approximately, are distributed each week in the two states through Mr. Bugbee's office.

Backed up by an extensive advertising campaign in Louisiana and Mississippi country newspapers, circulation of The Pictures Magazine is daily growing by leaps and bounds. Exhibitors who run the Metro program are ordering the magazine in quantities of thousands. They have found it of great help to their business, inasmuch as the name of the theatre is printed on the front page of the magazine.

Mutual Exchange in Washington Located in Commodious Quarters, Each Department a Model of Efficiency

AGAIN the Mutual Exchange of the national capital has outgrown its quarters and has been compelled to move into larger and more commodious offices. Due to the increased business, the additional releases and the extra prints now being operated from this exchange of Mutual-Chaplin's and special features, the Washington office has just taken over the commodious quarters of 419-421 Ninth street.

The new location is just across the street from the one just vacated, in the building equipped by Tom Moore for motion picture enterprises. Located in the heart of the film district, it is an ideal spot for a film exchange.

Every arrangement in the new home is pleasing to the eye. The seven distinct departments are as follows: service, including the film and advertising accessories; sales; clerical, cashier; booking and film record; supply and executive. Each of these while separate in itself is easily accessible to every other department, so that work is facilitated without being hampered.

A survey of the new quarters is ample proof that these two features have been given the careful consideration of an expert. In the Advertising-Accessories department, with Mrs. Emma Walters in charge, there has been constructed in a systematic lay-out over 15,000 feet of shelving for the easy handling of lithographs, photographs, slides, newspaper cuts, heralds and press sheets, each so indexed that any paper or advertising material for any film, old or recent, may be obtained at a moment's notice.

Adjoining this is a spacious film room with Hugh Bierman in charge, to which is connected the film inspection department, equipped with the most modern all steel film inspection tables. Provision has been made that no film shall be exposed except when it is in charge of an employee.

The sales department, presided over by Messrs. Abby, Price and Boggs, is in the extreme front of the building, with ample desk room for each. A special feature of this is a display department, separated from the sales representatives by a low railing, for examination by prospective customers of lithographs, photographs, cuts and advertising matter for the exploitation of films. This permits the exhibitor to see at once, while making contracts for films, what will be his display, and offers a more intelligent understanding between customer and sales manager.

The manager's office is located in the central front part of the building, adjoining the sales department on one side and the clerical force on the other side. The latter is under the efficient charge of Annie Wood. Mr. Cunningham's office is attractive and neat—nothing obtrusive in its furnishings. It seems to invite a free business talk away from the hum of the exchange working, of which this particular office forms the hub.

Beyond the manager's office is located the schedule department presided over by Clara Anderson and next to this is the cashier's office, with W. K. Harlow in charge. The cashier occupies a strategic position inasmuch as he can observe all deliveries of films and advertising accessories and at the same time his department is in close touch with the other clerks.

GOLDSTONE FINDS BUSINESS HELPS IN SCRAP BOOK COMPILED FROM ITEMS IN MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha keeps leather bound books for his roadmen, in which reviews of plays, advertising ideas, and other "pointers" clipped from Motion Picture News are placed. These books contain extracts from practically every issue for the last year or eighteen months, and are a constant source of aid to the roadmen.

"I wouldn't trade these books today for a big sum," said Goldstone. The items, whether reviews, advertising ideas, or others, are classified and can be turned to in an instant. To their constant use Manager Goldstone attributes some of the remarkable success of the Omaha exchange.

APPLEGATES WILL WAR ON MEXICO WITH TWO 6-SHEETS OF "WHO'S GUILTY?"

The Mexican War situation seems to have its effect on J. S. Applegate, manager of the Denver Pathe Exchange. After hearing that the state militia had been called to mobilize, Applegate started out single handed on a trip through New Mexico. The only weapons on his person were two six-sheets of "Who's Guilty?"

We are aware of the fact that the Mexican sharp shooters hit any object they might chance to aim at and Applegate only weighs about two hundred and fifty pounds. He is expected back in Denver some day—within the next three weeks with his suit-case jammed with new contracts for Pathe service.

ST. JOHN-BRENON VISITS NEW YORK

Chandos St. John-Brenon, the manager of the William Fox interests in Montreal, was a recent visitor in New York. He devoted most of time to discussing Canadian conditions with the Canadian district manager, L. T. Rogers. He reports a fine steady business and offers four theatres in one block, all within sight of each other and seven runs on the main thoroughfare, as an example of the drawing power and quality of a Fox Feature.

BRYANT JOINS SALES FORCE OF V-L-S-E IN ATLANTA

W. C. Brandon, manager in Atlanta, Ga., for the V-L-S-E, Inc., announces the appointment of F. P. Bryant, formerly with Pathe and Fox, to a position on the sales force of the Atlanta office. Mr. Bryant with travel the territory in North and South Carolina, formerly handled by Mr. Simpson.

Mr. Simpson's home is in Meridian, Miss., and he is being transferred to that state and Alabama with which he is more familiar.

Mr. Bryant's home is in Charlotte, N. C. He knows all the exhibitors in North and South Carolina and is considered one of the best posted men in the southeastern territory.

C. A. Meade, Dallas manager, announces the appointment of A. W. Plues to a position on his sales force. Mr. Plues will travel Texas territory, formerly handled by W. B. Nelson.

In the New York office, three employees who started as office boys have been promoted. S. Charles Einfeld has been given charge of the records of the purchasing department under Siegel. Milton Cohn has charge of the mailing department, and Munroe Schram has been taken into the sales promotion department.

DOMINION EXCLUSIVES, LTD., PLACES FOX FEATURES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA THEATRES

The Dominion Exclusives, Limited, of Vancouver, B. C., which has just secured the distribution rights for Fox feature films in western Canada, has closed a contract with Manager Hector Quagliotti of the Colonial theatre in Vancouver. "The Two Orphans" was the opening attraction. Private showings of this feature and "Samson" were given recently at the Colonial, and several film men were on hand to look over the new films, which made a very favorable impression.

Mr. Quagliotti plans to run the Fox pictures for an entire week, and this plan is also being followed by Manager Clifford Denham of the Royal Victoria theatre in Victoria.

The Dominion theatre in Nanaimo, B. C., has also contracted for Fox service, as has Manager William Hanscher of the Royal theatre in New Westminster.

UNIVERSAL PROMOTES ZIERLER TO MANAGERSHIP OF 23RD STREET EXCHANGE

Sam Zierler, who has been associated with Hy. Gainsborg at the West Twenty-third Street branch of the Universal Film Company, has been made sole manager of the exchange. Mr. Gainsborg became manager of the Mecca Exchange of the Universal, succeeding the Kramer brothers, Sam and Earl, who are now in charge of the Bluebird booking.

Mr. Zierler is considered one of the best bookers in the film business. He entered the field in 1909, with the Paramount Film Exchange. In the following year he was associated with Steiner's Exchange, with Jules Bernstein, J. C. Graham, of the Mutual and late in the same year, 1910, came to the Universal as a booker under M. H. Hoffman.

METRO OPENS EXCHANGE IN CINCINNATI

The Metro Pictures Corporation has opened an exchange in Cincinnati, Ohio, where R. A. Morrison, who is thoroughly conversant with the locality and the work entrusted to him, will be in charge. The new offices are located at 532 Walnut street, in the centre of the film activity of the Queen City.

All the business handed in that district heretofore by J. S. Skirboll, general manager of the Pittsburgh offices, has been turned over to the Cincinnati exchange. Trade boosters will be sent over the new territory in anticipation of making the Cincinnati Metro Exchange one of the busiest ones west of Pittsburgh and south of Chicago.

GREATER FEATURES EXCHANGE OPENS IN SEATTLE

A state rights film exchange has been opened at Seattle, Wash., and is known as the Greater Features. This enterprise is owned by Jack Lannon and George P. Endert. The latter will act as manager of the new corporation. The exchange will have a representative in the eastern market and also one in Los Angeles.

At present they have purchased the rights for "The Dumb Girl of Portici," the Universal Pavlowa picture for Washington, Oregon, Montana and Idaho, and also the psychological problem picture, "Where Are My Children?" for the same territory. Endert has been engaged in the film business in the Seattle territory for the past six years.

SALKIN IN KLEINE NEW ORLEANS OFFICE

Leo Salkin, formerly special representative out of the George Kleine office in New York, has been named to fill a position similar to that with the New Orleans office. Mr. Salkin is to handle "Gloria's Romance," the Billie Burke serial going strong in the South. Mr. Salkin now is on a tour of Louisiana, Alabama and Mississippi.

BROTHER OF HENRY B. WALTHALL ENTERS FILM INDUSTRY THROUGH V-L-S-E

Another member of the family that produced Henry B. Walthall, "The Mansfield of Photodrama," has cast his lot with the film industry.

W. C. Brandon, Atlanta manager of the V-L-S-E, announces that Wallace Walthall has been appointed to a position in the booking department of that exchange. Happily, the announcement was deferred to be given out at a dinner tendered the famous Henry B. by the Atlanta Screen Club recently. The Essanay star was making a visit to his home in Columbiana, Ala., and on his way back to Chicago stopped off for two days in Atlanta, where he was feted by the Screen Club.

V-L-S-E- PLACES RECORD ORDER FOR PAPER ON SELIG ATHLETIC RELEASE

One of the largest orders for paper advertising a one-reel subject ever filled has just been sent out by Joseph Partridge, New York exchange manager of the V-L-S-E Inc., for two of the Keeney houses in New York City.

These two houses have booked the Selig Atheltic Series, and for the first release ordered one hundred one-sheet posters each. The two hundred sheets will be thickly placed in store windows and on billboards in the immediate vicinity of the theatres, advertising the subject.

SOUTHEASTERN FILM BUYS RIGHTS TO "THE UNBORN" FOR 9 STATES

New York and Southern capital has bought the state rights for Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi for "The Unborn," and will exploit this production through its exchange, the Southeastern Film Company. No price was stated but it is understood a considerable money changed hands.

William F. Niel, a Southern film man and exhibitor who is favorably known in the Southeast, will have charge of the new exchange, in addition to his duties as manager of the Majestic theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

LUCAS GUEST OF PEARCE ON BOARD YACHT SPITFIRE

Complimentary to Arthur Lucas, of the New York office of the Triangle Film Corporation, J. Eugene Pearce, head of Josiah Pearce and Sons, exhibitor magnates of New Orleans, was host to Mr. Lucas and a few other New Orleans film men, on board his yacht Spitfire. The film men spent a whole day on Lake Ponchartrain, and returned, a happy and enthusiastic crowd, only after they had captured a barrel of fish. There was a supper afterwards at the Southern Yacht Club.

VAUGHN CALLED TO DUTY BY UNCLE SAM

Cecil Vaughn, assistant manager of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, was also an inspector with the First Battalion of the Fourth infantry, Nebraska National Guard, so now Manager Max Weisfeldt is without an assistant.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Censorship from Synopses Is Plan in Australia

Special to Motion Picture News.

Sydney, N. S. N., June 1.

ON Tuesday evening 24th of May, the Williamson Photoplay house, Theater Royal, was unable to accommodate half of the crowds that were waiting for admission, to view the "Birth of a Nation." On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday it was repeated. Under the circumstances therefore the management decided to extend the season for an indefinite period. This was accomplished by taking another copy of the feature out of bond. The people of this city have just begun to realize what a "great" picture they almost missed. The cut in prices of admission had a great deal to do with the falling off in attendance, most people believing that the film was not as good as it was "cracked up to be." Another belief that the J. C. Williamson publicity experts had to fight, was the fact that with perhaps one exception, every picture that has been presented at high prices in the city, has eventually found its way to the smaller suburban houses where the public have witnessed it for less than half the original prices. Apparently they thought the "Nation" would be treated similarly. But as the J. C. W. firm made the definite announcement that the features would not be exhibited in any other theatre in Sydney, the picturegoers thought that they had better get there in a hurry. This probably accounts for the enormous rush on the intended last nights. The picture will now be continued for an indefinite period.

"The Chalice of Courage," by Cyrus Townsend Brady, has been widely read in this country, and the appearance of Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon Feature of the same name scored heavily in consequence. This picture, by the way, is the first Blue Ribbon to be screened for a considerable period, but Australasian Films Limited announces that it will be releasing several in the near future, the next being the "Island of Regeneration."

"The Two Orphans," a Fox feature with Theda Bara and Jean Sothern, which was orginally intended to re-open the Royal as a continuous theatre on conclusion of the "Nation," was screened at Waddington's Globe and King's Cross recently.

Other features include "Fatherhood," Universal, "The Bridge," Metro, "The Golden Lotus," which features Regina Badet, and "Chimmie Fadden out West," Lasky.

Fraser Films Limited, which has the sole rights for all Universal-Trans-Atlantic Features, announce that it will shortly be releasing the following pictures: "The White Scar" with Hobart Bosworth, the first Red Feather Feature to appear in Sydney; "Landon's Legacy" with Warren Kerrigan"; and also in the near future Anna Pavlowa in "The Dumb Girl of Portici." Pictures featuring Louise Lovely, known in this city as Louise Carbasse, have also been secured by the above exchange. All of the above productions will be screened at the Fraser's own theatre, the Haymarket, which is the only first-run Universal Feature house in Sydney.

The "Supreme Test," with Henrietta Crosman, is to be screened shortly at the Haymarket.

Triangle Program

The Triangle Program once more consists of two Ince-Kay-bee subjects, namely, "Aloha Oe" and "Matrimony." Keystone re-introduces two comedians who were popular here some years ago—Weber and Fields in "The Best of Enemies." It is a curious co-incidence that the trial scene in "Aloha Oe" is almost a replica of the one appearing in a current legitimate attraction "On Trial." Willard Mack will soon be answering a number of letters from Australian "fans" if he appears so regularly in pictures shown here, three in succession, and the above remark is fully justified by the writer having overheard some very complimentary opinions of Mr. Mack. Enid Markey is not the success here—as far as public opinion goes—as she apparently is in America.

The Co-Operative Film Exchange of Sydney, following the release of such successful serials as "The Black Box" and "Broken Coin" has announced the release of "The Purple Iris"—which I believe flourished in America as "Under the Purple Crescent." Ola Jane Humphrey, the star of this series, is well-known here, having appeared a few years ago in support of Charles Waldron in "The Squaw Man." Two leading city theatres, the Australian and the Piccadilly, have already booked this short serial, which goes to show that pictures of the kind are still in favor.

Chaplin's "Burlesque on Carmen" has been secured by the Clement Mason Company, and will be released very soon. So far no Essanay features have been exhibited in Sydney, in fact there has been a total absence of this brand of pictures for some months back.

The increased demand for local subjects has forced the Willoughby Photoplay Company to make extra prints of two subjects, "The Jean D'Arc of Loos" and "The Woman in the Case." The former picture has been given a revival at a city theatre.

George Willoughby and a company of players will shortly sail for an adjacent island, where they will make scenes necessary for their next feature, which is a five reeler by Randolph Bedford, entitled "Pearl of the Pacific." Over 100 will be used in the picture, exclusive of a number of natives. Jean Robertson will play the title role of Pearl.

Anyone who has witnessed the "Lily and the Rose," Fine Arts, will soon see that there is nothing of an objectionable nature in this picture, and will therefore be surprised to hear that this feature was recently prohibited from continuing its season at a leading Sydney theatre, by several members of the proposed Board of Censorship. Their act in this direction only goes to show that those responsible for the movement, are not broadminded enough to fulfill the position of regulating the morals of the picturegoing public.

Triangle pictures are appearing at no less than five leading city theatres this week. "The Bright Lights," with Mabel, Fatty and Al St. John, is one of the successful comedies at the Empress. This theatre will screen "The Island of Regeneration" next week, and following the conclusion of that feature will be closed down for a thorough overhauling. Australasian Films Limited announces that it will be re-opened at a later date as a first-class feature house, showing only first-run pictures of the best quality.

The first of the Paramount-Bray Cartoons, Colonel Heeza Liar in "Colonel Heeza Liar and the Pirates" was screened at the King's Cross theatre. Rivalry for first place in public approval is keen between the "little colonel" (not Henry Walthall) and "Mutt and Jeff."

Williams Associated With Crick and Jones

J. D. Williams has once more become associated with the picture business in Australia, this time with Crick and Jones. This firm, which released "The Nigger," "Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell" and "Ambition" with Charles Chaplin, announces that it has secured some fine features from prominent producers.

The latest of J. C. Williamson's stage successes, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," has been converted into a screen play by that firm. It has not been announced if Fred Niblo has retained his original part. The only member of the cast receiving publicity in connection with the picture is Miss Dorothy Brunton. This young lady's appearance in pictures will no doubt be hailed with delight, for within the last two years she has made rapid strides in musical comedy, from small parts in the chorus to leads in "High Jinks," "Gipsy Love" and "So..

"NEWS" SERVES THE NEWS TWO DAYS EARLIER THAN OTHERS IN THE FIELD

Motion Picture News,

I find Motion Picture News very satisfactory. We appreciate the fact that your paper is published two days earlier than any other, and we get the news earlier.

Long Letty," and in the last named production achieved the record of being the first Australian actress to appear in over a hundred performances in the one part.

Alfred Rolfe returned last week from the "backblocks" having concluded the series of educational pictures for Australasian Films Limited. The pictures, which are approximately 15,000 feet in length, are now being assembled at the laboratories, and will be released in one reel lengths. American rights for these subjects, I believe, have already been secured.

The Rev. Stephen Brandt, who has been in Sydney a little over six months, made a statement at the Presbyterian Ministers' Conference last week, that Sydney was one of the "wickedest cities in the world," and adding later that much of the said "wickedness" was due to the influence of motion pictures, on the minds of the younger generation. It would be folly to contradict this reverend gentleman's statements considering that he has been so long in this city, that he must surely know all about it.

"On the Battlefields of France," a series of war pictures seven thousand feet in length, was given a private screening at one of Williamson's theatres last week. These pictures depict the work of the French troops, in the trenches, in dug-outs within a few yards of the enemies lines; the reconnoitering of aeroplanes, of which there are a huge fleet; gun sections in the mountains, and some very realistic artillery duels. Altogether, these are about the most realistic of war pictures yet screened locally. A fine tinting has lent an air of realism to the series. M. Chayet, consul-general for France, gave an introductory speech at the beginning of the performance.

A similar series, though taken by entirely different photographers, is at present being screened at the Sydney Town Hall, and are repeating the enormous success which they received at the Auditorium, Melbourne.

Simultaneous with the screening of the "Birth of a Nation" at the Royal theatre, Melbourne, on the 20th of May, there appeared at another Melbourne picture show, a five reel feature advertised extensively as "The Curse of a Nation," originally known as "The Nigger" and "The New Governor." A court case resulted, but the verdict was given against the proprietors of the Royal—J. C. Williamson, Ltd.

Australasian, Ltd., Secures Rights to Chaplins

Australasian Films Limited has secured the exclusive rights to all Chaplin-Mutual comedies for Australia. This firm intends establishing exchanges throughout the country for the release of Chaplin comedies only, and thereby give each and every exhibitor an opportunity to book the productions of this popular comedian, whereas in the past only exhibitors showing the products released by the firms handling Chaplin films, could book his comedies. The new arrangement will be hailed with enthusiasm by every showman in the Commonwealth.

The proposed board for the censorship of motion pictures in New South Wales is now being constituted, and will probably include the following members as executives. A representative of the Chief Secretary's Department, Inspector General of Police, a member of the British Medical Association, The Council of Civic and Moral Advancement, Catholic Federation, Judge Backhouse, a representative of one of the Labor Leagues and the Misses Golding and Dwyer. The proposed method is that importers of film productions shall submit to the board accurate synopsis of films they intend releasing, and unless the description discloses something likely to be offensive there will be no inspection. Should a description be proven inaccurate those responsible will be subject to suspension of their license, or dealt with according to the nature of the offense. The greatest mistake made in forming this board, is one that it will upset the trade as long as it is not remedied. That is that instead of establishing a Board of Federal Censorship, meaning that when the pictures had been passed by them, no other censorship should be considered necessary to allow the pictures to be screened in any picture theatre in the Commonwealth. Under the system now being organized a picture passed by the censor in New South Wales, will very probably be censored in Victoria, or any other State, and consequently will upset the business methods of the numerous film importers.

The Empire theatre in Bourke street, Melbourne, Victoria, was officially opened by O. R. Snowball, last Saturday as a continuous photoplay theatre, "The Broken Coin" was included in a long and varied program, and the first day's receipts were handed to the fund for Returned Wounded Soldiers.

What is considered to be the largest theatre with the largest seating capacity, in the Commonwealth of Australia, was officially opened by the Lord Mayor in Hobart, Tasmania on the 20th of May. The new theatre, which has been christened the Strand, has a frontage of eighty-one feet on Liverpool street, and 166 feet on Central street. The main approach is from a crush vestibule 32 feet wide, which is handsomely decorated along novel lines. The seating accommodation of the Strand is over 2,500. "Business Is Business," with Nat Goodwin, was the feature of the opening bill.

The Triangle Program beginning on Saturday, 27th of May, at the Lyceum theatre, Sydney, contained some very fine subjects. "The Village Blacksmith" was noted for its power as a continual laughgetter; "The Beckoning Flame" has been reckoned by the local press to be a "wonderfully artistic triumph in acting, photography, printing, production, and location"; while "Martha's Vindication, scored high as a dramatic feature. The above program has the distinction of being the most favorably criticised of any of the Triangles yet screened.

"The Island of Regeneration," Vitagraph; "New York," Pathe; "Sins of Society," World; "Cora," Metro; "From the Valley of the Missing and "A Woman's Resurrection," Fox; and "Ambition" are subjects screened beginning May 29.

COMMENT IN "NEWS" HELPS OPEN MARKET PURCHASER

W. A. Johnston,
Motion Picture News,
New York City.
Dear Sir:—

No publication is of greater assistance to us in successfully conducting the Victoria theatre than is the "News." Because of our policy of buying in the open market we are compelled to choose from hundreds of reels a week, and therefore your comment and advance information on pictures is especially valuable.

Yours truly,
John F. Maguire,
Victoria Theatre,
Lawrence, Mass.

"Ambition" Released by Crick and Jones

"Ambition," which has been widely advertised as a Chaplin film, has been released by Messrs. Crick and Jones.

Raymond Longford, Ernest Crosettis and a company of players including Lottie Lyell, returned from a trip to New Zealand where they have been filming scenes in connection with their next big feature. During the several months they have been in that country they were successful in fine weather, and in consequences have obtained some very fine effects. Rotorus was the chief location, although the executive offices were maintained in Auckland. The remainder of the scenes will be taken in and around Sydney.

The smallest newspaper in Australia, officially recognized as the Triangle News made its first appearance last week in the form of a neat compact, six page little budget well set up and distributed gratis to all Triangle patrons. Its contents deal with the doings of Triangles staff of players, directors, and announcements of forthcoming attractions, and in fact everything that should appeal to patrons of the Ince-Sennet- Griffith productions. C. L. Yearsley, publicity manager for Australasian Films and one of the three principals of that organization, is responsible for this little house organ. Mr. Yearsley was connected with the motion picture trade in America before assuming the position he now occupies.

Variety, a weekly journal devoted to theatrical and motion picture happenings, will shortly discontinue as a weekly, and be issued monthly in a larger edition. The motion picture department of this paper is in the capable hands of Walter Sully, who is also a professional photographer, on the staff of the Australasian Gazette.

FILM MEN IN WICHITA, KANSAS, THREATEN OUSTER PROCEEDINGS AGAINST COMMISSIONERS

The commissioners of Wichita, Kan., are standing pat on their ordinance and their interpretation of it, that moving picture houses shall be closed on Sunday. The moving picture men have threatened to bring ouster proceedings against the commissioners, unless the baseball park, and Wonderland Park, an amusement resort, are kept closed as well as the moving picture houses. The commissioners profess to be unconcerned over this threat. They have a supreme court decision to the effect that Sunday baseball is legal. But they have nothing so far as to amusement parks remaining open legally on Sunday.

A petition had been circulated asking the repeal of the ordinance closing the picture theatres on Sunday; two of the signers have withdrawn their names—one the manager of the Crawford, which presents spoken drama, the other the manager of the Princess, a picture house. This is interpreted as significant, that the campaign is to be conducted on the line of insisting on the equitable enforcement of the law against all amusements.

The Wichita Ministerial Alliance recently adopted strong resolutions against all secular uses of the Sabbath, against sports and games in civil life, and singled out the moving picture exhibitions for special mention, as "indefensible Sabbath business, which is a serious menace to the true spirit of the Lord's Day, to our Sabbath schools and to public worship."

THREE QUEBEC CENSORS CONDEMN 130,000 FEET IN 28 DAYS

The censorship question in Quebec still affects the success of the various Canadian exchanges, more or less, and the time is fast approaching when there will be a concerted movement made to obtain some redress. The situation as it now stands is almost unbearable. The board of censors is composed of three men. These three pass upon every feature and every reel that comes into Montreal for showing, and they have in twenty-eight working days condemned no less than 130,000 feet of film. This is pointed at with pride. Taking into consideration the number that are passed, even if terribly cut, it must at once be apparent that there is some extraordinary way of doing the censoring when only three men are connected with the board and each of these three is already in business for himself. The main question brought up is "Who is doing the censoring?"

Spokane Amusement Managers' Association Makes Threat Against Censor Ordinance with Referendum Move

THREE times the number of signatures necessary to insure a referendum vote on the censorship ordinance recently passed by the Spokane city council were secured in the first week that the Amusement Managers' Association started the movement and to enroll them.

Unless an agreement is reached speedily between the association and the city, the referendum petitions will now be filed, this insuring that the ordinance will be inoperative until a special election is called. Under the provisions of the city charter, a special election cannot be held until December.

The preliminary skirmish between the backers of the ordinance and the managers' association has been a warm one, and the campaign between now and election time promises to be even more heated.

The Spokane Ministerial Association called a special meeting to consider the proposal and, after hearing from both sides, unanimously indorsed the ordinance.

Two of the daily newspapers are backing the measure and the third is opposing it. The city council passed the law without objection.

The Amusement Managers' Association is confident, however, that it will be able to overthrow the censorship proposal at the polls. They are running slides in all their houses, urging patrons to work against it, and are circulating pamphlets criticising it. In the meantime, the ordinance seems safely tied up for a half-year, at least.

The injustice under which exchangemen have been suffering there for the past several years is that there is a board of appeal but the board of appeal is composed of the very trio who are the censors. If any consistent policy were assumed the injustice would not be felt so keenly but the inconsistencies of the board cause many bitter complaints.

COURT FIGHT OVER FOX PICTURE IN QUEBEC

An example of the narrow minedness of self-appointed censors in certain localities in the province of Quebec is shown in the recent arrest of Amedee Coulomb, the proprietor of the Hotel de Ville, at Montmagni, P. Q., who was arrested for showing the Fox feature "Broken Law," with William Farnum which was branded by the parish priest as immoral. This feature was passed by the Quebec Board of Censors and had already been shown in some twenty towns in the province. Arrangements were made by Chandos St. John-Brenon, the Montreal manager of the Fox corporation to have the feature shown in the Montmagni court room.

This is the first time any complaint has been registered against a Fox Feature in the province and various exchange managers are up in arms at the isolated injustice feeling that it will soon hit them. The church authorities appears to be strongly against the motion picture screen in all its phases in certain parts of the province.

CHATTANOOGA CLUB WOMEN ASK CITY AID FOR CENSORSHIP

The censorship committee of the Chattanooga, Tenn., Council of Women has asked the city commissioners to co-operate with the organization in censoring the motion pictures that are shown there. A communication from Mrs. C. C. Huntington, temp. chairman of the committee, and others was read by the mayor at a recent meeting of the commissioners, but no action was taken.

"The Evil Thereof," a picture shown at a local theatre, was discontinued at the request of the women's council, and, according to Mrs. Huntington, F. H. Dowler, Jr., manager of the Signal Amusement Company, has promised that no other pictures where there is the slightest room for criticism will be shown until the committee has been given a chance to pass on them. Another picture that came in for criticism from Mrs. Huntington was "Playing With Fire."

Fox Will Pay Salaries in Full to Employees in Militia

He Notifies President Wilson of His Intention to Make Provision for Any of His 10,000 Men of Military Age Who Also May Go Out on Volunteer Call

WILLIAM FOX, president of the Fox Film Corporation, has notified President Woodrow Wilson and Secretary of War Baker, that he and his corporation have granted full pay to every employee who has or will vountarily enlist in the military or naval service of the United States during the Mexican crisis.

Mr. Fox has notified his employees throughout the United States that their salaries will be paid to their families each week, from the day they are mustered into service until they are honorably discharged. Their positions in the corporation will be held open for them until they return, no matter how long they may be required in the service of their country.

Many of Mr. Fox's employees have already been mustered into service in the various militia regiments throughout the nation. Many more, who were contemplating joining the regimental colors of the state militia, but were prevented by the fear that their families would suffer financially during their absence, have now signified their intention of joining.

Mr. Fox has always been an earnest advocate of Preparedness. His letter to the President follows:

New York, June 27.

His Excellency, the President of the United States,
Executive Mansion, Washington, D. C.

Sir:

To encourage enlistment in the National Guard or Naval Reserve throughout the United States, in which 10,000 employees of military age of the Fox Film Corporation are distributed, I have provided that the salary of every man in my organization, who has enlisted or will voluntarily enlist for emergency duty, be paid in full for the entire time such employe is in the service of the state or nation.

This will guarantee to the families of these men the financial support that is necessary during the time my men are serving their country.

In taking this action I feel that I am doing only that which every large employer of men in the United States should do in a crisis such as now confronts us. Financial considerations should be cast aside, and every means of aiding the nation in its hour of need should be taken by the captains of industry in this, the greatest of all nations.

That you, as director of this country's destinies, will succeed in piloting us victoriously and with honor through the war clouds that hang so heavily over the Mexican border, I have not the least doubt. And, if the men of my organization may be of some aid in accomplishing this result, it will more than compensate me for any financial cost such aid entails.

Respectfully,
(Signed) WILLIAM FOX,
President Fox Film Corporation.

The President replied as follows:

The White House,
Washington, June 29th

My dear Mr. Fox:

The President asks me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of recent date, and to thank you for your courtesy in writing him. He deeply appreciates the generous spirit with which the employers of the country are co-operating with the government in the present emergency.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) J. TUMULTY,
Secretary to the President.

The letter of Mr. Fox to the Secretary of War apprised him of his communication to the President.

A Few Sad Ones and a Lot of Funny Ones from General Service

Serious Drama and Rollicking Comedy Touch Elbows on the Program for July 10-15—Policy of Featuring Stars in Short Length Pictures Is Evident

THE policy of featuring stars in short length subjects as well as in its all its pictures was in evidence in the General Film Program July 10-15 inclusive. Selig, Vitagraph, Biograph, Essanay, Lubin, Kalem, Vim and Knickerbocker stars are featured in the forty reels that go to make up the week's entertainment.

Selig's "The Milk White Flag" is a three part comedy in which Otis Harlan is supported by Charlotte Minneaux. "Wrong Beds," a Vitagraph comedy in one reel will follow, preceding Selig-Tribune's pictorial story of the big events of the world. This will be followed by a reissue of a Biograph one part film, "The Squaw's Love," featuring Mabel Normand, supported by Alfred Paget, Claire McDowell and Dark Cloud. "Otto the Sleuth," a Lubin one part comedy, will close the program with Davy Don and Patsy de Forest as leads.

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be seen in the first picture screened Tuesday, "The Private Officer," an Essanay reissue in two parts. This will be followed by Kalem's "The Baggage Smashers." Then will be shown "The Half Wit," from the Lubin Studio, in two parts, presenting L. C. Shumway and Helen Eddy.

"The Quack Quakers" in one reel, a Kalem production, will be the first picture shown Wednesday. A George Ade fable of "A Small Town Favorite Who was Ruined by too Much Competition" will follow. Blanche Sweet, Lionel Barrymore, Marshal Neilan and Gertrude Robinson will be seen in "Men and Women," a Biograph reissue in three parts, after which a Vim comedy, "Spring Cleaning," in one reel, will be shown.

Harry Myers and Rosemary Thelby are featured.

"Expiation," a Lubin drama in three reels with Octavia Handworth and E. K. Lincoln dividing chief honors in the cast, will be the first picture flashed on the screen Thursday. This will be followed by Chapter No. 56 of the Selig-Tribune Pictorial News. Then will follow another Vim comedy in one reel, "Spaghetti" of the Plump and Runt Series.

"The Dupe," a Knickerbocker Star Feature drama in three reels presenting Virginia Norden, Frank Mayo and Lillian West, will inaugurate Friday's entertainment. Kalem's "The Wishing Ring," a one part comedy of the Sis Hopkins Series is linked with "The Man From Egypt," a Vitagraph comedy in one part, and "The Great Safe Tangle," a Vim of the same length will be screened.

Essanay's "The Secret of the Night" in three reels will lead General Film Service program for Saturday with Lillian Drew and Sidney Ainsworth. Lubin will furnish a one reel comedy entitled "Hang on Cowboy," after which will be shown a Vitagraph three part drama, "The Waters of Lethe." An episode of the Hazards of Helen Series, "The Broken Brake," by Kalem will follow. "Legal Advice," a Selig one part comedy in which Tom Mix and Victoria Forde have the leading parts will close the program for the week.

HE FINDS MORE IN THE "NEWS" THAN ALL OTHER PICTURE TRADE PAPERS COMBINED

TRIANGLE TO EXHIBIT AMERICAN AMBULANCE CORPS WAR PICTURES AS ITS CONTRIBUTION TO THE FUND

The first showing of the American Ambulance Corps war pictures which the French government presented to the Ambulance Corps in recognition of its heroic services and which the Triangle Corporation has volunteered to exhibit as its contribution to the fund which is required for the maintenance of the corps, will be held at the Hotel Majestic, New York City, on July 5. About two hundred invitations will be issued for this initial exhibition of the pictures.

Invitations for the first showing of the pictures have been extended to the American representatives of each of the Allied nations; to former President Roosevelt; to representatives of all the newspapers and to those who have worked diligently in the interest of the Ambulance Corps since its organization.

The committee of American women who have devoted their time and interest to the maintenance of the fund needed for the corps and who are expected to be present, consists of Mrs. C. B. Alexander, Mrs. Robert Bacon, Mrs. August Belmont, Mrs. Edward Brandegee, Mrs. Lloyd Brice, Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler, Mrs. S. B. Bertron, Mrs. F. L. Chapin, Mrs. William Greenough, Mrs. A. Barton Hepburn, Mrs. Junius S. Morgan, Mrs. Henry W. Munroe, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. F. A. Sayles, Mrs. J. Montgomery Sears, Mrs. Willard D. Straight, Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mrs. Bayard Thayer, Mrs. Richard Townsend, Mrs. Barrett Wendell, Miss Maude Wetmore and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

The Triangle Corporation volunteered its services for the exhibition of the pictures and the offer was accepted by the American Committee having charge of the fund for the corps.

ROSE FARRINGTON WITH KOLB AND DILL

Rose Farrington, one time vaudeville singer on the Orpheum circuit, is now playing a character part in Kolb and Dill's multi-reel comedy, "A Million for Mary."

"How Britain Prepared" Will Be Sold on State Rights

Interest Stimulated in Question of Preparedness by Mobilization of National Guard Induces Patriot Film Company to Abandon Road Show Plan for Large Cities

THE mobilization of the National Guard has created such interest in the question of Preparedness that the Patriot Film Corporation has abandoned its original intention of exploiting "How Britain Prepared" as a road show for the larger theatres only, and is now prepared to sell the exhibition rights to the various territories, so that the greatest advantage may be taken of existing conditions.

Al Lichtman, general manager of the Patriot company, speaking of the determination to dispose of the film on the state rights basis, said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

"From all indications, I believe we will dispose of the rights to the entire United States in a very short time. There is a genuine demand all over the country for just this kind of production, and I am sure that the state rights buyers who obtain the rights to our pictures in their respective territories will have secured a very valuable asset.

"The one thing that impressed me most strongly in our handling of the picture is the amount of favorable notices the newspapers have given us. The Washington Times, in an editorial almost a column long, said, among other things, that 'How Britain Prepared' deserved to be preserved as long as the motion picture shall endure. Undoubtedly the press recognizes in the picture a valuable assistant in driving home a proper apreciation of the need for Preparedness. In fact, I might almost say that our publicity department consists of nine-tenths of all the editorial writers in the country. I expect that this consideration will have a great deal of weight with the state rights buyers."

"How Britain Prepared" is now being shown at the Lyceum Theatre, New York; the Colonial, Chicago; the Shubert, Boston; the Garrick, Philadelphia; the Belasco, Washington, D. C.; the Providence Opera House, Providence; the Lyceum, Memphis, and in a number of other cities. A large number of requests for bookings have been received from all parts of the country, it is said.

The film was taken under the supervision of the British Government, represented by Arthur J. Balfour, First Lord of the Admiralty; David Lloyd George, Minister of Munitions; Admiral Jellicoe, commander-in-chief of the British Fleet, and the late Lord Kitchener. Many prominent Americans have endorsed the production, among them Justice Hughes, Secretary of War Baker, Admiral Chester, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt, Brig.-Gen. Crozier, Chief of Ordnance, Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court, Secretary Redfield and many others.

TWENTY-ONE KALEM POSITIONS READY FOR RETURN OF MILITIA EMPLOYES

Kalem's office and studio forces at the Twenty-third street, New York, headquarters were severly shaken up last Monday by the call issued for members of the New York militia. Twenty-one of the Kalem employes were called from their desks and benches in response to the Governor's call. When the score received orders from their commanders late Monday morning, the Twenty-third street building took on a temporarily war-like tinge.

Immediately on learning of the mobilization order on Monday morning, Mr. Wright, of the Kalem Company, took steps to discover the number of militiamen on the Kalem roster, and to assure them that the company would grant leaves of absence with their positions protected for whatever period necessary.

SELZNICK WILL PAY SALARIES DURING ABSENCE OF MILITIA EMPLOYES

Lewis J. Selznick, president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, posted a notice to his employes last week to the effect that all those who wished to enlist for service in Mexico would have their salary paid in full during their absence and their positions held open for them indefinitely.

LOCKWOOD WINS HYDROPLANE RACE ON ST. LAWRENCE

Driving the hydroplane Sneaker at the rate of thirty-six miles an hour, Harold Lockwood, co-star with May Allison in Metro Yorke productions, won a twenty-mile race on the St. Lawrence from four other contestants.

The race was the result of a yacht-club argument over the respective merits of several makes of boats. George Wagner, of New York, wagered that his boat could beat those of his listeners. He was snapped up immediately by the other four men, and chose Mr. Lockwood, an old friend of his and his guest for several days, while the Metro-Yorke company was in the Thousand Islands filming "The River of Romance," to pilot the boat.

"Matter Sent Out by Press Agents Does Satisfy Editors"

Harry Reichenbach, World Lightning-Change Artist with Words, Has Testimonials from Men, Strangers to Him, Who Say That His Contributions Hit the Mark

HARRY L. Reichenbach, general press representative of the World Film Corporation, notes an exception to the statement of Charles F. Cobry, photoplay editor of the Omaha Bee, in which Mr. Cobry charged, in effect, that the publicity matter sent out to the newspapers by film publicity men is unsuited to newspaper use, and in some cases worthless.

Replying to Mr. Cobry's indictment, as recently set forth in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mr. Reichenbach says:

"If the motion picture editor of the Omaha Bee extends his arguments against the quality of material received from the various film publicity departments, as unassailable—then we are out of form.

"No two editors consider the same article of the same value. No two men give any one article the same consideration. No two men think alike. It is the absolute independence of the thinking editor which makes the American newspaper the tremendous power it is.

"I do not consider my written material of any better quality than the average press man sends out, bar one or two who do not take their work seriously. I offer here with a few letters received from editors, all perfect strangers to me and addressed to World Film." Excerpts from some of these letters follow:

George B. Newland, dramatic editor of the Cincinnati Post, writes: "Your weekly press matter is excellent, particularly the short items. Continue sending it to my desk."

E. F. Harkins, of the Boston Journal: "Many thanks for the excellent pictures for the Leading Man Series we are planning and for the biographical material. Your publicity service is admirable and the World Film News is a veritable feast for the busy dramatic editor."

From The Newark (N. J.) Star-Eagle: "Your publicity matter, especially the Do You Know That sheet is very welcome. Please send it regularly."

From C. J. Tefft, photoplay editor, of the Toledo Times: "Your little paragraphs headed Did You Know That is very good matter, and we are using this every Sunday in our motion picture section."

Richard F. Andrews, assistant managing editor of the Hartford Times: "It may interest you to know that while we ordinarily devote very little space to moving pictures and while we are notoriously gun-shy of any matter prepared by press agents, we have found this series (Gail Kane's article as supplied by Mr. Reichenbach) of unusual interest to our readers."

Henry E. Daugherty, of the Knoxville Sentinel: "Only recently we began to receive your World Film and Equitable bulletins, and I find therein some excellent news items, some of which we have already used."

Essanay Efficiency Completes Pictures to September

For August and the Month Following Company Has Produced a List of One, Two and Three-Reel Subjects, with Its Stars, for Varied Programs, Is Announcement from Spoor

ESSANAY now is taking long strides in getting out its releases far in advance. With the size and convenience of its new studio, it now has completed plays up through September. For both August and September it has produced a list of one, two and three reel subjects, featuring its stars, which have been produced especially for varied programs. The subjects have just been announced by George K. Spoor, president.

Two features for this month also are nearing completion. These are "The Sting of Victory," written by Charles Mortimer Peck, and featuring Henry B. Walthall, supported by Antoinette Walker. This is a five reel photoplay and deals with the civil war and reconstruction period.

"The Return of Eve," also a five reel feature, taken from the stage production of Lee Wilson Dodd, features Edna Mayo, supported by Eugene O'Brien, well-known both on the stage and in feature photoplay productions.

The three-reel subjects for September include such productions as "The Higher Destiny," featuring Warda Howard and Edward Arnold; "A Million for a Baby" presenting Bryant Washburn, Marguerite Clayton, Lillian Drew and Sydney Ainsworth, "The Way of Patience" featuring Nell Craig, Darwin Karr, and Ernest Maupain and "Twin Fates" presenting Marguerite Clayton and Sydney Ainsworth.

Among the two reel productions are two reissues, "His Stolen Fortune" and "The Mysteries of Room 643," featuring Francis X. Bushman. The one-reel subjects will include "The Canimated Nooz Pictorials," cartoons by Wallace A. Carlson together with George Ade fables and scenics showing the beauty spots of America and Canada.

In August the three reel photoplays include "The Face in the Mirror," with Josephine Sylvester and Edmund F. Cobb, "Worth While," featuring Bryant Washburn and Marguerite Clayton, "A Little Volunteer" presenting Joyce Fair and "The War Bride of Plumville" featuring Nell Craig, Ernest Maupain and Harry Dunkinson.

The two-reel subjects include "The Chimney Sweep," featuring Joyce Fair, "A Tin Soldier," one of the famous plays by Charles Hoyt and two reissues featuring Francis X. Bushman, "Three Scrath Clue" and "The Motor Buccaneers."

Two George Ade fables, "The Fable of Books Made to Balance," and "The Fable of How Wisentein Did Not Lose Out to Buttinsky" a "Canimated Nooz Pictorial" and scenic comprise the list of one-reel subjects.

SPEAKING PARTS FOR ACTORS, FARNUM SUGGESTS

William Farnum, the Fox star, believes that, for realism's sake, screen actors will have to be provided with definite speaking parts.

"Spoken parts for screen stars seem inevitable to me," says Mr. Farnum, "because moving picture fans are now becoming so adept that they can decipher many of the words which the actors utter. This means that the day when the star could, and did, say almost 'any old thing' has gone. It will never return.

"Of course, action will probably always remain the dominant note in the films. It is undoubtedly true that the biggest and steadiest advances will be made in obtaining new and better photographic effects, but, after all, the foundation of every good picture is the scenario. And in the higher grade scenario, there are many scenes in which the only action is the good old-fashioned word of mouth kind—with appropriate gestures.

"Pantomime is naturally out of the question in such cases. The actor has to say something, or the scene falls flat. Why not make the thing natural by giving him a definite speaking part?"

RHEA MITCHELL WITH BENNETT IN "SABLE CURSE," AMERICAN

Because of her work in recent American and Signal Mutual Masterpieces, De Luxe Edition, Rhea Mitchell has been chosen to head the company of players appearing in support of Richard Bennett. His initial American feature is "The Sable Curse," which will be released as a Mutual Star production. In this production Miss Mitchell will play opposite Mr. Bennett in the role of "Mary Redmond."

Miss Mitchell's most recent appearance as the star of an American-Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, was as co-star with William Stowell in "The Man from Manhattan," a five-reel production. Previous to the release of this feature she had been co-starred with William Stowell in "The Overcoat" and in "Overalls," both Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition. She has also appeared in several short length features filmed at the American-Mutual studios.

Noted Psychologist Brings Out Volume on Motion Pictures

Munsterberg Traces the Development of Photodrama and Explains the Philosophy of Photoplay Appeal in Book Issued by Appleton and Company

THERE must be a reason for the phenomenal growth of the motion picture industry. Up to the present time most of us have viewed with amazement the tremendous public interest in pictures and have possibly concluded that the cheap admission price has been responsible for much of their popularity and that the possibilities of large returns have been the reason for the activity of the producer. To Hugo Munsterberg, however, not only the industry as a whole owes a debt of gratitude, but the thinking public that is interested in the photoplay. For in the book which he has just published the results of his psychological and aesthetic investigation of the motion picture, we have the first scientific statement of just what the motion picture is and just what it may accomplish.

While some of the pages are a little heavy for other than the student, the conclusions are all in such plain and distinct form—usually in italics—that even a casual reader may grasp them.

There are three distinct divisions of the book. The historical development of moving pictures is a valuable bit of literature in recording at this time the early stage of the photoplay, beginning with Roget's description in 1825 of an interesting optical illusion of movement.

This is followed by a chapter on the inner development of pictures—depth and movement, attention, memory and imagination, and emotion. These lead to the conclusion that the outside world is molded by the interest of the mind, that the great difference between the motion picture and the stage drama is that on the stage we see and follow things as they are actually done, while the motion picture develops such a wealth of ideas in us that it really becomes a part of us. While on the stage we only see outwardly, in the motion picture we see inwardly.

Professor Munsterberg is quite emphatic in his declaration that the motion picture is not and ought never to be an imitation of the stage. "The drama and the photoplay are two co-ordinated arts, each perfectly valuable in itself." Part three of the book is devoted to the proving of this premise and it is quite conclusively done.

"The Photoplay" is published by D. Appleton & Co., New York City, and the price is $1.00 net.

Haydon's Cameramen Get Militia in Action for an Essanay

Director of "Sting of Victory," Featuring Henry Walthall, Goes to Camp Logan, Ill., with 5 Assistants and 8 Men with Cameras to Film Troops for the Picture

THE clash of saber and bayonet, the sound and smoke of fifty thousand cartridges, the gallop of horses and the shouts of fifteen hundred men, filled the air at Camp Logan, Ill., as a meager Sunday sun was finally and thoroughly obscuring itself for the day.

From his perch Director J. Charles Haydon waved a flag and eight tired cameramen gave their cranks a final spin. The soldiers dropped to the ground a moment for rest. Then the first stillness of the day was broken by the clear notes of a bugle a mile away at headquarters sounding "boots and saddles," a prearranged signal. As one the regiment leaped up for a mighty cheer and all, horse and foot, charged toward the camp proper.

All day while working for "The Sting of Victory," Essanay's new five-reel feature with Henry B. Walthall, the members of the First Regiment, Illinois crack guardsmen, had been awaiting the president's order to mobilize for Mexican duty. Director Haydon with five assistant directors and eight cameramen was sweating blood to finish all spectacular battle scenes before the soldiers would be ordered away, and nullify all efforts. Oddly enough, the call to go to the front reached the boys two minutes after the final scene had been taken.

Although battle scenes are secondary in the new Walthall picture, some wonderful effects were produced. This was largely due, it is believed, to the enthusiasm of the guardsmen, as they were momentarily expecting the call to Mexico. Vicious hand to hand conflicts in which Mr. Walthall participated, were accomplished with beautiful results and without a serious accident.

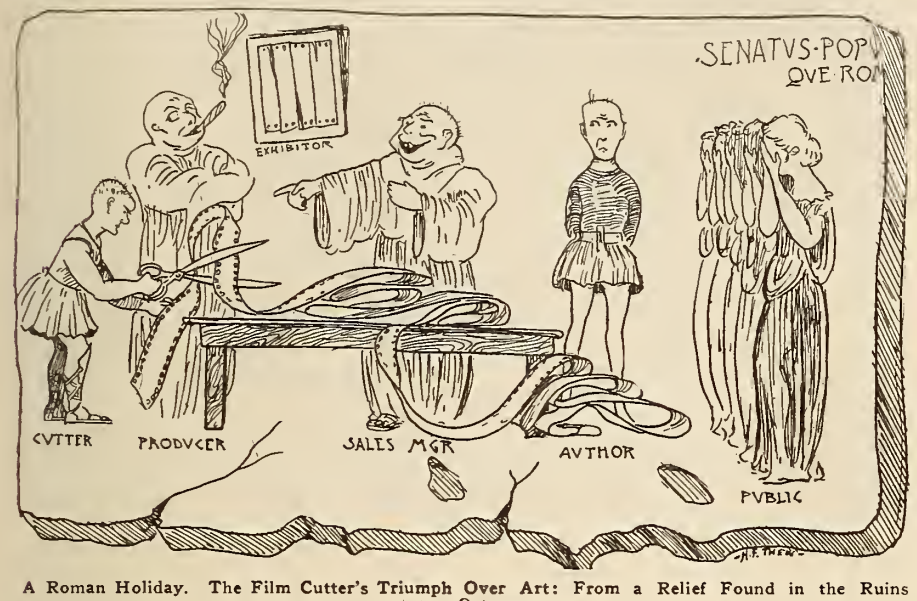
The Chicago newspapers took advantage of the opportunity to get their home soldiers in action on the very eve of their departure for the front and the motion picture cameras were not the only ones trained on the spectacle.

"The Sting of Victory," with Mr. Walthall, was originally announced as "The Little Musketeer," but several suggestions of Mr. Walthall have acted for the betterment of the story and made the new title distinctly appropriate.

Camp Logan, the headquarters and rifle and artillery range of the Illinois National Guard formed an ideal location for the battle scenes. Other beautiful exterior locations have been found in the magnificent residence section of Lake Forest and many scenes will be taken in this millionaire suburb.

Good Things in Paste-Pot and Shears Go Direct to Public

As Editors of Publications for General Circulation Found Items in Selig House Organ Fine Pickings, Company Decides to Bring Best Out on News-stands



REEL STUFF is the name of a unique publication which has just made its appearance on the news-stands. It contains many of the picture paragraphs and verses that have appeared in Selig Paste-Pot and Shears during the past year, and which have been widely copied in magazines, newspapers and other publications.

The introduction reads as follows: "We present in the following pages, some real and near stuff culled from the pages of Selig Paste-pot and Shears. They must add to the-joy-of-living, for editors of photoplay lore seem partial to them. If there is an exhibitor of motion pictures, or an editor, who has not yet given Paste-pot and Shears the once over, we'll be delighted to hustle sample copies. Paste-pot and Shears is free every week to newspapers and exhibitors. To others, the subscription price is fifty cents yearly. Paste-pot and Shears brightens the home, including the furniture, and dispels gloom. Address right this minute, Editor, Selig Paste-pot and Shears, Selig Polyscope Company, 58 East Washington street, Chicago, Ill."

Reel Stuff sells for ten cents a copy and will appear on the news-stands every month. Exhibitors will be furnished with a sample copy free of charge by writing the Selig Company. Special prices can be obtained for quantities and there is a space for the name of the theatre.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

A Roman Holiday. The Film Cutter's Triumph Over Art: From a Relief Found in the Ruins of the Coliseum

VALESKA SURATT, the dainty comedienne of the Fox forces, says a veil is a great aid to beauty. Yes, and often a mask helps immensely.

Convict No. 11,958, Clinton Prison, is out in a defense of "movie comedies and dramas" as an entertainment for prison inmates. An anonymous report of his reviews, as published in the Star of Hope, has reached us, but as only one brand of pictures is mentioned, we have found little mental exercise in guessing at the source. A few extracts from the convict's review, are followed by this footnote: "Dear Just to Make Talk: Who says there is no future for picture reviewers? Hasn't 11,958 reached his gaol?"

We sincerely believe he has; we know of other reviewers who are headed the same way unless the producers give them something else to look at.

The season for Mary Pickford rumors is now officially closed.

This week will see a great exodus of actors, actresses and press agents for Chicago. Which should give New York a chance to make good on her boast of being a quiet, ideal summer resort.

The ArtLes manager of the late August presidential campaign, objects to our "ridicule of his expression 'four-square man.'" He appends clippings of articles by Irvin Cobb and the Rev. Dr. Burrell (whom he calls "the Rev. Burrell") in which the expression is used. We have read the articles carefully, and fail to find where it is used as applied to Edwin August.

We have a large collection of literature relating to the pets possessed by various picture stars, and the private hobbies and experiences of other stars. The whole collection is for little money.*

In a piece of press matter, just submitted, relating incidents of ignorance of life and manners on the part of various simple-minded folk, the writer uses "jesture" and "pantomine." Paper is too valuable to allow of comment.

Paramount rumors having for the most part having been laid away in moth balls by the Famous Players Lasky merger, there is a new crop of "they says" regarding the readjustment of the publicity and scenario departments of the two establishments. All the reports we have heard thus far are about as authoritative as the red type in an evening newspaper.

A California woman has sued for divorce, charging her husband with cruelty in that he would not allow her to go to picture shows. Maybe the husband was a reviewer and knew what he was doing.

*And is about worth it.

The Bayside Bugle

"Bigger, Busier, Brighter Bell Ave." Bayside, L. I., July 15, 1916.

Although not blowing anybody's horn, or playing anybody's game, as they probably would say in the city, the BUGLE cannot refrain from commending the producers of a recent picture for their taste in selecting scenes and locations. This picture is "Jaffery," which was directed by Geo. Irving of our town. When he wanted outdoor scenes, which were many, Mr. Irving very naturally came to Bayside, and hence we have the Lawrence estate, and views of Little Neck Bay, and also a striking picture of the bathing beach, which all will recognize, with the yacht club in the distance. These scenes are supposed to depict life along the Thames river, a popular stream in England, which, although pronounced "Tems" for reasons we do not know, is well known pretty much everywhere, and they are very successful in our humble view. We are glad to note that Mr. Irving has taken the advice promulgated by the BUGLE in a recent editorial in these columns.

—Quite a lot is doing up at the Yacht Club these days and evenings.

—Many are beginning the bathing season at the beach down near the Goldfish pond.

—Ben Hendricks, of Fourth st., this city, has been acting in a picture in New York.

—W. T. Carleton, the famous singer, who has been appearing in a motion picture for G. Kleine, playing the part of Billie Burke's father, she playing the part of Gloria, a young girl, was a passenger on the 8:40 train for N. York, Thurs. a.m.

—The sociable at the M. E. church Fri. eve., was a great success, scores of our citizens attending. Jim Corbett was referee and timekeeper both, and also had charge of getting up the program of local talent, which well deserved the reputation Bayside has acquired in this direction. Although not a member of the M. E. Church, we were glad to attend, but then, neither is Jim Corbett or Mame Farnum, who sang "Mother Machree" and other ballads quite effectively. A good time was had by all, is the report.

—The property owners had a meeting one night last week, down to Pearson's office, and decided to chip in and pay for beautifying and protecting their lawns, which is a good idea and one to be commended as showing good public spirit on the part of our citizens.

—Riley Hatch has been acting in a picture with Polly Frederick, of N. York, the same being seen at the Strand thea., last wk.

—Rose Stahl has some new rose bushes and other beautiful plants whose names we do not know, on her lawn.

— Pearl White entertained friends from the city several days last wk.

—J. Henry Goldfrap, Mrs. Goldfrap and E. Dick Schayer are now members of Bayside in good standing.

—Frank Powell of here, has gone into business for himself, having organized offices in the Times bldg., N. Y., for his company. He has also taken Bill Barry of here, with him to help boom things, and the two should make a great team. Bayside has the best, say we.

—Art James was a caller at the yacht club, of which he is now a member, this wk.

—T. Roosevelt, formerly in politics at Oyster Bay and Wash., D. C., drove through here last Thurs. a. m., in his auto, he making the trip to town just ahead of Geo. Irving, Ralph Dean and Ye Editor, which was at about 35 miles per hour, we violate no confidence in saying.

—We failed to get several telephone calls from J. P. Morgan and Andy Carnegie, this wk. as Miss Eileen, our telephone operator is on her vacation.

—Fort Totten, our well known Bayside protector, is the center of interest now-a-days, everything pertaining to the soldier boys attracting considerable attention.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

M. E. Liebensburger of the Standard Film Service, Cleveland, Ohio, spent a week in New York, leaving Sunday, July 2nd. Mr. Liebensburger looked over the pictures on the market and made several purchases.

Joseph McKinney, secretary of the Unicorn Film Service, is back in New York after a visit around the circuit of the company's exchanges.

Wyndham Gittens, formerly with Biograph and until recently with Melies, left New York on the first of July for Universal City, where he will take up the duties of assistant to Scenario Editor Lewis.

Lester Cuneo, heavy lead with Metro, left for Los Angeles, where he will appear in the Metro-Yorke pictures under Fred Balshofer.

George Proctor, having resigned his duties of Scenario Editor for Gaumont, leaves for Los Angeles, Thursday, July 6th, where he will join the Lasky scenario department.

Amid showers of rice Albert S. Le Vino, of the Arrow Film Corporation, and his bride, left New York last week for a honeymoon in New England. Arthur James of Metro and W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, saw the couple off.

Managing Director S. L. Rothapfel, of the Rialto, New York, has returned from a flying trip to Indianapolis, where he went to assist, in an advisory capacity, in the construction of the new Circle theatre there.

R. M. Savini, general manager of the United Film Service, with offices in Atlanta, Memphis and New Orleans, was in New York last week.

William F. Niel, manager of the Majestic theatre, Birmingham, Ala., was in New York last week.

CLUNE COMPLETES PLAN TO SEND "RAMONA" INTO EVERY STATE

The W. H. Clune interests have completed a booking and producing organization for the purpose of sending "Ramona" companies into every state in the Union. New York offices, with H. F. Matthews in charge, have been opened in the New Amsterdam Theatre Building. In this office routes will be laid for twelve Eastern companies.

The campaign in the Middle West, under the direction of Fred La Comte, was opened last week when "Ramona" went into the Auditorium, Chicago, for a run of sixteen weeks.

John J. Holland, who has general direction of all tours, is organizing additional orchestras and working crews for companies to be started early in the fall.

KEMBLE TO PROMOTE SPECTACULAR PICTURES

The Kemble Film Corporation, of which William T. Kemble, owner of the Triangle theatre, Brooklyn, is president, has entered the field to promote spectacular pictures, such as "The Zeppelin Raids on London and The Siege of Verdun," which it is now distributing.

Thomas Dixon Justifies Film Caricature of Public Men

Author of "Fall of a Nation" Says Ridicule of Bryan in His Picture Is Not More Severe Than Lampooning of ex-Secretary of State in the Press

A Scene from "The Fall of a Nation": The Hon. Plato Barker at a Peace Meeting on the East Side

THOMAS DIXON, author of "The Fall of a Nation," has come to the front in answer to the criticisms of his caricature of ex-Secretary William J. Bryan under the name of Hon. Plato Barker in the film.

The double of Bryan is seen in the Dixon spectacle pocketing five hundred dollars fees (payable in advance) for his Chautauqua peace sermons. Later the Honorable Barker goes out to welcome with floral offerings the commander of an imperial army invading America. He tries to deliver another peace speech on this occasion, but he forgets to remove his hat and this is rudely knocked off his head by the emperor's minions. The imperial commander then consigns him to the army scullery where he is set to peeling potatoes for the general's dinner.

A letter-writer in the New York Sun says: "As a loyal American and a law-abiding citizen I wish to protest against the amazing action of a moving picture company in holding up to ridicule a former Secretary of State in a film that is designed to promote preparedness. For a long time I have been a believer in the non-censorship of films, but if there are to be any more deplorable breaches of national respect like this, I should certainly throw my influence on the side of the censor movement."

In reply to this and other attacks on the Bryan caricature, Mr. Dixon says in a statement addressed to the press generally:

"It appears to me that the film is always singled out for condemnation in respect of matters that do not start even a ripple when presented on the legitimate stage or in the funny columns of the papers. Is Charles Wakefield Cadman, the writer of the Sun letter, aware that Mr. Bryan is being caricatured in almost every summer show or revue in the country? I saw him cartooned in the Ziegfeld 'Follies' at the New Amsterdam Theatre the other night and in a Columbia Theatre revue in Chicago last week. Every newspaper cartoonist is privileged to make fun of public characters. Yet when a film author does the same thing hands are held up in horror and 'breaches of decency and national respect' are talked of. I'll wager that Mr. Cadman, had he looked back over his files of the Sun and the Evening Sun, would have discovered pictorial and literary ridicule of Bryan far exceeding anything I have attempted.

"My answer to the charge is simply that all the statements of fact implied in my caricature are true. Resigning from the office of Secretary of State, Mr. Bryan, so to speak, 'hogged' the Chautauqua platform and became the star lecturer at an emolument of five hundred dollars per lecture. He raised the price, generally collected the money in advance, and put the other Chautauqua speakers in the shade so that summer many of them could not obtain engagements.

"The theme of his oratory was 'Peace,' and he was surrounded by groups of admiring women and children just as he is shown to be in the picture. The part of the caricature referring to the future is a likely forecast of what would happen should such an orator present to an invading army his Utopian peace proposals. He would be laughed at, handled with indignity, and the result of his efforts would be absolutely nil.

"In conclusion I will say that I attacked Mr. Bryan as a public man and as an opponent of the policies of President Wilson which his actions as Secretary and his subsequent resignation at an inopportune moment impeded. I am a firm supporter of Mr. Wilson and his international and domestic policies. I have nothing whatever against Mr. Bryan personally but claim the right to make legitimate sport of his mistakes which might have cost America dear."

GEORGE D. BAKER JOINS METRO PRODUCTION STAFF

George D. Baker, formerly of the Vitagraph forces, has been engaged by Metro Pictures Corporation, and will direct the next Metro production in which Emmy Wehlen will star. Miss Wehlen's last film appearance was in "Her Reckoning; or, Tables Turned," a Metro-Rolfe feature.

Among Mr. Baker's successes have been "The Dust of Egypt," "A Price for Folly," "A Man's Sacrifice," "The Two Edged Sword," "The Shop Girl," and a new photoplay of the director's own writing, "Tarantula," will be released soon.

Mr. Baker knows the theatrical business thoroughly, having been actor, author and manager. The firm of Baker and Castle produced "Graustark," an immense box office success which is still highly popular, "In the Bishop's Carriage," and Mr. Baker's dramatization of Harold McGrath's novel, "The Goose Girl."

He was formerly portrait artist on the old Chicago Times, political cartoonist on the Nashville American and a frequent contributor to Puck and Judge. His acting experience was gained with Walker Whiteside, Nance O'Neil, Effie Ellsler, Mr. and Mrs. Russ Whytal and the companies of Brady and Grismer, Litt and Dingwall. Mr. Baker's broad experience makes him a valuable factor in motion picture work.

SMALL, PLAYERS' AGENT, PLACES STARS WITH BIG REPUTATIONS IN IVAN ORGANIZATION

Edward Small, one of the best known of vaudeville agents, has extended his activities to the film industry.

Mr. Small has made arrangements with several well-known screen artists to become their special representative, in addition to the artists he manages in the legitimate and vaudeville fields.

Inaugurating his venture in the new branch as a players' representative, Mr. Small succeeded in placing Marguerite Snow, immediately after the termination of her contract with Metro, with the Ivan Film Productions. Rose Coghlan was also placed by Mr. Small with the Ivan concern to appear in "The Passion Flower."

James Cruze, hero of that epoch making serial, "The Million Dollar Mystery," was placed by Mr. Small with the Lasky Company under a year's contract.

BERST SEES HUGHES FOR CENSORSHIP DISCUSSION

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, saw by appointment the Hon. Dudley M. Hughes, chairman of the House Committee on Education, in Washington last week, with reference to the bill for federal censorship. As a result of the conference, Mr. Berst was willing to take up several amendments to the bill, embodying certain important changes which Mr. Berst had suggested.

Mr. Hughes showed great willingness to co-operate with every branch of the moving picture industry in making the bill the best possible, an attitude that greatly pleased Mr. Berst, who, strongly believes that federal censorship offers the best argument against local censorship.

WEEKS, DETROIT, ESTABLISHES FREE PUBLICITY DEPARTMENT FOR EXHIBITORS SHOWING BLUEBIRDS AND RED FEATHERS

The Detroit Universal Film Company, Cass and Fort streets, in charge of George W. Weeks, is establishing a free publicity department for the local and state exhibitors. Fred T. Grennell has been placed in charge. The Detroit Universal is the first Michigan exchange to establish a publicity department for the exhibitors. Mr. Grennell will furnish exhibitors with any kind of press matter they want regarding Bluebird, Red Feather and Universal films, either for newspapers or programs.

He will see to it that the paper and cuts go to exhibitors promptly, and he will assist in any kind of advertising and publicity matter which exhibitors may want. The formal opening of the new Detroit Universal exchange will take place early in July; invitations will be extended to every exhibitor in the state.

DALY, SELIG DIRECTOR, LONG IN FILMS

William Robert Daly, director of motion pictures, has been producing feature dramas for the Selig Polyscope Company. He driects Fritzi Brunette, working at the Pacific Coast studios. One of Daly's more recent feature productions released through V-L-S-E was "At Piney Ridge." Some of his more recent General film productions include "The Reprisal," "The Hare and the Tortoise," "The Test of Chivalry," and others. "Bob" Daly, as he is familiarly known, has been actively engaged in films for many years and was a well known screen star before he became director of motion picture plays.

EVA TANGUAY COMPLETES HER FIRST PICTURE

Eva Tanguay, for fifteen years the idol of hundreds of thousands of vaudeville patrons, has just finished her first motion picture. This subject, the initial production of the Eva Tanguay Films, is entitled "Energetic Eva," and as the title implies, the active little comedienne of vaudeville, is the main feature.

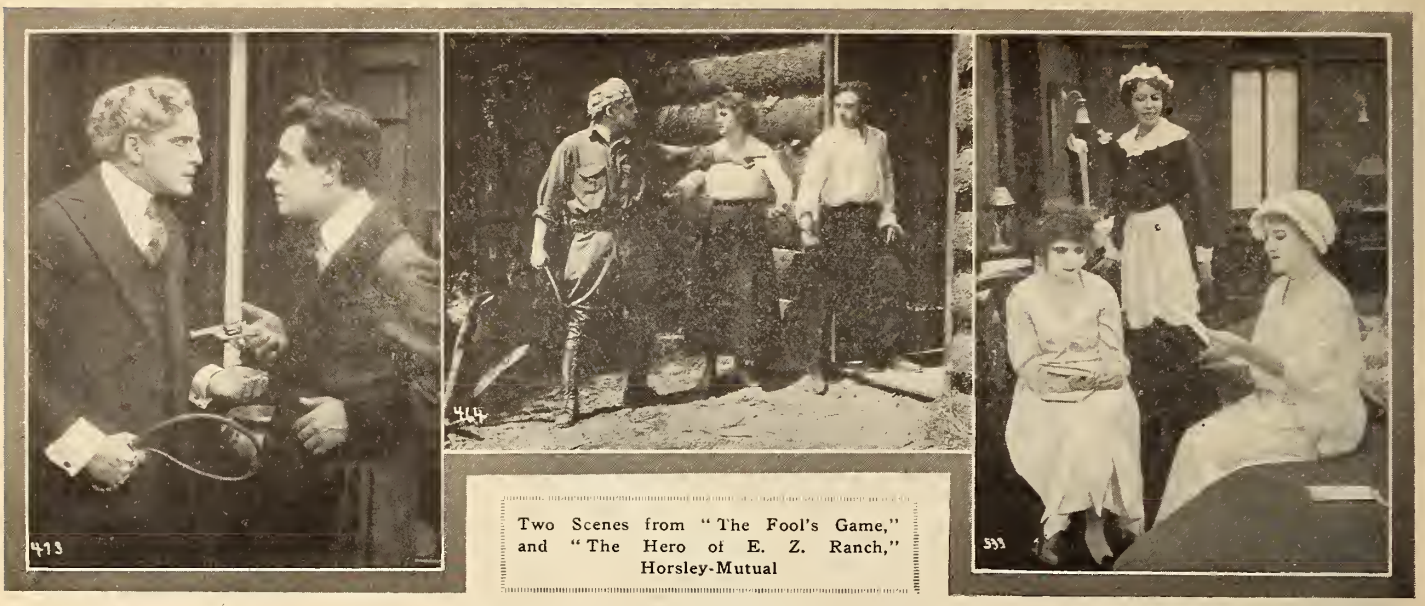
The producers announce that Miss Tanguay has adapted herself to screen requirement in marvellously short order, which will be demonstrated when "Energetic Eva" is shown. The piece is a comedy in five reels, and Miss Tanguay has surrounded herself with an exceptionally competent company, including several persons who have won reputations for their screen work.

The character of "Energetic Eva" is something which Miss Tanguay has created for herself, and while entirely new, is pronounced one of the best things she has ever done.

Miss Tanguay has the distinction of being the only vaudeville star who has played in New York for three successive years, having played 22 return engagements at the Colonial, 27 at the Alhambra theatres, New York, and 25 at the Orpheum, Brooklyn. She is said to hold the box-office record at every theatre at which she has appeared. She won the diamond medal in the contest for the biggest business in New York.

LOU-TELLEGEN AGAIN A LASKY STAR IN "VICTORY OF CONSCIENCE"

Announcement was made this week by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company that Lou-Tellegen, who recently went to the Lasky studios at Hollywood, Cal. with his wife, Geraldine Farrar, will again appear as a star in a photoplay production, entitled "The Victory of Conscience."



This production will be released on the Paramount Program in August, and marks the third appearance of Lou-Tellegen before the camera. His other two photoplays both made by the Lasky Company last summer, are "The Explorer," based on William Somerset Maugham's play, and "The Unknown," from I. A. R. Wylie's widely read novel, "The Red Mirage."

PRESIDENT OF YORKE FILM COMPANY LOOKING FOR STUDIO SITE

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, July 1.

Fred J. Balsofer, president and general manager of the Yorke Film Company, arrived in Los Angeles last week after spending the past eight months in New York, and is now negotiating for a studio to use for a number of months until the lease held by the Christie Company, on the studio property Mr. Balsofer owns in Hollywood, expires. The players of the Yorke Company remained in New York to complete a picture, and are expected to arrive here within the next few days. Mr. Balsofer also advises that other Metro companies will come to Los Angeles within a short time to make this their principal place of production. The list of stars to come west will in all probability include May Allison, Harold Lockwood, Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and others.

"SHOES" DRAWS BIG HOUSE

In adopting its new purpose of exploiting plays in preference to players, Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., is backing its national advertising campaign with such features as "The Three Godfathers," originally published in the Saturday Evening Post, and "Shoes."

"Shoes" has thus early attracted remarkable attention among the exhibitors, houses that usually play Bluebirds one day having exhibited "Shoes" from two to three days—while the Moss and Brill theatres are using the subject for a full week.

Francelia Billington and Louise Lovely in "L'Abbe Constantin," Bluebird

Another angle of the Bluebird theory will be exploited in "Bettina Loved a Soldier," to be released early in August. There will be three players whom Bluebird has previously advertised as stars concerned in the portrayal of this screen version of Ludovic Halevy's "L'Abbe Constantin." Rupert Julian, who directed; Louise Lovely and Francilla Billington have all been stars in earlier Bluebirds, and now they meet in "Bettina Loved a Soldier."

"Photoplays Can't Be Made by Rule-of-Thumb, Like Shoes"

"Producing a Motion Picture Is an Art, Not a Job," Is Contention of Capellani, Clara Kimball Young Director, Whose Studio Work Qualifies Him to Speak

THE yard-stick and so-called "efficiency engineer" constitute the greatest menace to the artistic development of the motion picture, according to Albert Capellani, whose work in "Les Miserables," "Camille" and "La Vie de Boheme" has established him as one of the greatest directors in America.

"You can't make photoplays as you make shoes," declares the Director General of the new Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation. "There are too many motion picture factories in America and too few real studios. Producing a motion picture is an art, not a job.

"The standardizing of the feature picture into five reels is one of the greatest drawbacks to the advancement of our art. You might as well tell a novelist just how many words he must write his next story in, or a painter how many brushfuls of paint he must use on his next canvas. The majority of stories produced as five-reel pictures today could have been done infinitely better in three reels. On the other hand many a wonderful story has been ruined by the necessity of cutting it to five reels.

"In other words, I hope to see the day when the length of the picture will be governed by the story it tells. With our new company, for instance, we are not going to spoil our pictures by cutting them all to five reels. I expect to put 'The Common Law' for Clara Kimball Young in six reels. It may go to seven. It depends on the material. Its exact length will be determined when we have finished the story and come to assembling the picture."

In commenting on the trend of the studio art in this country Mr. Capellani said:

"If there is any tendency more than another that I have noticed and would criticize it is the two free use of the 'close-up' and the apparent timidity of directors as to the sustained length of a scene.

"The 'close-up' is an extremely useful bit of photographic technique, but it must not be overdone. It should be used just as the spectator in a theatre uses his opera-glasses—for occasional magnified glimpses of the players, in order to register more powerfully certain moments in the progress of the story.

"The chopping-up of big scenes into short lengths with little 'flash-backs' to unimportant details and outside happenings, is getting to be a nuisance. There is no reason why a big scene in a picture cannot be sustained straight through to its climax without a single flash-back or cut-in that isn't absolutely essential to the immediate action."

M. Capellani is an ardent advocate of the high-priced scenario. He believes that the only way producing companies can get stories worth putting on the screen is by making it worth while for big writers to create them.

"You can't expect trained and gifted writers to put in three months' work on a big story and sell it for $1,000—the top price today for a five-reel subject," said the noted director.

"The employment of staff writers of scenarios is ruinous to the quality of a company's output. They grind the stuff out week by week—like literary hacks. Spend money on your stories and get the really talented people to write them.

"If I were asked to make a percentage table on what makes a great picture I should say: 50 per cent story; 30 per cent star and 20 per cent director. Judging by the average picture we see today, the percentage table as compiled in the producing company's office would read: 50 per cent advertising, 40 per cent star and 10 per cent direction—with no story at all."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

MUTUAL CHAPLIN

CHARLIE CHAPLIN in the Mutual-Chaplin Series has a new value. In each of the years you have known him he has been steadily adding to his popularity until to-day he is the best known and most followed man in all the world. But, while he was building up reputation he was also gaining in skill. Each succeeding season found him a better actor—a surer comedian.

This year under the Mutual environment he has acquired UNCTION—that indefinable something which marks the difference between the bread worker and the true artist.

To-day a hundred million people will agree that Charlie Chaplin as he appears in the Mutual-Chaplin pictures, "The Floor Walker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," and the other nine still to come, is, beyond all comparison, the greatest laugh maker that ever lived.

"FUTURISTIC" TEA PARTY AT MRS. BLACKTON'S

Mrs. J. Stuart Blackton, wife of the vice-president of the Vitagraph Company of America, was hostess at an unique party given at the Blackton summer home in Oyster Bay this week.

The grounds of her home were chosen as the "set" for a number of the scenes in the Vitagraph picture, "The Battle Cry of War," which is now being made and which will be a sequel to "The Battle Cry of Peace."

The company doing "The Battle Cry of War," among whom were Alice Joyce, Harry Morey, Naomi Childers, and several others, worked in the gardens of the house from ten in the morning until four in the afternoon. Just as director William Earle was getting ready to embark his company in their motors for the return home, a trim maid came from the house, and invited the company to tea.

The resultant party was interesting. Officers of the American and "Ruritanian" armies; Miss Childers as Jeanne D'Arc; Miss Joyce as an heiress naturally careless of countries and governments, and other novel characters expressed by their costumes, all were present.

Mrs. Blackton presided over her futuristic tea-party, pouring the tea herself, and originating a volley of repartee that sent the whole company away from the Blackton estate with hopes for another scene to bring them there again.

Fate did its best to keep the new William Fox photoplay which stars Virginia Pearson, from being shown to the public. To begin with, Victor Sutherland, who plays the male lead, became ill just after the trip to Virginia where many scenes were taken, and had to stay in bed for two weeks. Tonsilitis was too much for him.

Then the films which were taken in Virginia got mixed in their routing back to New York, and could not be recovered until the picture was practically completed. For a while it looked as if the entire company would have to return, and take again the scenes that had been filmed there. But at the last minute, the express company found the reels, and returned them to the New York office.

ROBERT WARWICK IN "NATHAN HALE," WORLD FILM

Continuing his policy of developing a new period in photoplay production, William A. Brady now has in the course of camerizing Clyde Fitch's story, "Nathan Hale." The story will have as its central personality, Robert Warwick, whose physique and characteristics lend themselves admirably to the characterization of the beloved character.

In addition to Mr. Warwick, the cast will contain Gail Kane, Johnny Hines and other well-known players on the World Film roster.

DONALDSON CREATED LEADING MALE ROLE IN "FADED FLOWER"

The leading male role in Ivan Abramson's latest production, "The Faded Flower," was created by Arthur Donaldson, well-known screen and legitimate actor. He is one of four stars in this production, the others being Marguerite Snow, Alma Hanlon, and Rose Coghlan.

Mr. Donaldson enacted the role of the Prince in "The Prince of Pilsen" for four consecutive seasons, and then went into pictures. His recent pictures include "A Woman's Honor," "Hearts of Men," and "The Salamander."

Anita Stewart, Vitagraph Star, Feted at New Haven by Film Fans and College Students

Anita Stewart Arriving in New Haven (Right) and the Star's Appearance at the Orpheum Theatre

Anita Stewart, the Vitagraph star, went to New Haven last week to participate in two events. On reaching New Haven Miss Stewart entered a waiting machine which took her to the Hotel Taft, where a dinner was served in her honor by several of the graduating students of Yale University.

At 8:30 P. M. Miss Stewart arrived at the Orpheum theatre, where she was presented by the management and patrons of the theatre, in token of her work on the screen, with a beautiful silver loving cup. The star made a short address to the management and patrons for the presentation, and then left in her limousine for Yale University, where she was the guest of the senior class of 1916.

Miss Stewart, as she entered the reception hall, received an ovation that lasted for several minutes, from fully five thousand present, which included many notables as well as the greater portion of students present to attend the commencement exercises.

NO "DAMAGED GOODS" SHOWING AFTER SEPTEMBER 1ST

The Mutual Film Corporation announces that it will accept no bookings for "Damaged Goods" the seven part Richard Bennett drama for showing after September 1. "All the prints now working will be withdrawn on that date and they will be absolutely taken off the screen at that time," said J. C. Graham, assistant to the president of the Mutual. "The exhibitors who expect to play 'Damaged Goods' must book it for exhibition in the months of July and August."

Richard Bennett, the actor who made 'Damaged Goods' famous both in the picture and on the speaking stage, is now at work at the American studios in Santa Barbara on "The Sable Curse," a Mutual Star production for which a release date will be announced later.

LONG RUN FOR "POLICE" IN CINCINNATI

Through the Cincinnati exchange of the General Film Company, "Police" was booked for a run of sixteen consecutive days at the Alhambra Theatre, that city. After a week had intervened, the picture was booked into the Colonial, only two doors from the Alhambra, for a seven day run.

PARAMOUNT SOUVENIRS AT NATIONAL CONVENTION

Many attractive souvenirs are being prepared for distribution at the Paramount Pictures Corporation booth during the Sixth Annual Convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America to be held in Chicago, July 12-18.

FOUR PLAYERS ADDED TO HORSLEY-MUTUAL ACTING FORCE

Four new players have been added to the Horsley-Mutual playing forces during the past week. They are Myra Davis Dowling, Marguerite Foss, Lloyd Holton and Corine Bradford.

Miss Dowling is an actress of wide experience both on the speaking stage and in pictures, having appeared at various times in the support of numerous noted players. As a member of the Horsley-Mutual contingent, Miss Dowling will appear in support of Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, co-starring in two reel Centaur features, released through the Mutual.

Miss Foss, who has been in picture work for several years, playing with several of the important producing companies, has been engaged as a member of the same company.

Lloyd Holton has been engaged as a member of Crane Wilbur's recently organized company. For the past year he has been playing important roles in productions filmed at one of the large California studios.

Corine Bradford, who has posed for numerous artists throughout the country, is a newcomer to motion pictures. She, too, has been assigned to Crane Wilbur's company of players and will make her debut in a production now under way.

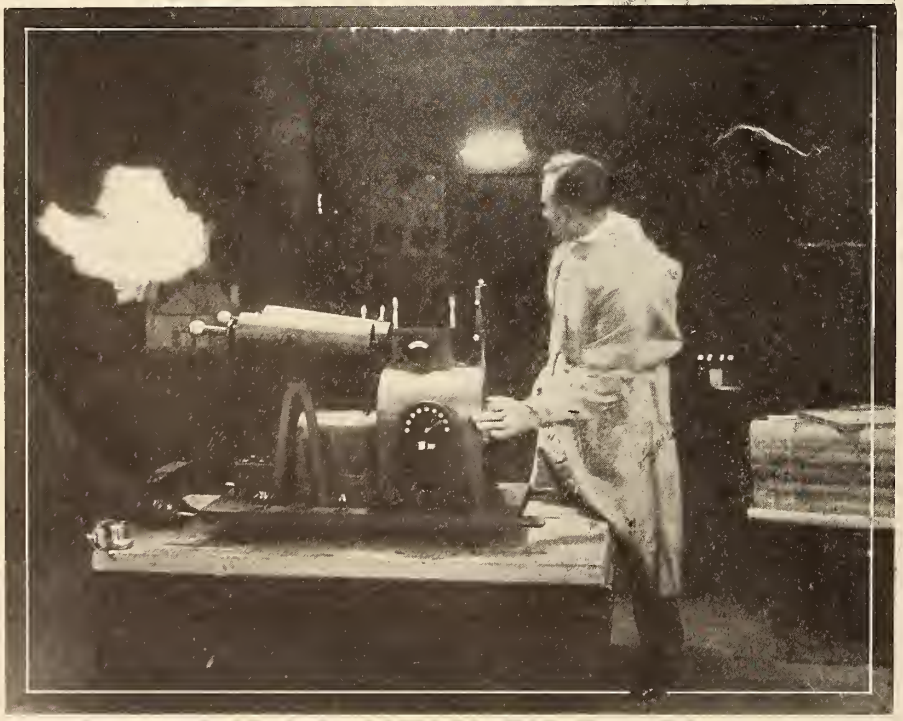
ESSANAY STUDIO FACILITIES AID QUICK PRODUCTION



The new Essanay studio in Chicago has so greatly facilitated production that the company now has completed plays clear through the month of September. The company has now three studios in operation at 1333 Argyle street, on the North Side of the city, and can take care of both features and short subjects at the same time with ease.

The new studio, said to be the largest indoor, artificially lighted studio in the world, is 350 feet long by 175 wide. It forms a west wing to the old studio buildings and runs from Argyle street one block south. On the east side of the old building there is an extension for factory purposes, while in the center there is a large portico, so that the building as it now stands forms a perfect "E."

The main offices have been moved to the new studio building. There is a large reception room on the first floor where those who come on business are directed to the various departments. To the right of the entrance is a large carpenter shop and back of this is the studio proper, stretching back to the rear of the building. At one side is a large new property room.

The front of the building, on the second floor, is devoted to the main offices, including that of George K. Spoor, president of Essanay and other officials. Here also are the advertising, scenario and auditing departments, and offices of the directors and assistants.

The entire wing of the old building formerly occupied by these offices, has been given over to the women's department.

MONTREAL DAILIES ALL REPRESENTED AT FOX SHOWING OF "FOURTH ESTATE"

Special to Motion Picture News.

Montreal, P. Q., July 1.

A great deal of interest was shown on Friday of last week when Chandos St. John-Brenon, the local manager for the Fox Film Corporation Limited gave a private screening of "The Fourth Estate" to the press of Montreal. Not a single paper failed to send its representative and both Managing Editor W. Crandall, and City Editor H. M. Boland of the Star, Montreal's leading paper, were present. Papers represented were the Star, the Standard, the leading film page paper in the province, with F. J. Arrowsmith in charge; the Herald, the Mail and News, the Tatler, Beck's Weekly, La Presse, La Patrie, Le Devoir and the Gazette.

"DIDN'T KNOW IT WAS LOADED" THEME IN AN AMERICAN

"Didn't know it was loaded" has been the sadly expressed excuse for serious or fatal shooting accidents ever since the invention of firearms, although, perhaps, it is generally the reason for accidents to children.

This thought has been worked into a two-part scenario by William Parker, of the American Film Company staff of writers, and the action of the story is carried by Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat.

The name of this two-reel "Flying A" drama is "Killed by Whom?" to be released by the Mutual on July 3.

LEONORE ULRICH AT WORK ON "THE INTRIGUE" FOR PALLAS PICTURES

Leonore Ulrich, who recently closed a season on Broadway in Belasco's play, "The Heart of Wetona," is now busily engaged at the Pallas Pictures studios in Los Angeles on her latest photoplay vehicle for the Paramount program "The Intrigue." The subject is being staged under the direction of Frank Lloyd and presents a timely drama by Julian Crawford Ivers. The story involves the present international condition, although it is not actually a war play.

Staged partly in Europe and partly in the United States, it tells of a young American inventor and his perfected X-ray gun that would revolutionize warfare. In negotiations with a foreign power he is shadowed by the secret service of another nation at war.

Leonore Ulrich and the Dog which Appears in "The Intrigue," Pallas-Morosco

Leonore Ulrich in the role of the beautiful spy, Countess Sonia Varnli, is given a character that will prove quite different from any in which she has appeared heretofore. The supporting cast will offer several new faces under the Pallas Pictures trade-mark, including such talented players as Cecil Van Anker, Florence Vidor and Paul Weigel, together with the the two Pallas actors, Herbert Standing and Howard Davies.

Director Frank Lloyd has spent considerable time planning the immense X-ray gun, or rather apparatus, which will be shown in destructive action. The photography is under the chief supervision of James Van Trees.

"NEWS" HAS NO COMPETITOR

Minister Uses "Who's Guilty?" as Topic for Sermon

Rev. D. J. Bradley of Highland Church, Cleveland, Urges His Congregation to See the Pathe Series—"I Approve of the Pictures Because They Make People Think," He Says

THE Pathe series, "Who's Guilty?" produced by the Arrow Film Corporation, so impressed the Rev. D. J. Bradley, of Highland Church, Cleveland, that he used it as the topic of a recent sermon.

"I approve of the 'Who's Guilty?' series," said Mr. Bradley, "because they make people think. The picture also gets away from theatricalism, which is a good thing."

In his sermon, Mr. Bradley said in part:

"It is really a timely question that is being asked in the Pathe photo drama called 'Who's Guilty?' In spite of the fact that the authoress has given the episodes a glamour which is never found in real life, and has developed her themes often quite superficially, the theme and treatment of it are well worth while. It should make many thoughtless people think. It will help in making us all realize how much we often share in responsibility for crimes which others have committed.

"Let me take just two episodes. The first involves a young doctor, who has risen to the summit of success, in the unintentional murder of his wife. She is a charming young woman who does not enjoy the brilliant social life which her husband's success has opened to them. The doctor comes under the influence of a handsome woman who is infatuated with him—the same old triangle! Finally, when the young surgeon is about to operate upon his own wife—in spite of professional ethics—his mind becomes obsessed with the other woman, his hand slips—and Death enters the room. From that time on his career is broken and he ends up a hopeless wreck. Who's Guilty?

"In this case the answer is not hard to find. The man himself is guilty—so weak in letting himself be enticed into a compromising relationship—so blind in failing to see his own wife's splendid devotion. And then—so pitifully feeble of will to go down and down the ladder into disgrace. The moral is a strong one. To any man the same temptation is likely to come—it is part of life's experience. Can you meet it strongly, securely? Have you enough Godly common sense to meet such a situation triumphantly? If not, you yourself are guilty—and you cannot lay the blame on the foolish woman who has tempted you.

"The second episode deals with a New England mill owner, the employer of many girls. He has a son whom he treats as an office boy, and whose self-respect he unwittingly undermines every day. This young man has fallen in love with an attractive girl employed in his father's mill. They resolve to be married, but father sets his foot down, dismisses the girl from his employ, and sees to it that she can find no other job in town. Broken in spirit she goes to the city, and after searching vainly for work, takes "the easiest way." Her beauty helps her along in the underworld and she ends up as the mistress of a wealthy man-about-town. In time she is accidentally discovered by her former suitor. There is a mess in which she, her former lover and her present companion are involved. The story ends with a tragedy.

"Who's Guilty here? Unqualifiedly the father and mill owner is guilty! He has robbed his son of a chance to develop the finest manhood. He had interfered in a sweet and wholesome love affair. He had driven an innocent girl into poverty and temptation. To be sure, she might have "starved first." But the guilt was upon the man who had caused her to stumble—who had thrust her against a wall without a chance for self-defense. It is such sins as that of this so-called 'Godly man,' church member, Puritan and all—that are hardest to forgive. Our industrial life is full of the same thing. It will be a glad day for religion when all men come to think of it as not so much a matter of ritual observance of so-called 'divine law,' but a matter of shielding the weak, protecting the fatherless, and helping those who are dependent upon us into strong, self-reliant and honest living. I advise each and every one of you to see this series of pictures."

When an audience of more than two thousand people packed Loew's theatre in New Rochelle to the doors on Thursday evening, June 15, at prices ranging from two to three dollars, there was another indication as to the extent of the popularity of "Who's Guilty?" and those who play in it. The occasion was a performance for the benefit of the Blessed Sacrament Church, the feature of which was, by special request of those in charge, the personal appearance of Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore, stars of "Who's Guilty?"

EILEEN GODSEY DANCES INTO A LONGER KALEM ENGAGEMENT

To secure the "real thing" in "The Artful Dodger," a recent Kalem comedy Director Harry Millarde especially engaged Eileen Godsey, a well known vaudeville favorite for a specialty dance in one scene.

Following her initial screen appearance she was induced to consent to a longer engagement. As a result she will be seen in a number of Ham comedies, including "Ham the Explorer," "The Peach Pickers," and the "Baggage Smashers."

Cobe Finds Business Brisk Throughout the Country

Vice-President of Unity Sales Corporation States Demand for Serials Is on Increase—"Yellow Menace," 16 Episodes, Is Proving an Attractive State Rights Proposition

ANDREW J. COBE, vice-president and general manager of the Unity Sales Corporation; who has been making an active country-wide campaign on behalf of the Unity Sales Corporation, reports that business throughout the country in the industry is brisk, with promises of immediaate future improvement. On his return to New York last week Mr. Cobe stated that the demand for serials appeared to be on the increase, as evidenced by the business he has done with the Unity serial, "The Yellow Menace," in which Edwin Stevens is starred, supported by Margaret Gale and Florence Malone.

"The Yellow Menace," which is the first serial ever to be sold on the State rights basis, has been snapped up by independent exchanges all over the country. Among the exchanges that have acquired State rights to "The Yellow Menace" are the Electric Theatre Supply Company, 13th and Vine strets, Philadelphia; Quality Film Company, Inc., 404 Ferry street, Pittsburgh; Eastern Feature Film Company, 57 Church street, Boston; William A. Lochren Company, 16-18 No. Fourth street, Minneapolis; General Feature Film Company, 5 So. Wabash avenue, Chicago, Ill.; Scott and Sanford, Commerce street, Dalals, Tex.; Famous Players Film Service, 12 Queen street East, Toronto; Balaban-Hershberg Film Attraction, Chicago.

"The Yellow Menace," Mr. Cobe wishes to emphasize, will be in sixteen episodes, and sixteen episodes only, despite the volume of business already booked for the picture. There is no prospect of the Unity Sales Corporation adding additional episodes. Diversity of interest is Mr. Cobe's primary object in mapping out the Unity program. On this he has attained his object with "Diana," the colored three-reel Grecian classic, starring Paul Swan and Valkyrien. "My Country First," a six-reel patriotic feature starring Tom Terriss; "The Pursuing Vengeance," a detective romance featuring Sheldon Lewis; "The Marriage Bond," a powerful society drama, with Nat C. Goodwin in the leading role, supported by Margaret Greene.

"The Lottery Man," a five-reel comedy drama, with Thurlow Bergen, Elsie Esmond and a favorable cast. "The Bishop's Secret," a modern photodrama of startling and unusual interest, dealing with life in the Orient and in New York City.

Unity Sales Corporation also announces a series of comedies in which the European comedian, Perez, will be seen. The first two releases of the comedies, which will be known as the "Tweedledum" series, are "Tweedledum Torpedoed by Cupid" and "Tweedledum Plays the Hero." The comedies are being made by Ed. Dunn of the Eagle Film Corporation, at Jacksonville, Fla.

"I have future plans to announce," says Mr. Cobe, "which will prove of vast interest to the industry at large. The success of 'Diana' has strengthened me in a determination to make a series of mythological photodramas based upon the immortal stories of the Greek classics. I also have the option on the services of several noted stars and the works of many authors, which I think will in the near future prove to be of great importance. While I am not ready to announce my plans more definitely, the summer is going to be a very busy season for the Unity Sales Corporation.

"For instance, with 'The Yellow Menace' I have launched with the Chicago Herald an arrangement by which the story of the serial will be syndicated in 1,100 newspapers throughout the country, giving exhibitors a tremendous impetus in boosting and advertising this wonderful serial. We have also inaugurated a special publicity and advertising campaign in connection with 'The Yellow Menace.' We are trying in every way to live up to my original design in founding the Unity Sales Corporation, which was to serve the best interests of producer, exchange man and exhibitor alike by a service of co-operation and fairness."

TOURNEUR BACK FROM MAINE VACATION

Maurice Tourneur has returned from his two weeks' vacation in Maine, where he sought absolute quiet for the purpose of preparing himself for his next picture, in five reels. It deals with a new angle of the social problem. Mr. Tourneur states his next picture will contain a new and novel idea in the line of producing and will undoubtedly be the best he has made for the Paragon Studios.

ONLY THE KEYSTONE STAFF IS ABLE TO FURNISH RIGHT KIND OF SCENARIOS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 1.

With all rejected scenarios returned to the writers, Hampton Del Ruth, scenario editor and manager of production of the Keystone Company, is enclosing a letter asking the writers not to submit other stories, with the explanation that in three years' time he has found that it is a loss to employ a reader to go over the submitted synopsis, as the company has not found sufficient scenarios that meet their peculiar needs. Mack Sennett and Del Ruth have found by experience that the staff of writers of the Keystone scenario department are the only parties who are able to furnish the organization the kind of stories required for its productions.

SHOW BOTH PICTURES AND BE NEUTRAL, URGES MUTUAL

Exhibitors reached by the Mutual exchange of Omaha are being urged to book both the "Fighting for France" and "Fighting for Germany" pictures, thus showing both sides of the question and still maintaining perfect neutrality. In Nebraska, where there is a number of foreign-born people, the plan is meeting with great success. In a number of places a percentage of the proceeds for the first is given to the Belgian relief fund, and for the second, part of the proceeds go to the local or state German organizations. In a number of places the German singing societies have given concerts immediately before the picture, "Fighting for Germany."

SIS HOPKINS COMEDIES EXPECTED TO DUPLICATE SUCCESS IN ENGLAND

Reports following the introduction of Kalem's Sis Hopkins comedies in England indicate that the fun-maker will duplicate in the land of Johnny Bull the success she achieved here in her screen debut. The Kalem productions are giving English theatregoers their first glimpse of Sis.

During the years of her success on the stage her engagements were planned so far in advance that it was never possible to consider the many offers for foreign tours. The same advertising methods used here on the Sis Hopkins subjects are being employed in the English market.

ROWLAND ENTERS SUIT

Richard A. Rowland, through his attorneys, Cadwalader, Wickersham and Taft, has filed a suit in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York, against Albert E. Smith, George Kleine, J. A. Berst, Frank L. Dyer, William N. Selig, Alice M. Long, as administratrix of the estate of Samuel Long, deceased, George K. Spoor, William T. Rock, William Pelzer, Jeremiah J. Kennedy, Paul G. Melies, Carl H. Wilson, Frank J. Marion, Biograph Company, Kalem Company, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Pathe Freres, Vitagraph Company of America, Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, Selig Polyscope Company, and Melies Manufacturing Company, as defendants.

The bill of complaint sets forth that the "action is brought to recover from the said defendants the value of the preferred stock in said General Film Company owned by the complainant, which value has been destroyed by defendants by the acts hereinafter described committed in fraud of the rights of the complainant."

It is further alleged that "the value of the shares of preferred stock owned by the complainant at the time of his acquisition thereof was upwards of $46,000; that by reason of the acts of the defendants..... the value of said shares of stock owned by the complainant has been totally lost and destroyed....."

The bill prays for the ascertainment of the value of the above mentioned preferred stock, and that the defendants be compelled to pay the amount of the alleged loss and destruction so ascertained.

WILLIAM FOX LEASES PLANT TO PRODUCE COMEDIES ON COAST

By Telegraph to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, July 2.

General Western Representative Carlos, of the Fox Film Corporation, has leased the Dixon National Drama Corporation studios and laboratories here, and they will be used as a comedy-producing plant by William Fox. Five or six companies will be put to work therein.

Director Charles Parrott and Comedian Hank Mann, late of Keystone, have been engaged, and the rest of the personnel will be announced soon. The Edendale studios will be maintained for Fox dramatic productions, and will be used by Directors Apfel, Raoul Walsh and others. In all, Fox will have nine or ten directors at the two plants. Hitherto, he has had three companies on the West Coast.

"MARTYRS OF WAR" SHOWN AT GLOBE, NEW YORK

"The Martyrs of the War," a three-reel film presentation of the French Government's work in aid of its battle-blinded, was shown at the Globe theatre, New York, last week. These views were secured by George A. Kessler of the executive committee of the B. F. B. Permanent Blind Relief Fund, and will be sold to the highest bidder, the entire proceeds to go toward the rehabilitation of the Allied blinded.

The French Government gave its official sanction to the film.

Early Bird Estabrook Catches the Morning Exercise

Star of "The Mysteries of Myra," the Hearst Serial, Gets up with Friend Sol at the Wharton Studios, Ithaca, N. Y., and Works the Medicine Ball

Howard Estabrook, International Star, at Work and at Play

LEGENDS which have persisted in sticking to stars of the screen regarding their hours of rising have been rudely shattered by Howard Estabrook. Mr. Estabrook believes in reaching his place of work before 1 P. M. or sunset, so up in Ithaca, N. Y., at the Wharton studio he has instituted something of a club, which is generally known as "The Early Birds." The star of the Hearst serial "The Mysteries of Myra" astounds everyone by getting up with the sun or thereabouts.

Studio employees who have wasted many perfectly good hours waiting for other stars to arrive, that work might proceed with the picture in hand, have only just recovered from Mr. Estabrook's early rising habits. But more than this, he is not content to be the only one up with the sun. He makes the rounds every morning and routs other mothers' sons from bed.

Exercising is the order, after all hands are up. One of Mr. Estabrook's best exercises is shown in the accompanying photo. He has assumed the role of gymnastic instructor and hence he has a license to recommend it to anyone, as he does. All you need for it is a doorway. Place the doorway in a desirable position and then go ahead and exercise according to the cut. Some may need short doorways because Mr. Estabrook is unusually tall. However, doorways can be made to order. The idea of this exercise, take it from Mr. Estabrook, is "to brace yourself and push vigorously, then relax and push again."

The medicine ball has also proved a popular means of early morning exercise with the members of "The Early Birds." It is reported that some of the studio employees can even catch the sphere now without falling over.

Valkyrien, Danish Beauty, Star in 8 Features Since August

New York Society Painter and Noted Belgian Dry Point Artist Join in Acclaiming Her the Living Incarnation of Classic Norse Ideal

FEW stars of the American motion picture studios who have originally hailed from foreign lands can claim such a stellar position in the ranks of the profession as does Valkyrien, the Danish actress. Still in her teens Valkyrien has starred in no less than eight feature pictures made in America since her arrival here last August.

Valkyrien lays claims to being the most beautiful woman of Denmark, having won the national beauty prize there prior to her coming to the United States. She was at first a solo danseuse in the Corps de Ballet of the Royal Danish theatre. After winning the government beauty contest she entered the ranks of the Great Northern Film Company of Denmark and was immediately starred. Then after touring her native country at the head of a company of classic dancers, she came to this country and started on picture work again.

Since last August she has appeared in eight American made features. They are, "Youth," Vitagraph; "Diana," Plurograph; "The Valkyrie," "Cruise of Fate," "Silas Marner," "Hidden Valley" and "The Image Maker of Thebes." Thanhouser-Mutual; and a Fox sea drama which is as yet unamed.

The perfect features and figure of Valkyrien have resulted in her being sought after by prominent painters of this country and Europe. Albert Sterner, of New York, known as a society painter, and Joseph Pierre Nuyttens, the Belgian dry-point artist, join in acclaiming her the living incarnation of classic Norse beauty.

P. L. WATERS FILES $10,000 LIBEL SUIT

A suit for $10,000 and costs has been entered by Percival L. Waters against Albert E. Smith in the Supreme Court of the County of New York.

The plaintiff alleges that the defendant published, or caused to be published in the Morning Telegraph on or about June 18, in the Moving Picture World of July 1, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS of July 1, certain matter, respecting the suit brought by Waters and James L. Mr. Mitchell also saw Secretary of War Baker before returning to the Gaumont Laboratories at Flushing, N. Y., where The Mutual Weekly is manufactured. Secretary Baker referred the matter to General Funston, but it is expected that a special Mutual Weekly camera-car will be attached to the main column should the present crisis lead to hostilities.

"CASEY AT THE BAT" OVER 'PHONE FROM LOS ANGELES TO NEW YORK

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 1.

New York City league ball players are to see the Fine Arts Triangle picture, "Casey at the Bat," in which DeWolf Hopper is the star, on the evening of July 2, in New York City, and prior to the projection they will hear the giant comedian recite for the eleventh hundred and s'teenth time the poem he has made famous, even though he is in Los Angeles. Arrangements for this treat for the ball players have been completed by Marion Strauch of the Triangle Los Angeles publicity bureau, and the stentorian tones and whispers of the comedian will be transmitted over the long distance telephone from a private dining room at the Alexandria Hotel, where Hopper on this evening will be the guest of honor at a dinner. The party at the hotel will also witness the private showing of Hopper's latest picture, which is said to be his best release.

Determined Attack Made on Political Censorship

G. W. Sahner of Pittsburgh Is Elected President of Pennsylvania Branch; Frank Stehle of Altoona Is Vice President; James Delves of Pittsburgh is Secretary

Special to Motion Picture News.

Pittsburgh, July 1.

A DETERMINED attack on the political censorship of Pennsylvania was the chief feature of the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Pennsylvania, at Pittsburgh, last week. The convention was one of the most profitable and interesting three-day session ever held in the industry, and the members left Pittsburgh after enthusiastic resolutions to work for better pictures, and the good of the industry generally.

Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, led the attack on censorship. In his address he said:

"The motion picture industry did not know what immoral pictures were until political censorship was established. There are more immoral pictures since censorship was established than ever there were before.

"Under the censorship in Pennsylvania a picture was shown in Philadelphia, but when that picture was sent to New York the motion picture exhibitors prohibited its being shown, and in New York they have no censorship. That is, a picture too bad for New York was shown in Philadelphia, where they have political censorship."

Ben H. Zeer, president of the League, also attacked censorship, and roused the greatest enthusiasm when he announced that he was ready to recruit a company of soldiers for the Mexican front from the picture industry.

Many excursions, sightseeing trips and a banquet were provided for the delegates. Several of the prominent picture stars were present at the convention sessions and banquet.

Officers were elected as follows: President, G. W. Sahner, Pittsburgh; vice-president, Frank Stehle, Altoona; secretary, James Delves, Pittsburgh; treasurer, I. W. Shearer, Pittsburgh; delegates to the national convention, William Fritz, Pittsburgh; W. W. Dawson, Gallitzin; Charles Peterson, Tamaqua; G. W. Sahner, Pittsburgh; James E. Smith, Pittsburgh; A. J. Barthell, Pittsburgh; Oliver McKee, Pittsburgh; I. W. Shearer, Pittsburgh, and M. J. Franney, Shenandoah.

Fred J. Herrington of Pittsburgh, who is now president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was endorsed for the presidency of that body for the coming year to succeed himself. Ben H. Zeer of Reading, retiring president of the State organization, was elected vice-president in the national organization, each State being entitled to a vice-president.

HOFFMAN FILM GETS RIGHTS TO PIKE'S PEAK AUTO RACE

The Hoffman Film Company of Denver has secured the exclusive rights of the Pike's Peak Auto Race, which will be held in Colorado Springs in August. A large number of machines have entered in this run, which includes some of the most famous racing cars in the United States. This meet is being hailed as the greatest ever held in Colorado. Preparations are being made in Colorado Springs for many thousands of people.

Beverly Bayne in a Scene from the Metro Production of "Romeo and Juliet"

GYPSY ABBOTT AS LEADING COMEDIENNE IN RUBE MILLER COMPANY

With two companies engaged in the production of three pictures weekly, and several new faces included in the casts, the Vogue-Mutual studios at Los Angeles are humming with activity these days.

Latest of the recruits to join the Vogue-Mutual contingent are Gypsy Abbott and Elsie Greason. Miss Abbott has been assigned as leading comedienne of Rube Miller's company, while Miss Greason for the past year and a half has been appearing in Selig releases, having previous to that been engaged by several of the big producing companies.

At present, Rube Miller and his company are putting the finishing touches to "Some Liars" in which Miller and Ben Turpin have the principal parts. Miss Abbott and Lillian Hamilton play opposite them.

Jack Dillon, Paddy McQuire and Arthur Moon, are the trio of funmakers in "A Mix up in Dry Goods," first of the Vogue-Mutual comedies in which Miss Greason will appear.

ZENA KEEFE JOINS FOX COHORTS

Zena Keefe, well known star of a dozen moving pictures, has joined the William Fox Companies, and will appear soon in support of June Caprice and Harry Hilliard. Miss Keefe has had several years of experience in the films and has done stage work since the age of three.

She first appeared in Palmer Coxe's "Brownies in Fairyland," and has been connected with the stage in some manner or other ever since that time.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"THE CRUCIAL TEST"

(Paragon-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

WE have here an intensely dramatic story, well handled, and well presented. All the drama of this subject, which is considerable, has been brought to the surface and "put over" in good melodramatic fashion. It is a good example of what scenario editors like to refer to as the "wallop" in a script.

To get this "wallop" it apparently has been necessary to sacrifice originality, and there is little in this play which has not been seen in other plays, both on the screen and spoken stage. It might be described as a collection of situations from the "Yellow Ticket," "Hearts in Exile," and "Panthea" skillfully knitted together, and the result looks like a strong box-office attraction. Much of this is due to Frances Marion, and much to the capable cast and the direction of Robert Thornby.

Kitty Gordon plays the part of Thanya, a beautiful Russian girl, who loves, and is loved by Vance Holden, an American artist. Vance has reason to believe that the girl looks on him with disfavor, and he leaves Petrograd. Later she falls under the eyes of Bagroff, the hated Grand Duke, who covets her, but she spurns him. She finds that a band of nihilists have selected her brother Boris to kill the Grand Duke, and she resolves to aid him.

The attempt is made at a reception at Bagroff's home; it fails and Boris is captured. To save her brother, Thanya takes the blame, and both she and Boris are sent to Siberia. They escape; later in Paris Thanya again meets Vance, their disagreement is adjusted and they are married.

Bagroff visits Paris. He finds Thanya, and conveys to her the information that he can make her husband the vogue among the European nobility, if she, Thanya, will pay the price. For the sake of her husband, the girl decides to sacrifice herself.

Boris returns to Paris from America; he learns of Bagroff's presence, and gains entrance to his apartments just in time to prevent Thanya's sacrifice. The Grand Duke is killed by Boris, and the murder remains a mystery. Thanya returns to her husband, and happiness.

In the cast are also Niles Welch, as Vance; J. Herbert Frank as Bagroff; W. Cohill as Boris, and Winnifred Harris as the Princess Xenia.

"THE DUPE"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE number of pictures of this type produced by the Lasky studios would seem to indicate that a stock company, especially adapted to this kind of plays has been built up, and the play built to suit the company. At all events, we have Ernest Joy playing a part practically identical with at least three others he has played in the last two or three months.

The story is good and skilfully handled. In plot, players and production, the picture smacks of the Lasky standard—a standard which many other producers have come to covet. It presents the more complex side of modern life, yet without any of those complexities of presentation which raise the story "over the heads" of the average audience. Its box-office value should be considerable.

The work is that of the brilliant Turnbull family, which has had a large share in bringing the Lasky product to its present high standing. Hector wrote the story, and his sister, Margaret, picturized it. It presents Blanche Sweet as the unsophisticated secretary of Mrs. Strong, a shallow young society woman, who has tired of her husband, and is carrying on a love affair with Jimmy Regan.

Jimmy immediately falls in love with Ethel, the secretary, and

The Temptation

Ethel returns his love. In order to appear to the best advantage in his eyes, the girl yields to temptation, steals $150 from her employer and buys a magnificent gown.

Later her conscience spurs her on to confess the theft. Mrs. Strong threatens to prosecute and disgrace her unless she assists Mrs. Strong in obtaining a divorce. The girl feels herself forced to consent, and accepts Strong's invitation to dine with him at a tavern of unsavory reputation.

At the tavern she encounters Jimmy with a party of friends. Jimmy puts the wrong construction of her presence, and leaves the party after attempting to induce Ethel to go home. From Mr. Strong he learns that Mrs. Strong is in love with Jimmy, and then she rushes home, seeks out Jimmy and confesses the whole thing. Mrs. Strong is obliged to admit her part in the plot, and everything ends happily for Ethel and Jimmy.

Blanche Sweet is appealing and sincere as Ethel, and is ably supported by Ernest Joy, Thomas Meighan and Veda McEvers.

"WHO'S GUILTY?"

(Pathe and Arrow—Fifth and Seventh Chapters)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"SOLD Out," and "Truth Crushed to Earth," offer two widely divergent themes for "Who's Guilty?" series. The first is an exciting melodrama that makes no pretense at being anything else, while the second contains one of the best psychological studies of a young man, afraid to tell the truth because Truth has never gained him anything but sorrow, that has ever been pictured. Both are entertaining but in ways as divergent as the pictures themselves.

"Sold Out," the fifth of the series, tells a conventional story in a like manner, but its treatment is sufficient to warrant it strong and reliable when it comes down to interest and appeal. A mining engineer marries a wealthy society girl and takes her west where she keeps house for him. There is gold in the mine but it is not to be taken easily. The wife is brought back east by her parents and resumes her old life. She has in her possession several shares in her husband's mine. These an old suitor manages to buy from her at a miserable sum after he has learned that the mine has started to pay. The husband returns to his wife and learns of the situation. He attacks the other man and in their fight they knock the wife down stairs and she is killed. It must be confessed that the question "Who's Guilty?" is void of the ethics intended to be implied. Most obviously the guilty persons are the two men who knock the young woman down stairs. But, at that, ethics don't enter into the heads of the majority of picture patrons.

"Truth Crushed to Earth" takes the case of a man who during his boyhood has learned to fear the truth. Whenever he told it he was always punished anyway. As a young man he loves his childhood sweetheart but her father believes her too young to marry. Telling the truth results in the youth's expulsion from college and his father sets him adrift to earn his own living.

He secures a position and gets along very well. One night he is entrusted with a sum of money to care for until morning. On his way home he stops in a cafe and there a light-fingered Liz spots him. Knockout drops do the rest. In the morning, fearing to tell the truth he lies and says the money was in his desk and must have been stolen. The boss finds him out and that's the end of the job. His sweetheart denounces him because she has heard from her scapegrace brother that he was in company with a disreputable woman and the young man takes to the river as a last resort.

This story is told exceedingly well. The young man's part is admirably delineated by Tom Moore. The writers have constructed the scenario logically and the actions of the central character are always natural.

Mr. Moore and Anna Nilsson continue in the leading parts in both numbers while supporting casts of uniform ability appear in each instance.

"THE GRASP OF GREED"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WILLS have been more or less prominent in motion pictures since their inception but this is probably the first time a document of such legal importance has been tattooed on the smooth white back of a young lady. This is the most prominent feature of "The Grasp of Greed," the latest Bluebird photoplay, and it is so unusual both in respect to its cause and effect (and said effect is the climax of the picture) that it bears first place in the review. This will, made by a dying publisher, on a desert island where no writing materials were to be obtained, must be produced in court in order that the publisher's son may establish his claim to his inheritance.

The picture builds up well to this point but when the young lady's back is exposed to view, and when the judge proclaims that it must be passed around the court so that all the attending attorneys and claimants may see it, there is no more seriousness in the picture. Thereafter it is comedy and we fear unintentional comedy. However, real good laughs are none too plentiful these days and perhaps the spectator will be willing to be deprived of a dramatic climax for the privilege of a hearty burst of laughter. In most other respects "The Grasp of Greed" is satisfactory.

The picture is based on Rider Haggard's "John Meeson's Will." Ida May Park prepared the scenario. Hers is good work up to the court scene. If here she wanted to retain the seriousness of the film, she should have refrained from instituting the passing about of the will. Perhaps Miss Park was accomplishing an intended result and if so, the above goes for naught. The story is well presented. The characters are precisely drawn and the development of the scenario is good, following closely in the track of the original work.

Joseph De Grasse directed. His work is good, too. The sensations of the picture include a series of scenes taken on board ship while the craft is sinking. These are done realistically. The locations on the desert island were well chosen and the settings done with fine taste. One point in Mr. De Grasse's direction is open to criticism. It is impossible to conceive why he overlooked it. The hero rushes in and at the point of a pistol rescues the heroine from two toughs. Then he takes an opportunity to embrace the young lady, and in so doing he leaves the men unguarded. They, good actors that they are, remain against the wall with their hands up.

Tattooing the Will

Louise Lovely appears as the heroine and it is on her back that the important will is inscribed. C. N. Hammond is the old miser, while Jay Belasco is the son. Lon Chaney in a comedy role is excellent, while the supporting cast is capable to a satisfactory degree.

"THE ETERNAL QUESTION"

(Popular Plays and Players—Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

IT appears that there are many Eternal Questions. In this case it is dress for women. To prove that dress is the great feature in the "making" of any woman, Pierre Felix, a noted couturier bets $25,000 with young Ralph Courtland that he can take a girl from the streets, and from dint of dress, make her accepted in the best society within ninety days.

Bianca, a European peasant, who is found assisting an organ grinder, is selected for the experiment. She is dressed and coached to perfection, and introduced to society as a Russian countess. She is quite the rage, and she finds no more devoted admirer than Ralph Courtland himself. The two are often seen together, walking, riding and driving, and soon both are deeply in love.

Bianca shows great perturbation when the Grand Duke Serdian, of Montenaro, is announced at a reception, and she manoeuvers successfully to avoid him.

In the meantime, Ralph's fortune is swept away by speculation, and on top of that comes a double blow. The three months are up, and Ralph discovers that he not only has lost the $25,000, but the woman he has loved is an impostor.

He goes to Bianca and charges her with having ruined him and disgraced his family. She then reveals to him that she is, in reality, the daughter of the King of Montenaro, who escaped to this country to prevent being forced into marriage with the Grand Duke Serdian.

This turns the result of the wager against Felix. He is furious, and in revenge plots to betray Bianca into the hands of Serdian. She is kidnaped and taken aboard the Duke's yacht, in the harbor. Ralph, who is practicing flights in his aeroplane, hears of the kidnaping, flies to the ship, which is under way, and alighting on the deck, fights his way to Bianca. Through the interference of a lawyer friend, a cruiser is sent after the yacht to prevent its leaving the three-mile limit; Ralph's marriage to Bianca prevents further persecution by the Grand Duke.

Mme. Olga Petrova gives a convincing portrayal of Bianca. Mahlon Hamilton, Arthur Hoops, Warren Oland, Edward Martindel, Henry Leone, Howard Messimer and Evelyn Dumo are other members of a generally capable cast. The story was written by Aaron Hoffman, and directed by Burton King and Harry Revier.

"THE CONFLICT"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

LUCILLE LEE STEWART makes her second appearance as a star in this production, which gives her plenty of opportunity for emotional acting. She is an attractive screen figure. Her work is pleasing, when one considers that the role she is called upon to carry is in itself not strong in motive, and the story apt to confuse the spectator at times.

Madeleine Meets Paul Unexpectedly

We have had scores of pictures possessed of the eternal triangle idea, but "The Conflict" offers something out of the ordinary in the shape of a quadrangle: a husband, a wife (Miss Stewart), the other woman, and the other woman's brother. The other woman, envious of the wife, enlists her own brother in a scheme to separate her from her husband. She succeeds, although husband and wife continue to live in the same house. Then when the brother threatens to expose the plot, the other woman follows him to the home of her rival, and wounds him fatally by striking him with a poker.

The husband, entering the house immediately after, thinks his wife is guilty, and shoulders the blame. An ante-mortem statement from the brother clears him, and places the blame where it belongs. Husband and wife are thus reunited.

Inasmuch as the wife has been depicted as thoroughly dissatisfied with her marriage, even to the extent of contracting gambling debts which her husband refuses to pay, and conducting herself in a cold manner toward him, it is a little surprising to find her suddenly face about. This can be ascribed to her realization of her folly, but the motive is not clear to the spectator.

Nevertheless, the action carries considerable suspense, and is enlivened by some excellent touches, so that even if the spectator is puzzled, he will not fail to be interested.

Ralph W. Ince's direction, if we may consider it apart from the story, is very good. The staging is admirable, and the handling of the cast entirely acceptable.

Huntley Gordon offers a finished bit of work as the husband, and Jessie Miller is convincing as the schemer. Others are William Lytell, Jr., Frank Currier, John Robertson, and Richard Turner.

"THE MYSTERY OF THE LEAPING FISH"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

LAYING aside the sort of parts for which he has become famous Douglas Fairbanks goes in for pure farce here, his role being that of a "nut" detective, whose characteristics are well described by his name—Coke Ennyday. It is near-slapstick, without a trace of the heart interest which Fairbanks handles with such distinction, and in fact is a burlesque of Fairbanks' own style of acting, to a degree, and more emphatically, a burlesque of the know-it-all "scientific detective," and his methods.

Just to show that the picture is not to be taken too seriously as a picture, the last scene reveals Fairbanks reading to the Fine Arts scenario editor a script of his. It dawns upon the spectator that this script is the picture he has just seen. The scenario editor tells Fairbanks he had better stick to acting, and give up trying to be a scenario writer, whereupon the star, in disgust, goes out, leading Bessie Love, who has just been seen with him in "The Mystery of the Leaping Fish." This twist at the end, of course, makes the whole thing a joke.

The picture is what might be called refreshing nonsense, farcical to the last degree. Fairbanks romps around thinly disguised behind a weird combination of clothes and a drooping mustache. He starts his day's work by drinking a lot of fiery stuff supplemented by generous use of the needle. When he gets a call from the police to detect a mysterious stranger who is rolling in wealth, without visible means of support, the trail leads to the shore, where he finds the stranger, with a woman confederate, engaged in smuggling huge sums of greenbacks, thrown off a ship in cans.

Of course the stranger is also pursuing the girl, and Coke is called upon to rescue her in a Chinese laundry. He gets full of hop, and subdues his rival by fighting a duel in the dark with him. After he has reduced his rival to a small equation—the fight is burlesque all the way, and little of it is shown—he wins the girl's undying affection.

Bessie Love has a small part, which she does very well. Others are A. D. Sears, Tom Wilson and Alma Reubens. John Emerson, directed.

"TEMPTATION AND THE MAN"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CATHERINE CARR must have gone to work on the old typewriter with the idea of creating in "Temptation and the Man," the sort of picture mindful of Horatio Alger at his balmiest moments. There is a large following for such melodrama even though that following is not the sort that thinks beneath the surface when selecting its entertainment. If it did think it would in all probability discover a dozen odd loopholes of various dimensions that punctuate melodrama until it is far from logical.

Jim's Helping Hand (and Others') Prove Valuable

On the other hand, the picture has all the essentials for a popular melodrama of the cheaper class. The hero is an ex-convict. Children love him. He loves a settlement worker and because of his love for her he sacrifices his good reputation made since his release from jail to save her worthless fiance from disgrace. Back in prison he goes and is made a trusty after a time. The pal of the woman largely responsible for the fiance's downfall is sent up too and the hero hears that he contemplates vengeance on his release. Both get out together. The hero tries to prevent a double tragedy but the other will have it so and he kills the woman and the worthless man, now married to the settlement worker. And the settlement worker and the twice ex-convict go down in the slums to start all over again.

This is the mere skeleton of the plot. It is told quickly and there is action to every scene. There are a good many stock situations that various writers have had recourse to during the past ten years or so, but perhaps these will still further enhance the appeal that the offering will make to its particular audience. The impossibilities of the picture should not be entirely relegated to Miss Carr's scenario. The film has obviously been extensively cut and the various sensational episodes have been bunched together as closely as possible.

Hobart Henley essays the hero's active role and makes a good job of it. The action never fails to glorify him to the last degree in the audience's mind. Sydell Dowling is the settlement worker, Sydney Bracy the fiance and Joseph Granby the man who does the murdering in the last reel. Others are Bert Busby as the heroine's father, and Clara Beyers as the fiendish adventuress.

"THE LITTLE SCHOOL MA'AM"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

IF the exhibitor is looking for a picture which will appeal beyond question to 99 per cent. of his patrons, because it deals effectively with one of the episodes in the life of nearly every one of them, he should not overlook "The Little School Ma'am."

The episode in question concerns days spent in school, and all that they meant, particularly in small town life. We have the teacher, the children, the blundering trustees, the sixteen-year-old boob who brings presents to the teacher, the children's dramatic society, and other necessary elements presented in a thoroughly delightful, human way. If you have seen other pictures in which the Fine Arts children figured, you know what to expect here. We are sorry for anybody who fails to appreciate the human nature in this offering.

But the picture does not rely wholly upon that. It has a story—not a new story to be sure, but new in the presentation—which introduces a young playwright from Virginia. His appearance on the scene changes the whole life of the teacher, through an incident in which both were blameless, but which is interpreted by the gossips of the village as something it is not.

They go driving on a Sunday evening, and leave their carriage for a moment to visit a spring in the woods. The horse runs away, and the couple are forced to await the dawn before returning. This leads the trustees to "fire" the teacher, much to the grief of the children.

Then the playwright rescues the teacher from violence at the hands of the son of Squire Tolliver, one of the trustees, and of course very soon marries her.

All of which is told with plenty of action, excellent touches and some suspense. The settings are admirable, and the types right.

Dorothy Gish gives a characteristic, and wholly praiseworthy rendition as the teacher, and Elmer Clifton is excellent as the playwright. Others are George Pierce, Jack Brammall, Howard Gaye, Josephine Crowell, Luray Huntley and Millard Webb. There are at least a dozen children in the cast, headed by George Stone.

The direction is by C. M. and S. A. Franklin from a story by F. E. Woods and Bernard McConville.

"TO SAVE THE ROAD"

(Kalem—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHILE this number of the Hazards of Helen series contains nothing extraordinary in respect to either story or thrill to lift it above its fellow pictures of the same classification, it is commented upon here for the means of crediting the Kalem company with the production of a series of pictures that maintain consistently a high standard week in and week out, until months and even years are rolled up. Exhibitors are liable to forget that a picture such as this is often needed to add zest to a program. Logically evolved and working to the usual climax for the good of which Helen is always ready to stake her nerve against her life, almost any issue of the series may be relied upon to entertain the average patronage of a motion picture theatre.

The Scheme to Foil the Conspirators

"To Save the Road" traces its authorship to Homer Von Flindt. Mr. Flindt, it must be confessed has not drawn upon material at all original for his story, which has for its basis the effort of a scheming party to prevent a railroad official from reaching a meeting, at which his will be the deciding vote. Such action is familiar both in fiction and pictures. But Director James Davis has pictured it adequately, has provided it with a convincing surface and has installed into it his extensive knowledge of railroad lore.

Helen Gibson is present with her weekly stunt. This time she executes a daring leap from an engine, grasping a rope overhead and then dropping to the tender of a following engine and bringing it to a stop. The action of this is clearly the real thing, although it may be a little too fast for complete comprehension. G. A. Williams and P. S. Pembroke leads Miss Gibson's suporting cast.

"THE EYE OF THE NIGHT"

(Kay-Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

LAID in an English fishing village, and excellent as to atmosphere and types, "The Eye of the Night" offers a story which hinges upon coincidence and improbability, and which is one of C. Gardner Sullivan's least successful efforts. At the same time, the picture is strong in heart interest, and becomes more than usually interesting when it introduces a raid on the village by hostile aeroplanes.

The central figure is William H. Thompson, who has a role widely different from his accustomed parts. He is seen as an old keeper of a lighthouse, religious, a lover of humanity, and altogether a sterling character. To him Jane comes for refuge, after the birth of her illegitimate child, whose father is a young man of the village, absent at the front. The spectator is not long in discovering that Jane is really the old man's daughter, lost to him for many years as a result of his wife's desertion, and much of the suspense is destroyed by this discovery. But the old man loses his position through the enmity of the villagers, and the suspense is thus restored for a time.

Scenes from Three Essanays: "The Secret of the Night"; "Repentance," and "The Grouch"

The Friend of the Children

Jane's lover is at first reported killed in action at Loos, but he returns at the right moment, merely wounded, and the couple are then married. By means of two photographs, father and daughter discover their relationship, long after the spectator is thoroughly convinced of that very fact.

It is easy to see what pathos and what emotional scenes might be brought out of such a story, and indeed they have been brought out well, and without offense. Mr. Thompson is very nearly a perfect type for his part, and except when he is called upon to hold scenes that are overlong, is excellent.

Marjory Wilson registers her difficult part with sincerity, and generally to good effect, and Thornton Edwards is entirely acceptable as the lover. Others are J. P. Lockney and Agnes Herring. There are also a number of extras.

Walter Edwards' direction is splendid as to externals, and is chiefly responsible for our conviction that the exhibitor will find this, on the whole, a worthy picture.

"PARAMOUNT SHORT SUBJECTS"

(Pictographs—One Reel. Burton Holmes' Travelogues—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE Pictographs this week lead off with an illustrated article "Taming a Green Lion," showing how the circus trainer takes the king of beasts, fresh from the jungle and makes a docile, performing animal, fit for the vaudeville stage or circus ring; there is an article on Golf by Alec Smith, in which he illustrates the proper method of grasping the club and making various shots. "Better Babies" deals with the handling of children around the ages of three or four years. An article on Coney Island, and the "Bally-Hoo," and one on animal experimentation at Wistar Academy, complete the reel.

Burton Holmes begins his series of picture talks on "Europe at Peace," which proposes to take the audiences through the countries now at war and show the life and conditions before the scourge descended upon them. The first one concerns itself with Berlin, and there are interesting street scenes, views of public buildings and resorts, and "types."

"A VICTIM OF APHASIA"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2nd

MANY subjects that have innate dramatic possibilities and that always seem to interest screen patrons are introduced during the action of this play. Among them are criminology, amnesia and hypnotism. These topics are used in the usual screen day—that is, the treatment is more dramatically than scientifically correct.

The very competent cast is called upon to make plausible some pretty strained coincidences, and it handles this assignment very creditably. Sydney Ainsworth, usually seen in heavy roles, here assumes a heroic character, and offers a smooth performance. Opposite him Lillian Drew has a congenial part. John Lorenz and Gertrude Glover are satisfactory as the juvenile and ingenue. The settings and general manner of production are adequate, and the photography is good.

After Martin, a detective, and Evelyn Glenn have been married one year, Martin is struck by lightning, and, a victim of amnesia, goes to another town. Shortly after, Evelyn gives birth to a daughter. Years afterward this daughter comes under the influence of a hypnotist adventurer. To save the girl, Evelyn writes to Harding, a famous detective, to investigate. When Harding arrives, Evelyn recognizes him as her husband. The familiar surroundings of the past revive Martin's memory.

"HEARTS AND SPARKS"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A WHIRLWIND finish, in which the girl wins an auto race while the hero, imprisoned in a barn by two crooks, directs her to victory by operating a wireless spark-plug, makes this a novel Keystone so far as the last reel is concerned.

Trick photography is brought into play to make the race as exciting as possible. A regular track is used, and the cars are sent around it at a dizzy speed.

In the cast are Hank Mann, Bobbie Vernon, Gloria Swanson, Nick Cogley, Billie Bennett, Tom Kennedy, and Joe Lee. Their work is good. Charles Parrott directed.

"THE WORLD'S ROAD"

(Educational Film Corp.—700 Feet)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS excellent scenic, showing the new Columbia Highway in Multnomah County, Oregon, opened on June 7, was run at the Rialto theatre, New York, last week. It unfolds some interesting views along the sixty-mile boulevard, which clings to a narrow ledge overhanging the gorge of the Columbia River and winds its way past beautiful cataracts, and through forests and mountains.

The photography is very fine, and the titles fully descriptive.

"THE CAPTIVE GOD"

(Kay-Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EXHIBITORS may expect something far different than the average feature in "The Captive God," although he must not expect the customary breadth of appeal that is found in most of Thomas Ince's pictures that boast William S. Hart as their star. As a production it is magnificent. The locale is Mexico, the time is the early years of the sixteenth century, immediately prior to that country's partial subjugation by the Spanish. It was in this period that the various peoples of Mexico were believers in the Aztec faith. The story deals with this religion in very great detail.

Montezuma, the ruler of the wealthiest portion of the country, takes prisoner Chiapa, leader of a rebellious tribe, who has captivated the heart of one of his daughters. Montezuma proclaims that he shall be sacrificed to the Aztec god, but the arrival of his followers prevents the carrying out of this plan. Montezuma is overthrown and Chiapa and Lolomi are allowed to go their way in peace.

This is the mere skeleton of the story furnished by Monte M. Katterjohn. The situations that arise in the course of the development of this main plot and two or three other themes dependent on it, are enough to supply the picture with plenty of material for its length. There will be no tiring of "The Captive God" because of insufficient material. There are numerous spectacular scenes, most of them depicting warfare between the Montezumian forces and the adherents of Chiapa that were handled excellently by Charles Swickard, the director. Entire villages consisting of the Pueblo residences were erected for the expansive scenes and the historical detail is without doubt reproduced correctly in every instance.

If "The Captive God" were to play in houses of the same type as the Rialto of New York throughout the country we should have no hesitation in recommending it, but not all picture goers are as intellectual as the Rialto clientele. The "movie" person will hardly be able to penetrate the surface of the picture any deeper than the war scenes, which he will no doubt glory in. The religious side of the picture will not appeal in an understandable fashion to the seeker of the society or underworld melodrama. The picture as it stands is quite perfect, and let not the above be taken as a slur on any angle of it. If Mr. Ince wants to educate his audiences up to his idea of the artistic production he should be commended for so doing.

Mr. Hart, whose acting always does away with the thought that he receives a pay envelope at the end of the week, appears as Chiapa. As usual his personality fascinates the spectator. It is not the good-bad-man role that Mr. Hart carries this time. Here he is the tanned, naked Spaniard brought up among the Indians since childhood. Enid Markey as Lolomi is happily cast and she acts with skill. Dorothy Dalton has a heavy role. If the picture were laid in the present she would be stamped "adventuress," and such a character, according to the present conception of it, but with the passionate animation befitting the period of the picture, is just about ten times more alluring. Robert McKim, P. D. Tabler, Dorcas Matthews, Herbert Farjean and Robert Kortman contribute excellent performances in other roles.

"THE MAN FROM BITTER ROOTS"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

FROM a story by Caroline Lockhart, Director Oscar C. Apfel has constructed a pleasing and effective vehicle for the abilities of William Farnum. Mr. Farnum, as usual, dominates the picture throughout, and gives a strong performance. Before we proceed to other considerations, we call attention to the introduction of comedy relief in the shape of a corpulent young man, ably impersonated by Willard Louis, who, after tense dramatic moments, invariably suggests: "Let's eat" or "When do we eat?" This got laughs from the audience at the Academy of Music last Sunday, but it served to emphasize, not to detract from, the main effect, which is quite serious, with a tinge of melodrama.

Mr. Farnum is at his best in a role into which pathos, coupled with rugged strength, is thrown, and that is the sort of part he has here. We do not think it the most impressive role Mr. Farnum has ever been given, but he puts it over in excellent style, which is another way of saying that the picture holds without difficulty. The locale is mainly Western—a mining camp—and Mr. Farnum is occupied with seeing that the step-sister of his former partner gets her rights. The villain, who wants the girl for a sinister purpose, hires a forger to alter the diary left by her stepbrother so as to make it appear that he was killed by Burt (Mr. Farnum) in a fit of insanity. In reality, the stepbrother was himself insane, and committed suicide in Burt's presence.

This false accusation of insanity pursues Burt until the very end, when a woman whom he defended from insults at the hands of a rough character, gets the forger to come to her cabin. She plies him with drink and caresses, and learns the truth. After Burt checkmates the villain in his attempt to burn the electric plant at the mine, the way is paved for a pleasing happy ending.

The high lights of the story are registered with ease by Mr. Farnum, assisted by a large cast which includes Betty Schade, Betty Hart, Ogden Crane, Charles Whittaker, H. A. Barrows, Harry De Vere, William Burress, and Harry J. Herbert. Miss Hart is especially good as the woman who aids Burt to clear himself of the charge of insanity; and Burress, assigned a semi-comic character role as a Chinese cook, is excellent.

Director Apfel went to considerable pains to get correct atmosphere, and succeeded notably in the case of a snowstorm, which seems to be the real thing. The fire at the electric plant is quite effective, although the photography could have been better. The continuity is good, and the story sufficiently involved to compel interest, despite one or two coincidences.

As a whole, this picture will register well with any audience, and will appeal still more strongly, of course, to Farnum fans.

"JAFFERY"

(Frohman Amusement—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

MOST of William J. Locke's stories are difficult to picturize; they appear to lack several of the essential elements of drama. They are, however, intensely human narratives, and this same description applies to "Jaffery," the picture, produced under the direction of George Irving.

"Intensely human narrative" calls for careful production, accurate settings and a good cast; these have all been provided, and the net result is a film of more than usual importance. The cast includes such prominent and capable people as C. Aubrey Smith, Florence Deshon, Eleanor Woodruff, Paul Doucet, Ben Hendricks, and, by no means least, George Irving, himself.

"Tony" Kelley made the scenario; he and the director seem to have worked with an unusual sympathy with each other's ideas and objects, and this kind of team work cannot help but be beneficial. All in all, an elaborate production has been provided; considerations of trouble and expense evidently have not weighed heavily.

"Jaffery" is a war correspondent; he is a confirmed bachelor, and spends his life roaming about little known corners of the earth. Nevertheless, he is generally beloved, and has many friends.

On a Balkan trip, his companion meets Liosha, the daughter of a Balkan chieftain; the two fall in love, are married, and the bride becomes one of the party. Her husband dies, and Jaffery inherits the care of the girl, whom he brings to England, and places in a boarding house, where her volatile and unEnglish ideas make trouble for everybody.

Jaffery meets, and for the first time in his life, falls in love with a girl who is to marry Adrian, an unsuccessful young writer. Jaffery again goes away, and when he returns, the two have been married, but Adrian has died, and died famous. He won fame by putting out, in his own name, a novel, the manuscript of which was left in his care by a noted novelist who left on a voyage from which he never returned. His widow adores his memory, looks upon him as a genius, and in order to perpetuate this memory, decides to have published a second novel on which he was working at the time of his death; she gets Jaffery and another friend to get this in shape. The two, on going over Adrian's papers, discover that the first novel was stolen, but they keep the fact from the widow.

The second novel is found to be hopeless; Jaffery, however, substitutes a work of his own, but the widow accuses him of having spoiled the work of her late lamented genius. Only when going through Jaffery's desk, in his absence, in search of the original manuscript, does she learn the truth about her husband. Later she is inclined to look more favorably on Jaffery, but it is too late: in the meantime he has learend to love Liosha, who has long been in love with him.

One of the most striking scenes is that in the hold of a sailing ship in a high sea, when the cargo breaks loose, and Jaffery and Liosha lend a hand in helping the crew prevent it from breaking through the ship's side.

"THE WOMAN WHO DARED"

(California Motion Picture Corporation—Eight Reels)
REVIEWED BY HARVEY E. THEW

AN elaborate production has been made from the story by C. N. and A. M. Williamson; it is a story of intrigue, love and adventure in European political life, and the action takes place in Rome and Paris.

The settings have been elaborately and carefully arranged. Where exteriors are shown, care has been used to see that nothing came before the camera which would mar the European atmosphere, and the interiors, dress and manners are all distinctively European. Several views are given of outside and inside of railway trains, and these are especially good.

The picture, however, from the dramatic standpoint, hardly justifies the use of eight reels in the presentation; there are several places where film could have been saved and at the same time made the story more compact.

Beatriz Michelena plays the role of the princess Beatrix, of France, singing in opera in Rome; she is loved by Noel Brent, a young American, by the Duke de Grozzi, of the Italian foreign office, and by a Count, who is concerned in an international intrigue, which involves a scret treaty between Italy and Russia, to the detriment of France.

The princess is led to bestow her affections on the Count, to the anger of the Duke, and the bitter disappointment of Noel, who goes away to Paris. The French ambassador learns of the secret treaty, and appeals to the patriotism of the Princess to steal it and send it to Paris long enough for the foreign office to peruse it. The treaty is in the safe of her fiance, and the princess manages to get it, and deliver it to the messenger, who starts for Paris.

On his return, the messenger is waylaid by the Duke's agents, who seek to recover the treaty. Noel comes on the scene in time to get the document, and learning that the Princess' reputation is in danger unless the treaty is returned, hurries with it to Rome. He is in time to save the Princess from an attack by the Duke, who has lured her to his office, and after numerous complications, the treaty is restored to its place in the safe, and the Princess comes out of the deal unscratched. She is quick to break her engagement to the Count and marries the American.

The scenario which was made by Captain Leslie Peacocke, brings out the best drama of the story; Captain Peacocke himself plays one of the roles.

Miss Michelena does some sincere and effective work as the Princess; assisting her in the cast are Andrew Robson, Theodore Pike, Albert Morrison and James Leslie. The picture was directed by George Middleton.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Private Officer." (Essanay. Re-issue. Two reels. Tues., July 11.)—This re-issue not shown for review; the story follows: Harry Lampton and Lieut. Frothingham are rivals for the hand of Muriel March. Lampton discovers the army man to be a fortune-hunter and tells the girl of his discovery. The Lieutenant enters the room at that moment, and Muriel declares she will marry him. In desperation Lampton joins the army. He is horrified to find himself in Frothingham's troupe. The officer continually humiliates him. One night Frothingham goes on a debauch, and Lampton, to save him from disgrace, takes advantage of his facial resemblance to the officer, poses in his place and saves him. The Colonel discovers the affair, and the girl learns the truth. Lampton is promoted and wins the girl.

The leads are taken by Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and Thomas Commerford.

"The Fable of the Small-Town Favorite Who Was Ruined by Too Much Competition." (Essany. Wed., July 12.)—This Geo. Ade comedy not shown for review; the story follows: The daughter of a well-fixed mortgage shark, living in a tank town, had all the component parts of a peach. She got her fashion hints, etiquette and behaviour from the Questions and Answers Department of an Agricultural monthly. A gay young drummer from the city made a solid hit with the peach, until father sent his offspring to a finishing school. There she met her ideal, and with him came home for her summer vacation. "Don't you know me?" said the drummer when they met. "Surely," she said, "it seems that I have seen you somewhere. Are you the man who tunes the piano?" As he moved away, the drummer kept his hand on his solar plexus. Moral: Anybody can win unless there happens to be a second entry.

"The Secret of the Night." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., July 15.)—Will be reviewed in a subsequent issue.

"To Save the Road." (Kalem. Sat., July 8.) —Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Quack Quakers." (Kalem. Wed., July 12.)—Samuel J. Taylor has written an amusing picture in this. Uncle, who is a staid old Quaker, comes to see Ethel and her father and they, to appease the old man, presume to be equally staid and quakerish. But things are in an uproar as Ethel wants to go on the stage and well dressed young men are continually calling on her. There are many humorous situations in this reel which numbers in its cast besides Ethel Teare, Gus Leonard, Jack MacDermott, Victor Rottman and G. Hopkins.

"The Wishing Ring." (Kalem. Fri., July 14.) —Sis Hopkins is presented with a ring which, her lover says, will grant any three wishes she may desire. She wishes for a soul mate and he comes in the shape of an eluder of the strong arm of the law. He comes twice again to her when wished for, but finally he is captured and Sis receives the reward. Frank Howard Clark prepared this comedy and has burlesqued the familiar romance to a fine degree. The usual supporting cast headed by Henry Murdock appears.

"Black Magic." (Kalem. Two reels. Last Episode.)—This concluding the chapters of "The Social Pirates" shows the girls pitting their forces against a Hindu fakir who has a rich woman in his power. With the aid of their fiances the girls are able to show the man up in his true colors and the woman, grateful for their kindness, presents all four with a sum of money as wedding presents. This chapter keeps well up to the standard of all its predecessors.

"Otto, the Traffic Cop." (Lubin. Mon., July 3.)—Those who are familiar with Davy Don's work will find him in his usual vein here. Although the comedy, as usual, is crude, it provokes a few laughs. Patsy De Forest is the same attractive figure. George Egan and Eleanor Blanchard are also in the cast. The direction is by Edwin McKim.

"The Stolen Master." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., July 6.)—This is the old, old story of the stolen masterpiece which is brought to America by two foreign crooks, and then copied by a struggling young artist, so that the fake may be unloaded on the unsuspecting millionaire. The love interest, which involves the artist with the wicked woman crook, on the one hand, and the good daughter, of the shop keeper, on the other, is fairly well done. Settings, except for a few backdrops, are excellent, and the photography is, of course, very fine. Samuel Curtis, Evelyn Page, Alan Forrest, Adda Gleason, George Routh, and Bird Hopkins do average work. Capt. Wilbert Melville directed.

"A Terrible Tragedy." (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., July 8.)—A crowd of Nihilists, a reporter, and a box containing a mummy are mixed here to produce a simple comedy, which may be considered fair entertainment, though it offers nothing original. The cast includes Jerold T. Hevener, also the director; Babe Hardy, Bill Bowers, and Lellie Farrin.

"The Rival Queens." (Lubin. Split reel. Sat., July 8.)—Enacted by an all-negro cast, this can be called out of the ordinary only because of that fact. The story was written by Epes Winthrop Sargent, and is quite elementary. It depicts the antics of a crowd of Zulus exchanging one ruler for another because the latter's mate discovers a trunk containing a strange costume in which she attires herself, thus working on the superstitions of the band, who think her a goddess. One seashore location is quite picturesque. Will Louis directed, with John Edwards, Mattie Bright, and Joseph Bright as principals.

"A Milk White Flag." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., July 10.)—A lot of ingenious business, much of it unhackneyed, is brought in during the enacting of this farce. While Charles Hoyt's original comedy of the same name is credited as the source of the plot, the film version is a disconnected series of moderately humorous episodes. A good deal of the footage is devoted to slapstick, so Otis Harlan, the principal, is not given the chances for legitimate funmaking he had on the stage. Supporting Mr. Harlan are James Bradbury and Grace Darmond. T. N. Heffron directed.

In the little town of Godforsaken there are two rival military organizations—the Black Guards and the White Guards. O. Whatter Mann is taken into the fold of the White Guards, and by his original ideas does much to give his club prominence. He hires a pretty uniformed girl to act as bar-maid, turns a fire-hose on a parade of the Black Guards, and in other ways distinguishes himself.

To make some money, he insures his life for $100,000 and then pretends to be dead. He spends several hours on the morgue ice-cakes, and then is put in a hearse and carried to the cemetery. But the horse runs away, and the casket falls into the river. Mann's duplicity is discovered, and he is threatened with arrest, but a million dollar legacy arrives for him, and everything is smoothed over.

"Legal Advice." (Selig. Sat., July 15.)—While this Tom Mix Western comedy relies entirely on slap-stick methods and familiar episodes for its humor, yet the unusually daring riding, roping and shooting feats will make it popular in houses that like to see the stunts indulged in by the old-time plainsmen. Supporting Tom Mix is his usual cast, including Victoria Forde, Pat Chrisman, George Pankey and Joe Ryan.

Ruth Sands, an Eastern girl, arrives at Coyote Flats to practice her profession as an attorney-at-law. All the cowboys vie for her favor, but Tom Walton hits on a sure-fire scheme. He steals the sheriff's horse and shoots up the town. When he is finally captured and brought to trial, Ruth appears as his lawyer. In the middle of the trial, however, an Eastern fop swaggers into the court-room, and introduces himself as Ruth's husband. This causes universal consternation.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Love's Bitter Strength." (Flying A. Two reels. Mon., July 10.)—A rather impossible story involving amnesia. Dick returns to his city home with his bride, Paula. A few days later Paula is out driving, and her car runs over a cliff; the car is smashed, and Paula, seriously hurt and semi-unconscious, crawls into an open box-car, and is carried out into the country. Her husband and his friends find the wrecked car, but no trace of Paula. Out in the country she is taken in by Jim Brenton and his mother. She has no recollection of her past or who she is. Jim falls in love with her, but she refuses to marry until the mystery of her past is cleared up. Jim comes to the city on business with Dick's firm. He is entertained at Dick's home, and from a portrait, recognizes Paula, and hears the story. He struggles with himself, but finally restores Paula to her husband. George Field, Lizette Thorne, Dixie Steward, Ed. Coxen, and Bessie Banks are in the cast.

"Stung by Gum!" (Vogue. Tues., July 11.) —Rube, the chief of police, and Art, a member of the force, and rivals for Madge, a farmer's pretty daughter; she has an ugly sister, Alice. The farmer misses eggs from his hen house, and Rube decides to get Art out of the running by fixing the crime on him. He arranges a trap, and Art is caught in the henhouse. He is sentenced to marry Alice or go to jail. Urged by Madge he consents to the wedding and on that day, Madge and Alice change clothes; Rube marries Alice, and Art and Madge are happily united. Rube Miller, Arthur Tavares, Henry Huckins, Madge Kirby and Alice Neice compose the cast.

"Nugget Jim's Pardner." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., July 14.)—A moral story of a wealthy good-for-nothing who "went right." Hal is ordered from the house by his rich father who has lost patience, and the young man goes West. He falls in with Nugget Jim, a drunken miner, who forces him to go to work to pay for food he has stolen. Hal likes the work and decides to stay. Jim has a daughter Madge, who is entertainer in a dance hall. Hal overhears the girl plead to be taken out of that life, but the father brutally refuses; that night Hal brings the girl home; there is a hard battle with Jim, but Hal wins, and in the end succeeds in reforming Jim. Frank Borzage, Jack Farrell, Anna Little, and Dick La Reno compose the cast.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"The Heart of a Child." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., July 10.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of July 8.

"Henry's Little Kid." (Nestor. Mon., July 10.)—An old number of Al Christie's with Billie Rhodes and Jack Dillon leading the cast and Harry Rattenberry appearing in the other role of importance. The story concerns the son who has told his father he has a wife and child. His sweetheart plays the wife but it is not so easy to get the third party. Finally two friends each bring a baby while the butler procures one of the colored variety. This makes fair entertainment despite its conventionality.

"Nature, Incorporated." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., July 11.)—A comedy in which an exclusive diet of beans and peanuts proves too much for a young man who has married the daughter of the dietarian, so the two break home ties and set out for themselves. This picture was scenarioized from a story by Sinclair Lewis which ran in the Saturday Evening Post and while offering nothing extraordinary in the way of comedy it makes a most enjoyable offering. William Worthington directed the usual cast, composed of Herbert Rawlinson, Agnes Vernon and Mark Fenton.

"A Stranger in His Own Home." (Imp. Tues., July 11.)—An excellent comedy with Matt Moore and Jane Gail. The wife and her score of relatives immediately get hubby's goat and later when her mother comes to stay and mistakes a drunk for her son-in-law hubby gets furious and drives her out. J. Grubb Alexander wrote this most humorous story and Moore himself directed.

"Ignatiz's Ice Injury." (L-KO. Two reels. Wed., July 12.)—Skating with roller skates on ice is the most important bit of business, or it should be said, section of business that this comedy contains. After this the various players, still on roller skates, repair to the roof of a tall building where they indulge in the thrilling pastime of skating along the edge of the roof. This release combines comedy and sensation in proportions that are very suitable. The indoor ice rink makes an unusual scene. Billy Armstrong, Lucile Hudson, Reggie Morris and Dan Russell are the leads. One criticism might be that there is just a little too much of Armstrong.

"A Conflicting Conscience." (Victor. Wed., July 12.)—Although this is another version of the old theme wherein a husband discovers that his wife was once an artist's model, it is given a pleasing twist by omitting any wrongdoing on anybody's part, unless it be the artist's futile attempt to separate the pair. The direction is by C. D. Bennett from a script by F. McGrew Willis. Maude Emory, Wadsworth Harris and Bertram Grassby are in the cast.

"No. 16 Martin Street." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., July 13.)—Detective pictures, much on the order of detective stories, are either good or bad—there is no between. "No. 16 Martin Street" is good. It holds the attention every minute, which is the best thing that can be said of it. Bess Meredyth prepared the scenario for Lloyd B. Carleton's company composed of Dorothy Davenport, Emory Johnson, Alfred Allen and Gretchen Lederer.

"The Three Brave Hunters." (Big U. Thurs., July 13.)—The costuming of this is in the style of Shakespeare's time or thereabouts, and the plot a burlesque of cowardice on the part of three swaggering hunters, who fail to make good when some of the townsmen dress up as lions, tigers, and other ferocious beasts. It is fair entertainment.

"The Little Grey Mouse." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., July 14.)—An Edith Roberts picture specially and obviously molded for the talents of the bright little lead. She appears as a convent girl, whose vivacious manner quite unfits her for her surroundings. Incidentally she prevents the execution of a badger game on an old gentleman and enters into a correctly concluded romance with his son. Harry Benham and Miss Roberts appeared under direction of Winthrop Kelley, who worked on a script by Catherine Carr.

"Little Boy Blue." (Victor. Fri., July 14.)—A most delightful little drama, suggested by Eugene Field's poem and produced by Rupert Julian. The pathos of the picture is enhanced by excerpts from the poem which are worked in very well. Baby Clemens plays the title part with a charm that is irresistible.

"The Human Pendulum." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., July 15.)—Its a pity that Henry McRae was unable to procure a better story than this in which to stage a series of wonderful thrillers. Its a railroad picture and included in the sensational incidents is the wrecking of a train (in miniature) and a breath taking rescue of the heroine who has fallen over a cliff, by the hero. The story, however, which is crudely melodramatic and contains merely the successive attempts of the villain to blast the hopes of the hero, confines the picture to the lower classes. Marie Walcamp, Lee Hill, L. C. Shumway and Iver MacFadden are the leads.

"The Harem Scarem Deacon." (Joker. Sat., July 15.)—The deacon gets in a "joint" and indulges in a blissful pipe dream, in which he invades a harem to his great joy. But the king passes off his dearest wife to him and just because the wife is Gale Henry the deacon awakes. This is a good comedy, excellently produced by Allen Curtis. The various scenes of the dream are wreathed in smoke. William Franey, Gale Henry, Lillian Peacock, Milburn Moranti and Charles Conklin are the leads. E. B. Lewis furnished the scenario.

"The Crimson Yoke." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., July 16.)—This picture from a scenario by George Edwards Hall and Harvey Gates, deals with the hopeless love entertained by a Mexican girl of low birth for one of the aristocracy. To free him from gambling debts she sells herself into slavery, but later she is rescued by Caribi, a man who has loved her for a long time. This story has been exceedingly well produced by Cleo Madison and William Mong. Some of its scenes, particularly those showing the girl being dragged along a dusty road, tied to a slaver's wagon, are a little too cruelly realistic, but in other respects the reels are commendable. Miss Madison, William Mong, Jack Mulhall, Frank MacQuarrie and Helen Wright are the leads.

"Two Seats at the Opera." (Imp. Sun., July 16.)—A rather futile comedy depicting the adventures of two opera tickets. Nobody who has the opportunity of receiving them wants to go to the opera. The action is quite slow and there are few real laughs in the reel. William Garwood and Edwina Marten are the leads.

"Baseball Bill No. 2." (Laemmle. Sun., July 16.)—In this second of the series Bill poses as a fop after he has finally procured befitting clothes, but in his girl's house he disgraces himself. This comedy strikes us as being very futile. The business of the players does not get over and nothing is accomplished either in the picture or by it. Billy Mason and Orin Jackson are the principals.

"Peg o' the Ring." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Tenth Episode. Week of July 3.)—In Mexico Peg is rescued from the bandits by Frank (Dr. Lund, Jr.) Then she is entertained at the Lund home, which seems to be convenient to either Mexico or any part of the United States. Mrs. Lund tries to kidnap her there but is unsuccessful. At the horse races, Mrs. Lund puts Peg's jockey out of commission but Peg rides and wins the race. Afterwards Mrs. Lund's henchmen succeed again in making Peg captive.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

115—Suppose that instead of using the battery "A" with the circuit breaking device illustrated by "D," "E," "F" and "G" in Fig. 51 we provide A. C. from an electric lighting system or similar source of supply for the excitation of the iron core "H" by passing the A. C. through primary coil "B," would the results obtained at the terminals of the secondary coil "I" be the same?

Ans.—No, the results would not be the same because with the circuit breaking device as illustrated in Fig. 51, using a D. C. battery "A" the current passing through the primary coil "B" is always in the same direction, therefore, the north pole of the magnetic core "H" will always remain at the same end of the core. In other words, the left-hand end of the core "H" may be the north pole and the right-hand end, south pole, but due to the making and breaking of the current at the contact point "F" the excitation current flowing through the primary coil "B" will drop to zero when the current breaks and when it is made again it will come up to full strength. It is this constantly rising and falling current in the coil "B" which causes the magnetism in the core "H" to come up to full intensity and drop to zero an instant later, only to come back again to full strength within the fraction of a second.

The current flowing through "B" is always in the same direction but it is pulsating. In other words, it is of varying value and it is this variation as stated which makes the magnetic strength in the core "H" also of varying or pulsating value but without changing the position of the magnetic poles. In placing the secondary coil "I" upon the core "H" the rise and fall in magnetism creates a potential and current in the coil "I" but the current flowing through the coil, "I" will always be in the same direction. In other words, you could measure the current flow through the windings "B" and "I" with an instrument intended for D. C. only.

Now, when an A. C. is put through the primary winding "B" then instead of having a pulsating current flow, we have actual reversal of current in the primary coil "B".

By previous study of the answers to questions concerning choke-coils you have learned that when a magnet core is put under the influence of a coil through which A. C. is flowing the magnetism not only rises from zero to full strength and then falls again to zero, but on the second half of the cycle or reversal of the current the magnetism is reversed so that the magnet pole which was north during the first impulse of current becomes a south pole during the second current impulse. This state of affairs has a corresponding influence upon the current in the secondary coil "I" which on that account does not flow in the same direction, merely starting at zero; going up to full strength and then back again to zero, but the potential and current generated in the secondary "I" makes a complete reversal at every zero point which makes it an alternating current. You realize that it would be impossible to read the potential or measure. The current strength on the secondary coil under this condition with a D. C. instrument.

116—Could a transformer such as illustrated in Fig. 51 be used for the purpose of changing a low voltage to a higher potential or a higher voltage into a low potential with A. C.?

Ans.—Yes, but such a transformer as illustrated herewith in Fig. 52 would be inefficient for the purpose and is therefore not practical. At the same time it is suggested that you consider illustration Fig. 52 and your particular attention is called to the dotted lines representing the magnetic field or flux generated by th primary coil "I". You will note that when the iron core is very long and when the primary and secondary coils "I" and "B" are separated as illustrated in Fig. 52, the magnetic lines leak around the primary coil through the air without doing work or without influencing the secondary coil "B" to the fullest extent.

You will observe that I have illustrated a comparatively large number of lines of force by the dots around the coil "I" which never reach the coil "B". In other words, that portion of the core "H" which is surrounded by the coil "B" does not have forced through it, the full number of magnetic lines of force generated by the primary coil "I".

In view of this fact, it is evident that you must have Copyright, 1916, by J. H. Hallberg.

WITH this issue of the "News," J. H. Hallberg relinquishes the editorship of the Projection Department.

His work during the past year has not only been characterized by careful and painstaking investigation, but of the greatest benefit to our subscribers, as their many letters have proven. We regret that Mr. Hallberg's added responsibilities and the need of further extending the department has caused him to sever his connections with us.

We are, however, from time to time, anticipating contributions from him on various subjects in the form of special articles, so that those who have followed his work in the past may not entirely lose the benefit of his help in the future.

many more turns on coil "I" and more turns on coil "B" and a larger body of iron in order to take care of this great waste in magnetic lines of force.

Still it remains a fact that the transformer or induction coil as illustrated in Fig. 52 is an operative device and is the very simplest although perhaps the most inefficient form of transformer which can be made.

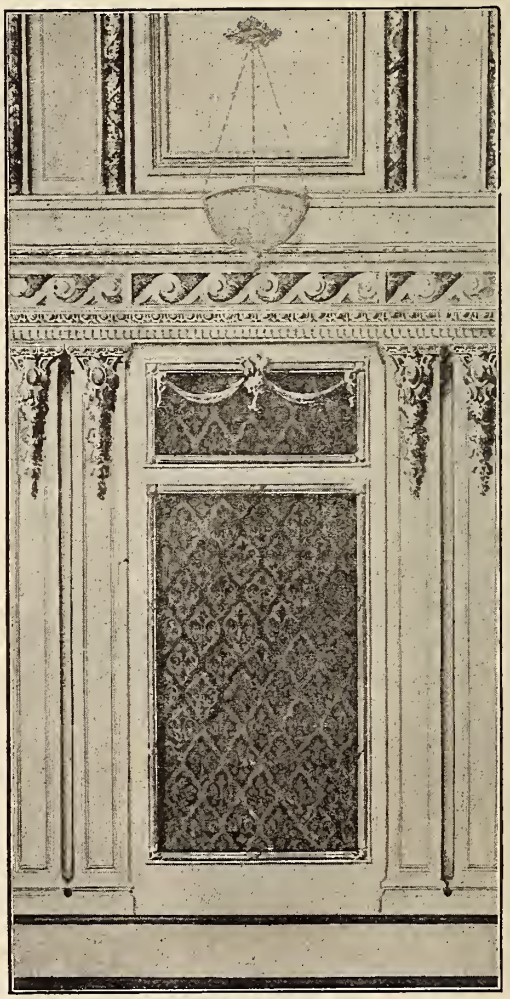
NICHOLAS POWER MAKES DISPLAY AT THIRD NATIONAL EXPOSITION OF SAFETY

INCLUDED among the exhibits shown at the third National Exposition of Safety held at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, May 22 to 27, 1916, was the display of the Nicholas Power Company, Power's Cameragraphs Nos. 6A, 6B, "Road Equipment," the new nitrogen lamp equipment and a model showing comparison of the movement used in the Power's machines and the old Geneva movement discarded by this company some years ago, comprised the exhibit of the Power Company. Nicholas Power was awarded the Grand Prize.

Including this honor, previous awards received by Mr. Power are: American Museum of Safety, 1913, Gold Medal; American Museum of Safety, 1914, Grand Prize; American Museum of Safety, 1916, Grand Prize; and Panama-Pacific International Exposition, 1915, First Grand Prize.

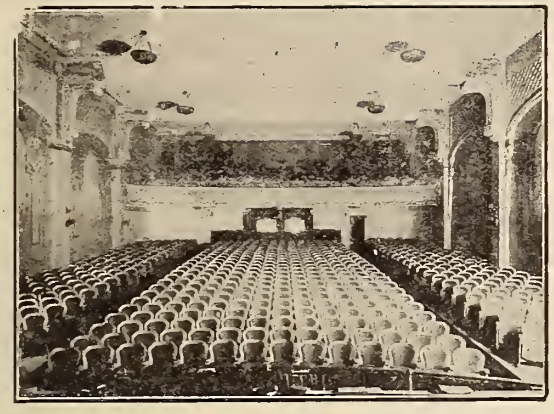


DECORATIVE SUGGESTIONS GO WITH YOUR PAINT ORDER

WITH the recognition by far-sighted exhibitors of the importance of proper interior decorating and painting, many manufacturers of paint have made special efforts to render assistance to picture house managers, with expert advice. Not only the men operating the larger and more pretentiously furnished screen theaters, but the men with small neighborhood houses feel the necessity of making their places as attractive as possible by a careful consideration of pleasing decorations.

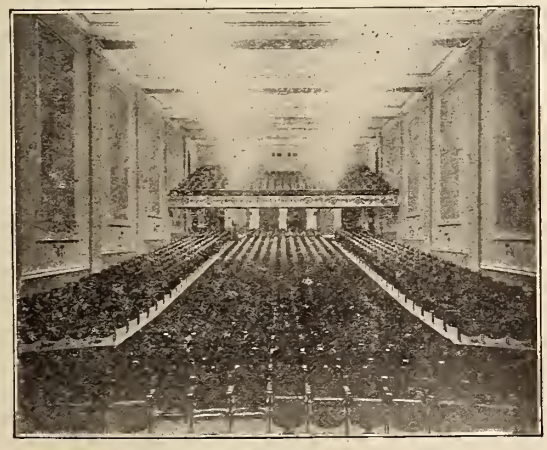
There was a time, not long ago, when many a theater manager wanted bright-colored walls with elaborate decorative designs and the fronts of the theaters were ornately white affairs, like icing on a birthday cake. But all that is changed—for which everybody having the interest of the industry at heart rejoices.

Among the firms that not only sell the paint and varnish to the exhibitor, but give him suggestions for decorative schemes, free of charge, is the Sherwin-Williams Company, the largest manufacturer of paints and varnishes in the country, and perhaps in the world.



About ten years ago the Sherwin-Williams Company inaugurated what it called a "Decorative Department." This department which started on a very modest scale developed as a result of the many requests which the company received for help and advice in regard to painting and decorative problems. The requests were turned over to one person to handle, who soon discovered that he was devoting his whole time to these matters. Of course, the answers to a great many of the inquiries could be standardized, but in most cases it required special study and special suggestions in order to give the inquirer advice which would prove helpful and really efficient.

A Decorative Suggestion Prepared Especially for the Liberty Theatre, Omaha



The person who handled these inquiries soon needed assistance, so surrounded himself with a staff of men and women who were experienced in giving advice on decorative and painting problems. In them the company found a big asset and their services were in such demand that they began to use this department as a big talking point in advertising and sales work.

At first the department worked almost wholly with property owners, but little by little they found they were receiving requests from schools, banks, theatres, hotels and from those who had to do with the decorating of other large buildings. As the decorators worked out problems for buildings of this type, they became more familiar with what was needed and were in a position to give more efficient service. They decided to make certain members of the decorative staff specialists along certain lines. For instance, all hotel operations were handled by one member; all theatre suggestions by another, etc. Of course, all these experts use their advise and talk over each operation as each case comes up for discussion.

The Lincoln Theatre, Bloomfield, N. J.

With the growing number of high-class moving picture theatres, the decorative advisors found that they were receiving so many requests for the painting and decorating of theatres that it seemed advisable to form a special department to make a study of this one type of building.

The Lincoln Theatre, Massillon, O., Followed Out Suggestions Submitted by The Sherwin-Williams Decorative Department

The suggestions which they are now working out for moving picture theatres are equally as high class as those which they submit to the regular theatre houses.

The word "paint" includes varnishes, stains and enamels, and nearly every surface in a moving picture theatre requires a coat of some one of these materials.

Exhibitors!

Special juvenile performances at the regular motion picture theatres received more attention at the recent Convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in New York City than any other one topic.

The club women are right up on their toes and they are going to be mighty active from now on!

You are going to hear from them. They are coming to you to ask you to work with them in providing what they want, and we have tried to show them the reasonable way to approach you.

To do this, the Motion Picture News prepared a pamphlet called the Juvenile Motion Picture News for distribution at the Convention. Thousands of copies are already in the hands of the club women. There are a few left. Every wide-awake exhibitor should have a copy. So long as they last you may have one.

The pamphlet tells of the co-operation necessary between the local exhibitor and the women's club, and just remember that there are 9,000 of these clubs including 2,500,000 women in their membership.

The main feature, however, is the list of films adapted to juvenile programs, with the name of the producer and of the exchange.

Better write to-day for a copy, if you want to be sure of getting one.

GLUCKSMANN, MEMBER OF NEW ORLEANS LOCAL, IS AN INVENTOR OF A SOLDERLESS LUG

Brother T. Glucksmann of New Orleans Local No. 293 and I. A. T. S. E. Local No. 39, operator at the Orpheum theatre, New Orleans, La., has sent in to this department copies of the patent drawings covering a new form of solderless lug.

The lug is of novel design and while the patent contains many other drawings describing the finer details of this new invention of Brother Glucksmann, we reproduce only three, with the following description of Fig. 1, showing the copper blank as it comes from the punch press. It is evident that after the copper stamping has been secured which maybe of a thickness measuring anywhere from 1-32 to 1-15 of an inch, depending upon the capacity in amperes for which the lug is to be made, that this stamping can be bent into shape ready for use within a few moments.

In Fig. 1 the holes 10 and 12 will meet or correspond so that the lug can be put on to the contact stud or screw 19, Fig. 3. The hole 16 guides the insulation on the copper cable and after the lug has been properly bent and after the strands 17 have been twisted around the contact stud, the star points 13 shown in all of the illustrations are bent over so as to surround the copper strands, which can best be seen in Fig. 2. These copper fingers or star points are then forced down on to the copper strands by means of the upper part of the copper strip which is forced down by the nut or screw 20, as the case maybe. After the terminal has been assembled the copper strips, 14 and 15, are bent over the entire upper and lower portions of the lug as illustrated in Figs. 2 and 3, Fig. 2 showing the top view and Fig. 3 the side view.

Brother Glucksmann has evidently devoted a great deal of thought in developing his solderless lug, because he has also provided in making the blank punching another strip 21 with hole 23, through which a screw 22, shown in Fig. 3, may be inserted to lock the contact clamping nut or screw 20. This locking device will prevent the nut or screw 20 which clamps the cable and the lug to any device, which may be a carbon holder or a spark plug or any other kind of a contact, so that in case of movement, or vibration a solid contact, which cannot loosen up is secured, when once the lug has been properly clamped.

It is a well-known fact that the lug for clamping the asbestos cable to the carbon holder of a projector arc lamp is subjected to not only intense heat but also to the constant strain which follows the moving of the carbon holders up and down, and as the asbestos cables are generally quite stiff, especially the cheaper grades, the lug is easily loosened which causes consequent arcing and pitting between the contacts which will in a short time destroy the carrying capacity of the device and in consequence thereof, the arc becomes dull and unsteady.

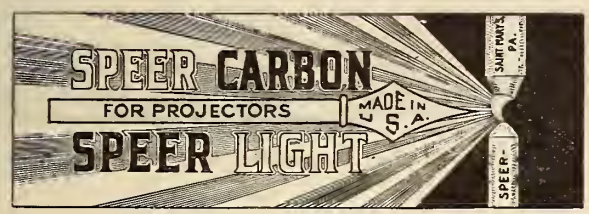
I believe that if more attention was paid to the maintenance of perfect contact at the carbon holders and if new lugs were put on every few days or every week at least, much better illumination could be obtained and the results would certainly justify this small expense.

Brother Glucksmann also claims that he is working on a new film mender, different from any now on the market which may be described in this department later on.



He also states that he is the inventor of the eye protector, intended to protect the operator's eye from the intensity of the spot on the film gate and film at the aperture. He claims that he is the man who developed this device and that he has applied for the patents on such a device, which can be attached to a machine without the necessity of drilling or tapping for screws to hold his eye protector in place.

The Projection Department congratulates Mr. Glucksmann on his inventive ability and trusts that other operators will become students and thinkers, which will enable them to invent and develop new and useful devices to benefit the industry as a whole.

BRITISH COLUMBIA AMENDS MOTION PICTURE ACT AFFECTING OPERATORS

THE British Columbia Legislature, sitting at Victoria, has passed the amendment to the Moving Pictures Act, which provides that applicants for operators' licenses shall be examined by the provincial authorities, and that no city shall hold such examinations In preparation for the new system, the censor's department, under which the examinations will be held, is fitting up a room in the court house in Vancouver, equipped with several makes of projection machines and various other apparatus. Applicants for licenses will be given an opportunity to show their familiarity with the various types of machinery through a practical demonstration.

THE efficiency of projection depends upon the electric arc—The brilliancy of the arc depends upon the amperes and volts applied and upon the kind of current used—But without the right carbon results cannot be obtained no matter how expensive the equipment and how good and powerful the current may be—The SPEER Projector carbons have demonstrated their ability to produce the most powerful arc and the steadiest burning arc with the least amount of current and attention—Be wise!!! Follow the leaders—Thomas Ince uses SPEER Carbons in the projection of "Civilization"—You will be pleased with the results and the comparatively low cost of SPEER Projector Carbons—Place your order early.

EMPIRE IN NORTH YAKIMA, WASH., HAS MODEL PROJECTION BOOTH

THE accompanying cut illustrates the operating room of the Empire theatre, North Kakima, Wash., with the chief operator, Guy Hill, seated on his comfortable perch.

Brother Hill is one of those who belong to the class of "Progressives," that is, he is a student. He believes in keeping up to date and in keeping in touch with new developments and current publications.

In his first letter to the Department he enclosed money order for $2.50 to cover the cost of the book, "Motion Picture Electricity," which he stated he needed to complete his already extensive library concerning projection and electricity. He evidently realizes that the average operator can benefit himself by careful study and that the studies should not be confined to the works or publications of any one particular individual. He rightly believes that in order to get the cream of the information he must acquaint himself with the thoughts of many experts on the subject as expressed in articles and publications issued by such experts.

The operators' position is becoming more prominent every day because the public is beginning to wake up to the fact that it is possible to have photo plays projected without flicker and without fluctuations in the illumination of the picture on the screen. The public will now tell the manager when it believes his equipment or employees are at fault, because it knows what constitutes a good picture.

Guy Hill of the Empire Theatre, North Yakima, Wash.

A good operator, one who first of all knows his business and profession and in the second place, one who is willing to make use of and knows how to apply his knowledge in producing a perfect picture on the screen, is worth a great deal to the exhibitor.

In order to find out what kind of a theatre Brother Hill conducts the projection for, he was asked to give a description of the Empire theatre, with details as to the installation of machines, current controllers, etc. He says:

"The Empire seats 1,300, six hundred on the main floor, three hundred in the balcony and loges and four hundred in the gallery. The theatre has a stage opening 30 feet wide, 25 feet high and 28 feet deep. It shows Paramount program five days a week at five cents and ten cents. Vaudeville on Saturday and Sundays at ten cents, twenty cents and thirty cents. The operating room is 14 feet wide, 18 feet long and 13 feet ceiling. In the ceiling there is a skylight 4 feet by 10 feet, that opens automatically with the port shutters. It can also be opened by hand for ventilation. When it is stormy weather and has to be kept closed there is a vent in it 18 inches square, and to keep out the light there is a window shade that can be pulled over the opening.

"We are throwing a 20-foot picture, 116 feet with a 30-foot drop on a non-metallic screen, using 40 amperes at the arc through a Wagner converter. The equipment consists of two Simplex machines, Seattle Stage Lighting Company's Spot lamps, a G. E. rectifier and the converter. Of course, the machines are motor driven.

"A word about the Simplex. I have been running these two machines for almost three years and all the repairs they have had is one intermittent sprocket on each and two lower idler brackets—a total of ten or twelve dollars. I received your book on electricity and it is well worth the price."

MANAGER OF CLEVELAND THEATRE IS CAREFUL OF COMFORT OF PATRONS

THE New York theatre, 4287 Pearl road, Cleveland, is a picture house offering its patrons not only interesting programs for their amusement but it caters to their comfort as well. The theatre is about a year old and was designed by Architect Petti of Cleveland, whose office is in the Williamson Building.

The front of the theatre is in an attractive design of pressed brick and tile. The ventilating system consists of a series of fresh air ducts and numerous fans. For the severity of the winter season, the house is equipped with steam heat. The lighting system is indirect, each globe tinted a delicate shade of green. The seats were installed by the American Seating Company. The chair capacity of the New York is 744, including the main floor and the balcony.

A Minusa Gold Fibre screen is in use, and a Power 6B projector casts the pictures on the screen, 102 feet away. The interior decoration consists of a color scheme in green and ivory. The carpets and draperies match the rest of the furnishings.

Fred E. Johnson, the manager, has made music an attractive part of the entertainment, with an orchestra of three capable musicians and a baby grand piano, furnished by the Lester Piano Company.

The front of the theatre has become a magnet for the public through a judicious use of advertising material. Brass frames, containing the publicity matter sent out by the releasing companies, take part of the lobby display. Manager Johnson is a believer in liberal advertising and makes use of newspapers, billboards and window cards. He uses pictures supplied by Kleine-Edison, Universal and other important companies.

ORGANIZATION MEETING OF SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS SET FOR JULY 24-26 IN WASHINGTON, D. C.

THE organization meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which will stand in the same relation to the motion picture industry that the Society of Automobile Engineers does to the automobile business, or the Society of Electrical Engineers does to the electrical trade, will be held in Washington, D. C., July 24-26, inclusive, in the Oak Room of the Hotel Raleigh.

President Wilson will receive the charter members of the new society. Talks will be made by officers of the Bureau of Standards, the Bureau of Industrial Research, and the Patent Office.

The call for the meeting, which is issued by C. Francis Jenkins, states the object of the association as follows: "Every industry has its society of engineers, an association of men who are responsible for the form of structure of the mechanisms used in their trade, and it is an axiom that their meetings are productive of inestimable good to the whole industry. The time is ripe for the establishment of a Society of Motion Picture Engineers, as is evidenced by the lack of fixed standards in the industry, the direct cause of the loss of more than a hundred million dollars last year alone."

COBLENTZ PUTS IN LIGHT AND POWER PLANT IN TRUXTON

DR. Coblentz, manager and proprietor of The Truxton, Washington, D. C., has just completed the installation of an electrical plant for his park and adjoining theatre and has opened his garden with additional lighting and power.

"While the outlay of this plant was expensive," commented Dr. Coblentz, "it will reduce my electric bill one-third. This in itself is quite an item in the running expenses of a show. I am well satisfied with my investment and would advocate all owners of motion picture houses to install their own electric plant. It is not only cheaper but is more satisfactory in every way."

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY COMPANY, KANSAS CITY, HANDLES STAGE SETTINGS AND THEATRE DECORATIONS SOLD BY SOSMAN AND LANDIS

MANAGER H. G. Gill of the Motion Picture Supply Company, Kansas City, has been successful in keeping the trade interested in many new and effective novelty lines that not only help to keep down the exhibitors' overhead expense but build up their business as well. In connection with the regular line of supplies and accessories, the Motion Picture Supply Company has the selling right and is the sole agent for the Sosman and Landis output, which consists of very attractive stage settings and theatre decorations. In the near future nearly every show will have one of the many different designs of stage settings. Calls for specifications have already been received by Mr. Gill.

The Motion Picture Supply Company will also branch out into commercial work, and it is rumored that at least one cameraman will be needed to handle this department.

NEW YORK HOSPITALS DECIDE TO USE MOTION PICTURES TO ENTERTAIN INSANE PATIENTS

NEW YORK hospitals have decided to use motion pictures extensively in the treatment and entertainment of insane patients. In many of the largest institutions of the state preparations have been made for the installation of complete projection equipments, and facilities are being provided as complete as those in many of the larger picture houses.

The Kings Park Hospital on Long Island has just arranged for an equipment consisting of a Powers' Cameragraph, Powers' dissolver and special Piteco lens system, installed by the Picture Theatre Equipment Company, 1604 Broadway, New York. The Utica State Hospital and the Buffalo State Hospital have also installed similar apparatus. That at the latter institution includes besides the Cameragraph and Piteco lens system, a motor generator set, with panel board, volt and ammeter, and special change-over device.

WALTER J. NEWMAN, MANAGER OF NEWMAN PLANT IN CHICAGO, IS A BENEDICT

WALTER J. NEWMAN, manager of the Chicago plant of the The Newman Manufacturing Company, Cincinnati, Ohio, manufacturer of brass poster frames, easels, railings and other theatre fixtures, surprised all of his friends by taking out a marriage license on June 11 and becoming wedded to Ella Hockbaum, a Chicago girl of prominence.

The wedding was a quiet affair at the Hotel LaSalle and after the wedding supper, attended by only the immediate relatives, the bridal pair left for the East on their honeymoon.

Mr. Newman has been connected with the Chicago branch for a number of years and has a host of friends who wish him well.

E. C. Newman, another brother of the above and who is connected with this firm, has just left for New York City, where he is soon to become wedded to Henrietta Cohen on July 2.

WAR PROJECTS KATZ FROM OPERATOR'S BOOTH TO TRUMPETING JOB IN TWELFTH REGIMENT, NEW YORK NATIONAL GUARD

ABRAHAM KATZ, the genial operator of the Bluebird projecting artillery, is also trumpeter in Company B of the Twelfth Regiment New York National Guard. In time of peace the two jobs work all right together, but in times of war and alarms of war the infantry job comes before the operating one, and consequently Mr. Katz shook hands all around on Thursday, and departed for Camp Beekman with every expectation of being transferred in a few weeks' time to the Mexican border.

It is no new experience for Abraham, for he has served six years in the regular army in the hospital corps, having been honorably discharged from the service on December 11, 1912.

RHODES BUYS LYCEUM IN MEMPHIS, TENN., FROM ALBERT WEISS

THE Lyceum theatre in Memphis, Tenn., has been taken over by Herman M. Rhodes, president of the Rhodes Furniture Company, from Albert Weiss. The purchase price is said to be between $150,000 and $175,000. The theatre was taken over by Mr. Rhodes as an investment. It will be run in the future under his management and direction.

Special paints are made for special purposes—wall paints for use in auditoriums and on walls of lobbies; varnish, especially adapted for use on theatre seats; another varnish for use on floors and a cement finish for floors. Other paints are for the pipes and radiators, and gold and silver paints for mural and fresco work.

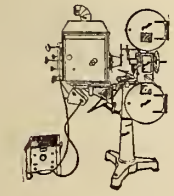
Each theatre receives special attention, and suggestions appropriate for that one theatre are worked out and submitted. In order to work out these suggestions, the decorators must, of course, have complete information on which to work. They like to have blue-prints, if possible. In case of a theatre which is to be redecorated, they find a photograph very helpful, also a description of the lighting and color effects.

An accompanying illustration shows an elevation about 14 inches by 28 inches, made so that one can tell absolutely just what effect will be produced.

The attractive theatres shown herewith are just a few of the many which have taken advantage of this helpful service.

MORE UNION OPERATORS WORKING IN VANCOUVER HOUSES THAN AT ANY TIME IN LAST TWO OR THREE YEARS

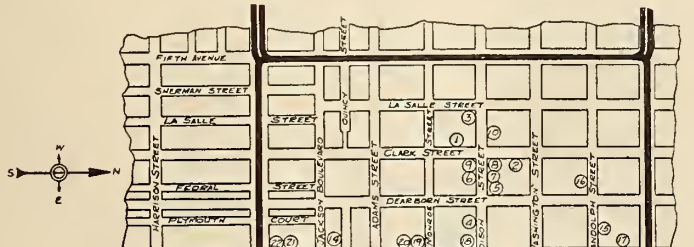
THE hopes of the members of the Vancouver, B. C., Local No. 348, I. A. T. S. E., for an early settlement of their difficulties with the exhibitors of the city were fulfilled after the lookout against the union had been in force only a little more than a week. Union operators are now working in more local houses than at any time during the past two or three years, and present expectations are that most of the motion picture theatres will soon be using union operators exclusively.



Many causes contributed to the settlement of the trouble, and some concessions were made by both sides. The "News" correspondent has been informed that one of the reasons for the reversal of the attitude of the managers was that Hector Quagliotti, manager of the Colonial theatre, who was at first a party to the agreement locking out the union, but later decided to keep his union men at work, was felt to have an advantage over the other exhibitors, and that some of them did not feel like assisting in a continuance of this condition. Good substitute operators had been rather hard to secure, and the small number of men available necessitated running the houses with only one man. This brought out objections from the fire underwriters, and was an important factor in bringing about a settlement.

The union men throughout conducted their side of the case in a quiet, orderly manner, and contented themselves with presenting arguments to the exhibitors tending to show the advantages of employing union men as operators.

The Globe, Princess and Bijou theatres have taken back their former union employees, and a member of the organization is also at work at the Rex theatre, which has been operated for a long time as a strictly non-union house. Operators at all the theatres have been given permission to apply for membership in the union.



SIX A Equipment $68.00 brand new, all complete ready to place the mechanism on. Attachments for motor drives $6.00 for 6A machine, 110 V. A. C. or D. C. motors complete with speed controller $33.50 at all Dealers handling our goods. A few used machines and Compensarcs on hand.

Stereoscopic Cinematography

Motion Pictures with the Depth and Plasticity of Photographs Viewed in a Stereoscope Will Eventually Appear, Even as the Difficult Problem of Photographing and Exhibiting of Motion Pictures in Natural Colors Will Eventually Be Solved

DURING the past few months the Camera Department has been in receipt of numerous inquiries with regard to the practicability of producing motion pictures exhibiting stereoscopic relief, and the efforts which are being made along this line.

We freely predict that motion pictures having the depth and plasticity of photographs viewed in a stereoscope will eventually appear, even as the difficult problem of photographing and exhibiting motion pictures in natural colors will eventually be solved. Experiments personally made along a hitherto entirely untouched line convince us that motion pictures in stereoscopic relief and of good quality otherwise, are a potent possibility.

A very careful study of the methods being pursued by some experimenters at present trying to produce stereoscopic motion pictures of tolerable quality, however, shows that much time and money is being wasted in trying to adapt certain methods of securing stereoscopic effect to the conditions imposed in photographing and projecting motion pictures. There are details involved in some of the processes being experimented with, which preclude all chances of really first-class results being obtained through their use. Then again, it is found that many of the would-be inventors are not possessed of the extensive knowledge of physics and optics which is so necessary in investigations of this kind, if intelligent results are to be achieved and coherent conclusions arrived at.

The Investigator Must Have Expert Knowledge

Binocular vision and stereoscopic perception are subjects of an essentially optical nature and the optical rather than the mechanical niceties of the proposition must be duly regarded if satisfactory results are desired. Many present workers on the stereoscopic effect, as applied to motion pictures, are projection machine operators (of more or less experience) who seek to produce the desired effect by some special system of projection, or some modification of the film combined with modification of the projection machine or mode of projecting. We do not wish to discourage true genius, and are always anxious to aid inventors with sound ideas, but—we scarcely think that projection machine operators (including those of considerable experience) are able to cope with the subject of stereo-motion pictures. It takes a person with basic knowledge of photography and optics to appreciate all of the principles involved and the scientific niceties which must be observed in this line of work. Although photographers have the best chance, perhaps, along this line, to overcome the many obstacles which will be met with, they will find that a knowledge of the principles and practice of projection is also necessary.

Owing to the considerable interest manifested in work of this kind, and the undoubted value which a good stereoscopic motion picture will possess, we shall endeavor to set forth some of the first principles involved in stereo-photographic work and conclude with an outline of the efforts which have been made at various times to secure motion picture records which would exhibit the much-sought effect of solidarity or relief. As the subject cannot be adequately covered in one article we shall continue along the same line in the next issue.

Due to the existence of highly complex and wonderfully perfect nerve and muscular systems controlling our eyes, we are enabled to direct their axes to one point, and clear images of what we perceive are projected onto the retina by the lens system (composed of the crystalline lens and cornea) with which the eye is provided.

What Happens When You See Anything

In looking at a view our eyes are constantly changing their focus and direction, the better to embrace all objects near and far and thus a sense of solid perspective is experienced, which is not in any sense dependent upon tone or color but is truly stereoscopic. Thus, the ordinary act of seeing, may be termed binocular vision, and is made possible by the ability of the brain to combine the slightly dissimilar images transmitted by the optic nerves. This dissimilarity of the image observed by one eye as compared to that of the other eye is due to the fact that an object which is central to the lens of one eye will fall more or less obliquely upon the lens of the other eye. This dissimilarity will be further discussed when we come to the consideration of pairs of photographs or series of views taken stereoscopically.

Many persons engaged in stereoscopic investigations fail to differentiate between binocular vision and stereoscopic perception. In binocular vision (the act of seeing) our eyes are constantly changing their focus, whereas, in stereoscopic perception we are looking at a photographed result lying in one plane—either a print on paper or projection on a flat surface or screen—and the eye remains fixed in its focus while viewing the same. In other words, in stereoscopy all of the objects in view, regardless of their relative distance in nature, are reduced to one plane in the photographic result. The various objects—reduced to one plane in the print—are also fixed and unalterable in focal value, while upon the retina of the eye they are reduced to one plane but with alterable focal value.

By reason of these facts a dissimilar pair (or series of pairs) of photographs when viewed in a stereoscope exercise the axes of the eyes artificially in the same way as would be the case when looking at the objects in nature.

Although efforts were made by Elliot as early as the year 1834 to produce a suitable device for viewing pictures made with stereoscopic relation to each other, it was not until August, 1838, that the first practical stereoscope was brought out by Professor Wheatstone, and exhibited by him before the British Association at Newcastle. The principle on which the Wheatstone stereoscope worked is diagrammatically shown by Fig. 1, in which, A, A are the two holes to be looked through, B, B are the two pictures or photographs (having stereoscopic relationship to each other) and C, C are two mirrors which reflect the two pictures toward the observation holes or eyepieces. Although the Wheatstone Stereoscope marked a notable advance in stereoscopy its performance was faulty in several respects. One defect was its reversal of the picture being viewed—thus if a view contained lettering, the words would appear backwards. Another fault was double reflection unless special mirrors, burnished on the surface were employed.

Having given these deficiencies of the Wheatstone instrument his serious consideration, Sir David Brewster set about to design a more perfect instrument, and the result was his Lenticular stereoscope, which embodies the principle employed in the present-day stereoscopes. The Lenticular stereoscope employs the principle of refraction instead of reflection and in addition to effecting the coalescence of the dissimilar pictures they are also improved by being seen magnified. Two convex prisms are utilized in the Lenticular stereoscope and the action of the instrument is shown in Fig. 2. In Fig. 2, A, A are the eyes of the observer, B, B are two convex prisms, while C, C and D, D are the two pictures (mounted side by side) which are being examined. The convex prisms refract the light emanating from the pictures, and the eyes see their respective pictures properly combined, and (as before noted) magnified.

Originally the Lenticular stereoscope was of boxed-in form, the pictures being inserted at the top after opening a little door thereon.

But the stereoscope as we now know it—with its hood for the eyes, its frame for holding the pictures (adjustable as to distance from the lenses) and its folding handle—was designed by the well-known American poet, Oliver Wendell Holmes. It is on the lenticular principle, however, employing the same convex prisms as the Brewster instrument. In some of the best modern stereoscopes there is means provided for varying the refractive angle, which is accomplished by increasing or decreasing the separation between the eyepieces or convex prisms. This adjustment is found useful at times to accommodate persons whose eyes are abnormally separated from each other.

Having reviewed the methods of examining stereoscopic pictures, the cameras for securing pictures or series of pictures possessing stereoscopic relationship will next be considered.

Two separate cameras may be employed to secure the negatives, and when this is done the axes of the lenses may be directed toward the subject in such a way as to secure the very best effect. If of good design and accurate construction, however, the customary double or stereoscopic camera may be employed with excellent results. Lenses for stereo work should embrace a medium angle of view and should be very accurately paired or matched, with regard to identical focal length, defining quality, and speed, the latter condition not being so important as the first two mentioned.

Means should always be incorporated, in the case of double cameras, for increasing or decreasing the separation of the lenses. For a subject close at hand the lenses must be brought closer together, while for a distant subject the lenses are separated more, the normal distance between the lenses being about 2½ inches. These conditions are in accordance with the action of the eyes as detailed in the earlier part of this article.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Classification of Material for Picture Playing

"Real Master of Problem Confronting Musicians Is He Who Takes Wealth of Material of Past and Present and Weaves Into Complete Musical Garment Ideas of Great Masters for Cloak That Will Fit Picture in All Beauty and Splendor Called for by Scenes and Characters"

BY JOSEPH C. ROEBER

EVENTS in motion picture history have moved along so rapidly that it is almost impossible to keep pace with them. Not so many years ago, at the end of a theatrical season, one would have been considered a back number if he had not "taken in" at least two shows a week. To-day in order to have even a passing knowledge of the motion picture's successes it would be necessary to attend the theatres twice a day.

For years the photoplay stood alone; a white sheet and a picture machine was all that was necessary to attract a crowd. To-day it is quite another matter. The exhibition of the photodrama must be surrounded with scenic effects and embellished with elaborate music. The silent play constitutes only one-half, or, as some experts have stated, one-third the drawing power of the program. Would a strong film story stand alone to-day? That it is not attempted is the answer.

The embellishments have now reached a point where the "as produced" is costing the exhibitor several times the film itself; that is, considering the rental cost. Does it pay? It is almost incredible what an enormous library is required nowadays to "play" a picture properly, not to mention the time and labor used in preparing the selections for the performance.

The conductor at the Strand theatre has frequently used 100 selections to fit one picture. The average theatre library consists of 600 to 1,000 pieces. This stock is easily exhausted. To facilitate the preparation of this material somewhat of the following classification is necessary:

Classification of Material

1, Overtures; 2, Agitato (Excitement, Fear, Riots); 3, Allegro Dramatic Vivace (Pursuit, Races); 4, Andante Pathetique (Sadness, Sorrow); 5, Misterioso (Sneaky, Creepy Murders, Burglaries, Stealth); 6, Furioso (Storms, Battles); 7, Galop (Parades and Train Effects); 8, Marches, Two-Steps, Dances; 9, Waltz; 10, Intermezzo; 11, Themes: (Melodies, Ballads, Serenades); 12, College Songs; 13, National Airs; 14, Popular Songs; 15, Hymns and Church Music; 16, Folk Songs; 17 Characteristic: a, Spanish; b, Russian; c, Scotch; d, Irish; e, Norwegian; f, Indian; g, Oriental; 18, Comic Operas; 19, Grand Operas; 20, Symphonies and Tone Poems.

The judicious handling of this material will surely prolong the life of the library. Still, playing in a community where the picture-fan is also "up in music," it is one of the greatest trials of the director to keep his selection from becoming stale. What is the remedy?

One well-known composer claims to have solved the problem by writing an "original score." This may temporarily "fill the gap," but no living composer can keep pace with the film industry without running dry or repeating himself.

The real master of the problem is he who can take the wealth of musical material of the past and present and weave into a complete musical garment the ideas of the great masters, completing a fitting cloak that will clothe the picture in all the beauty and splendor which the scenes and characters call for. The variety of ideas by the various composers selected precludes any danger of a stereotyped performance. This is the aim of the printed score.

The inexhaustible source of new material in a library comprising 100,000 selections lends variety to depict the multitude of scenes required in the feature play; the score with its little bits of original melody interwoven insures a finished and smooth performance.

Musical directors and all picture musicians voice the sentiment of Charles A. Dowsett, Norwich, Conn., who says: "I am utterly lost without these scores, their music as compiled raises the entire standard of the theatre, orchestra and picture." Another director claims that he saves four hours a day by their use, and from all parts of the country the leaders are stating that "The score's the thing."

EDITOR'S NOTE: The above article, contributed by J. C. Roeber, sums up to-day's situation of Music and the Picture. With the exception of his last hundred words, I enthusiastically agree with all that he says.

His method of classification is somewhat abbreviated and can be well adapted to small music libraries of 600 to 1,000 pieces. Such a small library is of little or no consequence to-day in picture playing, especially when you know that a certain per cent. of the music you buy is so seldom adaptable to picture playing. For instance, his Nos. 12, 13, 14, 15, 16 and 17 are all numbers that can only be used at positive screen suggestion when playing for pictures. To be more thorough in the selection and playing of serious music Nos. 11 and 20 will allow for a much greater classification.

There is no standard as to how many numbers a library should contain when the musician is interested in playing pictures right. The picture theatre of to-day is in the market to buy any music, new and old, which shows its adaptation for picture playing. It should not only be a bonanza for music publishers, but should give a wide scope to that musical talent which is intelligently inclined toward serious composition.

Many Talented Musicians Want the Spotlight

Many talented musicians seem to think that it is their birthright to claim every privilege of recognition and to have the spotlight continually thrown upon them. It is quite right that everyone should have ambition and a high opinion of his work, but nevertheless in the picture theatre it requires a collaboration of more minds to present a performance successfully. It is a mistake for musicians or music publishers to think that they at any time can bring a picture down to within the scope of their imagination. No director or producer of film would allow this. While musicians might make a thousand well meant suggestions as regards picture production, nevertheless they require a great deal more than a musical education to be able to inform producers what is necessary to make a photoplay impressive on the screen. It is therefore the musician's most important duty that he never ceases accumulating an unlimited library of musical numbers for picture playing; so that, regardless of the photoplay's formation, he will be able to synchronize his music to the approval of his audience.

It is gratifying to note that all the different music publishers are making a special effort at the present time and for the future to publish musical compositions which have a known adaptation for photoplay theatre work.

We now come to the end, which all my readers know that I cannot endorse. Not being personally acquainted with the writer, and as he does not state any of his personal experiences, it is difficult for me to realize why or for what reason he contends that "The score's the thing." I come in contact daily with musicians from all over the country, and up to the present time I have had no reason to change my opinion, namely, "The score is not the thing." Pictures such as "The Birth of a Nation," "The Fall of a Nation," "Civilization," or pictures similarly adapted for so-called big productions and scheduled for later tours, should have an original well rehearsed and properly synchronized score. Remember that these pictures are scheduled to be produced throughout the country with systematized projection and with orchestras of capable, well-paid musicians, who are rehearsed down to the point of playing the picture with their eyes closed. That this is possible has been successfully demonstrated by that wonderful picture, "The Birth of a Nation."

Every talented musician and all other persons directly interested in the high musical art which we expect to realize throughout picturedom in the future should know that when I say the music score should be reserved for such productions and not sent out promiscuously to such points where no opportunity of any kind is given the musician to properly render them. Such a condition will make the score ridiculed at all times. In grand opera scores every music lover knows that when the score is presented in its entirety with the opera it is accepted as a whole; nevertheless, when the music of such an opera is used to entertain at home or in other places of entertainment, the public only accepts that which they particularly like. It is consequently sacrilegious and detrimental to the great composers and musicians who may in the future find great opportunities in picturedom for their labors, that we should to day desecrate music to the extent as is done in these so-called scores.

Score Less Men of Acknowledged Ability

The score will be the thing, but only when it is the property and the work of the man in the musical profession whom we look up to. The scores at the present time are the innovation of music publishers, not picture musicians, and any man with fair judgment can see they will assist in holding off the success of the big production which I know every musician and every man interested in music in the country wants to see a big success.

Furthermore, Mr. Roeber is somewhat misinformed if he thinks that any library in the world is in a position to use 10,000 numbers, and not 100,000 as he states, for the purpose of creating scores with the present existing copyright laws, and 10,000 is very highly overestimated.

Why not be fair to ourselves and everybody else interested in picturedom? Let us hold the scores for those who can and will need them and who will make a profit both for the composer and the musician by their use, and thereby add more splendor to the photoplay theatre. Don't allow the music score, which will be the birth of high art, to become a cheap and annoying thing to those who are not able to use them or those who have not the opportunity to give them proper time and rehearsal.

AIRDOME SEASON IN CALIFORNIA IS BACKWARD AND MANY MANAGERS CONTINUE TO USE REGULAR THEATRES, FITTED WITH COOLING SYSTEMS

THE airdome season has opened rather late in California this year, owing to the fact that but little warm weather has been experienced anywhere. In some places where airdomes have been used in the past it is planned to use the regular theatres, unless there is a great change in the weather, cooling systems having been installed.

H. D. Hubbard has opened an airdome at Calistoga, Cal., his initial offering being "Carmen," featuring Geraldine Farrar, and this is reported as being one of the most successful openings ever held in that section.

F. H. Smith, of the Empress Theatre, Lindsay, Cal., has also opened an airdome, although no oppressive weather has been experienced there as yet. The city is located in the heart of the citrus belt of central California.

17.	Waltz (Leg.)	"Saints & Sinners" (Jos. W. Stern & Co.)	To End.

Notes:—This picture requires music that will interest. Care should be taken to select heavy numbers, when suggested, that will create a more or less mystical effect. Dramatic emphasis is necessary for Nos. 1, 4, 5, 9, 10, 13 and 16. These are high tension dramatic moments. Select your music accordingly. There is little opportunity for light and frivolous playing. Consequently you should select numbers that are musically interesting.

Numbers 1, 5, 9, 10, 13 and 16 must be slow, high-tension numbers played legato and of dramatic effect. Nos. 2, 6 and 12 can be light numbers in 2/4 or 4/4. These numbers are to create musical relief for your program. Nos. 3 and 7 must be concert waltzes with slow and impressive introductions. No. 4 must be a long number with a positive mysterious effect. No. 8 can be a medium 4/4 number. It should however be played legato. Nos. 11 and 17 must be waltz lentos of sustained melody. No. 14 and 15 are melodramatic numbers. The organ can be very effectively used throughout the entire picture.

REX FILM RENOVATOR COMPANY PUTS ITS MACHINES IN EXCHANGES OF FAMOUS PLAYERS IN TWO CITIES

THE Rex Film Renovator Manufacturing Company of Columbus, Ohio, has installed its renovators in the Famous Players exchanges in Detroit, Michigan and Cincinnati, Ohio. The company is now using this system in its exchanges in every city. Other recent installations have been with Paramount and Metro, both in Philadelphia.

RADIO-MAT SLIDE COMPANY GETS LARGE ORDER FROM FULTON COMPANY

THE Radio-Mat Slide Company, 121 West Forty-second Street, New York City, manufacturers of typewriter slides, reports that business is exceptionally good. It has just received an order from the E. E. Fulton Company, Chicago, for 25,000 slides.

This is a new improved typewriter slide and is sold through dealers. Picture Theatre Equipment Company and J. H. Hallberg, both of New York, are among the dealers handling this in the East.

PUBLIC PIPED TO THEIR SEATS IN SMALL MIDDLE WEST THEATRES BY ORGANS

THE popularity of the pipe organ in theatres of the small cities of the middle west is a new feature. A new large organ has just been installed in the Temple-Grand theatre at Creston, Ia., by Norman Samish. N. P. Hyatt, building a new theatre at Webster City, Ia., has not yet named his house, but he has chosen the pipe organ—one of the best. The Orient, Oskaloosa, Ia., is another house with a new pipe organ. W. H. Bowen is the manager.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

ARKANSAS

EUREKA SPRINGS has three picture houses, but at the present time only one is running, the Empire, which is using features from the various feature programs.

CALIFORNIA

As no one has seen fit to open a moving picture house at Kerman, the Commercial Association of that place has taken the matter in its own hands and has made arrangements for giving the residents of that place an opportunity of seeing pictures at regular intervals. R. J. Swift recently made a visit to San Francisco to secure equipment and booking service.

Plans are being completed for the erection of a fine moving picture theatre at the corner of Tenth avenue and Clement street, in the heart of the Richmond district, one of the finest of San Francisco's residence sections. This theatre will be of fireproof construction and will cost $50,000, exclusive of the interior furnishings, which will cost an additional $25,000. It will have a seating capacity of fourteen hundred and will contain a balcony. It is to be erected by Mrs. Mary Seidl, but will be leased to people with experience in the conducting of high class theatres.

CANADA

The Rosedale theatre, Toronto, Ontario, a pretty little northern house, has been having quite a checkered career lately, which has included a change in management, of at least three times. Charles Hill, well known in Toronto as a successful exhibitor, has now taken over the house, and it is expected that he will bring back to it much of its old time success.

The summer season is opening in Montreal in spite of backward weather. The King Edward Park, situated on the river St. Lawrence, is now announced open, and will include among its attractions one or more high class picture shows. Steamers are now running from the suburbs of Montreal to the Park.

INDIANA

C. J. Allardt and his associates have given up their lease on the Boyer opera house at Kendallville. The opera house will be operated as a motion picture theatre by Ralph Rainier, who was Allardt's representative at Kendallville.

A new airdome was opened recently at Francesville. The airdome is located on Bill street, just south of Montgomery street. W. C. Myers, who owns tbe airdome, says it has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons.

D. R. Webber and W. L. Strole, of Newton county, have leased the opera house at Rockville and have opened a photoplay theatre there.

The Royal theatre, Vevay, owned by C. Denman, has been leased by Opp Sieglitz and Milo Gaudin. They plan to show a Fox feature each week and a Gold Rooster play each Tuesday night. Mr. Gaudin will operate the machine and Mr. Sieglitz will sell tickets.

George Mager, of Garrett, has bought the Princess theatre, Kendallville, from William H. Gappinger. Mr. Mager formerly lived in Kendallville. This is Mr. Mager's first venture in motion pictures. Mr. Gappinger expects to go to California for his health.

In a cleanup campaign recently at Lawrenceburg, a motion picture tbeatre accepted 3,230 cans as the price of admission.

Mr. and Mrs. Lon Price have moved to Fort Wayne from Connersville, where Mr. Price expects to start a motion picture theatre.

The Family theatre, long the home of popular price vaudeville, and located nearer the center of the business district than any other theatre in Indianapolis, opened July 1 as a photoplay theatre. The theatre is located on Kentucky avenue, near the intersection of Illinois, and Washington streets and Kentucky avenue. A lobby was built, running through from Kentucky avenue to Illinois street. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,000 persons. Mr. Leonard, who recently took over the property, made a trip east to obtain ideas as to the most satisfactory improvements to please and accommodate his patrons. The house is scientifically heated and ventilated, so the outside heat or cold will not effect the interior of the house. The new decorations are attractive. The lobby is large enough to take care of the whole audience in case of inclement weather. The exterior is striking, with the largest number of lights in use of any theatre in the state. A Seeburg piano is installed. "A photoplay theatre that is different" is the slogan of the manager.

IOWA

Norman Samish, manager of the Temple-Grand, Creston, has bought the Amuzu theatre at Clinton. He continues to manage the Temple-Grand, which has recently been equipped with a large pipe organ, and the Millard which will be wreked soon. On the site a new $20,000 house will be built.

A. G. Stolte is one motion picture editor who has become an exhibitor. He gave up his job on the Waterloo Courier and is now manager of the Palace at Vinton.

N. P. Hyatt is building a new house at Webster City, which will have a fine pipe organ.

W. H. Bowen of Oskaloosa has sold the Orient to McConnell and Hansen, who also control the Marengo house. A new pipe organ will be installed in the Orient.

A washout kept several northeastern Iowa houses dark one or two nights the week of June 19. Fonda is to have a new theatre. Mr. Carragher, of Rudd, has opened the Palm at Clear Lake. Frank Bryant has succeeded his brother, J. E., as manager of the Plaza, Waterloo.

A. W. McIntosh, who bought the Crystal, Waterloo, from Nicholas Webber and closed it for redecoration and repainting, opened the house June 17.

Perry E. Smith has sold the Idle Hour of New Hampton to Joseph Konzen. K. Boyd now manages the Dreamland and Colonial at Olewein. C. C. Schleuter of La Porte bas bought tbe Grand at Cedar Falls. Kier and Smith, opera house proprietors at Sac City, have opened an airdome.

Sisk and James have bought the Happy Hour, Cherokee, from A. G. Ferris and renamed it the American. Ferris takes over the Empress, formerly managed by J. A. Cummings.

E. Klatt has bought out McMoran and Knee, owners of the Allerton theatre, Independence. A. W. McIntosh is the name of the new owner of the Crysta, Waterloo. C. C. Schuleter has bought the Grand, Cedar Falls.

Fred Bichrodt now owns the Star, State Center, having bought it recently. O. W. Strime has traded the Nemo at Belle Plaine, for the Lyric, Boone, Buffington & Norris being the other parties in the deal. W. H. Clausen, owner of the Grand, Toledo, has bought the Star at Tama. The U. S. A. is the name of a splendid new house opened in Sioux City by Hanmitt Brothers. It is roomy, modern and comfortable in every respect.

The Casino, has been opened in Mason City, with A. Kahn in charge. It is a modern house, seating over 500. C. E. Carragher has bought the Palm, Clear Lake. The Idle Hour, New Hampton, is now owned by Joe Konzen. K. Boyd has bought the Colonial, Olewein.

Manager Armstrong has opened the Colonial at Grinnell, the admission price being only 5 cents. Cornell & Houser have bought the Orient, Oskaloosa.

B. C. Boggs has bought the Harvey, Sheldon. John & Davis now own the Willis, Woodbine.

Walker & Jorgenson, attending the university at Morningside, a suburb of Sioux City, have opened the Park theatre and are making a big thing of it.

LOUISIANA

On June 12 the Ideal theatre, New Orleans, formerly run by Mrs. C. A. Anderson, was taken over by Jacobs, Landry and Marks, who also own the Cadiz theatre, Cadiz and Dryades streets. The new owners intend to reopen the Ideal, and will probably close the Cadiz.

The Lyric theatre, Burgundy and Ibberville streets, New Orleans, formerly a legitimate house, was sold at public auction to the highest bidder on June 29.

The Southern Amusement Company has been formed in Lake Charles by Miller and Wachsten, owners of the Bijou Dream, Dreamland and Arcade theatres, and Dr. J. J. DePraslin, owner of the Princess theatre. Miller and Wachsten recently purchased the three theatres mentioned from Josiah Pearce and Sons of New Orleans. Under this new arrangement, the Southern Amusement Company controls the entire city of Lake Charles, and will branch out in other Louisiana towns, it is understood. J. J. DePraslin is managing director of the new enterprise.

W. R. Cushman, formerly of Mobile, Ala., has taken over the Peoples' theatre, Dryades and Washington streets, New Orleans. It will be remodeled and opened by July 4.

Contract for erection of the Globe theatre, Herman Fichtenberg's newest theatre in Canal street, New Orleans, has been let to George J. Glover, the consideration named being $38,595. Many more thousands of dollars will be spent in fixtures and furnishings.

The Beverly theatre, 110 N. Jefferson Davis Parkway, New Orleans, which was managed by George R. Larrieu, has closed.

P. O. Blankenship, owner of the Isis theatre, Dryades street, New Orleans, has installed a Typhoon fan system.

A 1,000-seat moving picture theatre is being built in Dryades street, New Orleans. Mesa and Weitkam are the owners. The tbeatre will be one of the largest suburban houses in New Orleans.

ILLINOIS

On the corner of North Clark street and Dole avenue, one block south of North Clark, Broadway and Diversey boulevard, Chicago, stands Covent Garden. For over a year it has been in the course of construction on a plot 125 x 250 feet, purchased by the Covent Garden Corporation from the Lehman estate. The front is of pressed brick, elaborately ornamented, and the interior contains a main anditorium and a balcony with a combined seating capacity of approximately 2,600. The opening performance took place Thursday night, June 8, at 7:30, followed by one at 9:15 the same evening, and thereafter three times daily at 2:30, 7:30 and 9:15, all performances being at popular prices. The stage is of proportions adequate for circus performances, water carnivals and the largest of grand opera and musical comedy spectacles. A huge water stage, patterned on the lines of the one installed at the New York Hippodrome, is included in the stage equipment for spectacular water effects. A. Wurlitzer Hope-Jones orchestral organ, installed at a cost of nearly $75,000, and said to be the largest of its kind in the world, will be used exclusively for the interpretation of scores for the musical plays as well as for solo purposes.

MICHIGAN

C. Howard Crane has let the general contract for the Rialto Theatre Company for its theatre and store building on Gratiot, near Mt. Elliott avenues, Detroit.

Pontiac is to have one of the largest and most attractive theatres in the State. It is to be named the Oakland theatre and will be erected by the Oakland Theater Company, of Detroit, on the southeast corner of Saginaw and Water streets. The building is designed by C. Howard Crane, architect, of Detroit, who designed and planned the Majestic, Alhambra, Garden, Strand, Madison, Rialto and other handsome theatres in Detroit. It is expected the building will be completed and ready for occupancy by October 1. The building is to be fireproof and modern throughout. The front and part of the side wall will have surface of white terra cotta.

On the ground floor there will be the theatre and four modern stores. The second floor will contain several suites of offices. The basement is to have a separate entrance from the street and will contain space for a billiard room and barber shop. The theatre proper is to be built on the amphitheatre style, similar to the Majestic theatre, Detroit, and will have capacity for seating about 1,800. Inclines instead of stairways are to be used to reach the various levels, making every portion of the theatre easy of access. The building is open on all sides so that there will be exits in every direction at every point in the theatre. The stage will be large enough to produce almost any attraction and completely equipped in every detail.

Helmar George has purchased the Central theatre at 20 North Saginaw street, Pontiac, from F. J. Stafford. Mr. George expects to run the theatre in connection with his photography business, assuming the personal management of both enterprises. Mr. George will introduce a novelty at his playhouse in the shape of moving pictures of local events which will be reproduced soon after they take place. In addition to the feature of local pictures, he will bring to Pontiac such pictures as are produced by the Paramount, Keystone and Lasky companies. Serial pictures which are now running at the Central will be continued for two weeks, after which there will be an entire change of features.

Contracts have been let for the construction of the new Delthe theatre, Mack and Helcomb avenues, Detroit, to seat 1200 people on the first floor. The building will be of brick and stone. The officers of the company are Frederick DeLodde, president; Daniel T. Millville, vice-president; Joseph Michaels, treasurer, and Peter Ewink, secretary.

F. J. Stafford has sold the Central theatre, 20 North Saginaw street, Pontiac, to Helmar George, who plans many improvements. He has already started a Pontiac Weekly, having purchased a motion picture camera and this is now a regular feature at the Central. Charles D. Wesch has sold the Virginia Park theatre, 1227 Hamilton Boulevard, Detroit, to F. S. Wadlaw.

John R. O'Dell, owner of the Frontenac theatre, Frontenac and Harper avenues, Detroit, has purchased the Palace Theatre on Fourteenth street, formerly owned by Paul Hoffman.

M. J. Conroy has bought the Countess theatre, 1370 West Fort street, Detroit. This house was formerly owned by Messrs. Caplan and Reuben. Otto Seestedt has sold the Theatorium theatre, 531 Baker street, Detroit, to Edward Poland.

William A. Cassidy of Saginaw has just completed a building at Midland which contains a motion picture theatre seating five hundred. It opened Saturday, July 1. Sidney Jacobs is manager.

A moving picture theatre is to be erected in Plymouth, plans for which are now being drawn by Varney and Varney, Detroit architects.

A. J. Gilligham, owner of the Empire theatre, Detroit, and the National Film Company, returned July 1 from a ten days' trip through the east, his object being to get new ideas in theatre construction. Mr. Gilligham has an office at 189 Woodward avenue, and it is reported that he contemplates the erection of a large downtown theatre in the near future.

The following theatres are now in course of construction in Detroit: Drury Lane, Woodward avenue, opening about July 10; the Regent, Woodward at Horton avenues; the Ferry Field, Grand River at the Boulevard; the Rialto, at Gratiot and Mt. Elliott avenues; a theatre being erected for John Owen at Gratiot near Iroqouise avenue, and the Iris threatre, Chene street near the Grand Boulevard.

MINNESOTA

Tom Arthur is the new partner of Mr. Valleau, proprietor of the Cecil, at Albert Lea. They will show features exclusively.

MISSOURI

J. W. Holmes, who has leased the Empress theatre, Fifth and Joplin streets, Joplin, will open that house July 1 with a combined motion picture and vaudeville entertainment. The program will be changed each week as regards the vaudeville show and every day for the motion pictures which will be shown between performances.

Between regular show hours, a thief entered the New James theatre in Shelbina and made away with the picture machine. The theft was not discovered until R. M. Spaulding, one of the proprietors, went to the theatre in the afternoon to run off the evening's picture. In order to give a show the managers were forced to borrow a machine from an adjoining town.

In a fire that destroyed the main business section of New London and did nearly $40,000 damage, the moving picture theatre there was destroyed. It is probable that the house will be rebuilt.

V. A. Klingberg, of the Colonial theatre, Kirksville, has announced that the house, one of the leading theatres in that part of the state for the past three years, will be closed. This is the result of arrangements with the Princess and Gem theatre managements, and reduces the number of picture houses in Kirksville to three. The equipment of the Colonial will be moved out of Kirksville. Mr. Klingberg has not yet located another picture house.

TYPHOON FAN COMPANY 1544 BWAY. NEW YORK CITY

A. L. Jarboe of Carrollton, who manages the New theatre, has opened another house in Cameron.

C. Snell has opened a motion picture house in Harrinsonville.

The Strand theatre, Thirty-sixth and Troost, Kansas City, which opened June 24, will have the first suburban run of Bluebird pictures.

M. Spicer, manager of the National theatre, Kansas City, has changed the place into a house for negroes only, and is very well satisfied with the increase in business. Mr. Spicer recently installed a new Power's equipment and a very practical ventilation system. Both of the machines were furnished by the Motion Picture Supply Company.

The Ivory theatre, at 7712 Ivory street, St. Louis, was opened for business on June 15, with an all-picture program, under the management of the Ivory Amusement Company, of which organization E. J. Paule is the head. Mr. Paule was formerly a councilman in St. Louis, and is well known in business circles of the city. The Ivory, which is a modern and up-to-the-minute theatre, presented a festive appearance on opening night, with its many beautiful flowers, gifts from personal friends and well-wishers of Mr. Paule. The theatre seats some 850 persons, and is equipped with the latest improvements in both furnishings and projecting apparatus.

The Columbia theatre, at Sixth and St. Charles street, St. Louis, has taken over the first run Triangle program, which has been showing at the American, Seventh and Market, to run during the summer months. The Columbia is under the control of the same theatrical enterprise as the American, and is in the heart of the business district, which may have caused the change.

The Central theatre, at Sixth and Market streets, St. Louis, has made a record run on "The Little Girl Next Door," which is now in its sixth week, and which has proved one of the most popular features exhibited at the Central this season.

The Cass theatre, at 1417 Cass avenue, St. Louis, has come into the possession of James J. Barrett, owner and operator of the Chippewa, at Broadway and Chippewa, and the Knickerbocker, at 3145 Park avenue. Mr. Barrett plans a string of theatres in St. Louis, and the success he has had with the Chippewa and the Knickerbocker, is proof that the system of management he maintains is effective in filling his houses. The Cass, which is scheduled to open about August 1, will be repaired and altered to make it a modern and handsome theatre. New and improved equipment will be installed, and the house will be entirely redecorated.

The St. Charles and the Broadway theatres, opposite each other on St. Charles street, between Broadway and Sixth, St. Louis, have just been sold to W. O. Thomas by the Associated Theatres Company of St. Louis, of which W. J. Flynn is the general manager. E. A. Schwartz, former manager of the two houses, is taking a vacation, but declares he will be back in the picture business inside of a couple of weeks.

The Columbia theatre, a new house in the southwest section of St. Louis, known as the Clifton Heights district, was opened for business recently with an all picture program consisting of special features on Saturday and Sunday, for which ten cents admission is charged, and regular service on other nights at five cents admission.

The Stardome, a new outdoor theatre, was opened as an all picture theatre on North Grand avenue in St. Louis recently by Guy Kirksey.

The Aubert airdome, Easton and Aubert avenues, and the Penrose Garden, on Penrose avenue, are now under the management of the Unit Amusement Company of St. Louis, of which Theodore Goll is the general manager. Both these airdomes are highly decorative with their bright lights and ornamental fronts. Motion picture features and vaudeville constitute the program.

H. H. Hughes, proprietor of the Alhambra, Springfield, opened that house with the Billie Burke serial. He says it is a record breaker.

Charles Snell has opened the Snell theatre in Harrisonville. This theatre has a seating capacity of six hundred.

NEBRASKA

P. H. Hopper of the Crescent in Kearney, is building a $25,000 house that will be opened from August 15 to September 1.

W. W. Hughes of the Community, David City, is now showing a regular program seven days instead of five as formerly.

NEVADA

J. A. Raynes, formerly with the Triangle Film Corporation as assistant in the musical department, has purchased the Majestic theatre at Reno, and recently took possession.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Sayward and Willey, a firm new to the business, will open the new Colonial theatre in Rochester, July 17, with Billy Burke in "Gloria's Romance."

OKLAHOMA

A. W. James has moved into his now airdome at Boston Bow, where he has a house seating four hundred. Stock, repertoire, musical comedy and pictures will be used. The house is called The Strand, and is owned by King and James.

Ensley Barbour has leased the Folly theatre at Oklahoma City where he will play tabloids and pictures. Raleigh Dent has been selected as house manager by Mr. Barbour.

Helback and Cox, proprietors of Theatorium and Majestic theatres at Oklahoma City, have let a contract for a new theatre to be erected in Oklahoma City. The building will be strictly modern, 50x150 and will cost approximately $12,000.

The New Yale theatre at Muskagee has ben closed for several weeks to be remodeled.

PENNSYLVANIA

The latest improvements at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, are two handsome Onyx Drinking Fountains recessed in the wall on each side of the standing space. For the summer season, soft white curtains have replaced the heavy crimson draperies about the screen. The employes are also in summer togs; men in white trousers and dark coats; girls in white skirts and striped sport coats. No change has been made in the music or program. There is also no lessening of the throngs that nightly pack this popular play-house.

The late spring and chilly summer have kept down the number of airdomes in Philadelphia, but several are already under way. The largest of these is the Belmont Airdome at Forty-fourth and Parkside avenue which has 1,400 seats. M. Gilber, W. Rosen and S. Sondberg are the proprietors. There are two evening performances with a ten-cent admission. Songs illustrated by motion pictures are popular parts of the program.

A feature of the Belmont which makes for success is the rain-shelter seating about 600 people, thus enabling the performance to continue in spite of wind and weather.

Other airdomes opened are the Mercantile at Third and George streets; the Peoples at Seventh street below Girard avenue; the Ridge avenue at Thirty-first and Ridge avenue; and The Airdome, Fifty-third and Market streets.

The Coliseum, at Forty-ninth and Market streets, Philadelphia, will close on July 1 and be entirely rebuilt, before opening again about September 1. The owners will spend $10,000 or more on improvements. The interior will be torn out and practically a new theatre, with only the present walls will arise. Even the name will be changed. A new organ will be put in and new equipment generally. When completed the house will be under the management of Columbus Stamper who already has the Tioga, Franklin and Cedar. The theatre is now a five-cent house, but the price will be raised to ten on its reopening.

Carl P. Berger is architect for alterations and additions which are being made to the Poplar theatre, at 903-07 North Sixth street, Philadelphia, for the Popular Theatre Company owners.

A. A. Luzardi is now manager of the Hoffman theatre at Fifth and Tioga streets, Philadelphia which is owned by J. Schmidt.

Several changes for betterment have been made by the new manager amongst which is a special program for children on Saturday.

The new Strand theatre, Altoona, representing an investment of $200,000 and erected by Isaac and Jacob Silverman, was formally opened Monday, May 29. The theatre has a seating capacity for 1750, and is one of the largest and most beautiful moving picture playhouses in the State. This is the third large picture house completed in Altoona within the past year.

TENNESSEE

It is understood that the Alcazar motion picture theatre, Chattanooga, owned by the Signal Amusement Company is to be enlarged and its seating capacity increased from 675 to 1,100 on the lower floor. The intention of the company is to put a large balcony in the theatre within the near future. The price of admission to the Alcazar, which has been fifteen cents, has been lowered to ten cents. A majority of the patrons have expressed themselves as favoring shorter shows. The same class of high grade pictures will be retained, but the news films and travelogues will be transferred to another house of the company. There is a report that the Colonial theatre, also controlled by the Signal Amusement Company, will be remodelled. This theatre is now dark.

The new motion picture theatre, corner of Ninth and A streets, Chattanooga, is now practically complete. The finishing touches are now being put on the building. A ventilating system has been installed. The front of the theatre is attractive and will be brilliantly lighted. The new film house will cater to colored picture patrons.

TEXAS

The Star theatre at Smithville, managed by Alfred A. Bauscher, burned May 13; but is now being rebuilt on a more extensive scale. The new house will seat around 600 and be equipped with all modern paraphernalia. A. D. Baker Amusement Company, of which A. D. Baker is general manager, will have charge of the house. This concern also manages theatres in San Marcos, Brenham, Luling, Shiner and Gonzales, Texas.

The Key theatre, Houston, operated by Miss E. Johnson, one of the few lady exhibitors in the Southwest, has been remodeled throughout and 350 new upholstered opera chairs installed.

The Lincoln theatre, at Houston, has been completed and is now under the management of Miss E. Johnson, who also has the Key theatre. The Lincoln was built at an outlay of $20,000 for colored people only; it seats 600, and has a Style K. Wurlitzer Unit orchestra.

The Pastime theatre at Canadian, has been remodeled throughout and new opera chairs installed. It is under the direction of T. V. Humphreys.

Paul Baracco has a new motion picture house on the north side of Main street in Houston, which seats around 500, and is getting good business.

WISCONSIN

At a cost of $24,000 the Pearl Amusement Company will build a photoplay theatre on Fourteenth avenue near Mitchell street, Milwaukee. The structure which will be of concrete and will be 50 x 115 feet.

Architect W. C. Weeks, Sheboygan, will close bids soon for the erection of a photoplay theatre for R. B. Guyette, Sheboygan Falls. It is to be of brick, one story high and 40 x 90 feet, with a seating capacity of five hundred. The Kewaskum Amusement Company is taking bids for the erection of an opera house in that city.

WASHINGTON

Contracts have been closed for the new Pantages theatre building, Tacoma, and work will be started at Ninth street and Broadway for the $300,000 structure, which must be ready for occupancy in ten months.

A ground lease was taken for forty-nine years at a sliding scale and Alex Pantages takes a building lease for the same period at $1,500 a month. He agrees to expend $50,000 in decorating the theatre. The structure will be a replica of the Pantages theatre in Seattle and six stories in height.

Take Temptation Out of Your Ticket Booth

Every ticket seller wants to be honest. And she will be if you don't put temptation in her way. Remember she's human and the control which every human being has over his or her will power varies. When you allow temptation to inhabit your ticket booth, you are inviting losses. You can guard against them—you can save money—you can remove temptation from your ticket booth by installing

CAILLE
Ticket Office Devices

The Caille Ticket seller automatically registers every ticket sold. This register is under lock and key. The theatre owner holds the key. There is no way that the ticket seller can get at the register. Every ticket sold is accounted for. It removes temptation and discourages dishonest efforts between the party in the booth and the ticket taker.

A Battery of Two Ticket Sellers

Delivers Tickets Separately

Whether a patron buys one ticket or five the Caille Ticket Seller delivers them to him cut off separately, but stacked together like a deck of cards. Tickets delivered in this way cannot lay across the knives in the chopper. They will drop through instantly.

Handles Tickets of Different Denominations

The Caille Ticket Seller is built in sections. When it is desired to sell tickets of different denominations, additional sections are added. Each section has its individual motor for direct or alternating current.

Caille Ticket Choppers

They tear tickets to shreds. There is no possible chance to use them again. These machines are built for foot, hand or electric operation.

Our Lightning Change-Maker

computes and pays the difference between the amount tendered ($1.00 or under) and the price of admission. Simply press one key and the machine does the calculating and instantly delivers the change direct to the patron in a saucer-like receptacle. Saves time, prevents errors and disputes.

MUTUAL CHAPLIN SPECIALS

Charlie Chaplin Every Day

Charlie Chaplin in the Mutual Chaplin Specials is such an extraordinary attraction that he naturally brings extraordinary returns.

For instance, The Garrick Theatre, Los Angeles, is running Mutual Chaplin Specials every day in the year, playing each subject for four consecutive weeks. And business is as great at the end of the fourth week as during the first, as the accompanying reproduction of a photograph taken on the twenty-eighth day of the run of "The Floorwalker" at this theatre must clearly show.

There are thousands of other striking cases demonstrating the unparalleled worth of Charlie Chaplin in vehicles like "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman" and "The Vagabond" and the other nine Mutual Chaplin Specials which are to follow.

MUTUAL STAR PRODUCTIONS

Helen Holmes Series

With the announcement of the series of Mutual Star Productions featuring Helen Holmes, many exhibitors immediately arranged for booking, counting upon Miss Holmes' popularity and the class of her subjects to bring them ample returns.

But with the release of the first picture, "Whispering Smith," the number of bookings increased, and when "Medicine Bend," the second production, was shown, the bookings took still another leap.

These two subjects more than made good. They are of the type theatre patrons enjoy. And with their showing the number of Miss Holmes' followers grew.

If past performances are any guide to the future, the Helen Holmes series is in every way a success. Exhibitors not yet showing it can share in this success by making booking arrangements for the entire five productions comprising the series at any one of the 68 Mutual exchanges.

WILLIAM RUSSELL SERIES

The public is discriminating and prefers to patronize theatres showing photoplays of quality.

In booking photoplays, then, the wise exhibitor always bears quality in mind, at the same time keeping sight of the box office value of the pictures he considers.

The William Russell series has these two important factors. Every agency for high class motion picture production has been used in this series. The star, William Russell, is one of the screen's great drawing cards.

Eight five reel productions, each a distinct subject, comprise the series, which may be booked at any one of the 68 Mutual exchanges.

The Dyspeptic

A two-reel "Mustang"; a modern frontier comedy-drama, carrying a punchy health lesson threaded through a refreshing love plot. Ashton Dearholt and Nita Davis are featured. Scenery effects are superb.

Directed by William Bertram. Released July 21st.

The Dancer

This two-reel "Flying A" drama shows Vivian Rich in the title role—that of a pure-hearted dancer who becomes appealingly domestic upon her marriage to an honest farmer lad. Delicately interpreted moments of pathos and a pleasing story make this a strong offering.

Directed by Carl M. Le Viness. Released July 17th.

In the Land of the Tortilla

—pronounced "tor-tee-ya"—is all that the name implies. In this "Beauty" comedy Carol Halloway and John Sheehan introduce comic situations burlesquing intense melodrama.

Directed by Archer McMackin. Released July 19th.

A Studio Satire

Orral Humphrey, "Beauty" comedian, interprets the main character in this rollicking comedy of motion picture studio life.

Directed by Orral Humphrey. Released July 23rd.

In exhibiting these offerings, theatre managers anticipate the demands of patrons for high class entertainment—and pave the way to steady patronage.

Book these—and play to capacity houses.

All "Flying A," "Beauty" and "Mustang" productions are distributed throughout the United States and Canada exclusively by the Mutual Film Corporation.

A VOICE FROM THE TRENCHES

THE FOLLOWING LETTER FROM "A PLAIN BRITISH SOLDIER," IS ONE OF 1427 THAT HAVE REACHED THOS. H. INCE WITHIN A PERIOD OF 4 WEEKS—UNSOLICITED LETTERS OF THANKS AND PRAISE FROM MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN WHO, HAVING SEEN "CIVILIZATION," WERE IMPELLED TO COMMUNICATE THEIR OPINIONS OF THIS MASTER-WORK DIRECTLY TO ITS CREATOR.

"Dear Mr. Ince:

"For one who has been through the Gehenna of Nations in France, and for the millions who remain, as I went, to lay down my life for the defence of my country and my loved ones, I thank you, sir, with a simple soldier's prayer that your wonderful picture 'Civilization' (which I saw here tonight) may waken your own great race to the Demoniac madness of modern war. What you in your mighty screen sermon have depicted—vivid remorseless and truly horrible as it is—is but the least part of the Saturnalia of war.

"Picture the stench of your comrades rotting in death by your side as you are bespattered by the hot blood of their freshly butchered in all the blistering heat and volcanic thunder of shrieking shells and belching guns! Then, in the black and deadlier silence of night, while you lie half-buried in muddy bloody slime hour after hour waiting for hell's-fire to burst out from earth and sky again, to feel the maggots, that are devouring in their millions the men you have lived and fought by, crawling over your own living carcass, as your brain reels in delirium at the sights and sounds you hear and see; and at those struggling souls you feel above and about you, still fighting a ghostly battle in the air, as if not realizing Death!

"Then the thoughts of home, of the anguish of loved ones their lack of your support—helpless women, hungry babes—Oh! God! You can't think of it!

"No! Not even you, whose vision seems to have been made prophetic, clear and pure with the power of a great God purpose. I can write no more. I can think of no more that I dare write. But, sir, you have in 'Civilization' done a great work for God and for the Sons of that Man who made us all in His image.

"Let every man, woman and child go to see this picture. Let them see in it that world tragedy we, whom I write for, have come through. Let them see it—as I do—the dethronement of the Physical with all its false idols and the awakening to Christ's Kingdom on earth of a new and a fuller Spiritual Consciousness, born of Brotherhood and Self-Control, which in its turn shall give birth to a New Race, with liberty-loving hospitable America as its home.

"May God bless and prosper you as the world will thank you is the heart's prayer of

"Yours for 'Civilization,'

"The Only Sensible and Efficient Manner of Choosing Attractions"

An Independent Film Expert's Opinion of the Open Booking Policy, Exploited by V. L. S. E.

By "WID" GUNNING

From His Magazine, "Wid's Films and Film Folk," Vol. 2, No. 24, June 15, 1916

I FIRMLY believe that the exhibitors of this country are making a terrible mistake in allowing the institution of the Program method of releasing feature films to continue to exist.

I have yet to hear anyone successfully defend the Program plan as against the Open Market booking plan from the exhibitor's viewpoint. It is certainly true that the Program plan is better for the manufacturer, because the Program makes it possible for the manufacturer to shoot in a bad one now and then, or a cheap one, and then bolster it up by an occasional good one.

It is all very well to hear them talk about establishing standards, but I believe any exhibitor in the country will agree with me that so far no concern has made good on that proposition.

I believe in the Open Market method of booking films. I believe it is the only sensible and efficient manner of choosing attractions. I also believe in paying for each film what it is worth to you, rather than paying a stated amount for so many films as they come—good, bad and indifferent.

I believe every exhibitor will agree that Marguerite Clark is a better box-office attraction than some star (?) who has never been heard of. Why, then, should you pay the same for the picture featuring the unknown star that you pay for the Clark picture?

You can rest assured that any argument from the manufacturer about your getting the big ones at a low price in order to offset the little ones at a big price, is a bad argument for you. If it was a bad argument for the manufacturer he would change his policy and change it quick.

I am very much in earnest about this question, because I believe it is of tremendous importance, and it seems to me to be really ridiculous that the most important branch of this tremendous industry should be as helpless as it is to-day.

If the exhibitors ever say that they want Open Market instead of the present good, bad and indifferent Program lottery, they will get it.

Gentlemen:

I want to say, without any desire to flatter, that the only true and consistent policy of an exchange releasing features, is the one adopted by your concern.

The open market affords every manager the opportunity of taking the pictures he knows are pleasing and suited to his clientele. Every theatre throughout the country is peculiar unto itself. The management reflects the policy that its customers expect and desire, not alone in the internal workings of the house, but in the program offered.

There are a number of pictures which are beautiful and costly productions, and wonderful in costuming and scenic effects, which I cannot use because they are not the type of pictures which my audience desires.

But through your consistent policy, I am privileged to pass these by instead of being forced to take them and lose money on them, and play such pictures as "God's Country and the Woman," "Sherlock Holmes," "The Great Divide," "The Valiants of Virginia" and many others such as those which we have successfully played, which I know will be pleasing to my patrons and that I will make money on.

We have built our success on the basis of this policy and the reputation of the pictures which we get as a result. Frankly, I am willing and glad to admit that this policy has made it possible for us to see far enough into the future to warrant our making an expenditure in San Francisco of $1,700 000 to properly exploit good pictures of all makes, by the open booking plan.

Very truly yours,

E A Rolf.

"MASTERPIECE!"

The Standard Dictionary defines the word "masterpiece" as a work showing the hand of a master; a superior production; capital performance; masterwork.

There is no word in the English language that has been more overworked!

William N. Selig now personally passes judgment on every film comedy and drama released under Diamond S trademark.

No release is now booked that does not carry Mr. Selig's personal and final approval.

"The Conflict," released July 24, is a Selig Diamond Special with Fritzi Brunette, Jack Pickford and Vivian Reed.

This production deserves the title of masterpiece!

"Local Color" is fourth of the Tom Mix Western comedies that are proving so popular with the public.

Over a year ago, Mr. Selig expressed his determination to present his best stars and best stories in regular service of General Film Co.

As usual, he blazed the trail—was first in the expression of a sound policy and first to carry it out.

As a consequence, Selig business has trebled within the past six months!

Dear Mr. Shallenberger:-

Having played five chapters of your new series "Who's Guilty?" with Anna Nilsson and Tom Moore co-starring, I cannot help to express my feeling in telling you that never in my career have I seen such wonderful pictures that have been so consistent in their general excellence, each chapter being a complete story in itself and all pertaining to "Who's Guilty?".

Their artistic value, their quality and everything about them have given to Proctor's Palace Yonkers solidity and have created a standard that I know will be impossible to duplicate with any other series now before the American public.

I cannot make my appreciation too strong.

Very truly yours,
Wm. Waldron.

Stars of National Reputation in Every Cast

A service of one and two reel subjects—twenty-one reels a week—composed of Comedies that are really humorous—Dramas that have a punch—Westerns that are full of thrills.

The best one and two reel subjects ever produced—clean and clear new film at prices much lower than you are now paying for poor subjects and worn out film. Stars of national reputation in every cast—

Consider these facts—they are undeniable. Unicorn Film Service will bring you additional business.

Here are some real business getters for you.

THE HEART OF AN INDIAN
2 Reel Western

Cast: J. Barnev Sherry, William Clifford, Francis Ford, Anna Little, Arthur Acord, Mrs. Hale, Howard Davies

Great are the bonds of motherhood. They know no creed, no country, no race. In this portrayal is shown a tender example of the love that prompted an Indian mother to return a captive child to its mother. Released: July 12th.

THE MOHAWK'S TREASURE
1 Reel Western

Cast: George Nichols, Miss Cahill, Alfred Paget, Claire McDowell

Pills are usually not classed as treasure, but the Indian squaw held the bottle of pellets given her by the doctor's wife, as being one of her most precious possessions. It was lucky for the white woman that she did, for the pills were the means of saving her from the tomahawk. Released July 10th.

THE TEMPLE OF MAMMON
2 Reel Drama

Cast: Alec Francis, George Larkin, Lamar Johnstone, Barbara Tennant, John Adolphi, Muriel Ostriche, Julia Stuart

A deep satire that touches that living topic, "The High Cost of Living," in a way as to stir public opinion. A film more appealing even than its popular predecessor, "The Slums of Humanity." A subject that is the part and parcel of every existence. Released: July 14th.

THREADS OF FATE
1 Reel Drama

Cast: Owen Moore, George Nichols, Mrs. Griffith

To come together as lovers after fifteen years of separation and then find that they are brother and sister, is the unfortunate plight of two noble young people. Their course out of such a difficulty makes an interesting and extremely human tale. Released July 12th.

HIS PROMISE—with Edwin August
2 Reel Western

Cast: Edwin August, Ruth Blair, William Bailey, Iva Sheppard

Addicted to the drink habit, Jim Gregson (Edwin August) goes West with the brother of the girl he loves. He hopes to overcome his degrading weakness and to make his fortune. His first experience in the western village is with a typically rowdy set of miners who insist on annoying a preacher in his sermon. He jumps in and with hitherto unknown spirit quiets and overawes the crowd. The preacher, grateful, prevails on him to continue his preaching the Gospel to the rough Westerners. His weakness soon returns and overpowers him and it is only through the untiring efforts of a dance-hall girl, who has fallen in love with him that he is saved from a terrible fate. She finds a letter of the girl in the East, asking Gregson to reform and come back to her, and uses it to reform him and make him go to his truly beloved. Released July 15th.

The News Reel That Gets There

Most moving picture theatres put news reels in the class of "fillers"—something that their patrons like but would not come especially to see.

That idea belongs to the dead past.

The HEARST INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL is not a "filler" but a "FEATURE."

Engaged in its production is the greatest news gathering organization in the world—the biggest and livest camera staff in the world—and the quickest service in the world.

Hearst International News Pictorial

The local boat race and the firemen's parade are the old standbys of the ordinary news reel. There's no credit in that. Anybody with a camera and carfare can produce that kind of news reel.

But——

When the big thing happens—when the battleship goes down—when our troops meet the Mexicans—when faraway, startling news flashes across the world—you'll find it in the HEARST INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL.

That's why live exhibitors are booking this semi-weekly feature.

It's there with the goods—a genuine twice-a-week newspaper of the films.

P. S.—We are advertising HEARST INTERNATIONAL NEWS PICTORIAL to ten million people. Your patrons are among them.

The Exhibitors' Opportunity

THE statement by Frank J. Rembusch in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS on the deposit system evidently struck a chord with the exhibitor.

Mr. Rembusch has forwarded to us a number of responses to his article and a large number of letters bearing on the subject have been received by us.

If the facts as stated in these letters are true they constitute a severe arraignment of certain exchanges, of their bad faith as well as their deplorable business policies. They also indicate pretty clearly why some exhibitors are not making money.

ONE letter, in its simple recital of facts, leaves no doubt as to its honesty and awakens at once a sincere sympathy and a condemnation of the lax business methods which make possible such cases.

A husband and wife, five years ago, invested their all in a theatre out West, buying the building and lot on contract payments.

They struggled along for a few years and finally contracted for a first class program, taking the program's advice as to booking good pictures steadily, advertising them persistently and building up a permanently good patronage. They added good music—and they succeeded with a house which had been stamped as a white elephant.

NOW—to cut the story short—a newer house, erected because of their success, has their program. Their previous advertising is sending their patronage to their competitor. They are back to vaudeville and cheaper pictures and neither house is making money.

Which presents, of course, a business situation which is bad and faulty from every angle.

IN each of these letters, most of which are evidently from men hot under the collar, there's a dare expressed or implied that we do not print the letters.

In reply we have to say that we do dare print the letters. But to what avail? Whom will it benefit?

To yell in print at the producer and distributor won't help the exhibitor one particle nor will it avail the producer and distributor to shout back denials and recriminations. We might print volumes of such letters and statements and still be right back where we started.

THERE'S only one possible way to solve these very broad vital problems and that is for these dominant branches of the industry to arrange, through an association, for systematic and emergency conferences at which disagreements and misunderstandings can be threshed and settled in a thorough-going, business-like manner.

The new National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, just formed, upon a charter and by-laws framed carefully by an impartial, hard-working, honest-minded committee of twelve, and which will be presented at Chicago for the consideration of the Exhibitors' Convention, offers just this opportunity.

It bridges the big gap now standing between exhibitor and producer. To do this was one of the prime reasons why the Association was started—and it does it.

LET the exhibitor clearly understand the fundamentals of this association.

It is, in fact, a federation, an alliance of the main branches of this industry. It gives to each its own self-government. It says to each: go ahead and organize and run your own affairs. It encourages, by every means possible, the development of these various bodies; for instance, it emphasizes the importance of the M. P. E. L. of America and stimulates its development by stating that exhibitors may only become members of the National Association through first being members in good standing of the M. P. E. L. of America.

SO it encourages the organization of each branch of the industry into a firmly knit active body; but it also arranges that each shall be brought into active conference and co-operation with the other whenever disturbances threaten within or without the industry.

This systematic and emergency conference basis will be of inestimable advantage to exhibitors, and to producers. It is absolutely the only solution of present and future difficulties disturbing equally the business welfare of each.

TO the exhibitors who have written us such heated arraignments of present exchange methods I should say: it is your first duty to go to Chicago, if you possibly can. Become a member of and help organize your own body. Then help to federate your exhibitors' organization into a national association of the industry.

This will give you your first opportunity to lay your grievance before the manufacturers—not one but all the manufacturers. You do not have to deal with an exchange, which may admit you are right but is helpless to help you.

You can take your complaint direct to headquarters and you will get the weighty consideration of an entire organization.

YOU have never had this opportunity before. You can have it now. And it is your only hope. Organization and organization alone can straighten out for you the undoubted business fallacies and looseness which prevail in this business and affect, every day, your box office receipts.

You have got to enter into a trade association.

VOL. XIV July 22, 1916 No. 3

Once More the Picture Is Political Prey; When Will This Cease, and Where?

CONGRESS has again singled out the motion picture business as fair prey. This time the exhibitor is pounced upon, and is in danger of being ordered to stand and deliver, while other businesses are disregarded. Handled with the accustomed celerity of statesmen who govern by snap judgment, when they are not governing with simple injustice, the new Federal revenue bill, carrying a graduated tax on picture theatres, was brought into the House July 5, and the final vote on the measure announced for July 8—just three days.

The inference is easily drawn: the House had no intention whatever of losing this chance to bleed the picture theatres, and they did not propose to give the exhibitor a chance to present his side of the case, if they could help it. Some exhibitors did protest, but the great majority did not. How could they on such short notice?

BUT the measure is still to be passed by the Senate. And MOTION PICTURE NEWS urges every exhibitor to inform himself of the terms of the bill, if he has not already done so, and immediately bring pressure to bear upon the Senators from his State. Turn to page 429 of this issue and you will discover just what condign punishment the statesmen have in store for you next.

The new bill seeks to treble the present war emergency tax upon your theatre. Your business is already heavily burdened. Do you think it will stand any additional burdens? And note this: whether you are an exhibitor in a town of five hundred population, or of one hundred thousand population, you will not be allowed to escape. No, the House purposes making this piece of injustice as comprehensive as possible.

WE call your attention also to the specious argument back of this performance. They say that the motion picture theatre should pay because it is a luxury, but they overlook the automobile, the tobacco, and other lines of business which are assuredly luxuries. They pick you out because they think you offer one easy solution of the financial difficulties into which the Administration has got itself.

We urge you to protest, following the lead of Dr. William P. Herbst, Harry M. Crandall and other prominent Washington exhibitors, and the Dayton theatre managers, whose letter to Senator Harding is printed in this issue on page 409.

DR. HERBST, who is ex-president of the Washington, D. C., Exhibitors' League, has sent the following letter to Representative Meeker, of Missouri:

My dear Mr. Congressman:

Permit me to present my views relative to the proposed tax on the gross receipts of theatres, etc., as included in the general revenue bill introduced by Hon. Claude Kitchin.

Moving pictures are distinctly a "poor people's" amusement and an increased tax under the present high cost of doing business will necessitate an increase in the price of admission to the shows patronized by that class of people who can ill afford to pay more. The sphere of the movies has been primarily to not only amuse but educate just these people whom the high cost of living prevents from paying fancy prices for this amusement and education. The five-cent show admittedly has been an important factor in the uplift of the community through its power of education. Continued taxation will eventually put the popular "nickel" show beyond the reach of the people. When the admission is raised to ten, fifteen, and twenty-five cents, beyond the reach of these poor people, it is but natural that the communities that have felt the influence for good in the "movies" will simply revert to the old order of things, and instead of having the united family enjoying an amusement within their means, father and husband will go back to the saloon where they spent their time before they acquired the habit of going to the "movies" with their families.

ON the other hand, in behalf of the exhibitors, will say I do not deem it compatible with the best interests of the country to hinder the growth of a business as vast as the moving picture industry by heavy and to say the least, unjust taxation. The present cost of doing business is very high. In fact were the proposed tax on gross receipts enforced, in the present condition of the country, many exhibitors would be forced to pay revenue when their receipts were actually below their expenses. It is not difficult to see the unfairness of this.

Many of the moving picture houses throughout the country are controlled by small corporations and as such they are already paying an income tax upon their gross profits. In addition to this, they are burdened with the emergency internal revenue tax, their local license fees, their real estate and equipment taxes. All throughout the country, city and state taxes are already heavy and additional burdens will work a hardship upon the "movie-man" who contrary to general belief, is making but a very small profit in comparison to the amount of investment.

I trust you will see the justice of these views and be governed accordingly.

Believe me, with expressions of esteem,

Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM P. HERBST, President,
Circle Amusement Company, Inc.

Hon. Jacob E. Meeker, M.C.,
House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.

Dr. Herbst's argument gets down to the fundamentals of the question, from the exhibitor's point of view. A similar protest should be made by you—and at once—to the Senators from your State.

The Organization, Whose Ramifications Now Extend Throughout the Country, Ranks in Importance with Similar Bodies in Other Industries, and Reached Its Present Standing Only After Six Years of Hard Work on the Part of Its Members—The Difficulties Overcome to Gain This Position for the Association Would Have Discouraged Men with Less Tenacity of Purpose

By George H. Wiley

Editor's Note.—The historical account of the formation and development of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, on this and the following pages, is, it is believed, a real and valuable contribution to film trade history. Motion Picture News takes this opportunity to extend to Mr. Wiley, the compiler of the article, its sincere thanks for the service he has rendered to all its readers. George H. Wiley was national secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America during 1913-1914. He is an unquestioned authority on all matters pertaining to the league from its formation to the present day, and without his co-operation, such an article as this would not only have been incomplete, but impossible of preparation.

ONE spring morning in 1910, rather more than six years ago, exhibitors in various towns and cities of Ohio, paused in the perusal of their morning mail to read a letter that was somewhat out of the ordinary routine. Some answered it punctually. Others laid it aside, intending to reply, and forgot.

A few days later, other Ohio exhibitors received similar communications, with much the same result. As weeks went by, the campaign grew until it had included seven hundred motion picture theatre managers of the Buckeye State.

The idea behind the letters was Organization. Sitting in a little office in Cincinnati, the man who had conceived the idea and had the courage to put it to the test watched and awaited developments. They were slow—discouragingly slow. There was little of promise, less of performance. Had he struck too soon?

Were the exhibitors of Ohio—and of the United States ready for a national exhibitors organization? The man had already answered the question in his own mind. Could he convince his fellow-exhibitors that he was, of necessity, right?

First Call for Organization Sounded

He would know on September 12. That was the date set for the first convention of exhibitors Ohio had ever known. If earnest letters, if the generous assistance the newspapers gave him, could bring him success, then he meant to have it. Throughout the summer every exhibitor in Ohio was urged to come to Columbus, and help to make the convention at the Southern Hotel what it ought to be.

When he faced the eleven exhibitors who responded in person to the call, on that September day, Marion A. Neff might have been pardoned for making the situation spell failure, but he never would have pardoned himself for it. Disappointment was one thing; defeat was another. And no one who ever knew Neff accused him of counting one disappointment as a defeat.

Then and there he resolved that the eleven men in that room should become the nucleus of the organization he dreamed. Had there been but three, his resolution would have been the same. On the spot, the twelve exhibitors proceeded to form themselves into a body, elected temporary officers, and promptly issued a call for a second meeting in November, when permanent officers were to be elected. During these two months the founders of the league bent every effort to increasing the attendance at the November meeting. The result was something more than a sixty per cent. increase, and when the pioneers of the organization assembled at the Hotel Chittenden, in Columbus in November, their ranks had swelled to eighteen.

The temporary officers had been: President, M. A. Neff, Cincinnati; vice-president, W. A. Pittis, Conneaut; secretary, F. A. Buesche, Steubenville; treasurer, W. O. Yard, Welston.

Marion A. Neff, First President

Mr. Neff was re-elected president. Mr. Pittis was chosen as first vice-president, and his associate as second vice-president was T. P. Rickert, of Port Clinton. C. C. Carter, of Cincinnati, replaced Mr. Buesche as secretary, and G. O. Dupis, of Lima, succeeded Mr. Yard as treasurer; the latter's death was reported to the convention while it was in session.

The new league was still an infant, albeit an undeniably growing one, when the third meeting was held in Columbus, and a feeling of elation kindled the senior members as they realized that ten other exhibitors took their seats beside them.

Even at the fourth meeting, the new organization could hardly be said to have passed beyond the danger of a "relapse," but every sign pointed to vigorous health and gaining strength. The example of persistent effort set by the discriminating few who first responded to the call was beginning to have its effect upon the slothful and the doubters through Ohio. Plans for a sweeping membership campaign were taken up, perfected and ratified at this meeting, and President Neff drew the enthusiasm of the gathering to a head when he recommended the issuance of a call for a national convention to be held in Cleveland, August 1, 1911. It was accepted with cheers.

On how sound a basis the optimism of the national officers rested, and how well their confidence in the exhibitor's appreciation of organization benefits was rewarded, may be judged from the following table. Each of the states enumerated below was represented by delegates at Cleveland, and charters were granted upon the basis of avowed membership, as follows:

State.	No.	Membership.
Ohio	1	440
Illinois	2	230
Pennsylvania	3	137
Michigan	4	41
Indiana	5	114
West Virginia	6	65
Wisconsin	7	30

August 6, 1911, was the date of the granting of the first charters, and on that day the league numbered on its rolls one thousand and fifty-seven members. Neff's judgment was vindicated. The patience and endeavors of his associates had borne abundant fruit. In less than one year the league had not only increased its membership nearly one thousand per cent.—it had become a national body. Its first name, "The Exhibitors League" was dropped, to be supplanted by "The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America."

Every Man Puts His Shoulder to the Wheel

Heartening as the victory was, it had been an uphill fight, with more than one deadlock, more than one peril of backsliding. That it was so decisively won, was due in large measure to the wholeheartedness of those few men who gave unstintedly of their time and their money, to preach and make converts to the gospel of organization.

There was no thought of emolument; every officer gave his services gladly to the organization. There were expenses, too, which taxed the tiny treasury of the League—would have overtaxed it, had not the determined officials vied with each other in meeting them out of their own pockets, satisfied if only the results followed in some appreciable measure. Thanks to President Neff, the League had a headquarters that first year—donated by the president himself. Altogether, it was a year to be justly proud of, both in effort and attainment. Mr. Neff was again elected president; C. M. Christenson, of Cleveland, secretary; J. J. Rieder, of Jackson, Mich., treasurer.

Not the least important business transacted at Cleveland was the resolution to hold the third convention in Chicago, at the La Salle Hotel, August 12, 1912.

The year 1911-1912 was a busy year, and a brilliant one, for the League and its leaders. Seven state branches had been welded together into a solid group at Cleveland. During the twelve months' interval that ensued, six more were added, and seven others applied for admission and were accepted before the convention of 1912 was dissolved.

On March 26, 1912, the District of Columbia asked to be admitted to the league. As Branch No. 8 she entered with thirty members. On the same day Missouri was enrolled as State Branch No. 9, forty members strong. Thirty days later Kentucky joined the confederation, and added thirty-one names to the league roster. New York, No. 11, California, No. 12, and New Jersey, No. 13, came into the feld within ten days of each other, in June. When President Neff called the delegates to order in the convention hall of the La Salle Hotel, they represented a total membership of 1,674 in good standing.

The membership table of the six new branches was:

Date.	State.	Branch No.	Members.
March 26,	District of Columbia	8	30
March 26,	Missouri	9	40
April 26,	Kentucky	10	31
June 10,	California	12	84
June 19,	New York	11	400
June 20,	New Jersey	13	32

Convention of 1912 Important Event

In many respects the 1912 convention was the high-water mark of the Exhibitors' League. It boasted the largest attendance of visiting bona fide exhibitors ever gathered together by an exhibitors' convention—and that record still stands untouched. The manufacturers of film and accessories rose to the occasion, and co-operated with the league in generous fashion. An entire floor was given over to accessory displays at the hotel. Enthusiasm was everywhere abundant. The exhibits did an uniformly good business during the exposition.

During the convention, seven states applied for charters. They were granted to Alabama, as State Branch No. 14; Louisiana, No. 15; Iowa, No. 16; Minnesota, No. 17; Texas, No. 18; Nebraska, No. 19; Nevada, No. 20.

The 1912 convention and exposition was one that will not be soon forgotten—and for one particular reason. It was in the big banquet hall of the La Salle Hotel, that year, that Mr. Neff first urged the adoption of state boards of censorship as the remedy for a condition which was then growing more and more menacing to the welfare and prosperity of both exhibitors and manufacturers.

Whatever may have been thought at the time or during the subsequent years prior to his death, of the man's sincerity in advocating a movement which is now universally conceded to have brought nothing but disaster instead of relief, there seems, at this time, to be no real reason for questioning Mr. Neff's good faith. Mr. Neff, in undoubted sincerity, offered what he believed to be the effective solution to a problem which at that time called for immediate and radical action. He surveyed the field critically and impartially. He became convinced that the National Board of Censorship was not equal to the task of regulating films for every city, town, village and hamlet in the country. He could not conceive of any way in which that body could be made so. And he was, in common with everyone of his contemporaries and associates in the motion picture business, appalled by the number of arrogant local boards springing up everywhere—nowhere more abundantly than in Ohio—to the increasing detriment and discouragement of every manufacturer, exchange man and exhibitor.

Neff Wanted to Reduce Number of Censor Boards

Consider, also, that Mr. Neff did not believe that censorship could be absolutely exterminated. Perhaps he was too close to the situation to see that possibility. Suffice it to say that his thought went no further than a plan to reduce the number of censorship boards to a minimum. That was—it must have been the nucleus of his demand for state censorship boards.

Once having convinced himself that his project was feasible, he set out, characteristically, to convince the League of the same thing. And with his equally characteristic ability to present an argument in its most plausible and attractive terms he succeeded in winning a strong section of the League to his views.

Less than a year later Neff's speech at the La Salle Hotel bore fruit in the shape of the law passed by the Ohio legislature in 1913 creating a state board of censors for motion pictures. By a coincidence it was at the third national convention, held at the Grand Central Palace, in July of that same year—the censorship bill passed the legislature at Columbus in May—that the League was rent asunder, and several state delegations withdrew to form another organization.

Nevertheless, there was almost complete unanimity and harmony throughout the Chicago meeting, and it was with little difficulty—although the electioneering was lively enough to be interesting to those "in the know"—that Messrs. Neff, Christenson and Rieder were re-elected to their respective offices.

Before the convention adjourned, it was voted that the Third National Convention and Exposition be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York City, July 7 to 12, 1913.

If it is darkest before dawn, it is also sometimes brightest before a storm. The year 1912-1913 was in many respects the most fruitful year in achievement that the League ever had. The number of state branches was almost doubled during that period and the membership increased by about two-thirds. Evidences of strength were apparent on all sides. Success seemed to crown the efforts of the administration, in whatever direction they were directed.

Table of Membership Indicates League Activities

A glance at the table below, enumerating the states that were enrolled during that year, with their membership at the time of enrollment, will indicate what the activities of the League were.

States	Branch No.	Membership
Massachusetts	21	78
Tennessee	22	5
Oklahoma	23	29
Arkansas	24	19
Kansas	25	50
Mississippi	26	13
South Carolina	27	5
Canada	28	5
Maine	29	31
Rhode Island	30	5
Connecticut	31	5
Colorado	32	5
Florida	33	5
South Dakota	34	16
Washington (State)	35	26
Maryland	36	48
Delaware	37	5
Virginia	38	5
Georgia	39	5
Arizona	40	5

The presence of the number five in the last column of the table is explained by the fact that five members was the minimum number required to make the application for a state charter valid.

When the third convention was called to order in July, 1913, the membership rolls disclosed a grand total of 2,427 exhibitors, comprising forty state branches in good standing. It was high noon for the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America.

The storm center of the 1913 convention was the election of officers. That the dissatisfaction had been growing for some time preceding the arrival of the delegates in New York was early apparent. Without going into the details of the situation, the roots of the dissatisfaction were to be found in the attitude of certain groups toward the national administration of the league, and the violent opposition of many exhibitors in every section of the country to Mr. Neff's censorship propaganda.

Ohio exhibitors had already had a taste of state censorship, and there was by no means the unanimity among the exhibitors of the Buckeye state in favor of censorship that had been commonly supposed to exist. Other censorship laws in other states were pending or in passage—that too in states where the hostility to it had been undeniable from the start—and this was traced back to Mr. Neff's agitation.

Demand Re-election of Neff

The feeling on the subject took concrete form in the demand that Mr. Neff should not be re-elected. The opposition presented J. S. Phillips, of Fort Worth, Texas, as candidate for national president.

The tension during the nominations, which ran higher and higher as the balloting proceeded, might have been taken as a forecast of what was coming. It came when the Texas delegation cast its vote.

The branches voted in numerical order, Ohio, No. 1, first, and so on. The Texas men, voting eighteenth, were considered by the opposition sure-fire for Phillips, himself a Texas exhibitor. But the eight from the Lone Star State arose and cast their votes solid for Neff. There was dead silence for a moment. Then pandimonium broke loose. A score of men were on their feet at once, demanding the floor. Accusations and counter-accusations were hurled back and forth across the convention hall while the chair in vain strove to bring order out of the babel.

At length, at the very height of the furore, a group of delegates arose and started for the door of the hall, while those who remained seated wondered what was to happen next. When the doors finally closed on the bolting delegates, it was found that Indiana, Illinois, New York, Minnesota and Wisconsin had chosen that answer to the certain re-election of the Neff ticket. They represented a membership of approximately 900 members. A majority of Pennsylvania delegates followed in their lead and that state was always considered as one of the bolting states, especially the western portion.

The bolting delegates lost no time in calling a convention of their own, in a room in the same building and elected Charles H. Phillips of Milwaukee, president. The new organization took the name of the International Motion Picture Association.

The balloting in the league convention was resumed after a brief delay occasioned by the confusion that followed the bolt, and when it was over, Mr. Neff had as colleagues for his third term, George H. Wiley, of Kansas City, Mo., secretary and J. J. Rieder, Jackson, Mich., treasurer.

Convention Is a Success, However

Notwithstanding the unfortunate outcome of the election, the convention, all things considered, was a distinct success. The attendance of visiting exhibitors was not what it had been at Chicago in 1912, but the public supported the exposition generously with its presence and complaints were gratifyingly few when the affair came to a close.

Before the convention was fairly over, the league leaders realized grimly the size and nature of the task cut out for them. They buckled down to it with commendable energy. There was no disposition to concede one iota more of importance to the dissension that had disrupted the New York convention than facts compelled. Certainly there was no pessimism.

With full comprehension of the obstacles in their path, President Neff and Secretary Wiley set out to repair the damage done and strengthen the ranks of the league as in previous years. Indefatigably they toured the country, and with every resource they possessed strove to kindle organization enthusiasm and leave growing state leagues behind them when they departed. Some success attended their efforts. But the bitterness of feeling in the states that had withdrawn in July did not lessen with the passing months, and in more than one instance it nearly brought to nought the efforts of the national officials. Had funds been plentiful, the result might have been different. But the sinews of a vigorous national campaign, such as only could have saved the situation in its entirety, were lacking, and though Mr. Neff and Mr. Wiley did not hesitate to piece out expense deficiencies from their personal funds, their ability in this direction was necessarily limited.

New State Branches Formed During the Year

Neverthless, new state branches were formed and new charters issued during the year to New York, Illinois and Wisconsin to replace the branches that had withdrawn. A similar effort was made to reorganize Minnesota, but only partial success was obtained, and the attempt was finally abandoned.

If the year brought disappointment to the league, it at all events brought some disillusionments to the new association. As time went on, it became increasingly apparent that there was no real reason for two exhibitor bodies, both calling themselves 'national,' to exist in direct rivalry and opposition to each other. It became equally apparent that the newcomer could never exterminate the parent organization, that the dissension had only tended in many instances to entrench many doubting exhibitors in their skepticism toward both organizations, and that matters were practically at a deadlock, so far as expansion by either one was concerned.

Thus it happened that by the time the date for the holding of the International convention and exposition in New York at the Grand Central Palace—June 6-13, 1914—had arrived the spirit of mediation was in the air. It was later crystallized into action on the floor of that convention. A committee of seven delegates was appointed by the association to attend the League Convention at Dayton in July, assurances having previously been received that their coming would be welcomed and they themselves greeted in the spirit in which they came.

Power Given Delegates to Weld Dissenting Bodies

Power was given the seven men to act without restriction for the consolidation of the two bodies. The men chosen for this important mission were fully capable of discharging it in the highest possible manner. They were William J. Sweeney, of Chicago; Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh; Frank Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind.; Samuel H. Trigger, of New York; Judge A. P. Tugwell, of Los Angeles; Sam Bullock, of Cleveland, O., and President Charles H. Phillips, of Milwaukee. Thomas Furniss, of Duluth, who was to have served on the committee, was prevented from accepting by urgent business matters.

The Fourth National Convention and Third Motion Picture Exposition opened at Dayton July 6, 1914, about a month after the gathering at the Grand Central Palace in New York.

The year had been a hard and thorny one for the League. Its membership had fallen nearly fifty per cent during the twelve months of dissension, until only a membership of 1,327 exhibitors was represented by the delegates who took their seats at Dayton. The state branch of Maine had withdrawn during the year. Several others had been suspended for non-payment of dues. The branches which were in good standing at the time of the Dayton convention were Ohio, Kansas, Maryland, Oklahoma, California, Nebraska, Kentucky, New York (new charter), Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin (new charter), Florida, Louisiana, Illinois (new charter), Texas, District of Columbia, Alabama, Arkansas, Virginia, Oregon, North and South Carolina.

From forty branches the membership had dwindled to twenty-two, though during the year Oregon was admitted as State Branch No. 41, with seventeen members, and North Carolina as No. 42, with thirty-nine members.

Everybody Ready for Amalgamation

For that and other equally good reasons, amalgamation was no less popular a word at Dayton than it had been at New York. The futility of the struggle had become evident, and the leaders were too solicitous for the future of exhibitor organization, as a practical and prosperous fact, to permit personal differences or past animosities to hinder the reunion of the divided groups.

The international committee of seven were met by President Neff and Secretary Wiley, Orene Parker, of Covington, Ky.; Peter Jeup, of Detroit, Mich.; T. P. Finnegan, of Dallas, Tex.; R. L. McNab, of New York, and M. E. Cory, of San Francisco, Cal.

A conference behind closed doors immediately followed the exchange of courtesies. Opposition to all forms of legalized censorship was seen to be one condition of consolidation. The infusion of new blood into the executive places of the League was laid down as another. Having come to a preliminary mutual understanding, the two committees set another date, a few days away, for a second conference and adjourned.

This second conference was held July 7. Three days later, July 10, amalgamation was an accomplished fact, and the breach of a year was finally healed, as far as the committees were concerned.

The way for this vital action had been paved when President Marion A. Neff declined to run for re-election and Marion S. Pearce, of Baltimore, was nominated as the fusion candidate. Mr. Pearce's election was unanimous, as was that of the slate he carried into office with him. His associates on the successful ticket were First Vice-President T. P. Finnegan, Texas; Second Vice-President Mark E. Cory, of California; Treasurer Peter J. Jeup, of Michigan; Secretary W. R. Wilson, of Ohio.

Four places on the enlarged executive board of nine members were to be filled, it was resolved, from the ranks of the international. For these positions Judge Tugwell, William J. Sweeney, Charles H. Phillips and Fulton Brylawski, of Washington, D. C., were named.

In addition, sweeping resolutions were adopted against state, local or Federal censorship, and even supervision of films by the National Board of Review (then the National Board of Censorship) was denounced.

To say that both sides felt profound relief at the result would be putting it mildly.

No one pretended that the Dayton convention had been the success its predecessors were. The number of exhibitors in attendance was discouragingly small, the manufacturers of film and accessories had not obtained results commensurate with the outlay required for their exhibits, and it was felt that it would be disastrous to the future of the league if such a fiasco were to be repeated another year. From the danger of this, amalgamation saved the league and set it again in the right path.

Little Activity Before San Francisco Convention

The year preceding the San Francisco convention was one of little league activity and enthusiasm. Marion S. Pearce had been elected president at Dayton upon an amalgamated platform. However, amalgamation really never took place. The old league spirit seemed gone and with no funds to work with President Pearce faced a rather dismal outlook. His own large business interests in Baltimore took up most of his time. However, he bent to the task with spirit and self-sacrifice and traveled about considerably over the country, going as far west as Kansas City in an effort to build up the various state and local organizations. Very little however was accomplished. No new state organizations were formed and most of the state organizations were delinquent in their dues.

Immediately after the close of the Dayton convention, several important meetings were held in New York City by President Pearce, former National Secretary Wiley and Samuel H. Trigger of the New York branch, for the working out of plans looking to the complete amalgamation of the two bodies. These meetings were attended with only partial success.

The state international branches of New York, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana and Pennsylvania, showed a very strong disposition to carry out the amalgamation plans of the Dayton conference at once. The Minnesota state branch, in the meantime, had held their state organization intact and practically merged into a Northwest Association, embracing Minnesota and several of the adjacent states, which has developed into a very strong body.

The semi-annual meeting of the National Executive Committee was held at the Hotel McAlpin in New York in January, 1915. Besides President Pearce, the following were present: M. E. Cory of San Francisco, Secretary W. R. Wilson of Columbus, Treasurer Peter J. Jeup of Detroit, and much routine business was transacted. A Board of Trade movement was then on in New York City and a committee of the organization met with the Executive Committee in an effort to induce them to hold their convention simultaneously with an exposition to be held in New York City. The Board of Trade movement not coming to a head, however, this proposition was dismissed. President Pearce advertised in the trade papers asking the exhibitors of the country their preference as to a time and place for the National Convention of 1915. The majority of the replies favored San Francisco, so this city was selected, ratifying the action of the Dayton Convention.

Cory Chairman of Convention Committee

M. E. Cory of San Francisco was chairman of the convention committee and elaborate preparations were made for the holding of an exposition and convention July 13-16, 1915. The exhibitors however did not respond as had been expected. The attendance at the convention did not exceed two hundred and nearly all of these exhibitors came from California and more particularly the immediate section in and around San Francisco. Except for the exhibitor attendance, which was decidedly disappointing, the convention and exposition was well conducted and full of interest. Prominent producers were present and spoke, the chief topic being that of censorship. Prominent stars from Los Angeles attended the convention ball. It was stated at the time that more exhibitors were present at the Elks Convention in Los Angeles than at their own National Convention in San Francisco, indicating pretty clearly that league membership at the time did not include a very large number of exhibitors who had the means to travel to the coast and with organizations able to take care of their business while they were away.

The following members of the executive committee were present: Marion S. Pearce, Judge A. P. Tugwell of Los Angeles, Peter J. Jeup of Detroit and M. E. Cory of San Francisco.

President Pearce declined re-election, stating that his health would not permit him to assume the extra burden of the position. It was felt that a very active leader was necessary and the choice of the convention was Fred Herrington of Pittsburgh. M. E. Cory was elected vice president; L. W. Brophy of Muskogee, Okla., second vice president; and Peter J. Jeup of Detroit treasurer. The election of a secretary was left to the executive committee as was also the time and place of the holding of the next national convention. Later the executive committee elected James Delves of Pittsburgh national secretary, and national headquarters were opened in the Apollo Building, Pittsburgh.

President Pearce's Suggestion Ratified

It was President Pearce's suggestion and his suggestion was ratified by the executive committee, that the secretary should be paid a salary which would compensate him for his time and efforts expended, and also enable him to act as a field organizer with headquarters in New York City.

President Herrington confronted the same obstacles and difficulties, very little co-operation and lack of funds, as did President Pearce. He started work immediately after his election and has been at it ever since with untiring courage. He has traveled all over the country, endeavored to inspire organization at the various state and local conventions and fought the battle of the exhibitor whenever an issue arose. He deserves the unlimited thanks of the organization and exhibitors in general for his sincere belief in organization and his self-sacrificing efforts to bring it about against such heavy odds.

It is with interest that the writer awaits the gathering of the delegates in Chicago, and the reports of the work that the Herrington administration has accomplished.

How to Advertise Your Theatre by Mail

By Harold S. Hodes
Manager Sales Promotion, Universal Film Manufacturing Company

WHEN Bill Jones finally realized that all his efforts to make his theatre a paying proposition represented just so much wasted energy and cash, he sat down and took stock of the situation.

"The town's a good town," he said to himself, "but competition is awful. Because I've had to do it or quit business, I've given away more groceries, drygoods and hardware than the average merchant sells. And, in my efforts to bust at least one of my competitors I've spent so much money on features, eleven or dozen-reel shows and novelty performances that my bankroll is about as fat as the flanks of a timber wolf after a long, hard winter!

"And so," concluded Bill, as he reached for the letters that the mail man had just shoved into the booth, "the question before the house is, shall I continue to die a lingering financial death or shall I shut up shop and hold on to the few pennies I've still got?"

As Bill glanced through the contents of the first two letters his gloom increased visibly. They were bills. The third letter was from a local tailoring shop and even though Bill stood in no great need of a suit, so cleverly was the opening paragraph of the letter worded that he went on reading it.

Circular Letter Gives Despairing Exhibitor Hope

The writer of the circular letter would have been tickled clear through could he have seen the effect it had upon Jones. The exhibitor carefully laid the letter down after he had finished reading it, slowly leaned back in his chair and allowed his eyes to wander towards the ceiling of the booth. After about two minutes of deep thought, Bill picked the letter up and read it through once more.

"Let's see," he murmured to himself. "If my friend Higgins finds it profitable to send out a thousand, or more, letters to prospective clothes buyers, why wouldn't it be profitable for me to send out as many letters to prospective picture fans?

"Now, I've tried almost everything else that a real showman would think of. I've ballyhooed with the rest of my competitors. I've handed out enough circulars to reach from here to Chee Foo, China. While, as for my house organ, it carpets the floor of my theatre regularly. Darned if I don't give this idea a try-out."

So Bill Jones discarded the tried, and frequently found wanting, methods of the "showman," and experimented with direct advertising. Did it bring him a hatful of money from the start? It did NOT. But what it did do was to bring enough results to justify another attempt.

For one thing, Bill discovered that for the first time in his experience as an exhibitor, he was able to send his message right into the home of every one of his prospective patrons. He also found that the letter "got over" more effectively than his newspaper advertisements because, unlike the latter, it was not compelled to battle for attention in competition with other advertisements. Furthermore, the circumstances under which it was read made his mailed message more effective than any other form of advertising he had ever used.

Bill Jones "Mobilizes" a Mailing List

But, to go back a bit, the first thing Bill Jones did after arriving at his decision to try direct advertising was to compile a mailing list. This was easier than he thought it would be.

Mobilizing his house staff, Bill instructed them to visit every house within a certain radius of his theatre and to copy the names contained in the letter boxes. In addition to this, Jones hit upon the idea of requesting his patrons, via the screen, to leave their names and addresses at the box office. The slide he used read something like this:

"If you want to know when your favorite stars appear at this theatre, leave your name and address at the box office."

It wasn't long before Bill found himself in possession of a mailing list of respectable size. This list was swelled by the names called from the membership posters of the various organizations that were located near his theatre. Then, his mailing list compiled, Bill sat down and commenced working on the letter that was to be shot out to his prospective patrons.

The one thing that had impressed Jones at the time he read the tailor's circular letter was its humaness—the manner in which the writer had succeeded in making his letter read like a personal talk.

"It's full of 'you-and-me' stuff," was the way Bill put it, in analyzing the letter. "If I can put the same stuff into my letter, maybe the people who get it will overlook the fact that it is an advertisement."

So Bill wrote his letter as though the persons it was to reach were right in front of him. He wasn't a "clever" writer by any means, but he did manage to imbue his message with sincerity. And, knowing how he himself classed the exaggerated statements in the advertisements he read, he did his best to keep adjectives down to the minimum.

Mr. Exhibitor Does a Little Figuring

His letter written, Bill's next step was to learn how much it would cost him to have a thousand copies multigraphed. This was two dollars, and figuring the cost of the stationery and envelopes to be about six dollars, the letters in their completed state represented an outlay of eight dollars. Postage (it was his plan to send the letters through first class mail) amounted to twenty dollars.

"Now," said Bill, in going over his campaign, "I wonder whether it would be possible for me to get a machine that would address my envelopes for me. If I have them done by hand, I'll have to fork up $2.50 every time I send a letter out. It would pay me, in the long run, to buy a machine if I can get one cheap."

Anxious to get his campaign under way, however, Bill went right ahead and mailed his letter without waiting to purchase an addressing machine. Besides, he desired to make sure whether direct advertising would bring him an increase in business.

A week later, Jones was prepared to go ahead. He found a small and compact machine that met his requirements to a tee. Its cost was in the neighborhood of fifty dollars. Figuring upon sending out one letter per week, Bill decided that the outlay was worth while since the apparatus would pay for itself in twenty weeks.

The name plates were the next highest item of expense, the thousand names, stamped on metal, costing him about thirty-five dollars. They could be used almost indefinitely, however, and therefore would have paid for themselves many times over before ready for the scrap heap.

But, to return to Jones' first letter, here is what happened when Mrs. Brown, whose name had found its way into the exhibitor's list, found it in her mail. Mrs. Brown couldn't remember ever having received a letter from a photoplay theatre. For this reason, Bill's first attempt at direct advertising immediately made an impression. Second, while she had frequently seen the various advertising efforts put forth by the photoplay houses in the community, these were addressed to the great body of fans and so generally failed to touch a responsive chord, so far as she was concerned.

His Letter Appealed to Her Personally

While crude, perhaps, Jones' letter, written in simple, forceful language, spoke to her personally. The result was that Mrs. Brown made up her mind to see the show that had aroused such enthusiasm on the part of the writer—and she did not go alone.

Before long, Bill discovered that his letters brought people to his theatre who had never visited it before. And because his name was signed to them, his patrons got into the habit of asking for him. The fact that he was always to be seen in front of his theatre, coupled with his genial personality and his evident effort to please, won for Jones a decidedly profitable following.

It was to be expected that the other exhibitors in the neighborhood would adopt Jones' methods, but the pioneer's start enabled him to hold on to his people in spite of the fact that his competitors were almost bursting their bloodvessels in addition to their pocketbooks in frantic efforts to catch up with him.

Once he discovered how valuable an ally Uncle Sam's postal system could be, Jones did not confine his direct advertising efforts to letters. Postcards containing the weekly schedule proved valuable, though it speedily became apparent that, to be thoroughly efficient, they had to be gotten up by a printer who knew his business. Bill wasn't long in learning that a program that merely represented a sloppy mess of assorted type was speedily discarded, while a postcard program, presenting an attractive appearance was generally saved for a day or two at least.

Bearing in mind the fact that his house organs were, as a rule, thrown away by the patrons after each performance. Bill wondered whether he couldn't endow the booklets with a longer period of usefulness. An idea came to him while glancing over the magazine section of his local newspaper.

House Organ and Letters Mailed Together

The following week the house organ was sent out in the letters which were regularly mailed to Jones' patrons. In place of the items containing unimportant and unbelievable information concerning the players, Bill saw to it that the gossip of the stars published in his house organ was worth while. In addition to this, he ran interesting household recipes culled from magazines and newspapers. That the latter was a popular feature was apparent from the fact that fans frequently asked for copies of the booklets to replace those that had been mislaid and which contained certain recipes. Bill gladly complied with such requests, figuring that it was good advertising to have his house organ before his patrons' eyes.

Best of all was the discovery that, as the result of his direct advertising campaign, a better class of people was being attracted to his theatre. These people weren't at all interested in country stores and propositions of a like nature. Nor did they care for long, drawn-out shows. A program that lasted for perhaps an hour and a quarter was just about right—and so Bill found himself ahead on his film rental bills.

Bill laughed when his brother Bob, who owned a theatre in a neighboring city, asked him for the secret of his success one day. "Nothing secret about it whatever," he replied, "I've simply graduated out of the 'showman' class. You know what I mean—the class made up of exhibitors who believe in the effectiveness of cheap ballyhooing and flashy advertising methods."

Business Principles of Successful Merchant Applied to Theatre

"Analyze my methods and you will find that I am pursuing the same business principles as does any successful merchant. The same principles that will bring business to a tailoring establishment or a department store, will bring business to a moving picture theatre.

"I've done my all-firedest to make my house reflect MY personality, just as John Wanamaker's Philadelphia and New York stores reflect his personality. Letters have enabled me to bring this about because they put me into closer touch with my patrons and when other exhibitors realize how powerful an assistant in this respect they have in Uncle Sam, they'll work him and work him hard.

"Now, unless I have something extra-special on tap," Bill continued, "I mail but one letter a week. I figure that if the fans visit my house for one performance as the result of my letter, they will, in all probability drop in to see other shows during the same week.

"My direct advertising amounts to twenty-eight dollars every week. When I inclose my house organ in a letter, it boosts it about twelve dollars—the cost of getting up the thousand booklets. However, I've got to have the latter whether I use them in connection with my letters, or merely distribute them in the ordinary, inefficient fashion. To come right down to brass tacks, my direct advertising really costs me nothing, since I used to pay what it amounts to, to the exchanges that formerly supplied me with the old eleven or twelve-reel daily service.

"To sum up, Bob, the time is coming when every one of the big film organizations will maintain departments that will cooperate with exhibitors who seek to build up their business by means of direct advertising. One company, Universal, is doing that very thing right now. But, my advice to exhibitors is that instead of waiting for other film companies to get on the job, let them get busy as I did, and tackle this proposition now!"

How to Make the House Organ Effective

By Oscar Cooper

THE house organ is the exhibitor's own personal message to the public. On the one hand, it is a weekly or monthly catalogue of merchandise; on the other, a news medium. The best house organs combine these two elements, and recognize each as indispensable.

Through his theatre the exhibitor is selling entertainment, in the shape of

I. Individual pictures.
II. Music and other forms of enjoyment.
III. The comforts of the theatre itself.

These three things are his wares. In disposing of them to the people of his community he is in the position of a merchant. That is why we said that the house organ, in the first instance, is a catalogue of merchandise.

But this is not all. The exhibitor is also selling interest in the whole picture industry—at every angle that touches his patrons. The pictures which he flashes on his screen week in and week out represent, in miniature, the industry of which they are a part. Their stories, the players who appear in them, their especial features of atmosphere or of setting, and the thousand other things which arise in their production and presentation are items of news—news of a big and growing industry. And the house organ is peculiarly the place to put the picture fan in intimate touch with the industry, thereby increasing his interest in the pictures which his exhibitor shows.

House Organ Must Be News Medium

No house organ which fails to realize its possibilities as a news medium is a complete house organ. The exhibitor may have only a small four page organ, but it is not too small to carry some news, always from the human interest angle. He may be issuing a twelve page magazine or an eight page newspaper; so much greater is his chance to spread before his readers news about his pictures, news about the industry.

How can the exhibitor link up news items most effectively to the pictures he is selling to the public? In other words, just how can he make the news end of his house organ bring in business for him?

The partial answer to this question is found in examples of what progressive exhibitors are actually doing. They are printing

Short, illustrated biographies of players.
Query departments.
Brief news items about plays and players.
Scenario departments.
Special articles written by stars.

"Personal Appeal" Essential in House Organ

These are all aimed at the patron's bump of human interest, or his curiosity, or his personal vanity. They carry the personal appeal, either because they are by or about some picture personality he is interested in, or because they open the way for him to find out somthing he wants to know. And this stinging of his curiosity will certainly not keep him away from the picture theatre. On the contrary, it will give him an additional reason for visiting it. The instant you introduce the personal equation in advertising you have got hold of a highly sensitized magnet, whose pulling power is tremendous, if used aright.

But, again, this is not all. The house organ may contain all these various departments, and still fail to be effective. It must carry the personal appeal one step further by making the patron feel that the pictures shown by the exhibitor are his kind of pictures. The exhibitor must search for something new in the advertising of his wares—each one of them. And certainly he cannot do this unless, as we have said over and over again, he makes every picture a special case, to be advertised individually, and for what it is worth in itself.

The reason for this is perfectly evident: people no longer go to see pictures just because they are pictures. They are rapidly ceasing to go to see certain stars, real or near, unless they know something about the story in which the star appears. The house organ which confines itself to the description of each star as "wonderful," and each picture as a world-beater, misses fire. Exaggeration is a boomerang every time, and the exhibitor who understands that he must establish his theatre, or keep it established as a house of quality, avoids such boomerangic statements.

The evolution of the house organ is slowly but certainly away from circus methods. It is one of the most hopeful signs in the industry. A few exhibitors have blazed a trail apart from the "movie" idea, which has long been the curse of this business. Others are following, and if we take up a consideration of the trend in the house organ field we see at once these signs of improvement.

There are but two classes of house organs—"movie" and photoplay. The first may be dismissed as belonging to the old order, which will have to go—is going fast. The other class is issued by exhibitors of photoplays. Their house organs are organs of the photoplay, whether they are two page circulars or sixteen page magazines. Size is no criterion of merit, any more than length is a guarantee of worth on the screen. The essential thing is honest, intelligent advertising, presented in as attractive a way as possible, but still honest and still intelligent.

Each Exhibitor Must Work Out His Problems

The individual exhibitor has his own problems to work out. Only he knows precisely what sort of advertising is most effective in his town. But no town is too small to permit the introduction of the photoplay idea, in the house organ, as well as in the conduct of the theatre itself. And in the larger cities there is still less excuse for cheap advertising methods.

The most interesting development in house organ style during the last few months is the adoption of the newspaper form by an increasing number of exhibitor publications. Not only is this form more elastic than the old program—modeled after the legitimate theatre handbill or circular—but it permits the use of a far greater amount of type and at the same time secures proper display, both of type and of cuts. More important even, it enables the exhibitor to present his publicity in news form, with headlines that capture attention, and in a dress at once arresting and readable.

The adoption of this form also opens the way for the exhibitor to make his house organ self sustaining, because the form permits him to run local commercial advertisements, without marring the appearance or effectiveness of the whole.

Fifteen Newspaper House Organs

There are probably fifteen newspaper house organs in existence now; there will be more from time to time, as the exhibitor comes to recognize that in the advertising of pictures through the printed word, news and advertising merge. They are really the same thing in this case. How successfully the newspaper idea can be exploited in the house organ can be seen from a glance at Stage and Screen, published by the Connellan Amusement Company, Bath, Maine.

The Swanson Circuit News, Salt Lake City.

The Empress News, Owensboro, Ky.

These three, in typography, general lay-out and newsiness are thoroughly representative of what may be called the new idea in house organ publication.

No review of the house organ field would be complete without reference to the magazine style, which unquestionably will always have its place because it is most effective in certain communities. At the head of the list we have no hesitation in placing The Majestic Monthly, of Columbus, Ohio, to which we have devoted considerable space the past year. It is a magazine which combines refinement and "punch" to an unusual degree, and typographically, stands above any house organ we have seen.

There are other excellent exhibitor magazines, all of which hold to the feature style in presenting their matter: Movieland, issued by the Hulsey string of theatres in Texas; the Strand, Milwaukee; and the various uniform organs issued by the Rowland and Clark theatres, Pittsburgh. These are only a few of a long list, but we name them because they seem to us to be the best representatives of their class.

How to Gain Patronage with Newspaper Advertising

By William Walker Hines
Advertising Division, Paramount Pictures Corporation

ALL exhibitor newspaper advertising may be divided into two classes: First—Advertising aimed solely to increase the box office receipts of the photoplay or photoplays advertised to be shown at Blank's theatre. Second—Advertising aimed to not only increase the box office receipts of the photoplay or photoplays advertised, but at once to serve this purpose and to impress the reader with the consistent quality of the offerings at Smith's, and of the fact that Smith's theatre is the best place in town to spend an evening.

People Interested if You Tell What You Have

The aim of the exhibitor is to build up a steadily profitable business. Therefore, the second method of advertising is the direct method, and the first the indirect. The desired result, steadily profitable business, may be achieved by either method; but the second, or direct method, is the least expensive in time and hence in money.

The average exhibitor will say, "People are interested in the photoplays I show them and they are interested in the actors and actresses who appear in those photoplays, but they are not interested in my theatre." And that is just where the average exhibitor makes his big mistake.

People will be interested in your theatre as a theatre, and in your management of the theatre if you tell them about that theatre and that management.

Some of the best and most progressive managers of the whole country make it a rule that in every one of their advertisements a mention is made of some good point of the theatre as a theatre or of the management as a management.

Courtesy, projection, music, ventilation, afford inexhaustible topics for talks addressed to prospective patrons, and the shrewd exhibitor makes his talks convey the impression that there is nothing too good for the public and that he was the first man to find this out.

So with the advertisement of the brand of pictures that you play. Hundreds of thousands have been spent by producing and distributing companies in advertising brands of motion pictures, and the shrewd advertisers among the exhibitors have been quick to see that there was a box office reason for linking up their local advertising with the demand for these pictures, which had been created by national advertising.

And the use of the trademarks of producing and distributing companies in exhibitor advertising helps the exhibitor in another way. On the programs of most producing or distributing companies there are certain stars who can fill a house any time they appear on the screen. The use of the trademark of that company enables the exhibitor to make the popularity of the better known stars of a program pull him big business for the stars who, while probably just as talented, are not so well known.

No Longer Necessary to Advise Newspaper Advertising

To advise the exhibitor to use newspaper advertising is no longer necessary. To advise him how to use it is of increasing importance. Several thousand advertisements of motion picture exhibitors are checked over in the Paramount offices each week, and from a study of these, information as to the most effective ways of newspaper advertising has been gathered and is at the service of any Paramount exhibitor who will send in copies of his advertisements with a request for criticism. This advice is given by a man who has had practical experience and the criticism is always constructive.

But a trait of human nature comes in to make this service less effective than it should be. The man who is doing good advertising will write in asking for criticism and suggestions, while the man who is doing poor advertising goes placidly along his way, undisturbed by doubts of the effective qualities of his advertising —though he is the man who is most apt to grumble at his advertising bills and is most given to expressing doubts as to the real value of any advertising in his town or his neighborhood.

However, the good advertiser who writes in for suggestions of improvement, grabs at any good idea handed him and makes that idea work overtime for him; so the work of giving advice is not without its heartening compensations.

How to Arrange Successful Juvenile Programs

By James S. Judd, Juvenile Motion Picture News

THERE is a very good reason for the present day demand for special juvenile progress in the motion picture theatre. It is due entirely to the fact that the average theatre program is made up largely of film produced for adults.

In the book business, which has been established for a long time, they specialize for adults and for children. The same with the stage. In the motion picture industry, however, with a notable exception here and there, and comparatively speaking of small quantity, the production has been entirely for grown-ups.

Without entering into a discussion of the psychology of the juvenile mind, sensible people realize that the national demand for better pictures is largely because of the peculiar danger to children in a large percentage of the films now being displayed upon the screen. Later, when producers specialize in films adapted to children, this specific present day demand will probably disappear in the larger idea of the "family group." Then, with the coming of the family group into universal use, the producer will find it generally profitable to turn out only such film as may be shown to the family group, and the matter will take care of itself; the public will reminisce about the gold old days when they used to talk about censorship—and laugh.

In the meantime, however, there are, according to Mr. Cocks, of the National Board of Review, some 250 theatres in the United States now giving special juvenile programs. At the last convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs in New York, this subject of juvenile programs was given a great deal of attention.

Women's Clubs Interested in Juvenile Programs

A committee was appointed by the Federation to take up the matter with the 9,000 clubs representing a membership of 2,500,000 women in something like 4,500 cities of the United States. This activity is going to largely increase the demand for these special juvenile programs by Fall, if not before. For distribution at the convention the publishers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS issued a JUVENILE MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Thousands of these were distributed during the convention and by a systematic handling of the distribution, every woman's club in the United States will have one of these booklets before the summer is over. Here's an evidence of what is coming—a letter from Vermillion, South Dakota:

"JUVENILE MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been of great assistance to us in launching our juvenile programs. Our first entertainment was a success financially as well as otherwise."

In addition to the list of approved juvenile film published in JUVENILE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the women were urged to go to their local exhibitors with a commercially reasonable proposition, which was summed up as follows: The exhibitor to give a program of film acceptable to the club; the club in turn to make it worth his while through filling his house for him.

Under such a proposition a live exhibitor has a mighty good chance to break even or make money on a special entertainment for children. Even if he loses a little it will be worth while, for his house is going to get a lot of advertising, which otherwise would cost him many dollars, and this advertising is going to be worth good hard money to the exhibitor during the rest of the weeks, months and years to come.

Why wait for the club woman to come to you. Why not go to the livest Woman's Club in your town and offer to give a special juvenile program acceptable to them, if they will do the rest, and this means not only filling the house for the first performance, but in keeping at it during the period that is covered by the performances. You have got to get something more than a "God Bless You" from the club; you have got to have an assurance of continued activity. The club, in turn, ought to be well satisfied to work every conceivable source of attendance for you, which would include the daily papers, churches, schools and welfare organizations.

Juvenile Motion Picture News Only Aid

If the exhibitor is going to start the thing himself, one of the first things he will need is a list of the proper film and all the known lists thus far published have been compiled in JUVENILE MOTION PICTURE NEWS, which one of the prominent women at the convention said would be the "bible" of the women for many months to come. A postal card request to the Service Department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be promptly honored. These film lists give the brand and distributor.

Correspondence thus far received from motion picture theatre managers who are going into the juvenile programs, indicates a tendency which should be avoided. Don't jump to the conclusion that the children want a lot of fairy stories, or educational films; that all they want to see is how flowers grow. They want good clean action and fun, and they want plenty of it and if you don't give it they will not go to your show. Give them a little educational if you want, but hide it and above all don't tell them anything about it. Just play up the entertainment side of the program. Size up the kind of a program that will appeal generally in the section from which the children come, and then get a good clean program with lots of action, but avoid crime and sex problem themes.

Give them a nature picture or a scenic; better still, if the scenic or the nature subject can be in the background and there be action and fun in front of it. Above all, give them just as high a quality of film physically as you would have for your very best adult audience. Any sane exhibitor knows that you can't give a man twice what he doesn't want, and remember the same thing applies to juveniles.

How to Enlist Aid of Women's Clubs in Your Town

By C. A. Megown
Cameraphone Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio

IF ONE stops to think, it is only twelve years ago that railroads exercised a free hand and paid no attention to the public. To-day they are mere bookkeepers for the people. In the same length of time the saloon interests, thinking theirs was a private business of no concern of the public, awoke to find themselves nearly out of business. The same story might be told of street railroads, and public service corporations. What might the picture man, who has to deal and do with the entire public, young and old, expect when he takes the position of nickel grabber.

Whether pictures control the lives and destinies of the growing generations may be a subject for proof, but what the public thinks on that question, right or wrong, is a subject to be dealt with. How has it been handled? In the same old way that the railroad, saloon interests, and others handled it with the same results.

Here in this city our trouble began with wholesale arrests. The cases were tried, we won, but we saw the future and prepared for it by taking account of the morrow. We called in all classes and had them express themselves freely and fully. We argued for constructive criticism, not negative criticism. We kept at it. We listened; we heard the argument of the danger of pictures on the youth and the home. We decided that if we could get at the real head of the home we could solve the problem. We called in the Women's Federation of Civic Clubs. We met often and late. We asked them to be fair. They promised. They were. They asked for one night a week for eight weeks in certain houses. They selected eight programs, ran them and then made a report. The report was fair and truthful. In substance it was this:

Report on Films from Women's Clubs

(1) That the picture fan did not approve of a picked program.

(2) That those who wanted or pretended they wanted a family program, interesting, clean, educational and amusing did not patronize it.

(3) That if the work was to continue they must assure picture men against loss.

They became our friends as the work at the convention in New York showed. They picked good programs, not silly, feeble ones. They showed good judgment and great ability. Their work was worth while. It put the showman in close touch with the situation. It kept him alive. The woman's clubs can and will help us if we go to them in a fair-minded way. In Cleveland we are not hounded with license inspectors; and only because we keep close to the people and keep ahead of the professional agitator. Let every city try it even if it does hurt. Details will be furnished by the woman's clubs gladly.

Results That Have Been Gained

As to the children's program we wish to say, different organizations have handled the children's programs at different theatres with marked success. They keep their eyes open to releases and make memorandums of all suitable pictures, going from one exchange to another, getting a list of pictures, then looking them over. These results have followed from this work:

(1) The small children have been given a special entertainment all their own, good for them to see.

(2) The mothers have been added to the friendship side of the picture business, and have had their ideas broadened and learned fully the folly of narrow mindedness.

(3) The picture man became a part and parcel of the community and an accepted co-worker in the development of the community. He has at the same time become a business man and a civic worker. He has gained the confidence of the public to the extent that the people accept his program as entirely fitting and proper. The patrons do not go to the place to find fault but to enjoy themselves. The trouble maker finds no sympathizers. In fact, it is a square deal all around, in that confidence begets confidence and every man knows that when confidence exists good will thrives, and when good will lives, trouble is unknown.

Sixth Annual Convention of National League Opens

Film Men from Los Angeles, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Principal Points in Texas, Oklahoma and Other States, Pour Into Chicago and Take It by Storm—City, as Large as It Is, Will Be "Owned" by Members of the Industry During Association Event

Special to Motion Picture News.

Chicago, July 10.

GOVERNOR DUNNE of Illinois has promised to open the sixth National Convention and Exposition of the Motion Picture Exchange of America in person. The ceremony takes place today. Mayor Thompson of Chicago formally opens the Exposition on Wednesday, July 12.

The special convention train from New York pulled into the La Salle street Station at noon yesterday. The train was met by a brass band, and a parade formed to move through the Loop. Leading, in Vitagraph's car-load of players, was Anita Stewart, Alice Joyce, and Edith Storey.

George Kleine sent Harry Watson, of "Musty Suffer" fame, together with his supporting company. Mr. Watson stopped at various points en route to get locations for a comedy he is now being filmed in. The climax of the picture takes place in front of Chicago's City Hall, and there the comedian completes the film.

Special trains carrying delegations of exhibitors from Los Angeles, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Indianapolis, Oklahoma, Texas, and other points are scheduled to arrive in Chicago early.

Tuesday, July 11, is National Exhibitors' day at the Essanay studios, when all Convention visitors are the guests of George K. Spoor, to see the huge Essanay plant. Tuesday night, through the courtesy of Thomas Ince, all Convention delegates and their friends are to see the film spectacle "Civilization."

A gigantic banquet is set for Monday night, July 17, and the Exposition is brought to a close Tuesday night, July 18, with a ball. This last affair affords all those present a chance to see the luminaries of the screen taking part in Chicago's celebrated dance, "Walkin' The Dog," and in other Terpsichorean novelties. Room reservations poured into the Loop hotels. The Sherman received in one telegram an order for one hundred rooms.

Everybody Welcome at League Booth

Practically all the floor space at the Coliseum is sold. The Exhibitors' League calls especial attention to its booth, where all members and non-members are welcome. The credentials of delegates will be examined and O.K.'d at this place.

Alice Brady is the studio representative for World Film at the convention, with the executive and publicity ends in the hands of Harry L. Reichenbach. The World staff has its headquarters at the Blackstone Hotel, where Miss Brady is giving talks to screen-struck girls, under the auspices of the Chicago Herald. On July 14, the Wisconsin Exhibitors' League tenders Miss Brady a banquet at the Wisconsin Hotel, Milwaukee, and on July 17, Alice Brady Day at the Exposition, the Chicago Reel Fellows stage a ball in her honor. The World Film booth at the Exposition is an attractive summer garden.

Paramount headquarters are also established at the Blackstone, where the company's publicity and advertising men are holding a three days' session with the publicity men of the twenty-two Paramount exchanges to discuss the launching of an extensive publicity campaign.

Saturday will be Paramount Day at the Exposition, and Adolph Zukor, president of the newly-formed Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will deliver an address. Some of Paramount's stars are in attendance, and also the following officials: Hiram Abrams, William L. Sherry, Jesse L. Lasky, James Steele, Samuel Goldfish, and Fred C. Garbutt. The publicity delegation includes Wallace Thompson, Ben Schulberg, John C. Flinn, and Carl H. Pierce.

Clara Kimball Young, star of the film corporation bearing her name, is a specially honored guest, Thursday having been set aside as Clara Kimball Young Day. Miss Young is accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Selznick and a number of business representatives.

The management of the Chicago Convention is in the hands of Illinois branch No. 2 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. This local organization was formed in April, 1911, four months before the birth of the National League in Cleveland. Illinois branch No. 2 has taken an active part in the affairs of the big league from the beginning.

Disturbed by trade abuses that no one could correct single-handed, thirty-three Chicago exhibitors met informally in Stillson's Restaurant five years ago. Their purpose was to band together for their mutual interest. C. A. Anderson was elected temporary president of the embryo league.

Other Chicago managers were immediately interested in the movement, and so when the league met for its first regular election, the membership was already sizable. The first officers of branch No. 2 were: George Henry, president; C. A. Anderson, vice-president; William J. Sweeney, treasurer; Samuel Katz, secretary, and John A. Bell, recording secretary.

In 1912 George Henry was elected president; in 1913, Julius A. Alcock; 1914, Robert R. Levy, and the present head is George Henry. Mr. Sweeney has been treasurer since the founding of the league, and Sidney Smith has been chosen secretary for the past four years.

For three years this Illinois branch has maintained offices in the Masonic Temple Building. There local exhibitors can consult up-to-the-minute records of all films released, list of exhibitors in other cities, any of the trade journals, in fact any information that will benefit exhibitors is kept on file in the league headquarters.

The membership has increased to 350. This large body of picture men regularly meets once a month, instead of every other month, as formerly. Special meetings and luncheons are also frequently held. The Chicago league offers its five years' achievement as an example of what intelligent co-operation can accomplish. Innumerable bills inimical to the industry have been killed by committees appointed by the league. In 1911 a bill was introduced in the City Council to force all picture shows out of wooden buildings with sixty days. Since this would be a great hardship for the exhibitors, the league had the time limit extended to one year. The league prevented the passage of the ordinance that would keep all persons under sixteen years of age out of picture theatres. The league has maintained an unremitting fight against censorship.

The league has effected better relations with the operator's unions and with the exchanges. It has reduced the cost of posters. It has installed public stencil cutting machines so that exhibitors can get announcement slides at cost. It protects the manager and exchange from losing film permits, by having the exhibitor sign a receipt for them.

In hundreds of ways the league has justified its existence by systematizing and regulating the once chaotic business of picture exhibiting. The Illinois branch No. 2 is a worthy organization to perform the difficult task of conducting a national convention. When the visiting delegates begin pouring into the Coliseum, they will see how well their hosts have performed their duty.

Rembusch and Ochs Both Advocate a Trade Association

Bulletin Advocating Election of Ochs Points to His Work as President of the New York Branch and His Fight Defeating Censorship in the Empire State—Rembusch Issues Statement Outlining His Views on Organization, Membership, Price of Film Service and the General Relation Between Exhibitor and Manufacturer

ON the eve of the National Convention in Chicago both Lee A. Ochs, of New York, and F. J. Rembusch, of Shelbyville, Ind., have issued statements that should give every delegate at the convention food for profound thought.

Mr. Ochs' explanation to the exhibitors of the proposed workings of the Association of the Motion Picture Industry, in the preliminary meetings of which he has played an important part, is especially significant.

Thinking along the same lines, Mr. Rembusch has outlined exhaustively a body of the same nature, the details of which cannot fail to be of the utmost interest, not only to the exhibitors, but to every member of the trade whose thoughts have traveled in organization channels during the past weeks.

Mr. Ochs has called the attention of the industry to the full and complete recognition secured for the exhibitors by the new plan.

"The plan provides," said Mr. Ochs, just before leaving for the Chicago Convention, "that every member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America becomes, automatically through his membership in the league, a member of the National Association. Our class, No. 2 in the schedule, is given ten directors which we ourselves elect and these ten are equal to the combined representation of manufacturers and distributors."

New Association a Federation of Film Interests

"The new Association may be regarded as a Federation of all the interests in the industry. We as exhibitors keep our own organization intact, and the new association gives us practical aid in strengthening our league and in making membership in the league not only advisable but highly desirable for every exhibitor in the United States."

"I want to call the attention of those who have constructive platforms to suggest at the Chicago convention that we have provided in advance of the convention the most far reaching, the most desirable and the most effective piece of constructive work that our organization has ever known.

"Never before has the exhibitor received such full, complete and unqualified recognition with a voice in the affairs of the entire industry. We are not asked to merge ourselves with the new association but we are called upon to help manage it, to sit in at its council table, to have as great a voice as the manufacturers and distributors combined, and we, as exhibitors, helped to draw up the entire plan by which this highly desirable arrangement can be made effective.

It is pointed out by those who are urging the election of Mr. Ochs as National president that he has carried his constructive work in behalf of the exhibitor organization right up to the very eve of the convention and has left the work of electioneering to the other aspirants for the National presidency. The newest bulletin in the Ochs campaign reads as follows:

"The election of Lee A. Ochs as National President is urged for the following reasons: Ochs built up the New York organization to a position of strength never before reached in its history.

"Ochs led the fight which defeated censorship in New York after the bill had passed both branches of the legislature.

"Ochs secured recognition for the exhibitors, complete and absolute, at the time of the Grand Central Palace Exposition.

"Ochs has led and not bossed his fellow exhibitors.

"Ochs is on the right side of every question which affects the exhibitors' welfare.

"Ochs has the respect of all branches of the industry and it was as his guests that the real factors in the industry began to formulate a harmony program.

"Ochs has proved himself more than a successful fighter in behalf of the exhibitor organization. He has shown the way for all branches of the industry to co-operate on questions that affect the industry as a whole and has preserved the integrity and the status of the exhibitors' organization intact.

"Under Lee Ochs the exhibitor organization stands out as the one big successful, harmonious, constructive organization in the entire industry."

The entire New York delegation has approved heartily of the National Association plan.

Rembusch Sets Forth Principles

Under the caption, "Shall We Grasp Opportunity?" Mr. Rembusch sets forth the details of his recommendations.

"A convention or exposition is the periodic expression of the progress of a business. We have had many conventions and expositions of motion picture art in the past but no past convention equals in importance, or has greater opportunities to make true progress possible and enduring as the present convention in Chicago," declares Mr. Rembusch.

"The Motion Picture Exhibitors League is at the present time the only form of national organization in existence in the motion picture business. Therefore responsibility lies most heavily upon the procedure of this convention that permanent and constructive plans be instituted to relieve the present depreciating condition of our business.

"It is the history of any new business to expand and continue expanding until it reaches the crest when further expansion produces over-production, over-reaching, after which chaos and disaster follow. The present depressing conditions have been brought about because the manufacturer and exhibitor have estimated too highly the earning possibilities of the motion picture business.

"Past experience has proven that an organization of the manufacturer alone, or an organization that is purely an exhibitor organization, will not do the big things so urgently needed at the present time. The interests of the exhibitor and manufacturer are identical because in the last analysis the success of our business depends upon its continued popularity with the most people.

"It therefore follows that there must be an organization of the exhibitor and manufacturer with equal power and representation, who by close co-operation and sympathetic adjustment, held together with a binding, practical working agreement, will be able to bring this industry back to a sound, commercial basis and this basis must be planned on the possible earnings of the industry.

"I ask the manufacturer and exhibitor to consider the following:

"Organization.—Exhibitor and manufacturer to organize as an association, corporation, or Chamber of Commerce, with a name appropriately expressing its object. Both exhibitor and manufacturer shall have equal voice and power. All things being equal, its members shall give preference to those belonging to the organization. The association shall collect data after the best interests of the trade and perform all of those acts which naturally come to an organization representing the whole industry. It shall standardize prices, terms and agreements of the trade; establish credit lists and adjust differences between the exhibitor and the manufacturer. It shall take up questions such as legalized censorship, etc., and secure a united effort on the part of the manufacturer and the exhibitor to combat outside evils against the industry.

An Executive Committee of Three Proposed

"Membership.—Each and every theatre, film exchange, film company, or anyone in the allied trade shall take out membership and dues and admission fees shall be on a proportionate basis to the amount of interest involved and value of the organization to them.

"Control.—An executive committee of three members shall direct the affairs, adjust differences, etc. It shall be composed of a managing director, executive secretary and credit secretary, elected at National Convention. Each shall serve for three years and shall be elected each year.

"The control of the organization shall be in the hands of twelve directors, six exhibitors and six manufacturers, which board shall meet monthly. There shall be twelve alternates elected who will take the place of directors when anyone is forced to be absent, in order that a full meeting be always assured. They shall also be elected in such a way that they retire at different times from office.

"The executive committee will decide all questions if possible within one week after presented. Anyone dissatisfied with the decision of the executive committee may appeal to the Board of Directors, whose decision shall be final.

"In order to create a commercial value for film service the following terms, prices and agreements shall be made a matter of contract between the exhibitors and manufacturers.

"Prices of Film Service.—The current week in which a film is exhibited shall be known as service week and shall be from Sunday midnight to Sunday midnight. The physical condition of the film and other considerations make the film more valuable when first released, therefore film service shall be regulated in price on the basis of certain definite periods which shall be called first run, second run, third run, etc. The first run of a film shall be two full weeks of service weeks plus the part of the week prior to the two full service weeks, for example—if the film is released on Wednesday the balance of the week and two more full service weeks constitute the first run.

"The second run shall be the third and fourth service weeks; the third run the fifth and sixth service weeks; the fourth run the seventh and eighth service weeks, etc., so that each run except the first shall have a period of two full service weeks.

"The film manufacturer shall make a definite price on the first run, another price on the second run, etc., and exhibitors then will be able to buy the film accordingly. Manufacturers are to hold strictly to the price they make on the film when they release it.

"Great productions such as 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' and 'The Birth of a Nation,' not released in regular order are generally played on a percentage basis, therefore unless otherwise stipulated the percentage of box office receipts shall be divided as follows: 40 per cent. to the exhibitor and 60 per cent. to the manufacturer. On this class of productions, if priced to an exhibitor on a run basis, each run shall be by the month and not by the two-week period.

"Terms.—All film bills are due and payable one week in advance of the service week. Money or check must be in the film exchange before closing time on Saturday preceding. All film service not paid in advance shall be shipped C. O. D. until advance payments are made up. Film service bills shall be dated on Monday, a week in advance of service week.

"Exhibitors who pay their film service one full week in advance of the service week shall receive a discount of 2 per cent. for cash, but this money must be in the office of the film company before the closing hour on Saturday preceding Monday, the date of billing.

"When an exhibitor fails to pay bills or uses dishonest methods the exchange shall file a complaint to the executive committee and if they find the exhibitor guilty he shall be listed as poor pay and no exchanges shall furnish service except at an advance of 10 per cent. over regular prices and all film shall be shipped C. O. D.

"There shall be no advance deposits except where an exhibitor contracts for a serial picture, he shall pay one-half the first day's service in advance, payable at the signing of the contract. This money shall be applied to the first episode. If the exhibitor cancels service before the serial starts he shall forfeit this advanced deposit as liquidated damages or penalty.

"The Association shall compile a regular credit book of all exhibitors and manufacturers which shall be sold to exchanges and dealers. This book shall contain the rating of credit and paying habits of the exhibitor and a weekly report shall be made by all exchanges of any change in the credit of their customer or habits in paying.

Exhibitor and Manufacturer Shall Protect Each Other

"Protection.—The exhibitor and manufacturer shall in every way protect each other against senseless competition and overproduction having at all time in view the best service for the people. It shall be decided that the basis of the earnings of the motion picture theatre is fifty dollars per one thousand inhabitants per week, or $2,500 per one thousand inhabitants per year, this being the basis of the possible gross box office receipts. Every effort shall be made to regulate the business so that where the business is well taken care of no further motion picture theatre shall be erected, if possible to discourage same, and every effort be made to reserve the business for those who are in it, that they may allow it to progress in a constructive manner on sound, commercial principles instead of the wild theories practiced in the past.

"Upon the above basis it will be possible to figure what the investment and running expenses should be for both the exhibitor and manufacturer. It shall be agreed that 25 per cent. of the gross box office receipts is a fair amount for the exhibitor to pay for film service per week and that 40 per cent. is too much.

"Manufacturer and exhibitor shall not be allowed to cancel film service except one month's notice is given in advance and this shall apply to present contracts whether in the Association or not. When agreements are broken suitable penalties shall be enforced by the Association. All film service, express charges, paper, etc., shall, as much as possible, be agreed to in writing in order to prevent errors and disputes.

How It Would All Work Out

"How Would it All Work Out?—The manufacturer would know beforehand what his possible market is. It would be much simpler to fill our program and eliminate much dickering and bickering that we have at the present time. We could select programs more suitable and balance them easier, and that would make more business for the exhibitor and manufacturer. It would create a basis of credit and encourage the paying of bills and eliminate the dead beat. It would put the business of buying film on a competitive market and act as a sliding scale whereby a good film would command a good price and a bad film would naturally go to its proper level in price.

"It would prevent over-buying by the exhibitor as he could determine exactly what he can afford to pay and buy for his wants, for it is as bad merchandising to over-buy as to under-buy and not give people what they deserve.

"It would enable the film manufacturer to keep his bookings filled and without so many open dates as at present. A code or system could be instituted by which an exhibitor could tell at a glance what was open and available. The conference work between the exhibitor and manufacturer would soon place the business on a staple basis and it would immediately result in the motion picture business taking a new lease of life; values would be increased a hundredfold; time, labor and money saved. We would be respectable and commercialized."

REEL FELLOWS CLUB OF CHICAGO NOW AN INFLUENTIAL ORGANIZATION

By M. G. Watkins, Secretary, Reel Fellows

IN the two and a half years of its meteoric existence the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago has won for itself an enviable position in the film world. Once a small group of picture men meeting semi-annually for a good time, it is now an influential club of recognized distinction. The two hundred members now conduct their famous banquets, receptions, and balls in their own sumptuous club rooms.

The Reel Fellows will take a prominent part in the convention festivities. Their club rooms on the "B" floor of the Morrison Hotel will be open day and night for the convenience of visitors. Club tallyhos will ply between the Morrison and the Coliseum continuously. The Reel Fellows booth at the big show will be at the disposal of out-of-town guests. A formal ball will be held by the Reel Fellows in honor of Alice Brady, World Film star. In these and other ways the Reel Fellows will do their share toward making the convention a success.

The Reel Fellows Club has been more than a social organization. It has rendered a most valuable service to the industry by bringing together, under pleasant auspices, men engaged in different branches of the business. The manufacturer-member has acquired a keener appreciation of the problems confronting the exhibitor-member. In the same way, the actors, exchange men, and others who are members, have come to understand each other's values. This kind of friendly social intercourse between the component parts of the industry cannot help benefitting the entire trade.

The Reel Fellows Club was originated in March, 1914, by fourteen prominent film people, including R. R. Nehls, Charles Ver Halen, Don Meaney, Richard Travers, Walter Early, L. A. Boening and others.

Club Moves to Larger Dining Rooms

The first meeting was held in the Union Hotel, and was purely informal in character. After two more meetings ,the formation of a regular club seemed advisable. When the membership increased to forty, the Fort Dearborn Hotel became the club's headquarters. About six months after the founding of the society, the Advertisers Club invited the Reel Fellows to use its rooms. This offer was accepted. The membership at that time was seventy-five.

When the club roster showed one hundred members enrolled it was decided to move to larger dining rooms at the Hotel Sherman. It was at this period in the club's history that it conducted a huge ball. The 2,000 guests occupied two entire floors of the Sherman. The grand march was led by Mayor Carter Harrison and his wife. Scores of prominent screen players came to Chicago for the event.

In July, 1915, the club moved to its club rooms at the Movie Inn. At this time there were 140 Reel Fellows. But these quarters were out-grown in May, 1916, when the membership touched the two hundred mark. The club then transferred itself to its present rooms in the Hotel Morrison.

The officers during 1914 were: R. R. Nehls, president; L. A. Boening, treasurer, and Charles Ver Halen, secretary. President Nehls and Treasurer Boening were reelected in 1915. Walter D. Hildreth was chosen secretary, but on his resignation in October, M. G. Watkins was elected in his stead.

The present officers are: R. R. Nehls, president; Frank J. Flaherty, vice-president; Richard C. Travers, vice-president; William J. Sweeney, treasurer; M. G. Watkins, secretary; Freeman H. Owens, assistant secretary. The board of governors now serving consists of Watterson R. Rothacker, H. C. Miller, Fred W. Wild, Jr., Louis A. Boening and George Berg.

One Hundred Thousand Miles of Positive Film is Needed to Make Subjects in West Coast Studios

These Figures, Based on Laboratory Records, Which Also Show That Six Thousand Miles of Negative Film Is "Shot," Indicate the Tremendous Output Necessary to Help Supply Demand for Motion Picture Entertainment—Statistics Compiled Reveal a Total of One Hundred Thousand Feet of Negative in Daily Use—This Amount Is Said to Be Fully Forty Per Cent. Greater Than That Required a Year Ago

By J. C. Jessen

LABORATORY records show that more than one hundred thousand miles of positive film is needed annually to make prints from subjects produced at the west coast studios, where six thousand miles of negative film is "shot." Figures compiled show a total of one hundred thousand feet of negative in daily use. This amount is said to be fully forty per cent. greater than required one year ago.

More than thirty millions of dollars have been expended by motion picture manufacturers in and about Los Angeles for production, improvements of studios, and real estate, since the first and only complete review of this producing colony was made in the West Coast Number of Motion Picture News, in April of last year. Plans now made point to a still greater expenditure during the coming year, and it is estimated the monthly disbursements for the next twelve months will average three million dollars.

Permanancy and stability have been the watchwords of manufacturers with respect to studio improvements. The Selig Polyscope Company, the first to invade this field, were likewise the first to build permanent plants of the better class for production.

The most emphatic examples of this policy are Universal City, where since the opening in March of last year, additional producing facilities have been added to double the production capacity; the Thomas H. Ince mammoth plant at Culver City, said to have cost a half million; the enlargement of the Keystone studio at the expenditure of a sum aggregating more than one hundred thousand; the tripling of space, and building of more stages and a perfect laboratory at the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company studios; the construction of a mammoth studio and laboratory by the National Drama Corporation, of which Thomas H. Dixon is president; the purchase of thirteen acres in Hollywood, and the building of a big studio by the Vitagraph Company; and the erection of the David Horsley enterprise almost within the business district of Los Angeles.

Practically all of the larger productions of the past year have come from the Los Angeles studios. A list of such includes Thomas H. Ince's "Civilization"; Rev. Thos. H. Dixon's "The Fall of a Nation"; "Ramona," by the Clune Film Producing Company; "Carmen," from the Jesse L. Lasky studio; "The Dumb Girl of Portici," the Universal Pavlowa picture; "The Ne'er-Do-Well," by the Selig Polyscope Company; "The Argonauts"; "Macbeth," with Sir Herbert Tree from the Fine Arts; "Damaged Goods," by the American Company; "God's Country—and the Woman," by Rollin S. Sturgeon of the Vitagraph plant, and a number of others. Several big subjects are now in the course of production. D. W. Griffith will soon complete a film which has required his attention for more than a year; Cecil B. deMille is now making a big picture; at the Fox studios, "The Honor System," in ten reels, is about completed by Director R. A. Walsh; Lloyd Brown and Donald Crisp are filming "The Eyes of the World," and the Monrovia Feature Film Company, "The Daughter of the Don."

Production Costs for Settings Have Doubled

Production costs have been doubled and trebled with respect to settings representing both interior and exterior scenes. The size for these has gradually increased, and in many instances this has had a very marked effect upon the enlargement of studios. At every plant are to be seen mammoth structures of every type, but the largest perhaps were those built by Ince and Griffith. That of the former was for "Civilization," and consisted of two entire streets of a supposed European monarchial capital. Another large one is that now being used by Griffith for his forthcoming spectacle known as "The Mother and the Law." Great sets are now built for one and two reel subjects, which a year ago were thought to be extravagent for a five or six reel photoplay, a most striking illustration of this being at the Christie plant where a complete Japanese street was built for a few feet of film for a one reel comedy.

Corporation attorneys have been busy throughout the year drawing papers for new companies, it being estimated a new film corporation is formed every day. Many of these progressed so far as to begin production. Some even completed pictures, many of which rest in the sepulchral safety deposit vaults in the city. A small percentage has been released. It has been said there has been sufficient film made in Los Angeles which has never been released to supply the market for months, provided of course, that it be of acceptable quality.

It is a generally accepted fact that among all the producing plants on the Pacific Coast, that of Thomas H. Ince at Culver

City stands out pre-eminently as an eloquent illustration of the remarkable advancement made by the motion picture industry since the last review of the film colony. For some months, or since ground first was broken on the new tract, this frequently has been alluded to as "the quarter million dollar plant," but late statistics furnished by the business department of the organization tend to show that ultimately this mammoth pictureplay factory will have entailed a total expenditure of a half million.

The Ince plant, which incidentally serves now as headquarters for the production of Triangle-Kay Bee plays made under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is located on a fifteen-acre tract in the heart of Culver City, nine miles from the business section of Los Angeles. Plans for the plant were made by Raymond B. West, director, who has been with the organization longer than any other employe. Mr. West, being familiar with all matters pertaining to production, laid out the studio so that the maximum amount of sunlight can be secured for each stage, the maximum amount of hours daily, the average being nine hours daily throughout the year. Furthermore, the stages are so located that production is affected by the minimum amount of shadows. All buildings are located so as to give the producing staff the greatest efficiency.

The plan consists at present of ten buildings, two of which still are in course of construction, and five stages. The structures now occupied are: administration building (2 stories), 65 by 80 feet; dressing room building (2 stories), 500 by 25 feet; scene dock, 480 by 25 feet; wardrobe building (3 stories) 48 by 125 feet; varied arts building (2 stories), 31 by 90 feet; garage, 50 by 90 feet; and film vault, 20 by 32 feet. Those in course of construction are the carpenter shop, 50 by 190 feet and the receiving depot, 48 by 50 feet. Four of the stages are glass-enclosed and each measures 150 by 50 feet, while the fifth is exposed and measures 200 by 50 feet. There is also a permanent water tank on the premises, measuring 40 by 80 feet and having a capacity of 104,000 gallons of water.

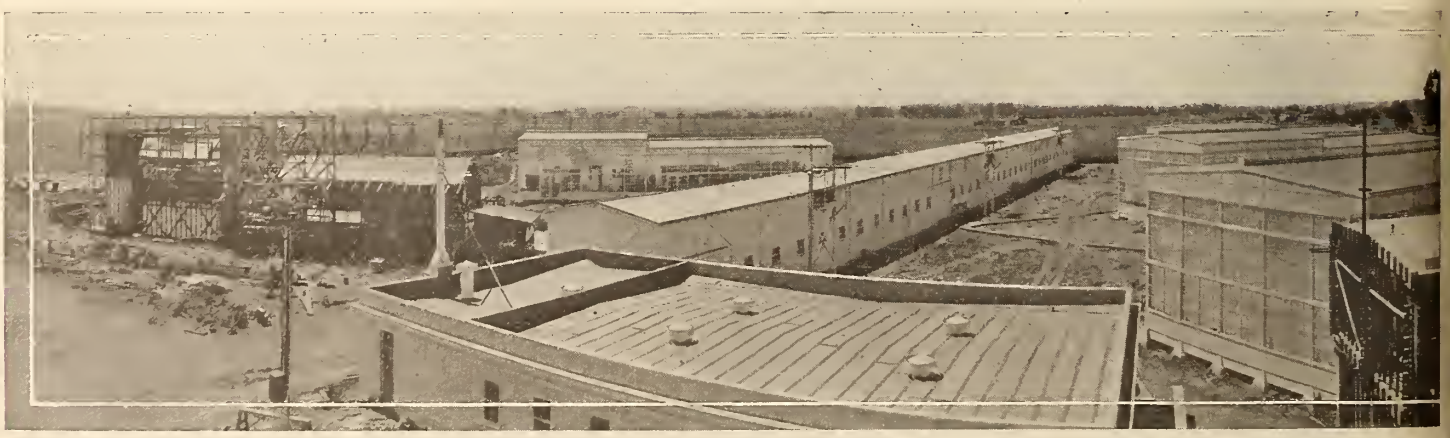
Plans now in the hands of the contractors call also for the erection of thirteen more different structures. These will be a heating plant, 20 by 40 feet; hot house, 15 by 40 feet; cleaning plant, 30 by 30 feet; paint shop, 40 by 50 feet; stars' dressing quarters, 120 by 20 feet; laboratory, 50 by 136 feet; boiler room, 26 by 26 feet, and six small offices, each a distinct building, for the directors.

Figures Give Idea of Immensity of Plant

Proof conclusive that the plant is the most modern now in operation is evident from the fact that the buildings are virtually of fireproof construction. And this is in spite of the fact that compilation of statistics shows that to date approximately 1,500,000 feet of lumber have been used. An idea of the completeness of the glass stages may be gained from the statement of the builders that each required a carload of glass, making a total of 54,600 square feet. In addition to this a half ton of white lead was used in the construction of every stage. This is designed to prevent leakage of rain. The new plant was built by the Milwaukee Building Company, under the supervision of its Foreman, G. E. Sitts.

At the present writing, the finishing touches are being applied to the premises, while plans are being drawn for the early erection of the structures still to be made. Fifty workmen, under the direction of Jefferson-Davis Company, are busy laying the cement sidewalks which eventually will form a network about the entire plant. For this work 2,472 yards of gravel, 793 yards of stone, 1,270 yards of sand, and 21,228 sacks of cement already have been used.



The personnel of the Ince forces has seen few changes since the last review. It embraces in respective executive capacities, in addition to Director-General Ince, Business Manager E. H. Allen, Advisory Director J. Parker Read, Jr., Superintendent of Production David M. Hartford, Art Director Robert Brunton, Chief of the Photographic and Art Department Irvin Willatt, Scenario Editor C. Gardner Sullivan, Purchasing Agent Spencer Valentine and Publicity Manager Kenneth A. O'Hara.

While the Culver City plant stands as the principal source of the Ince output, the organization still retains Inceville, that picturesque 18,000-acre rancho in the mountains beyond Santa Monica. This continues to serve for the making of all scenes requiring magnificent natural scenery and is used almost exclusively for the filming of all plays in which William S. Hart appears as star.

Like the executive force, the Ince directorial staff has remained the same for some months. It includes Raymond B. West, Reginald Barker, Walter Edwards, Charles Giblyn, William S. Hart, and Charles Miller. The prominent stars under contract are Bessie Barriscale, Enid Markey, Louise Glaum, Clara Williams, Dorothy Dalton, Margaret Thompson, William S. Hart, Frank Keenan, William Desmond, Howard Hickman, and Charles Ray.

Forty Companies in Work at Universal City

The world's largest motion picture producing plant, Universal

Panorama of the Great Plant and Studio Built on a Fifteen-Acre Tract at Culver City, a Suburb of Los Angeles, by Thomas H. Ince for the City, has been in the process of construction almost two years, with the result that it is now equipped sufficiently for the successful operation of forty companies, that number of directors being on the payroll now.

At the official opening of the film municipality in March of last year, the cafe, office, laboratory, wardrobe and dressing room buildings, the zoo, together with one big stage, 100 feet by 500 feet, and an enclosed stage, 60 feet by 150 feet, had been completed. Now the stage space has been increased to cover more than four acres, including a mammoth 60 by 300 foot, artifically lighted studio, two large enclosed feature studios, and a comedy stage, 60 by 100.

During the year many important changes have been made at U City, which have resulted in far greater efficiency from this producing organization. In addition to the extension of stages, larger quarters have been provided for all the different departments. A double deck added to all of the dressing rooms, and additional ones are now in the process of construction.

The production department is the only new one added which has remained throughout the year. The men in charge here have to do with the building and furnishing of every set for every production made. Under the new regime, before a story has been accepted, members of the production department are consulted as to the cost of producing it. If the story is found available it is passed on to the reviewing critics of the scenario department, and if given an O. K., writers prepare the working script or scenario for the director. Leads and players are selected for the subject by the engagement department, and the scenario goes to the production department where scenes and properties are prepared. When these are ready, the scenario goes to the director and production is begun. By this plan loss of time occasioned by waiting for sets or props is avoided.

The list of officers at Universal City is a big one when compared with those of any other plant, and all are under the personal supervision of H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager. The lieutenants of Mr. Davis are E. G. Patterson, personal assistant; Charles Rankin, manager of production; Eugene Lewis, scenario editor. Writers: F. McGrew Willis, Earl Hewitt, Harvey Gates, E. J. Clawson, Calder Johnstone, F. M. Wiltermood, Ben Cohn, Bess Meredith, Grace Helen Bailey, Ida May Park and Mrs. E. M. Ingleton. Marshall Stedman is engaging manager, and Pierre Hungate his assistant; H. R. Howe, auditor; George W. Elkins, cashier; John M. Nicholous, superintendent of photography; E. G. Ullman, manager of cameramen; H. H. Barter, technical director; M. G. Jonas, publicity manager, and A. T. Statter, assistant; Fred Datig, employment bureau manager; A. B. Sorter, manager wardrobe department; Wallace Kerrigan, superintendent of ranch; Rex D. Roselli, superintendent of zoo; Frank D. Ormston, art director, and Ruth Ann Baldwin, director cutting room.

The producing directors are: William Worthington, Rupert Julian, Otis Turner, Jack Conway, Robert Leonard, Allen Curtis, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Jacques Jaccard, Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley, Lynn Reynolds, Joseph LeBrant, Ben Wilson, Rex Ingram, Stewart Payton, Raymond Wells, Henry McRae, Joseph deGrasse, Frank Ormston, Roy Clements, Harry Carey, George Marshall, Clifford Elfelt, George Cochrane, Wallace Berry, Francis

Powers, William V. Mong, Lule Warrenton, George Rice, William Garwood, and Beverly Griffith. Others are to be added shortly.

Lasky Plant Trebles in Fifteen Months

Wonders have been worked in the vicinity of Selma and Vine streets, Hollywood, the location of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's studio, and in the past fifteen months, this producing plant has more than trebled in size. The improvements made consist of the erection of a glass studio with a stage 80 by 120; a double deck painting frame; new and enlarged carpenter shops, garages; scene docks; technical staff office building occupied solely by Wilfred Buckland and his assistants; because of the material increase in the size of the stock company, many more dressing rooms were found to be needed; and a building was erected solely for the use of the stars, and contains eight suites, each furnished to suit the desires of each player. All star rooms are connected with a green room, where prominent members of the organization can be found at all times. The rows of dressing rooms that line Lasky Lane have been double decked, and back of these has been erected a mammoth stage 80 by 250 feet.

ew York Motion Picture Corporation, and Used As Headquarters for the Production of Kay-Bee Dramas for Release Through Triangle

Perhaps the most important improvement to the plant is the $150,000 laboratory in which all prints of Lasky pictures for the Paramount Exchanges are made. By Eastman specialists, this is said to be the most complete and best equipped laboratory in the world. It was designed by Cecil B. deMille, director general, after he had made visits to all the large plants in the east, and Alvin Wyckoff, Lasky director of photography. The capacity of the plant is 500,000 feet of positive weekly.

There have been but few changes in the organization. Milton E. Hoffman, former manager of the Peerless studio, has been added as general manager to relieve Cecil deMille of many worries, and give him more time for writing and directing. Other directors are William C. deMille, former scenario editor; George Melford, responsible for eighteen or more Lasky productions; Frank Reicher, who has been a member of the staff for the past nine months, and James Young, who has produced two pictures.

The most recent addition to the list of stars is Marie Doro. The principal players are Blanche Sweet, Fannie Ward, Cleo Ridgely, Anita King, Wallace Reid, Lou Tellegen, Theodore Roberts, Tom Meighn, Raymond Hatton, Tom Forman, Horace B. Carpenter, Ernest Joy, James Neil, Lucien Littlefield, Camille Astor, Dorothy Abrille, William Elmer, Florence Smythe, and Parke Jones.

The studio now occupies one entire city block, 400 by 700 feet, and negotiations for additional property across the street are now pending. The company uses many large sets, and because of this, additional space is needed.

Majestic Studio Is Three Times Its Original Size

A marked enlargement of the Majestic Motion Picture Company's studio in Hollywood, the home of Triangle Fine Arts photoplays and comedies, has been made, and the new plant now covers fully three times the space that it did one year ago. Laboratories added make positive prints of all subjects. Here twelve months ago, the producing organization was engaged almost wholly in the making of one, two and three-reel subjects. Now nothing but five-reel dramas and two-reel comedies are filmed, the change being due to the discontinuation of the Mutual release, and the company marketing its productions on the Triangle program.

The personnel of the producing staff has not been materially changed; D. W. Griffith being the general manager; Frank E. Woods, manager of production; Bennie Ziedman, publicity writer, and J. C. Epping, business manager. In the scenario department are Hettie Grey Baker, Tod Browning, Bernard McConville, Mary H. O'Connor, Roy Summerville, and Granville Warwick.

The list of directors includes William Christy Cabanne, Alan Dwan, Lloyd Ingram, Paul Powell, Edward Dillon, Chester Withey, C. M. and S. A. Franklin, and John Emerson. G. W. Bitzer is superintendent of the photographic department. In addition to doubling the space occupied by the studio proper, three additional city blocks have been leased for use where exterior settings are used. Two mammoth stages, one 90 by 180 feet with forty-five foot diffusing system, and an interior stage 70 by 100 feet have been built within the year, making a total of four stages with a total capacity of 130,000 square feet.

Christie Studio Is Complete Comedy Plant

The stars of the Fine Arts organization are Mae Marsh, DeWolf Hopper, Douglas Fairbanks, Fay Tincher, Tully Marshall, Norma Talmadge, Bessie Love, Seena Owen, Lillian and Dorothy Gish, Wilfred Lucas and Robert Harron. In the stock companies will be found such well-known players as Ralph Lewis, Walter Long, Eugene Pallatte, Mildred Harris, Elmo Lincoln, Max Davison, Elmer Clifton, Spottiswoode Aitken, Sam deGrasse, Howard Gaye, F. A. Turner, Alfred Paget and many others.

At the expiration of the contract of Al. E. Christie, producer of Nestor Comedies, with the Universal in January, Mr. Christie organized the Christie Film Company, and leased the plant where, more than four years previous, this same director had opened the first motion picture studio in Hollywood. The organization became known as the Christie Film Company.

The last year Mr. Christie was with the Universal he had his own private stage, offices and complete corps of stage help, cutters, and laboratory men, in addition to his regular stock company of players. When the new organization was formed all of the people went with the new company. For about four months the new company continued to make Nestor Comedies for the Universal, forty reels in all being made. Under a new contract, the company has produced twenty-four thousand feet of comedies.

The personnel of the organization includes Al. E. Christie, who supervises all productions in addition to directing a company. His brother, Charlie Christie, is business manager; Horace Davey, a director; Anton Najy and Al. Cawood, cameramen. The players are Billie Rhodes, Ethel Lynn, Betty Compson, Jane Waller, Stella Adams, Nolan Leary, Eddie Barry, Harry Hamm, Neil Burns, Dave Morris, Harry Rattenberry, Gus Alexander, George French and others.

Mr. Christie in the past six years has supervised the making of about five hundred comedies, three hundred of which have been directed by himself, and seventy-five per cent. of the total number are from original stories prepared by him.

Rebuild Keystone Studio by Aid of Laughs

Laughs perpetrated by Mack Sennett and his corps of assistants and comedians have made possible the complete rebuilding of the Keystone plant. The new home of this producing organization is one of the most modern on the Coast, the buildings being of concrete and steel construction of a fireproof nature, and equipped in a manner which adds great efficiency to the thirteen producing companies.

Fifteen months ago the Keystone plant occupied one-quarter of a square, while today it covers the greater portion of two blocks, besides a young mountain back of the studio which is utilized for exterior settings. Mr. Sennett liked the location of his plant so well that when it was impossible to expand eastward as he desired, because a foothill stood in the way, the Keystone maker promptly removed a greater portion of said foothill, and in its place erected a gigantic enclosed stage, and an exterior stage with steel diffusing system thirty feet above the floor space. The original exterior stage of the Keystone containing the 20 by 40 tank is still in use, and across the street, on another block owned by the company, is a stage of equal size, giving to the studio a stage floor space of more than 100,000 square feet.

Bird's-eye View of the Keystone Studios, Los Angeles

Mr Sennett has looked after the comfort of his players, and the dressing rooms provided by the new buildings contain everything to be desired. A big cafeteria occupies one entire floor of the four-story building built for dressing rooms on the first floor, technical shops and wardrobe on the two upper floors, giving to the employees of the plant exceptional service. The scenario department occupies a comfortable bungalow away from the remainder of the studio, and the offices of the company occupy all of the buildings of the original plant.

General Manager Mack Sennett has a very efficient staff, which includes George W. Stout, business manager; Harry Kerr, assistant business manager; Tony O'Sullivan, assistant general manager; Hampton Del Ruth, manager of production; John J. Glavey, assistant production department; George Chapman, technical director, and John Grey. Frank H. Buck, Walter S. Fredricks, Robert Carr, and Albert Glassmyre, scenario writers.

The directors are Richard Jones, Clarence Badger, William Campbell, Eddie Cline, Fred Fishback, Edward Frazee, Charles Parrot, Walter Wright, Harry Williams, Harry Edwards, Victor Herrman, Charles Avery and Roscoe Arbuckle. The stock company includes more than fifty well-known photoplayers.

Signal, One of the Youngest Companies

One of the youngest film companies is the Signal Film Corporation, with studios at Signal, on the Salt Lake Railroad, between Los Angeles and Pasadena. It was formed in October, with S. S. Hutchinson, president, and J. P. McGowan, director general, for the purpose of continuing independently the production of the type of railroad story which Helen Holmes and J. P. McGowan had first brought to prominence three years before.

The Western Lubin studio was purchased and fitted with modern railroad equipment. With the consent of the Salt Lake Railroad, a station was built on the studio grounds fronting the tracks, and placed on the railroad's time cards. Lines were run for spurs, and a passing track at Signal to assist in the picture making, and a corps of workmen were put to work building box cars at the company studios. Now a round-house is being built.

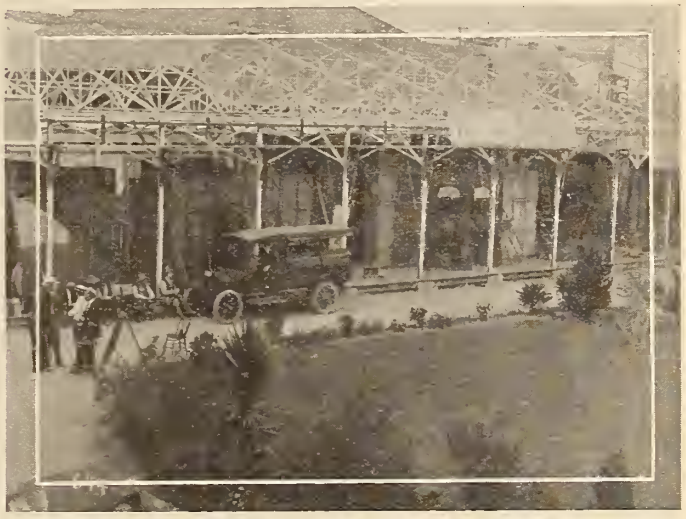
The gathering together of a cast to support Miss Holmes and Mr. McGowan in railroad pictures, meant the selection of men who had seen actual service in this work as well as pictures. Leo D. Maloney, Chance E. Ward, Paul C. Hurst, William Brunton, Thomas G. Lingham, N. Z. Woods, C. H. Wisschussen, F. N. Van Norman and Samuel Appel are members of the Signal Company, and all have the railroading qualification.



The first production to be taken up was the fifteen episode serial, "The Girl and the Game." Next the Frank H. Spearman Western novel, "Whispering Smith," was made in ten reels, the first five released under the title of "Whispering Smith" and the second in July as "Medicine Bend." Recently the company spent ten days in Honolulu, where they made scenes for a South African mine story, "The Diamond Runners," and have just completed the filming of "Judith of the Cumberlands." They will next take up "The Manager of B. & A."

The business management of the studio is vested with G. A. Hutchinson; Orrin Denny is laboratory superintendent, Ford I. Beebe publicity manager, G. E. Jenks scenario writer, and G. A. Sues cameraman.

Horsley Spends $200,000 on Improvements in Two Years

During the past year David Horsley has expended close to two hundred thousand dollars for the improvement of his Los Angeles studios, for the construction of new buildings and obtaining equipment which permits only the most modern methods of manufacturing motion pictures.

The most notable of Mr. Horsley's achievements was the construction of a gigantic arena devoted exclusively to the making of animal pictures. This came closely following his purchase of the Bostock collection of wild animals.

The arena is constructed like a great hexagon. It is enclosed by massive reinforced concrete walls. In the center is a concrete platform, where the director and cameraman station themselves. From this platform, one camera can cover all parts of the arena from one setting. Surrounding this is a moat, six feet wide and four feet deep, filled with water and divided by six fences. A player in danger of attack by an animal may plunge into the water and come up on the opposite side of a fence in a zone of safety.

Jungle scenes are depicted in arena number one; Northern woods locations occupy the second; the wilds and tropics the third; Rocky Mountains, the fourth; the tropics are also contained in the fifth, and the sixth the desert. The last-named, by a clever device, is quickly prepared for marine views by a change of the background, and other effects are possible if desired.

Of the large structures erected during the year by Mr. Horsley, the outdoor stage stands out as the crowning work. This studio is 75 by 150 feet, the foundation of concrete and hardwood flooring. It is spanned by sixteen structural steel trusses, carrying diffusers and a canvass roof, operated by means of geared shafting. At the west end is the scene dock.

North of the outdoor stage is the big indoor studio slightly greater in dimensions. Massive scenes and night work are devoted to the indoor structure. Work may be carried on at any time and in any season here. Among the features of this studio are the electrical equipments, lighting facilities particularly. This department consists of a dozen Cooper-Hewitt mercury bank lamps of great power and also a large assortment of the new Winfield-Kerner lights.

The gardens adjoining the outdoor studio are also maintained at a large cost, their presence inside the plant being of beauty as well as of enormous value in many respects. Here garden scenes are filmed and picturesque backgrounds for "sets" on the stage furnished.

Other buildings constructed within the past year include the executive office building; projecting room and still department building; laboratories, consisting of developing, printing, drying and cutting rooms; the emergency hospital building and the garage, all of reinforced concrete.

In the five and a half acres of ground of the Horsley plant, there is room for improvements as they may be required and it is the plan of Mr. Horsley to extend his plant at another great output during the ensuing year.

The production staff consists of three companies, two of which are engaged in the filming of dramas, and are under the direction of Charles Swickard and Robert Broadwell, with William Clifford and Margaret Gibson, Crane Wilbur and May Gaston. The third company producing Cub Comedies features George Ovey. Milton H. Farhney is director, and has written all of his own scenarios. John Jasper is business manager, and Carlyle Robinson is in charge of the publicity.

Vogue Films, Inc., Successful Comedy Company

A most successful of the recently organized companies is that known as Vogue Films, Inc., which has a studio on Santa Monica boulevard, near Gower street. The company was organized in October of last year, with S. S. Hutchinson, chairman of board of directors, and Joseph Finn, president. J. R. Crone was selected as manager of the studio, and the organization's first producing company began work at the Signal studio. There, after two months, more space was needed, and the present quarters were secured. A second company was added at this time, and up until the first of June, the two directors filmed one-reel comedies on an average of one a week. Since then the companies have been alternating in the production of a two-reel comedy.

The producing staff includes Rube Miller, who in addition to directing, plays comedian parts; Owen Evans, Ward McAllister, Lillian Hamilton, and Director Henry Kernen, who has as his principals, Ben Turpin, Paddy Maguire, Gipsy Abbott and Arthur Moon.

The companies are now kept busy continuously filming Lonesome Luke and another series of comedies for Pathe Exchanges at the Rolin Film Company's new studio, built this year on Santa Monica boulevard. The producing plant is in every way modern, has a stage 100 by 190 feet, with twenty-five-foot diffusing system, and was built under the personal supervision of Hal. E. Roach, president and director for the company, and Dwight Whiting, treasurer and manager.

The principal players of the organization are Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Harry Pollard and Joe Pratt. The photography is in charge of James Crosby. The Rolin Company started from a very small beginning, and by establishing a reputation of producing fast moving laughmakers, has gained a very enviable position in filmdom. Much of the credit for this success must be attributed to the persistent and untiring efforts of Director Roach.

An important addition to the Los Angeles producing field is the National Drama Corporation, of which Thomas Dixon is director and general manager; P. G. Gould, Jr., president; W. R. Perkins, vice-president, and W. C. Burn, business manager. The company was organized in New York for the purpose of filming the novels of Mr. Dixon. Late last fall, property in Hollywood was purchased, and while the studios, office buildings and laboratories were being constructed, the company filmed the exteriors for the first feature. "The Fall of a Nation," which was recently given its premier in New York.

The plant covers more than a half block, and is modernly equipped in every respect. The company maintains no regular stock of players. At the present time the plant is busy in the making of twenty copies of "The Fall of a Nation," which will shortly have openings in all sections of the country.

William C. Thompson is in charge of the photography of the company, George H. Percival is art director, and Bartley Cushing, producing director.

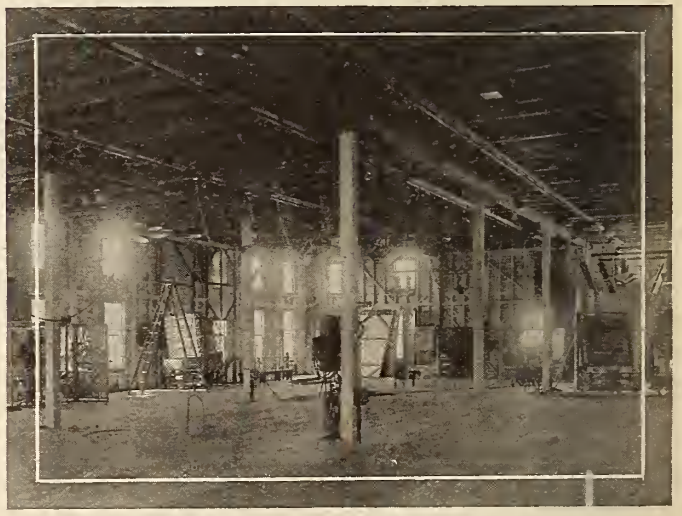
Early in the fall, Mr. Dixon will begin the filming of another of his stories.

Clune to Make Only Large Subjects

One twelve-reel subject, "Ramona," from the book of the same name, has been made by the Clune Film Producing Company, organized early last year, for the sole purpose of making large subjects to be released as theatrical attractions.

The plant is located on Melrose avenue in Hollywood, and was originally built by the Fiction Pictures Corporation. The studio grounds include practically all of a block, with large stages and adequate laboratories and mills. Lloyd Brown is manager of production; Donald Crisp, director, and Monroe Lathrop is manager of publicity.

Located in a secluded part of Hollywood, away from the din of street cars and honking traffic, is the studio of the Lone Star Film Corporation, where Mutual-Chaplin comedies are made. The quiet that prevails about the plant at all times, would not go a long way toward convincing the passer-by that stormy comedies are made there.



H. P. Caulfield is manager, Charlie Chaplin writes his own scenarios, and directs his own scenes, aided by Vincent Bryan, song writer. The stock company includes Edna Purviance, Charlotte Mineau, Eric Campbell, Leo White, Lloyd Bacon, Albert Auston, Fred Goodwins, James Kelly, John Rand, and Frank Coleman. Ed. Brewster is technical director; Al. Couderc, scenic artist; Billy Foster and Roland Totherch, cameramen, and Charles Levin, superintendent of laboratories.

The plant, which was opened on March 27, following Chaplin signing his contract on March 20, was built by the Climax Company, and is of sufficient size that Chaplin can turn around without striking his shoes against anything.

The company has now completed four two-reel subjects, including "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," and another, title of which has not been selected.

Conveniently located on the boulevard half way between Los Angeles and Hollywood, is the new producing plant of the Mabel Normand Film Company. The production here is under the supervision of Mack Sennett, with Hampton Del Ruth as manager of production. Playing opposite Miss Normand, who will be featured in all subjects, is Wheeler Oakman, and a supporting cast of well-known players. The company is now at work on its first production, which will be released through the Triangle shortly.

The plant consists of a very conveniently arranged building, approximately 100 by 175 feet in size. The dressing rooms, scene docks and office are at one side of the stage, with a very attractive pergola at the end, which the players use as a green room while waiting for scenes.

The Interior Stage of the L-KO-Universal Studio

The property of the Selig Polyscope Company, consists of thirty-five acres. A zoo and public park, with a studio in a separate enclosure adjoining, was completed during the present year, and formal public opening was made in August. The studio has been changed but little in the year, it having been completed prior to the time the construction work of the zoo property was taken up. The great collection of animals found here number more than seven hundred in all, and consist of more than two hundred varieties. The buildings are all of mission style architecture, with the exception of the entrance, which was designed and built under the special supervision of an Italian sculptor of note, the entrance being decorated with life sized studios of a number of the animals to be seen in the zoo.

At the present time James L. McGee is general manager of the Selig Polyscope Company interests; Thomas S. Nash, manager of production; Colin Campbell, William Robert Daly, T. N. Heffron and Marshall Neilan are directors.

At the present time much of the production of the Selig Company is being carried on at their Chicago studios, and at locations in the east.

Expansion on the part of the L-KO Company caused the need of a much larger studio, and now they occupy the entire plant formerly used by all Universal Companies in Hollywood. Here five companies are used in the production of L-KO comedies, and the sixth producing organization is that headed by Francis Ford and Grace Cunard which is making the "Peg o' the Ring" serial for Universal release. During the year a three-story, artificially lighted studio and a mammoth tank and other improvements were added so that more thrilling comedies could be made. Four aeroplanes were recently added to the equipment of the studio.

With the intention of producing a series of California historical subjects, the Monrovia Feature Film Company was organized about eight months ago by citizens of Monrovia, a foothill city twenty-five miles east of Los Angeles. The studio is located there, and the company has the exclusive use of a large tract of land with varied and beautiful scenery where exteriors for their films are made.

The first of the series of pictures is "The Argonauts of California," which was recently completed, and is now playing its first engagement at San Francisco. The picture consists of ten reels. The producing organization is now working on the second, "The Daughter of the Don," likewise to be of ten reels, which will be ready for release in August.

Both stories were written by Winfield Hogaboom, and produced under the direction of Henry Kabierske. Later "When the Gringoes Came," is to be filmed. Those appearing in the present subject are Marie McKeen, Hal. Cooley, V. O. Whitehead, Grant Churchill, Hubert Whitehead, William Ehfe, G. Hall Damon, William Rieffle, G. H. Hubert, Frances Burnham, Josephine Dillon, Madeline Matzen, Pearl Prince and others.

The board of directors is composed of R. M. Francisco, president; C. D. Holmes, vice-president; L. E. Frey, vice-president; and George B. Holmes, secretary and treasurer.

Fox Makes Important Entry Into Film Colony

Perhaps the most important addition to the west coast producing colony is that of the Fox Film Corporation. In December, General Manager W. R. Sheehan, brought the first producing organization to the coast. This was in charge of Director Oscar Apfel. The Selig Edendale studio was leased, and a number of improvements made, including the erection of a 70 by 100 foot exterior stage. The plant is a very efficient one, having elegant offices, laboratories, carpenter shops, scene and property store rooms, a glass studio 50 by 50, an exterior stage 50 by 50, and an artificial lake 40 by 40 and 50 deep. The latter part of February the second company with R. A. Walsh as director was brought to the coast, and early in June, the third producing organization was added when Richard Stanton was employed as director.

The Apfel Company is composed of William Farnum, H. J. Hebert, Willard Louis, William Burress, H. A. Barrows and Gladys Brockwell, with Lester Scott and John Meighn as assistants, and Alfredo Gondolfi and Harry Gerstad as cameramen. Director Walsh is assisted by J. A. Marcus, Gordon Cooper, and Len Powers. George Benoit is cameraman, and the players are Milton Sills, John Reese, Charles Clary, Arthur Mackley, and Miriam Cooper. Director Stanton has as his players, George Walsh, Anna Luther, Hershall Mayall, Edward Cecil, Harry Devere, and Scott Dunlap as assistant.

The staff is composed of M. Morris, auditor; George Grenier, technical superintendent; E. E. Rogers, employment agent; Reed Heustis, publicity and scenario writer; W. E. Meuselbach, superintendent of laboratories.

The Fox Film Corporation through the general western manager, A. Carlos, this week made a long term lease on the studio built by the National Drama Corporation, and shortly will begin the production of short comedies. Selection for the producing staff for these is now in the hands of Mr. Carlos who announced that shortly several companies will begin work there.

Vitagraph Located on Eleven Acres of Rolling Country

After four very successful years at Santa Monica, the Western studios of the Vitagraph were adjudged too small, and after weeks of searching on the part of Producing Manager Rollin S.

A Glimpse of the Vitagraph Western Studio, Hollywood

Sturgeon and Business Manager William S. Smith, Hollywood property was selected and a new studio built. The grounds consist of eleven acres of rolling country. Building was started in October, and in December every department was moved to the new location. The studio has an open air stage, 75 by 150, with adequate dressing rooms, carpenter shops, laboratories and offices, which were completed while a greater number of the organization's stock company were absent with Producing Manager Rollin S. Sturgeon, who was then in the Bear Lake Valley district filming "God's Country—and the Woman." Recently additional dressing rooms and consultation offices for directors were added.

The producing organization consists of three companies. Director Sturgeon, besides supervising the production of the other directors, devotes practically all of his time to the making of Vitagraph Blue Ribbon subjects. Other directors are William Wolbert and Dave Smith, both of whom make one, two and three-reel comedies and dramas.

Business Manager W. S. Smith is responsible for the very efficient plant which has arisen under his supervision, and he promises additional improvements in the form of a great indoor stage, to be erected within a short time at the eastern end of the present large open air stages.

Harry B. Harris is in charge of the photography; Laura Belt is manager of the employment bureau, and Doris Schroeder is publicity writer. The Vitagraph stock company includes William Duncan, George Holt, Nell Shipman, Anne Schafer, Mary Anderson, Florence Vidor, Clara Toner, Jack Mower, Otto Lederer, Edgar Keller, George Kunkel and a number of others.

The Kalem West Coast producing organization is under the general management of Hamilton Smith, who has been at Los Angeles since early this year, and gives much of his time to the writing and supervision of scenarios for the three producing organizations.

The Kalem Serial Company, as it has become known, continues at the studio on Verdugo Road near Glendale. This is in charge of James Horne. From this plant has come such successful serials as "The Girl Detective," "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel," "Stingaree," "The Social Pirates," and now "The Girl from Frisco" is being made. Director Horne has as his staff A. C. Gage, business manager; H. M. Moswald, cameraman, and the leading players are Marin Sais, True Boardman, Frank Jonasson, R. E. Bradbury and Ed. Clisbee.

The Hollywood studio continues under the business management of M. E. M. Gibsone, and this is now the home of Ham Comedies and the Hazards of Helen. The former are made under the direction of Lloyd Hamilton, who is the featured comedian, supported by Bud Duncan, Ethel Teare, Gus Edwards and Al. Edmundson. The Hazards Company, productions of which feature Helen Rose Gibson, is directed by James Davis, and the supporting cast includes Percy Pembroke, George Smith and G. A. Williams. Harry Thorpe and William Kraft are cameramen.

E. & R. Jungle—Where Animal Comedies Come from

A most interesting studio is that of the E. & R. Jungle Film Company, located in East Los Angeles, which is the home of animal comedies featuring Napoleon and Sally, the educated chimpanzees, and scores of rare animals which make up the zoo of this company. The E. and R. people have been producing for about two years, but it was not until the first of this year that they began making regular releases, and since that time they have issued thirty-three one-reel comedies, these consisting of one reel each week, sold to independent exchanges throughout the country.

Messrs. Edwards and Rounan are the owners of the company and supervise the production of all films. The direction is in charge of Joseph J. Franz, and a company of excellent players constitute the stock of the company. Clem Pope is manager of the publicity department and aids in scenario writing.

Every place the E. & R. comedies have been shown they have made a decided hit with the general public, with the result that in many territories they form a feature part of a program in the better houses, adding just that touch of novelty which goes a long way to putting the show over to the satisfaction of all patrons.

The Static Club of America has had a very successful year, with the result that the membership has been materially increased, and the club has found it necessary to move to larger quarters, and are now located at 1917 Santa Cruz street. The organization has served the purpose for which it was originally planned by its charter members, L. M. Smith, F. L. Granville, W. F. Alder, H. M. McGuire, James Crossby, Hy. Harris, E. G. Ullman and Al. Ansbacher, and to it can be traced many improvements in photography, and a general goodfellowship among cameramen.

E. G. Ullman, manager of the Universal City cameramen, served as president from the organization of the club, Feb. 13, 1913, to March of this year, when Charles Rosher was elected to this office, together with E. G. Vallejo, vice-president; Al. Cawood, secretary, and S. S. Norton, treasurer. These officers with Ralph Morello, Freind Baker, Roy Klaffkie, Anton Nagy, William Alder and Homer Scott, form the board of directors.

Headquarters of the Static Club of America, Los Angeles

Thirteen Companies at Work for American

An increasing demand for American-Mutual pictures has made the year one of expansion at the American studios in Santa Barbara. Thirteen companies are turning out productions. Five of these work continuously on five-reel features, and another devotes exclusive attention to "The Secret of the Submarine."

The American Studios at Santa Barbara: A Partial View

Under the management of P. G. Lynch, Coast representative of President Hutchinson, the American has grown from a studio with three working companies to its present magnitude. On its payroll are 325 regular workers and with the 250 extras, the employees total about 600.

Each director and his assistant has his individual, finely appointed office in "Director's Row," adjacent to the big glass studio. These offices are in a modern, well-equipped concrete structure just completed.

Notable in the growth of the studio has been the photographic end. That department is now making prints of its own pictures, a work formerly done at the Chicago plant. The developing rooms have been enlarged, and a building erected for a portrait studio. Thirty-six employees work under the direction of C. G.

The Spacious Lawn at the Entrance to the American Studios at Santa Barbara Heimerl, department manager. The technical chief and art director, Edward M. Langley, also boasts a new home. Instead of one technical man for each department, there is a cabinet of experts acting under Mr. Langley. As a picture is gone over in the technical department by the director and his assistants, there are in attendance an architect, a designer, aperiod director and furniture man and a superintendent of construction. This system guarantees minute attention to details in production.

New executive offices have been completed in close proximity to "Director's Row" and the big glass studio. The studio proper, completed in November, houses a dozen ordinary sets at once, and has been used in its entirety for one set employing several hundred persons. Under its roof is a completely equipped property room, occupying three floors. At the end is a cabinet shop equal in size to that of many factories. Adjacent to the "Big Glass" are more stars' dressing rooms, just occupied, in addition to those already provided in the Green Room across the lawn.

In the garage, which provides quarters for a dozen high-powered cars, used to take companies out on locations, a repair shop has been added. Not the least of the innovations has been the inauguration of a guide system to show sight-seers about the plant. This is in charge of Edward D. McKiernan. To supply the publicity distributing centers with first hand information, a publicity department has been established, with George Wight in charge.

The home of Morosco and Pallas, established Aug. 8, 1913, under the name of Bosworth, Inc., has grown until the stage space is sixty-three times as large as at first, the floor space in the various buildings has been increased seventy-one times the original amount, and the total area covered is ninety times greater.

This steady expansion began with a small stage, 20 by 25 feet. in August, 1914, a fire-proof concrete structure, embodying a glass-covered stage, a laboratory, dressing rooms, and offices, was built. Four months later the company doubled its plant by the acquisition of real estate across Council street. Stage No. 2 was built the same month. In January, 1915, and again in May of the same year, the glass-covered stage was enlarged until it covered 90 by 150 feet. An office building, an addition to house scenic frames, a sixteen compartment scenic dock, and a double warehouse were constructed the same year, and the capacity was trebled.

During the present year, many extensions and additions have been made, a full description of which was carried in the July 8 issue of Motion Picture News.

Motion Picture Producers Association

Events of the year have caused film folks of Los Angeles to see the need of organization and co-operation, with the result that new associations have been formed, and old ones strengthened.

Perhaps the most important of this nature was that of the formation of the Motion Picture Producers Association. Practically every studio in the coast colony is represented by one or more persons as members of this. The fees are sufficient to enable the organization to employ a capable secretary, and through him most of the business of the association is transacted. The matter which brought about the formation of this association was an unwarranted attack by a preacher, who spoke of studios as "movie camps of immorality."

The producers banded together to prove the unjustness of this charge, and found co-operation so beneficial that many additional items were placed in their by-laws. The association members took an active part in the fight against local censorship in Los Angeles, and greatly aided in knocking out the injurious ordinances. Since, the organization has taken an active part in censorship fights which have come up in other cities, and at the present time a campaign is being waged in all parts of the country against censorship by means of slides, newspaper matter and similar propaganda.

Shortly after the organization of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, a small committee was selected to represent the Board in southern California. In order that the committee be more representative, additional members were appointed which included the publicity men of studios.

The California Committee since its organization took an active part in local matters injurious to the industry as a whole, working for the defeat of local censorship measures, combating when unjust criticism of the film people was made, inducing the newspapers to verify all stories pertaining to arrests of people who claimed to be motion picture players, who were in reality but extra people; brought to the attention of the transportation companies the unjustness of the freight rates charged for motion picture theatre and studio equipment, and worked for the increased membership of the Board of Trade. The members of the California Committee have worked practically independently of the parent organization, and now that officers of the latter are planning to reorganize, the California Committee has decided to continue the present organization here with meetings every two weeks.

The members of the committee are Kenneth McGaffey, Lasky; Ford I. Beebe, Signal; Doris Schroeder, Vitagraph; Bennie Ziedman, Fine Arts; Carlyle Robinson, Horsley; H. O. Stechhan, Balboa; M. G. Jonas, Universal, and Dwight Whiting, Rolin, with Mabel Condon of the Mirror, secretary, and J. C. Jessen of the News, chairman.

More than a year ago, ten or twelve motion picture directors began agitation looking to the formation of a co-operative association among the producers for the benefit of all concerned, and the outcome of this was the issuance of a state charter to the Motion Picture Directors' Association on July 1, 1915. The prime movers in this were Otis Turner, Charles Giblyn, William Robert Daly, Al. E. Christie, Jay Hunt, Eddie Dillon, Allen Curtis, Francis Ford, Henry McRay, Joseph deGrasse, Frank Lloyd, Traverse Vale, Del Henderson and others.

The first officers selected were Otis Turner, president; Charles Giblyn, first vice-president; William Robert Daly, second vice-president; Allen Curtis, secretary; Eddie Dillon, treasurer, and Al. E. Christie, Jay Hunt and Robert Leonard, trustees.

Throughout the year the association has held by-weekly meetings, a number of which have been of a social nature, and shortly they will open permanent headquarters at the Alexandria Hotel, Los Angeles, which will be open all the time, and where their meetings will be held.

The association has been a great factor in improving conditions at the studios in production, and bettering conditions for its members. When first organized, it had a membership of twenty-four, and this has gradually been increased to more than sixty. Members are to be found in the east as well as in the west.

National Association of Motion Picture Industry Formed

This Is the Name of the Organization Taking the Place of the Board of Trade—Membership Is to Consist of Five Classes—Class 1, Producers and Importers; Class 2, the National League; Class 3, Men Engaged in Making or Selling Equipment; Class 4, Distributors; Class 5, Players and Studio Employees

EIGHTY-FIVE prominent representatives of the motion picture industry gathered at the Hotel Astor at luncheon on July 6 to hear the report of the sub-committee of twelve which was appointed by the general committee on the formation of a trade association to present a charter and by-laws.

W. W. Irwin presided as chairman and in an address presented the fundamentals of the proposed organization. The name decided upon is The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Copies of the proposed charter and by-laws were distributed among those present.

Mr. Irwin said: "The committee begs leave to say that in its work it has endeavored to keep in mind two thoughts which it believes to be fundamental for the success of this association, if formed, and therefore for the welfare of the whole industry. First, that the objects and actions of the association should be confined to questions affecting the motion picture industry as a whole. Second, that this association should furnish a means by which the various branches of the industry may have the opportunity of knowing each other and the respective viewpoints of each upon all questions arising from within the industry, and thus themselves to adjust amicably any differences which may arise between two or more branches of the industry."

Mr. Irwin gave a detailed explanation of important points in the constitution and by-laws. He explained that the fixing of the annual dues is to be left to each branch of the industry, each branch having more or less self-government but being an integral part of the national association for purpose of united defense from without and for the adjustment of internal problems.

Membership to Consist of Five Classes

The membership of the association is to consist of five classes, namely: Class 1, producers and importers of motion pictures. Class 2, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Membership in good standing in the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America shall carry with it membership in the national association. Class 3, those engaged in manufacturing, dealing in, and importing motion picture supplies and equipment. Class 4, distributors of motion pictures. Class 5, miscellaneous—including motion picture publications, newspapers, studio employees, directors, stars, cameramen, projection engineers, etc., together with all employees of establishments and plants connected in any way whatsoever with the motion picture industry.

Following considerable discussion and upon motion by William A. Brady, the constitution and by-laws as presented were unanimously approved and the chairman was empowered to appoint a committee to present the proposed association to the Exhibitors' League of America in convention assembled at Chicago. The committee as appointed by Chairman Irwin consists of: William A. Brady, Paul H. Cromelin, W. W. Irwin, Wiliam M. Seabury, Lee A. Ochs, John J. Witman, L. L. Levine, J. H. Hallberg, W. Stephen Bush, William A. Johnston.

Upon motion of William Brandt, a unanimous vote of thanks was tendered to the sub-committee for its untiring efforts in behalf of the new association.

The report of the sub-committee presented a graduated assessment in the way of entrance fee upon all the different branches and concerns in any way connected with the industry, and subscription blanks were circulated.

William A. Brady started the ball rolling by subscribing one thousand dollars for the World-Paragon Company, despite the fact that the assessment for producing companies is two hundred and fifty dollars. The following amounts were also subscribed:

Scenes, Atmospheric and Dramatic, in "Judith of the Cumberlands," As Produced by Signal with Helen Holmes in the Stellar Role, to Be Released Through Mutual

THIRTY AGED MEN AND WOMEN IN "GOD'S HALF ACRE," METRO

Thirty aged men and women are shown in the forthcoming Metro-Rolfe production, "God's Half Acre," starring Mabel Taliaferro, under the direction of Edwin Carewe. They take the part of inmates of Rainbow's End, a home for the aged. Some of them are veterans of the speaking stage who are aided by the Actor's Fund, while others belong to the "old guard" in motion pictures.

Exhibitors in Dayton Make Protest Against Theatre Tax

Gerber and Haas of Majestic Theatre, Representing Managers of the City, Address Communication to Senators and Congressmen

EXHIBITORS at Dayton, Ohio, have made an emphatic protest against the proposed Federal tax of one-half of one per cent to be assessed against picture theatres. Manager Gerber and Haas of the Majestic theatre, represented the Dayton managers in a letter sent to Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo. They also addressed communications to Senators Pomerene and Harding, Representatives Gard and Kitchin, of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Chairman Simmons, of the Senate Finance Committee.

The letter to Senator Harding follows:

July 2.

Hon. Warren Harding,
Senate, Washington, D. C.

Dear Sir:

We noticed in the new revenue bill submitted to the House of Representatives to-day that it is proposed to tax moving picture theatres one-half of one per cent. of their gross receipts.

To you, as its Senator, the Majestic Theatre desires to protest most emphatically and most energetically against this unfair, unjust and undemocratic tax. The present Federal tax we considered grossly unjust and it was paid under protest. There is absolutely no reason why the framers of this bill should not be able to draft a bill that would be just and equitable to all.

It is indefensible that certain businesses should be required to pay a portion of the expense of this government while other businesses are exempt. We are willing to pay our share of any tax, but no more. We well understand that moving picture theatres are taxed because they are considered luxuries. Well and good, we will grant that fact; but why should not other luxuries be taxed equally as well?

Ninety per cent. of the articles on sale in a department store are luxuries, yet the department stores are not taxed one penny. The entire product of confectionery stores is a luxury, but no tax is placed on them. Automobiles are luxuries, yet they are not taxed. Pianos, victrolas, victrola records, jewelry, books, magazines, cigars and tobacco, the output of soda fountains are all luxuries and should be taxed. Likewise dance halls, and numbers and numbers of other institutions and businesses or products could be justly taxed, in which case the tax upon picture theatres and other amusements could be reduced so that it would in a measure be a just and equitable tax.

This is a free country—that is, our Senators and Representatives are free to impose numberless taxes indiscriminately upon their constituents.

The Majestic Theatre registers with you its most emphatic protest against this reprehensible tax and requests that you bring this entire matter to the attention of the proper persons for rectification.

We do not care if you do not receive a single other letter in regard to this matter. The Majestic Theatre proposes to raise its voice in protest and if nothing more is done it requests you to read this letter into the minutes of the Senate so that it will go on record.

Yours Very truly,
MAJESTIC THEATRE,
Gerber & Haas.

Benjamin B. Hampton Will Devote All His Time to Pictures

Director of the Newly Incorporated Vitagraph Company of America Resigns as Vice-President of the American Tobacco Company

BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON has resigned his office of vice-president of the American Tobacco Company, and will devote his entire time to the motion picture business. Mr. Hampton, as already announced, was elected a director of the newly incorporated Vitagraph Company of America, together with Glendinning J. Ryan, H. H. Vreeland, Albert E. Smith, J. Stuart Blackton and W. W. Irwin.

Dow, Jones and Company, in a recent news bulletin, has this to say of Mr. Hampton, under the heading, "Pithy Personalities":

"The guiding spirit behind the proposed motion picture merger is Benjamin B. Hampton of the American Tobacco Company crowd. Mr. Hampton has Thomas Fortune Ryan and Percival S. Hill as his backers. The career of Mr. Hampton is illustrative of what pluck can accomplish in America. He started as a reporter in a small Illinois town and, with his brother, Jesse D. Hampton, soon owned the paper on which he was employed. It is said that the Hampton brothers, in their little paper, once scored an important "scoop" on the Chicago dailies on a battle in the Spanish-American War." Their fame brought them to Chicago where they worked as newspapermen and later to New York where they entered the advertising business. They started Hampton's Magazine and built up a wonderful circulation in a short time. But when Hampton's was merged with a string of western magazines the magazine failed. The advertising business also slumped and B. B. Hampton was forced to give it up and start all over again. "Within a few months he was well on his feet and managed the advertising campaigns of the Riker-Hegeman drug stores. From this company he went to the American Tobacco Company and after six months of association with P. S. Hill he was made vice-president of the American Tobacco Company. His resignation from the latter concern has just been announced, but this merely implies that he will represent the Hill and Ryan and possibly the Brady interests in the new movie merger."

"WHERE IS MY FATHER?" IS FROM EXCLUSIVE FEATURES

Exclusive Features, Inc., which makes its initial appearance in the producing field this month with the drama, "Where Is My Father?" announces through Joseph M. Goldstein, president and treasurer, that it will henceforth release a feature of five to seven reels every month.

"Where Is My Father?" is adapted from the Dumas novel, and offers May Ward in the stellar role.

SALARIES OF LAEMMLE SOLDIER EMPLOYEES TO GO RIGHT ON

President Carl Laemmle of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, announced that the salaries of two of his factory employees, H. Manhaken and Edward Carey, who went to the front with their regiments, will be paid during their absence to their relatives.

Mr. Manhaken and Mr. Carey were both employed in the laboratories of the Universal at Fort Lee, Mr. Manhaken, in the perforating department and Mr. Carey in the negative polishing department. Both Universal employees were members of Company F. Fifth Regiment, New Jersey Infantry, when the mobilization order called them away from their work.

When the men turned in their enlistment slips, President Laemmle immediately notified them before they left the mobilization camp at Sea Girt, N. J., that they need not worry, as their salaries would be paid to their relatives while they were in uniform. The men left for Sea Girt on Saturday, June 22, and entrained for Mexico with the Fifth New Jersey Regiment on Wednesday, June 26.

Charlotte Marcus of the bookkeeping department at the Universal laboratories has become so enthusiastic with the war spirit that she declares that she intends to become a Red Cross nurse. According to a late report from Fort Lee it is rumored that she will join Mr. Manhaken and Mr. Carey at Brownsville.

MARY MILES MINTER IS BUSY ON WEST COAST

Dainty Mary Miles Minter, the golden-haired, dimpled Mutual star is busy on the West Coast. Although she has not completed her work in "Youth's Endearing Charm," the first of the features in which she is to be starred, she has already begun scenes in the second release, "Dulcie's Adventure." This story, which was written by R. Straus and made into scenario form by William Pigott, is being directed by James Kirkwood who recently joined the American Mutual forces.

Fox Conceived the Idea for "A Daughter of the Gods"

Even After He Supervised Production by Cable and Had Seen His Dream Made Into Reality, He Was Not Satisfied, and Decided to Have Music Score for Subject

The Owner, the Star, and the Composer of the Incidental Music of "A Daughter of the Gods": (Left to Right) William Fox, Annette Kellermann, and Robert Hood Bowers

IT was William Fox who conceived the spectacle which he will shortly present to the public under the title, "A Daughter of the Gods," and it was William Fox who financed it, expending, according to an announcement, $1,200,000 for the purpose.

Even after Mr. Fox had supervised, by cable, the manifold problems which confronted Director-General Brenon, had ordered the construction of a whole city, the employment of 20,000 people for various scenes, and had seen his dream made into a reality, he was not content. He determined that "A Daughter of the Gods" should have the most effective presentation, and a special musical score.

Robert Hood Bowers was engaged to furnish the music, because Mr. Fox places a high value on music as an adjunct of motion pictures. Mr. Bowers is a composer of note, and is remembered particularly as the author of "The Vanderbilt Cup," "The Red Rose," and more than a score of other shows which had long runs.

Studios for Twelve Companies in Jacksonville Is Garrick Plan

Former Director General of Gaumont Incorporates with a Capital of $300,000—Announces He Has Secured Rights to Picturize Ella Wheeler Wilcox Poems

Special to Motion Picture News.

Jacksonville, Florida, July 8.

THE announcement has been made by Richard Garrick, former director general of the Gaumont Motion Picture Company in this city, that ground will be broken immediately for the erection of one of the largest studios on the Atlantic Coast, which would accommodate twelve working companies at the same time. Mr. Garrick returned from New York Saturday night and has been in conference with New York and local capitalists since his arrival here, the outcome of which was the subscribing of the desired capital for the company.

Corporation papers have been requested from the State Department under the name of the Garrick Studios Company, which will have a capital stock of $300,000 all paid in. Several local business men have invested heavily in the concern and one of the New York investors is H. Y. Hiland, prominent in financial circles in that city.

Mr. Garrick announces that he has secured the right for picturizing several of Ella Wheeler Wilcox's poems, and that he intends using part of the stage for his productions. Stage space will be rented to various producing companies visiting this city during the winter months, who have hitherto had to use the extra space of the Eagle Company and the Thanhouser studios.

The plant will cover five acres, and will be one of the most up to date developing and printing plants east of Los Angeles. Mr. Garrick has already secured contracts for stage rentals from several producers.

Willis and Inglis Firm a Clearing House for Industry

Firm Began in a Small Way Four Years Ago and Now Is Wide in Its Scope—Promotes Publicity, and Looks After Photoplay Rights to Books and Plays

THE firm of Willis and Inglis, which had its origin four years ago in a small publicity bureau established by Richard Willis, has grown into a large organization occupying five offices in the Wright and Callendar building, Los Angeles, with two offices in Hollywood.

Its activities have likewise expanded. They now include not only the promotion of publicity, but the complete management of the business and professional affairs of prominent players, the sale of photoplay rights to books and plays, the sale of original scenarios, the financing of new companies, the supplying of electrical inventions and accessories for studio work, and other activities which make the firm a clearing house for the industry. Its services are in demand by the large producer as well as by the individual player.

Richard Willis was a traveling actor, a writer, an artist, a member of the Nestor Company and publicity writer for Universal before he entered upon his present work. Gus Inglis brought to the firm a wide knowledge of the picture business, from the business and exhibiting ends as well as from those of the actor and actor and director.

HENRY LEHRMANN SELLS INTEREST IN L-KO

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 8.

Henry Lehrman, director general of the L-Ko Company, has disposed of his interests and last week severed his connection with the comedy organization. Lehrman left for New York immediately, presumably to organize a new company. Jack Blystone, who has been a director for L-Ko since its organization, succeeds Lehrman as director general.

Illustrating "The Empress News," Owensboro, Ky., in Its New Form

DO you use common sense in advertising your pictures? Do you make your patrons feel that you are personally responsible for every picture you show? Isn't it a fact that if you make an effort to tell your patrons, in measured language and not in exaggerations, just how each picture will appeal to them, that you are on the road to maintaining their confidence in you?

Along this line, we are interested to note the style used by George Bleich, of the Empress, Owensboro, Ky., in advertising his pictures. He has recently changed the form of his house organ to a newspaper, and to good effect. Page Three and part of Page Four are given over to descriptions of individual pictures for the week. Instead of the wholesale "puffs" in which so many exhibitors still indulge we find things like these:

An introductory statement at the top, reading: "Away from the old stereotyped form of program here is a new way and it seems to me a good way. The idea is that you are being told personally just what each day's show may hold to interest you, in a way as though you faced me. It is hoped that you appreciate that the information is straightforward and the very best knowledge that I can glean from criticisms from various sources."—Bleich.

Some of the descriptions include phrases like the following: "A production that is sure to please nearly everybody . . . Really I feel sorry for all who cannot see this beautiful, simple and refreshing play . . . There are lots of laughs in this picture and it is pretty sure to find favor with nearly everybody . . . Here is a picture that you would let go by on account of its title, when it is in all respects a 'jim dandy' . . ."

CHAPERONS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE IN WASHINGTON THEATRE

The American theatre, one of the Atkinson chain of houses in Washington, D. C., has instituted a system of chaperonage for young people. Manager Thomas A. Costello describes it as follows:

"Having the confidence of the mothers of the neighborhood, I am aware of the responsibility placed upon me. So when the young folks, whom I know I am to look after, come into my theatre, I simply put them with some of the married folks, make them acquainted and everything goes along smoothly. It is making the young people acquainted, under the proper social conditions, and at the same time creating their meetings in the picture house under congenial companionship. I have yet to hear the first complaint."

"MYRA" ADVERTISED BY DELUGE OF BALLOONS

The people of Brewster, N. Y., were startled the other day by a deluge of balloons. Investigation showed that Robert A. Jennings had climbed to the top of the Southeast House, and sent down hundreds of balloons advertising "The Mysteries of Myra," shown by Jennings at the Brewster Town Hall each week. It proved a clever advertising scheme.

ADVERTISING LINKED UP TO LOCAL NEWSPAPER STUNT

Gerber and Hess, managers of the Majestic theatre, Dayton, Ohio, recently demonstrated how the exhibitor can advertise by linking up his theatre with events in the local newspapers. The Dayton Journal, one of the largest newspapers in the territory, has been running a series of rotogravure photographs of stars, supplied to them by the Water Color Co. of New York. One of the most popular photographs in this set was a handsome 10 x 14 picture of Blanche Sweet, the Lasky-Paramount star, which was announced for distribution in the Sunday issue of June 11.

Having had their attention called to this distribution, the Majestic theatre management placed in its advertising the wording that Blanche Sweet, whose picture was given away that day appeared on the screen of the Majestic theatre in "The Thousand Dollar Husband." This series of rotogravure photographs of motion picture stars is being given away in other parts of the country and many exhibitors will have the same opportunity to make their advertising effective.

HOUSE TALK EXCELLENT FEATURE OF TIOGA THEATRE NEWS

The Tioga Theatre, Philadelphia, whose enterprise in running a full-page ad. in The Philadelphia Evening Ledger we commented upon recently, also issues a neat four-page house organ, well laid out and illustrated.

The thing which attracts us most in the Tioga Theatre News is the excellent house talk which occupies column one of the last page in each week's issue. These house talks take up in succession the various phases of the theatre, and serve as effective little editorials.

CALHOUN, MILWAUKEE, ISSUES AN ANNIVERSARY PROGRAM

Managers of the Calhoun theatre on Lake street, Milwaukee, Wis., which shows Paramount features, have issued on the first anniversary of their house a twelve page boklet with a particularly attractive cover, a well-drawn sketch printed in soft brown sepia ink. The advertising pages were particularly well laid out and the program of the week was stretched through the entire book in belt form, with coming attractions featured on the back cover.

PUT THE NEWS ON YOUR REGULAR MAILING LIST

Motion Picture News has received the following house organs and other forms of exhibitor advertising:

72nd Street Playhouse Magazine, New York.

Invitation to the formal opening of the Criterion, Atlanta.

The Lyric News, Mena, Arkansas.

House organ of the Victoria theatre, Buffalo.

Second anniversary program of the Cumberland, Brooklyn.

These are newcomers, and we shall be pleased to receive them regularly. We urge every exhibitor to put us on his mailing list, so that we may note his advertising schemes in these columns.

If you put over special stunts, don't forget to send us descriptions of them also, so that we may pass them along to your brother exhibitors.

SCRAPS OF WALL PAPER USED IN NOVELTY AD

Scraps of wall paper were effectively utilized by the Regent theatre, Alameda, Cal., for a novelty in advertisements during the recent engagement of Marguerite Clark in "The Prince and the Pauper." The announcement which the scraps of paper carried is reprinted in Paramount Progress. It reads:

"We are tearing paper off the walls of the Regent Theatre to make room for the crowds who will want to see little Marguerite Clark in "The Prince and the Pauper.'"

A small cut of Marguerite Clark was used and the printing was attractively done. Any exhibitor can obtain bits of wall paper from a paper hanger at a nominal cost and this kind of advertisement, because it is unique, may be used upon occasion very effectively. Big type and few words should be the rule, however, as the paper is not particularly good for printing and small type cannot be read.

REFERENCE CARD AS HOUSE ORGAN FOR MISSISSIPPI EXHIBITOR

Yazoo City, Miss., is a town without a daily newspaper, but George C. Cacum, manager of the Yazoo theatre, finds a way to advertise his pictures successfully just the same. This is his scheme:

He issues a card 11 x 6½ inches, heralding the week's attractions, has enough copies printed to supply all the homes in Yazoo City, and distributes them himself. This necessitates arising at 4.30 a. m. every Monday.

"I find this way of advertising the best I have ever tried," writes Mr. Cacum, "provided, of course, the cards are distributed conscientiously."

Mr. Cacum has evidently hit upon the right idea for his town. The card is neatly printed, and is very good for reference purposes.

How to Handle Crowds Successfully Is Discussed by a Cleveland Exhibitor

EMERY N. DOWNS, manager of the Atlas Aumusement Company, and also manager of the Knickerbocker theatre in Cleveland, Ohio, has sent in an interesting letter to Paramount Progress, on the subject of Handling Crowds.

"The Knickerbocker has a system which, though it may not apply to every theatre, will give you an idea of how we handle the large crowds attending our theatre. You may be able to apply some of these ideas to your own use," writes Mr. Downs.

"In the first place, the crowds should be handled before they arrive. Patrons should be given explicit information both by slides and program as to just the minute the feature will start at each show. The 'when to come' slides should be shown at each performance for at least a week before the crowd-getting attraction is to be exhibited.

"On these days the doors should be opened five or ten minutes before the usual time, and, as the patrons are seated, a close observation should be taken for two conditions: First, ushers must see that no single seats are left between parties who do not happen to be together. Second, the volume of patronage as the first show progresses should be carefully watched in order that one may know how the seats will be vacated as the second show starts to empty the house.

"If the house fills before the finish of the first show there should be an usher standing at the ticket window announcing, 'There are no seats for the first performance; the second show will start at—, when there will be seats for all,' or some clear, short sentence informing patrons of the conditions.

"Many a good patron is turned into a 'knocker' because one extra usher bullied him, with the idea that he was handling a gang of workhouse inmates 'and was not going to let any one put something over on him.' Therefore ushers should be instructed to treat every patron as though he were the 'host' at a happy gathering and the patrons were his rich aunts and uncles.

"Do not 'speed up' your projection so it affects the action of the picture. Rather dress your 'fillers' to shorten the length of the program."

BELIEVES IN GIVING PICTURES A DIGNIFIED PRESENTATION

Manager Joe Morgan, of the Savoy, Washington, D. C., does not believe in rushing his pictures through, or hurrying patrons to their seats.

"One thing I believe that has served to increase our popularity," says Mr. Morgan, "is we take our time. Nothing or no one is hurried. The pictures are given a slow, dignified presentation, patrons are escorted slowly to their seats, an interlude of music begins each show. I always have time to greet my patrons and answer all questions, and so does my doorkeeper, Mr. Lehman. In everything possible I try to avoid the mad rush which has become a part of business life.

"I contend that the patrons of a picture show come for enjoyment and relaxation, and not to be hurried along like a late breakfast or some commercial function. To me this appears a very important business asset; at least, I have found it a paying proposition."

VANCOUVER EXHIBITOR ENTERTAINS CANADIAN BATTALION

On the eve of the departure of the 158th Battalion from Vancouver, B. C., for their summer camp at Vernon, Manager Douglas Creighton of the Globe theatre had the entire battalion as his guests, when the Triangle production, "Martyrs of the Alamo," was the feature. The soldiers marched to the theatre in a body, attracting a great deal of attention as they went through town. The boxes had been reserved for the officers and their wives.

NOVEL ELECTRIC SIGN FOR "THE IRON CLAW"

C. I. Ramsdell, manager of the Acme Amusement Co. at Lincoln, Neb., running "The Iron Claw" at the Lyric theatre, has made a novel electric sign. It is in the form of an iron claw. It is electrically lighted, showing the words "Iron Claw Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday," on the inside.

Ramsdell was at first puzzled how to get the claw to open and shut. Mechanical engineers of Lincoln were unable to furnish the answer. Determined upon getting the sign the way he wanted it, Ramsdell got an old biclcle, took the tire off the rear wheel, hooked it up to a motor with a belt and by connecting the pedal of the bicycle with the lower claw, he was able to secure the desired result. He is decidedly proud of the contrivance, and declares he can count the increased business every night.

He is now planning a contrivance to advertise "The Grip of Evil."

BANNERS ON AUTOS HELP PULL BIG BUSINESS FOR IOWAN

William Roper, manager of the Roper, Council Bluffs, Ia., is a big believer in banners on automobiles. Nearly every week he takes out his machine, puts on a big banner with startlingly big letters, and parades the street. The Roper theatre is doing a constantly increasing business.

Glimpses of "Quicksands of Deceit" and "Love's Bitter Strength," Current American-Mutual Releases

ANIMATED WEEKLY TO SHOW SCENES CONNECTED WITH INFANTILE PARALYSIS SCOURGE

The Universal Animated Weekly has entered into arrangements with the New York Department of Health to film a series of views showing how the spread of the infantile paralysis scourge may be checked. New York's fathers and mothers are terrified at the rapid spread of the disease, which on July 4, in one day alone claimed twenty-seven lives in the various boroughs, and was rapidly spreading. In twenty-four hours, fifty-nine new cases were reported. Since the disease first broke out in South Brooklyn late in June, 480 cases have been treated with a terrifying mortality rate and preparations at the city hospitals have been made to treat 1,500 more cases.

Scenes at the hospitals, illustrations of practical measures to stop the spread of the disease, the activities of the Bureau of Child Hygiene, the Bureau of Infectious Diseases, quarantine officials, the Health Department, the frantic attempt of the hospital authorities to supply cribs for the stricken children and to collect them in hospital ambulances, the medical treatment advisable in the prevention of the disease, flagrant violations of the sanitary code and the exodus of fifty thousand babies from New York all will be shown in the film which the Animated Weekly has secured permission to take as part of the campaign to stamp out the disease.

FUN AT TOP SPEED BY KALEM COMEDIANS

With three comedies a week being released on the General Film Program, the Kalem Company now has quite an army of fun-makers at work at the two coast studios and in Jacksonville. Ham and Budd and Ethel Teare head the forces on the Pacific Coast, producing the Tuesday and Wednesday releases.

"The Great Detective," and "A Watery Wooing" are the two subjects recently completed by these companies. In the former Ham makes a vigilant Sherlock and Bud the Watson who takes care of his 999 disguises. Much trick work was called into play in making this one reeler. Ellen Godsay and A. Edmondson are others in the cast of this release scheduled for July 18.

In "A Watery Wooing," Ethel Teare makes a pretty picture in a comedy of the seashore in which she is supported by Myrta Sterling, Gus Leonard and Victor Rottman. "A Watery Wooing" will be issued on July 19.

"A Double Elopement," coming on Friday, June 21, is the release just completed by the Sis Hopkins company. Rose Melville's famous creation gets into ridiculous mix-ups in this picture following her taking up the study of "fysical kulture."

With the final touches put to "The Girl and the Tenor," the first Ivy Close release, Director Robert Ellis has started another single reeler which shows Ivy living a double life, as a popular cartoonist and writer of "high-brow" literature. Naturally affairs get tangled and she finds herself in a pretty mess keeping her separate identities in their proper places.

ARTIST REED IS A PARAMOUNT CARTOONIST

A. B. Reed has joined the ranks of the artists who are contributing to the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoons, and has drawn a frontier comedy, "The Wild and Woolly West." Shooting up a house and bar in characteristic cowboy fashion, the hero aims a shot at a beer barrel and is propelled up the road on a geyser of beer to the next scene in the plot.

There he encounters a hurricane and with the house is carried away on the crest of the whirl. He breaks into the railroad station, binds the girl agent and robs the safe. She manages to hit the telegraph keys with her nose and signals her sweetheart, who rushes to the rescue and provides the drama with a thrilling conclusion.

SIGNAL MAKING LAST SCENES OF "DIAMOND RUNNERS"

The final scenes for "The Diamond Runners" are being made by the Helen Holmes Signal Company. Approximately four-fifths of this five-reel subject will consist of water stuff, made by Director J. P. McGowan while en route to and from the Hawaiian Islands. One reel will consist of scenes taken on the islands and at interior settings at the studio. t was originally intended that this picture would be released first, but upon the return of the company, it was learned that "Judith of The Cumberlands" had been scheduled for the organization's next release. The southern picture was made, and this was given a studio showing, then shipped to the laboratories.

SELIG PLAYERS LEAVE CHICAGO FOR WEST COAST STUDIOS

On Thursday, July 8, a number of Selig stars left Chicago for the Pacific Coast studios of the company, at Los Angeles, Cal. Among the players were included Marshall Neilan, George Fawcett, his wife and daughter, Mary Charleson, Leo Pierson, Cecil Holland and others. Gabriel Pollock, scenic artist, also accompanied the party. These players recently completed "The Prince Chap" under the direction of Marshall Neilan at the Selig studios, Chicago.

"The Prince Chap" will be released as a Selig Red Seal Play through V-L-S-E on Monday, July 24. The cast includes Marshall Neilan, who enacts the title role, Bessie Eyton, George Fawcett and Mary Charleson. Upon arrival at Los Angeles, Mr. Neilan will immediately assume the direction of Tom Mix, the cowboy star, in a series of thrilling Western feature plays including "The Country That God Forgot" and "The Light of the Western Star," written especially for him by Zane Grey. Mix will be supported by an all star cast. These Western feature plays will be released through V-L-S-E.

"THE DEVIL AT HIS ELBOW" FROM METRO ON AUGUST 7

"The Devil At His Elbow," a five-part Metro, with Dorothy Green and Clifford Bruce, will be released August 7. It was produced by Popular Plays and Players, and is said to be one of the most unusual photoplays ever made by that company. In one of the scenes a submarine figures prominently. There is considerable action around New York harbor, showing many of the dives where sailors gather.

The supporting cast includes Edward Martindell, Frank McDonald, J. K. Roberts, Adolph Menjou, Mary Sandway, and others. The picture was produced by Burton King, under the supervision of Harry Revier.

FACTORY EVILS EXPOSED IN "DUST"

Factory evils are exposed in "Dust," a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture, featuring Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie. Director Edward Sloman, who produced the subject at the American studios, has worked into it a number of thrills, including a big fire, it is announced.

Harry Von Meter, Nell Franzen, and Louise Lester are also in the cast.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

AT the Peerless and Paragon studios, the production headquarters of the World Film Corporation, activities remain at high pressure.

Ethel Clayton and Carlyle Blackwell are to begin work this week under the direction of Robert Thornby, in a visualization of Burton E. Stevenson's book, "Little Comrade," which has been scenarioized by Frances Marion under the direction of William A. Brady.

Harley Knoles begins work shortly on "Her Majesty," which will be Alice Brady's next screen effort, following her return from the exposition at Chicago. In this picture Miss Brady will be supported by Arthur Ashley, Montagu Love, Irving Cummins, Clara Whipple and Alec B. Francis.

Emile Chautard is concluding work with Robert Warwick, Gail Kane and other World Players on "The Heart of a Hero," which is based on Clyde Fitch's stage conception of the historic character's episodic life.

The production required the entire Paragon studio equipment for several days, during which many of the famous big scenes were assembled. Five hundred people alone were used in the hanging scene, which closes the picture.

Frank Crane Completing "World Against Him"

Frank Crane is completing "The World Against Him" and will remain at Saranac Lake until the production is finished, while Maurice Tourneur, director general of Paragon, will begin work next week on an elaborate five-act picture and Barry O'Neill, who has completed "The Scorching Way," begins work early this week on "The Revolt," in which Gail Kane will star.

Other players such as Muriel Ostriche, Robert Warwick, Frances Nelson, Gerda Holmes, June Elvidge and Johnny Hines, are all allotted to directors; scenes and casts are being assembled and the entire seven World companies will be busily engaged.

One of the biggest features to be produced by the Vitagraph during the summer months will be a special Blue Ribbon Feature by T. Everett Harre. The scenes of the story are laid in Egypt and call for some exceptional settings.

Howard Estabrook in a Scene from "The Mysteries of Myra," International

Marguerite Bertsch is back at the Vitagraph studios after a two months' vacation. She is busily engaged on a story which will feature Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. When she has the scenario completed, Miss Bertsch will put it into production.

Frank Daniels, Vitagraph's comedian, is now working in a one-part comedy by Cyrus Townsend Brady. It is the first single reel comedy ever written by Brady and burlesques one of the better known surgical discoveries.

William Humphrey is putting the finishing touches on the James Oliver Curwood story in which Marc MacDermott makes his first Vitagraph appearance. When this photoplay is completed, Humphrey will immediately start work on a feature by Andres de Segurola. In the new picture Humphrey will be seen as Napoleon.

Sam Spedon Makes Speech

At the luncheon of the Rotary Club held at the Hotel McAlpin on Thursday last, "Vitagraph Sam" Spedon made a speech on "Moving Pictures in the Making." Everyone present was deeply interested and Sam was called upon to answer many questions. A special reel showing the workings of the various departments of the big Flatbush studio was also run off.

Ned Finley, who has been away from the studio for the past two weeks as a result of a fall during the filming of a scene in forthcoming Vitagraph release, reported back for duty on July 5. Ned is quite himself again and is more than glad to be able to return to work.

Last week Charles Richman and Arline Pretty, being featured in Vitagraph's forthcoming production, "The Secret Kingdom," staged a thrilling stunt in the fifth episode of the story.

The heroine is confined in a sanitarium, in a room on the fifth floor, facing the street. Next door is a vacant house, also five stories high. Miss Pretty in the role of the heroine, is swung from her room on the fifth floor, to a room on the fourth floor of the house next door, by a rope suspended from the roof.

That the scene was taken without a hitch of any kind is a tribute to the daring of Miss Pretty and the steady hand and eye of Charles Richman.

The Raver studios at Rockville Centre, L. I., are reaching a tangible stage.

The executive building has been completed for several weeks and is occupied by the office force of the company. It is planned in such a fashion as to give ample space to all. Every effort is being put forth to complete things so that the first big production can be released some time in the early fall.

Raver Laboratories to More Than Double Output

Between the executive building and the studios proper a laboratory is being completed that will have a capacity of more than twice the requirements of the company. The studios are reaching the stage where the lights will soon be installed and the finishing touches added.

Under the instruction of a landscape specialist flower beds, shrubbery and trees are being laid out. Winding paths and latticed summer houses with vines twining around and over them also form a part of the scenery scheme.

There will be no lessening of efforts at the Essanay studios during the summer months. On the contrary production will be continued with the consistent average that has been maintained in months past.

If any doubt rested in the minds of Essanay directors and actors of whether or not an easy summer was in prospect, it was dispelled when President George K. Spoor placed another feature on the floor. This, with the two other features now in the course of construction, and together with the General Film Service program, will employ without interruption every principal in the large stock company.

The latest five-reel play for V-L-S-E distribution is "Lost Twenty-four Hours," the famous stage comedy played with wonderful success for years by Robert Hilliard. Richard C. Travers, Marguerite Clayton, Warda Howard and a capable supporting cast will appear in it. It is being directed by L. C. Windom.

Essanay's largest studio is now occupied with sets for Henry B. Walthall's latest feature, "The Sting of Victory." All exteriors have been completed and the new vehicle for this star will be ready for release early in August. The play was selected by Mr. Walthall himself.

Edna Mayo and company are still at the Dells of the Wisconsin river, working out of Kilbourn, Wis., for scenes in "The Return of Eve," a five-reel feature. Most of the picture will be exterior scenes, but the few interiors must be elaborate. A whole studio has been set aside for the construction of these sets and when the company returns there will be no delay in starting interiors. Miss Mayo's supporting cast at the Dells includes Eugene O'Brien, Edward Mawson, Emily Fitzroy and Edward Arnold.

Essanay Short-Reel Output Maintained

While the short-reel program at Essanay is well ahead of release there is no slowing up on this angle either. Numerous two and three reel offerings, presenting Essanay's best known actors and actresses are now in the process of production or preparation.

"A Tin Soldier," a famous comedy by Charles Hoyt, is being produced in two reels by Essanay. None of the laughable situations of the stage play have been omitted and several more have been added.

Director J. Searle Dawley has a whole collection of little folks at the Famous Players studio who are appearing as fairies in support of Marguerite Clark in "Little Lady Eileen." The other day the director rushed out of his office and called for "that plump little golden-haired fairy." "Do you mean me?" simpered a stout, matronly blond woman who had been engaged to play a society mamma. Inasmuch as she weighed about one hundred and eighty pounds, it was only natural that the remark should have caused a laugh, varying in degree of intensity as those within earshot thought that she meant it seriously or in fun.

Donald Brian and Sidney Olcott, who directed the former's appearance in the Famous Players production, "The Smugglers," were delighted with the story because it has given them a rare opportunity to devise a few ways and means of circumventing the Customs inspectors. They figure that it is going to come in very handy when the Great War is ended and the big liners once more begin to ply between Europe and America.

They are building an English railway coach at the Famous Players studio which will be used in an Irish picture called "Little Lady Eileen," starring Marguerite Clark. But inasmuch as there is no difference between an Irish and an English coach and it is being made in America by Swedish carpenters, it can scarcely be regarded as a breach of neutrality.

Yes, Sir, It's Different from the Stage

In the theatre there is a regular routine carried out by the call boy before each performance in which he goes through the dressing room corridors and calls warnings of the fleeting of time, so that the players can gauge their preparations for their respective entrances. Hence the surprise of Donald Brian, late of "Sybil," who is now starring in the motion picture called "The Smugglers," at the Famous Players Film Company studio, when an assistant director rushed breathlessly into his dressing room and announced that Director Olcott had been waiting for him for fifteen minutes. "Why, I haven't heard the call boy at all," declared the celebrated matinee idol, as he flicked a speck of powder off his otherwise immaculate coat and followed his informant to the studio floor.

Now that Ann Pennington is imitating Mary Pickford, the Famous Players star, on the stage in the Ziegfeld "Follies" and is playing the role of a musical comedy star in the Famous Players production, "Susie Snowflake," the question naturally arises—is she a stage star or a motion picture star? Whichever she may be, the fact remains that her great popularity attests the fact that she is a genuine star, both ways.

It was a distinct contrast in the daily routine of Louise Huff when she was playing the role of Nan in the Famous Players Film Company production, "Destiny's Toy," to spend her days with four famous prize fighters who had been especially engaged to play "thug" parts in that picture and then to depart at night for the quiet and peaceful life of a single little home. But the task of a motion picture player is just one contrast after another.

Violet Debiccari, age twelve, is now with the William Fox Company under the direction of James B. Vincent. Miss Debiccari is a god-child of Madame Sembrich's, and has a locket which the famous singer gave her last spring, when the little girl was confirmed. A picture of Madame Sembrich is inside the locket.

film put out by William Fox. She will have an important part, as the story of the picture will center completely around Miss Lowry. Her role, in fact, will be next only to those of Miss Caprice and Mr. Hilliard. Annie Lee Lowry is three months old.

Sara Alexander, eighty years old, is writing her memoirs of the stage. Miss Alexander, who is now acting in William Fox pictures, began her stage career in the fifties, and retired a few years ago. Her engagement with the Fox companies represented a resumption of her life work.

William A. Howell, George K. Hollister and Alice Hollister, well known in the motion picture world, have organized the Howell Juvenile Classic Company in Jacksonville, Fla., and will start at once on the production of juvenile pictures. Mr. Howell recently completed his contract with the C. C. Field Motion Picture Company, and was for some time director of the Falstaff Comedy company for Thanhouser in that city. Mr. Hollister is one of the best known cameramen in the business, having been with Edison, Kalem and Thanhouser, and was one of the few men to make motion pictures in Egypt, Asia, China and Ireland in the early days of the Kalem Company.

Alice Hollister, styled the first screen vampire, and formerly one of the Kalem beauties, will have active charge of the players who will be the children of both, as well as other juvenile actors.

Owing to the increase in production and the lack of stage space at the Jacksonville, Fla., studio of the Vim Company, General Manager Louis Burstein has begun work on a fifty-foot addition to the large outdoor stage which when completed will take care of five directors working at the same time.

The stage will be 175 feet long and 65 feet wide, and faces the beautiful St. Johns river, assuring a breeze during the summer months.

Clifford Bruce, who is being starred with Dorothy Greene in "The Devil at His Elbow," a five-part Metro play, was able to complete the finishing scenes in that production a few days ago, after the feature had been delayed for several weeks. It was found that there were several important scenes to be retaken when "The Devil at His Elbow" was assembled. A call was sent out for Mr. Bruce, but it was found that he was busily engaged at another studio. He agreed to report at the Popular Plays and Players studio, where "The Devil at His Elbow" was made, as soon as he concluded his work with the other company.

On the night before the day on which he was to report Mr. Bruce was riding in his automobile near Jamaica, Long Island, when a machine in which Lillian Lorraine was riding came in collision with the Bruce car. Mr. Bruce's machine was badly smashed and he suffered considerable injuries, including scratches on the face, which made it impossible for him to report at the studio as he intended. But now the production is finished and will be released on the Metro program August 7. This will mark Mr. Bruce's debut on the Metro program, but it is likely that he will be seen again soon, with Edmund Breese.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 8.

THE war scare has caused Business Manager E. H. Allen of the Thomas H. Ince studios to issue an order for preparedness, which means that all armament of the arsenals at the two studios is to be placed in position where it will be accessible should any trouble reach that section. The equipment consists of 436 rifles, 16 shotguns, 41 revolvers, 88 swords, 572 bayonets, 120 entrenching tools and 2 machine guns. Mr. Allen says he does not want anyone to gain the impression they are looking for trouble at this parter, but he sincerely hopes everything will be in readiness to protect the property should there be any trouble.

The advantage of maintaining the 18,000-acre rancho known as Inceville, in addition to the half-million-dollar plant at Culver City, was most strikingly illustrated last week, when the new Thos. H. Ince plant was wholly abandoned by the five working companies, all of whom were at the old quarters along the ocean front.

Raymond B. West will, within the week, begin the filming of an Ince Triangle photoplay featuring Charles Ray. The story is by J. C. Hawks, and is the first offering in months in which Ray has not played a weakling part.

Charles Giblyn, Ince director, will represent the Los Angeles Shriners at the meeting of the Imperial Council at Buffalo, July 10 to 17, and will leave for the East as soon as he finishes the final scenes for "Somewhere in France," which stars Louise Glaum. Giblyn's duty will be to observe the ceremonials adopted by the Imperial officers, so that he may teach the same to the local order, of which he is director-general.

Clara Williams Promoted to Stardom

Another Ince actress who has appeared in numerous productions from this studio has been promoted to stardom. Clara Williams is the fortunate actress, and will shortly begin work in a story specially written to suit her talents by C. Gardiner Sullivan. The direction will be by Reginald Barker. Miss Williams has played important parts in many Ince productions, and her work in the coming subject will be similar to the portrayal of the Italian girl in "The Italian." Her first great success was in the lead opposite William S. Hart in "The Bargain." Later she played with George Beban, and her recent successes have been "Hell's Hinges" and "The Market of Vain Desire."

Los Angeles libraries were searched last week by Ince property men to secure a copy of an Irish newspaper. Finally one was secured and duplicates of it made at a local printery to serve in a scene of the Irish comedy being made by Director Charles Miller. Bessie Barriscale appears as a colleen and the Irish paper she uses in one of her pranks to make a skirt of. The Irish World, as the result of this, is to have a lot of free advertising.

The second expedition of Director Walter Edwards for a desert island was successful, and he and his company have returned to the Ince studio with approximately three thousand feet of "great stuff," made on San Clemente Island, off the southern coast of California.

The current William S. Hart production, which gives this actor the role of a soldier of fortune, is being rushed to completion, as it is a very timely subject, owing to the difficulties between two nations. Title for the picture has not been announced. The story is by Monty M. Katterjohn, and Hart proclaims it to be one of the biggest roles he has ever played. Katterjohn is now preparing a story for Bessie Barriscale, the first he has written for this actress.

Last week was moving week for another department of the Thomas H. Ince forces, and now the titling, tinting, cutting, assembling and still departments are situated in theVaried Arts Building at the Culver City plant, occupying the second floor. The first floor is devoted to projecting rooms. Since the organization moved to the Culver City plant this work has been done at a theatre near by. The theatre will in the future be used for a rehearsal place of incidental music for Ince productions.

While Director William Christie Cabanne was working at the Fine Arts studio last week directing a scene for the Lillian Gish photoplay, he receveid the sad news of his father's sudden death. The elder Cabanne recently came to Hollywood for a visit with his son, and was at the director's home at the time of his death. The popular director has been receiving numerous messages and expressions of sympathy from his many friends of the film colony. The body was taken to St. Louis.

Two Child Actors Thank Hart for Loving Cups

Frances Carpenter and George Stone, two Fine Art child players, have received silver monogramed loving cups from William S. Hart in appreciation of their work under him in a recent production. On receipt of the gifts, both children called Hart by telephone and personally thanked him in grown-up style.

Tod Browning, who produced a number of three-reel Majestic subjects for Mutual release, but who has been working in the Fine Arts scenario department for the past several months, owing to injuries received in an automobile accident, is again to work on the side lines, and has been assigned to the direction of De Wolf Hopper in this actor's second Triangle Komedy. The working title of this is "The Mummy," and is said to be something entirely different. The supporting cast will include Alice Ray, Cora Bell, Max Davidson, Jack Brammall and Pauline Stark.

Sir Herbert Tree is expected to arrive in

Los Angeles shortly to work in Fine Art pictures for Triangle release. The first will be made under the direction of Chester Withey, who has just completed "The Hypochondriac." "Macbeth," Sir Herbert Tree's first film subject, is announced to be having very successful runs in the larger cities.

Tully Marshall is to play his first comedy part since making his screen debut. He has been cast to co-star with Fay Tincher in a Triangle comedy which will be directed by Eddie Dillon, who will also take part. The story is from the pen of Anita Loos.

A series of five or six one-reel comedies is to be made by the E. & R. people under the general title of "Nap and Sally in the Movies." The first one, made last week, will serve as an introduction to the balance, but each will be separate and complete within itself. In the current production, the owner of the chimps, a stranded actor, decides to try the pictures, and arrives at the studio just when the ten thousand dollar a week leading woman has received a dismissal because of temperamental qualities, and the leading man has been kicked off the lot for failure to follow instructions. Sally and Nap get into the game, and the director finds that he has really found a couple of regular players. Besides the chimps, Director J. J. Franz, Constance Johnson, Virginia Ames, Chas. J. LeMoyne, Harry McLernon, and a bevy of classic dancers appear in the production.

Roscoe Arbuckle and his company, who were expected in Los Angeles during the coming week from the East, where they have been making pictures for the past five months, will remain at the Fort Lee studio to make another picture.

In trying to save one of the Keystone diving girls from injury, Fritz Schade sustained a broken arm while playing in a scene at the edge of the large tank at the studio. This is the first real injury which has befallen this Keystone comedian—except the 942,670 bruises.

A Hard Hitter Makes Song Hit

Chuck Reisner, former prize fighter and vaudeville actor, comedian at the Keystone plant, has written a song entitled "Let's Get Together." It has to do with the calling of the "boys" to the colors. Harry McCoy has composed the music to the song, which is said to have made a decided hit at the Pals Club last Saturday night, where it was sung for the first time.

Frank Griffin, Keystone director, who has been in New York City for a few weeks, has returned to Los Angeles and taken charge of his company of comedians.

John B. Glavey, who has been connected with the Keystone scenario department, has been selected as secretary and general assistant to Managing Editor and Assistant manager of Production Hampton Del Ruth.

Universal Director Clifford Elfelt is producing the one-reel subject titled "The Weapons of Bill Murrell," or "The Weapons of Love." It is a story of a long existing feud between two clans. The story is by Haseburg Liebe, scenario by Olga Printzlau, and was originally published in the Popular Magazine under the title of "The Weapons of Bill Murrell."

Directress Lule Warrenton of the Universal Company is producing a one-reel comedy with her juvenile players, entitled "Too Much Pie." George Hupp appears as Billy; Irma Sorter, his sister, and Elizabeth Janes, John Starling and Dorothy Clark complete the cast.

Lynn Reynolds' Universal Company at Bear Lake, California

Universal Director Joseph LeBrandt is producing the one-reel picture entitled "As the Candle Burned," written by himself. Jean Hersholt, Irene Hunt and Billy Mason play the three principal parts. The story concerns an old man who, upon opening an old cash box, after he has been given notice by his landlady that he is to be taken to the poorhouse, takes out the keepsakes one by one and in memory relives his past life. In the end he dies just as the officers come to take him away.

The eternal triangle again serves for a plot in the one-reel Universal subject. "Pedro Passes," written and and being produced by Francis Powers. The story is laid in a small Portuguese village. The "other man" is finally driven from the village by the husband, and once more the little family is happy. William Lowery plays the part of the husband, a thrifty gardener; Agnes Vernon, the pretty young wife; May Dirace, their child Caroline, and Harry Morris, the "other man."

Eccentric Zoologist Dreams in a "U"

The dream of an eccentric zoologist, which portrays his encounters with wild men and beasts of the jungle, is pictured in the one-reel Universal comedy, "The Missing Link," written by Frank Wiltermood and being produced by Beverly Griffith. Victor Potel as the zoologist, and Joe Martin, a wise orang-outang, are the principals of the cast.

"Maybelle of the Pictures" is a Universal one-reel, written and being produced by William V. Mong, who also plays a principal part. Maybelle is a hard-working extra girl, who saves all the money she can to pay for the home in which she and her young husband reside. She arrives home one day and finds her husband robbing her bank. After failing in her attempts to reform him, she goes to a small village to rest. Here she is recognized by a farm hand as a picture actress and later insulted. After being shown the wrong he has done, the farm hand becomes the willing slave of the girl, and later saves her from being insulted by her former husband, who comes to the village with a small theatrical troupe. Peggy Coudray, William C. Carlock and Joe Ryan, with the director, make up the cast.

U Director Frank Ormston is producing a story written by himself, scenario for which was prepared by Calder Johnstone, entitled "Felix Plays Detective." Family fortunes, mistaken identity, lovers, a detective and a thief create the action for this picture. After many distressing incidents, the lovers are united, the thief taken charge of by the detective, and all ends well. The cast is composed of George Felix, Frank Stapples, Margaret Whistler, George Odell, Viola Lind and Edith Roberts.

"The Breaking of Cactus Moore," three-reel Universal subject, tells the story of a hard, revengeful westerner, who, after years of undying hatred for the man who married the girl he loved, is brought face to face with his real self, when he appears as an unbidden guest at the marriage of his son and the daughter of his enemy. William V. Mong wrote and produced the subject, and also plays the name part. His supporting cast includes Lydia Titus, Joe Ryan, E. F. Power and Peggy Coudray.

Rivalry for the position of foreman of the Hard Rock mines and the hand of the mine boss' daughter, and a mine explosion, serve for the plot of "Hard Rock Is Hard Rock." Ultimately the winner of the position of foreman, who is also the hero of the mine explosion and loser of the fight, is the successful suitor for the girl's hand. The story was written by Calder Johnstone, and is being produced by Universal Director George Rice. The cast is composed of George Pierce, James Farley and Jane Bernoudy. The company is at Bear Lake for scenes for this picture.

Universal Child Players in a "U"

The Universal child players are appearing in the one-reel story, "The Little Musician and His Wife," a featured part of which is Phillip, taken by John Sterling, which is of the nature of a character part, he being a son of Italy who but recently arrived in New York. Directress Lule Warrenton is making this story of New York City slums.

Roberta Wilson is to be starred in Universal five-reel subjects, the first of which is now being made by Director Burton George, entitled "The Heritage of Hate." Miss Wilson is a sister of Lois Wilson, who for a number of months has been playing opposite Warren Kerrigan, and was one of the Universal beauties selected by the judges, and later employed by the Universal. Roberta Wilson is equally as pretty as her sister, and by the casting officials of the producing plant is considered equally as talented.

Since coming to the Universal last November, Roberta Wilson has been playing in one and two reel subjects. "The Heritage of Hate" is the story of a nameless girl avenging the wrong done her mother by wrecking the fortune of the man. A spectacle of the scene will be the destruction of a large wharf and a fleet of merchant vessels. Burton George has just come to U City from the eastern studios, and this is his first picture. Supporting Miss Wilson are William Quinn, Lillian Concord, Betty Schade, Betty Harte, Eileen Sedgwick, Paul Byron and Alfred Wertz.

Number two of the Universal serial "Liberty," being made by Director Jaccard, is laid in northern Mexico, and deals with the attempts of a troop of Texas Rangers to recover Liberty Horton, the heiress held for ransom. The part is taken by Marie Walcamp. Jack Holt, Neil Hart, Bertram Grassby, G. Raymond Nye, Maude Emory and Roy Stewart make up the permanent cast.

The Nestorites are making a Mexican war picture with an army of four, which will probably be titled "The Gringo Reporter." Eddie Lyons does the cub reporter part, Lee Moran appears as General Bananza, and Prescilla Dean is the leading woman. The plot revolves about the "pappars," and through nine hundred and ninety-nine feet the cub reporter attempts to learn their contents. Then he discovers the writing is but a recipe for making hot tamales. Louis Chaudet, late director of Selig and E. and R. Jungle comedies, will act as co-director with Lyons and Moran.

Why "U" Drops "Continuity"

The word "continuity" has been banned by Scenario Editor Lewis of U City, for the reason that its use tends to lead the belief the preparation of a working script is merely mechanical labor, possible for any one who can operate a typewriter. Hereafter the scene plots or that action of the scenario which describes the action will be referred to as the scenario, and is to be considered by members of the scenario staff as the most important part of the working script.

Heretofore the impression has been given out that synopses of original stories are the valuable part, but experience has brought out the fact that the preparation of stories or synopses purchased has required more originality than the story itself. The author of the story received a large sum for royalty, and the party who actually prepared it for the screen and built up such action as to make the story adaptable for the screen received but a salary. The most valuable part of the scenario was that given by the man who prepared the working script.

A decidedly timely story, "Behind the Lines," dealing with the American invasion in Mexico, is being filmed at Universal from a scenario by Walter Woods. Edith Johnson as an American Red Cross nurse,

Crane Wilbur in a Scene from "The Fool's Game," Horsley-Mutual and Harry Carey, a physician who discovers a toxine that will cure soldiers suffering from a prevailing disease, are the principals. Edwin Wallock plays the part of General Dominquez, leader of the Mexican troops. Wallock was assigned to the part late in the afternoon, and that evening witnessed a news weekly showing General Obregon and other important officers of the Mexican army. He made up to appear as Obregon, and when he came on the stage a Mexican type who had served in the Mexican army rushed up and said to him, "I play much poker with Obregon—you all the same look like him." There will be a number of big battle scenes filmed especially for this, and the production has been assigned to Henry McRae.

Illustrating "Nugget Jim's Pardner," Mustang-Mutual

Congested conditions, due to thirty-three directors working on stage space suitable for about three-quarters that number, has caused U City officials to rush the construction of the new exterior stage. This is being built on Laemmle Boulevard, to the north of all other exterior stages, and will be approximately four hundred feet long and one hundred feet wide. Another army of workmen are busy in the erection of additional dressing rooms. The total number to be built is fifty. At the present time the facilities make it necessary for three, four and five leading women to use the same room, and the star signs have totally disappeared for the present. The stages and studios will be finished within the next few days.

Gerard Made a Director

Douglas Gerard, who has been a member of the Universal stock company for the past year, playing most of the time under the direction of the Smalleys, realized his ambition when he was assigned to direct a company. He will take up the making of his first subject shortly.

The Universal Joker comedy players are making "He Became a Hero," written by Ben Cohn and under the direction of Allen Curtis. A larger portion of the scenes will be made aboard ship, where mutiny of the crew serves an unsuccessful lover to gain consent of marriage from the mother, who thought him unworthy until he proved himself a hero.

John Steppling, for several years with the Essanay organization, and for the past year a member of the American staff at Santa Barbara, is a recent addition to the producing forces at U City, where he will make comedies, featuring Smiling Billy Mason. The first to be taken up is entitled "Betty's Bandit," and has Fred Gambol, Peggy Custer, Countess DuCello and Mother Aston as the supports. The story shows how a cave-man type of love making may be adopted in present day circumstances with successful results.

A wedding ceremony being conducted during a rapid fire chase forms the climax of a one-reel picture being made by Director Roy Clements, and offers Pat Rooney in the featured part. It all happens because the father of the girl picks out a man of wealth for his daughter, and she decides to wed one of her own choice. One wedding is stopped, the minister kidnapped, the chase started, and during the exciting moments of this the wedding is performed.

While the ten thousand Knights Templar were being entertained last week at U City several hundred feet of scenes were secured for a comedy being completed now. The title of it is "Lord Lovelace's Rodeo," produced by William V. Mong. The great throng of uniformed lodge men served as atmosphere for this picture, which has the riding of an outlaw horse by an English count as its big punch. Successful in this, he wins a bride. Director Mong is also working on two one-reel productions, entitled "The Breaking of Cactus Moore" and "Maybelle of the Pictures." In both of these Peggy Coudray is featured.

How "He Became a Regular Fellow"

The reformation of a sissy by a member of the chorus at a college town theatre is the situation for "He Became a Regular Fellow." The chorus girl outwitted the college professor by making up as the young fellow's mother, and leads him a gay life until father learned about it, and then they were married. Ed. Sedgwick, Lydia Titus, Pat Rooney, Jessie Arnold and Ed. Clark play in this.

Director Billy Garwood, having filmed "The Worm," has been assigned to the making of a one-reeler, "Arthur's Dark Resolve."

"The Social Bucaneer" is a five-reel picture being produced by Director Jack Conway. Louise Lovely will play opposite J. Warren Kerrigan. F. McGrew Willis is responsible for this photoplay, and the supports will include Maude George and Harry Carter.

The well-known story of the New York stock exchange, "Black Friday," is to be filmed under the direction of Lloyd B. Carleton, with Dorothy Davenport and Emory Johnson in the featured parts.

The L-Ko Company has added two comedians to their long list, Ben Lynn and Shorty McAllister. Both have had great success on the vaudeville stage. With the addition of these leading comedians, the company will have five directors working on comedy subjects for Universal release.

The Francis Ford-Grace Cunard "Peg o' the Ring" Company are now working on the twelfth episode of the Universal serial. Already plans are being made for work which will be taken up by this producing organization as soon as the remaining three episodes of the serial are completed. As soon as the fifteenth is finished the company will leave for Honolulu.

It is not definitely decided what the titles of these will be, but the company will be absent from the studio at least one month. Besides Mr. Ford and Miss Cunard, those who will go to the islands are Peter Gerald, Jack Ford, Joe McDonaugh, Eddie Boland, Jack Sacker, and a full corps of electricians, scenic artist and others. Louis Jacobs is to be business manager of the company while on the trip.

The sounding of the fire gong at the Fox Film Corporation studio last week caused a general fright, until it was learned that it was given to summon all players for an ovation to William Farnum. This was occasioned by his return to the studio after an absence of several weeks, due to serious illness. Farnum has not fully recovered, but is now able to take short auto rides, and the first time he left his home was when he went to the studio. The ovation was participated in by every one in the plant.

Director Raoul Walsh has added a number of additional atmospheric scenes for "The Honor System." The last to be made were those in which a small town carnival played an important part. The set included merry-go-round, the little red top tent, and everything from the flying lady to the fortune teller. An army of extra people were needed for the scene through which Milton Sills, leading man, played with the children and had great sport on the merry-go-round. That Walsh will have this ten-reel feature, which contrasts the old and new prison systems, out of the way within a few days is evidenced by the fact that he is preparing a new story.

MEREDITH, Lois, leading woman; b. 1897; educ. abroad; stage career, first appearance as Modesty in "Everywoman," then prima donna on coast tour of "Madame Sherry," title role "Peg o' My Heart," "Help Wanted" (orig.); screen career, starred in "Help Wanted" (Morosco-Paramount), "The Woman" (Lasky-Paramount), "My Best Girl" (Metro with Max Figman), "An Enemy to Society" (Metro), co-star with Cyril Maude in "The Antique Dealer" (World); favorite pastimes, horseback riding and all sorts of outdoor sports, singing and languages, writing French stories for Parisian publications. Film News From Foreign Parts

French Ban on Posters Hits Kinema Publicity

Special to Motion Picture News.

Paris, July 1.

AT last American film manufacturers are taking advantage of the present conditions in France. For two weeks a picture from Famous Players-Lasky has been advertised to be seen in Paris. I am told that Mr. Monat has made arrangements with this firm and that its pictures will now be seen in France.

Mr. Monat is to be congratulated on his achievement. Most of the managers I have seen are delighted to get an opportunity to show pictures bearing its trade-mark. It is a great pity that other good firms are not doing the same thing. There is undoubtedly just now a great opening for good pictures. The French firms are producing only very little. Films of minor value are plentiful, but really good interesting subjects are scarce.

The first picture of the above mentioned firm, we are to see next week is called "Madame Sans Peur" (A Lady of no Fear), with Rita Jollivet.

Our comedian, Max Linder, the "Only Max," as he is known by everybody, is leaving us. Many people felt sorry when the news came out, but we shall not lose him altogether.

Deprived of his presence, we shall see Max in films made by Keystone, with which he has just signed a contract. No doubt American made pictures with the great French comedian will soon be spoken of all over the world.

Another American series of comic films is to be put on the French market.

The Trans-Atlantic Film Company, the agency of the Universal, has released the first one, "Totoche."

A well-known French firm has been working months on the "Cinema Revue." I have heard so much about this film for months, it seems it is going to be the greatest film ever produced.

As I have mentioned in one of my previous letters, the American animated cartoons have proved such a big success over here, that everybody is trying to imitate them. We are to have one shortly by Henri Debain, and the title the firm has chosen is very catchy, "La Baisse du Mark."

Kinema artists are much admired by the French public. They take a fancy to some of the artists and they will go to see a film no matter what it is, as long as they see their favorites.

The enormous success of the Vitagraph pictures in France was due to Bunny and Costello; Keystone pictures made their reputation with Mabel Normand; Selig pictures have secured an instananious success with Kathlyn Williams. French artists are also responsible for the large attendance at the kinemas where films with their favorites are shown. Max Linder, Rigadin, Krauss, Mell Robine, Me Carol and Gaumont's Bébé have made a reputation for their firms and each time one of the artists was found in attendance at one of the kinemas, the audience would stand up and greet him most enthusiastically.

A manager of a large kinema in Paris is taking advantage of the popularity of such artists with the public and has made arrangements to have a sketch performed by one or more kinema artists every week. Undoubtedly this innovation will prove a big success and is sure to draw large audiences.

She's a Good Female Sherlock Holmes

Melle Mistinguett is appearing in a film called "Mistinguett Detective." This is rather a new role for this talented lady, but nothing is impossible for Mistinguett and she succeeded well in her difficult part.

The Palais Rochechouart, one of the finest kinema theatres built and opened shortly before the war by a German syndicate, was closed by the government at the beginning of the war.

This establishment has been bought by Mr. Franck, the well-known manager of the Gymnase theatre, who has opened it with American films.

The French government has prohibited the importation of many foreign articles, including photographs and posters. As no films can be rented without posters, this may work great injury to the trade.

Another law which may prove injurious to the theatres and kinemas is the "Time Saving Bill." By this law all clocks were advanced one hour. The French public does not care to go to a theatre before it is dark; it prefers to stroll on the Boulevards or sit outside the cafes. This is the reason why theatres commence very late. Now their shows will have to start at 8 o'clock, but it really means 7 o'clock in bright daylight and therefore is sure to prove disastrous to the theatres.

A rather serious accident occurred in Rome last week. While a large company of a well known Italian film manufacturer were filming a scene for "Robespierre," the set broke down and most of the artists were badly wounded. Four died later.

A Gaumont in Color

Among the many American pictures presented at the general show rooms recently, were: Lubin's "Vallee du Mirage," Kalem's "Victime du Spiritisme," Keystone's "Tourond le Heros," Edison's "Les Susdites," and a few Vitagraphs.

A very fine picture was seen recently at many Parisian kinemas. It is called "Le Roi de la Montagne," and is one of Gaumont's artistic serials in color.

The police department has been consulted by the Temps as to the possibility of prohibiting—as has been done by the London County Council—the use of the so-called detective films by picture palaces. He expressed some scepticism as to whether this kind of film really suggests or encourages crime. "The films," he said, "certainly remind the would-be burglar that, if he uses gloves, he cannot leave any finger-prints," but this information is perfectly well known and is frequently repeated in the newspapers. Moreover, a film considered objectionable in Paris might be allowed in the provinces, unless the highest authority (the Minister for the Interior) took the matter in hand and censored films for the whole country.

A film entitled "Sons of Uncle Sam on the Battlefields of France," has been shown at the Aubert Palace 24, Boulevard des Italiens. This is the only presentation in Paris of these special films, showing the Amercan ambulance corps and airmen at work on the French front. The films will be shipped to the United States for exhibition in America. Mrs. Charles Carroll, of Carrollton, has arranged for the pictures to be shown in Paris in order that they may be seen by American residents as well as by others interested in the doings of United States citizens at the front for the cause of the Allies. The proceeds from the sale of tickets will be given to "L'Oeuvre du Pain des Prisonniers de Guerre."

PICTURE BUSINESS BOOMS IN THE ANTIPODES

Special to Motion Picture News.

Sydney, N. S. W., June 10.

In the near future the picture business in New South Wales is likely to assume a much larger aspect, as at the present time a poll is about to be put into force for the six-o'clock closing of Hotels. For the past three months the liquor bars have had to close at eight p.m. and this measure has had the effect of continually packing the picture theatres. Therefore the results of the vote are being looked forward to by picture proprietors, who if for no other reason than the success of their business, will most surely vote for the earlier hour.

"Her Painted Hero," a Triangle comedy which is advertised as coming "shortly," will be of added interest inasmuch as it lead, Hale Hamilton, will be playing in the stage production of "It Pays to Advertise," in the Criterion theatre, which is but a few doors from the home of the Triangles.

Striking Scenes from Horsley-Mutual Productions for July Release

Maurice Rosenthal, house manager of the Haymarket theatre, Sydney, is a nephew of Will Zimmerman, of the Kingston Vaudeville Booking Agency, La Salle Buildings, La Salle street, Chicago. Mr. Rosenthal who is only nineteen years of age, is probably the youngest man holding such a position in Australia.

Further information to hand elicits the fact that the production now nearing completion by Raymond Longford, and his assistant director Ernest Crosetti, will be titled "The Mutiny of the Bounty," and is being made for Messrs. Crick and Jones of this city. "The Mutiny of the Bounty" is an episode in English history, dealing with a party of men sent out into the Pacific for the purposes of exploration, under command of Captain Bligh. On an island in the Pacific the sailors mutineered and despatched the captain and his followers in an open boat. Subsequently the party in the small boat rowed three thousand miles, and reached the Island of Timor. Raymond Longford has woven a story around these, and other happenings, and up to the present time has completed over four thousand feet.

A farewell was given to the company in New Zealand preparatory to their departure by the Maori's.

A fine series of recruiting pictures photographed by the official government cinematographer is at present being screened at almost every city theatre. It depicts the recruit from his first enlistment, right through every course until his ultimate departure for the front. It is the first picture photographed in Australia on non-inflammable film.

LUCILLE TAFT TAKES MONTH'S VACATION

After her arduous work of the winter, Lucille Taft has been granted a leave of absence by the Gaumont Company. She will visit Washington, D. C., and several southern cities before going to her home in Memphis, Tenn., for a month rest during the hot season.

Universal Wins Fight to Show "Where Are My Children?"

Magistrate in Brooklyn, N. Y., Court Decides That the Picture Is Not "Immoral and Unfit for Mixed Audiences," as Contended by District Attorney

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company was obliged to go to court again recently concerning the big feature picture "Where Are My Children?" and again the company has triumphed over the party that held the subject to be immoral and unfit for mixed audiences.

While the picture was being shown in the Rialto theatre, Brooklyn, the district attorney brought suit against Robert Robinson, manager of the theatre and Harry Ginsberg, president of the Universal Film Exchange. His claim was that the subject should not be shown before young men and women, as it opened their eyes to things they should remain in ignorance of.

Assistant District Attorney Voss appeared for the State and Meyer Steinbrinck and Siegfried Hoffman acted for Universal. The defense brought forth the opinions of professional men and women of prominence, including social workers, ministers and doctors who have written to Universal that they believed the picture would work a great good. Rabbi Lyons, head of a large Jewish congregation, spoke in behalf of the picture, and while the Court ruled his speech unnecessary, he was nevertheless permitted to present his views on the subject.

Assistant Attorney Voss said that the picture would put unchaste ideas into the minds of young people and especially young women, holding that the picture exposed quack doctors in illegal practices that should never be known to the world at large.

Magistrate Alex H. Geismar disposed of this point by stating that if yonng women were not to know of such things the best thing to do would be to bring them up in a hot house and never let them get out in the world. After making this statement he dismissed the evidence and "Where Are My Children?" is still allowed to run in Brooklyn as a result.

"Unborn" Shows Signs of Activity Among State Rights Men

Over Three Hundred Letters and Telegrams Are on File in Office of Kulee Features, Inc., Asking for Price on Different Territories for Picture

THE experience of the Kulee Features, Inc., with its latest production, "The Unborn," a five-reel propaganda picture seems to indicate that there is a great interest today in features for State rights sales than ever before.

A Southern syndicate represented by W. F. Neil, manager of the Majestic theatre, Birmingham, Ala., has bought the eight Southern States from Virginia to the Mississippi River for "The Unborn." Edward Lux, late of the Buckeye Film Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, but now located in Indianapolis, has bought the State rights for "The Unborn" for Indiana and Kentucky.

Over twenty telegrams, letters of inquiries and offers for this picture have been made from Detroit alone. Altogether, over three hundred letters and telegrams are on file in the office of the Kulee Company asking for a price on different territories on this picture.

Robert T. Kane, representing the Kulee Company, left for the West on Friday to close up a number of sales that are merely waiting for a screen examination. On the first of August the Kulee Company will have completed and ready for sale a new five-reel feature along unique and original lines. It is the purpose of this organization to make twelve pictures a year catering especially to State rights buyers.

"GIRL O' DREAMS" IS SECOND AMERICAN WITH AUDREY MUNSON

"The Girl's Dreams," the second of the American-Mutual productions in which Audrey Munson, the famous model and noted beauty, is featured, is near completion at the American studios. The story by William Pigott is novel in theme, and affords the star many opportunities to display her histrionic ability. The picture is being produced under the direction of Thomas Ricketts, who has worked out some exceptionally beautiful exterior scenes.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Voting in Kansas City Theatres Convinces Universal of Public Desire for Short Pictures

THE Universal at Kansas City has had plenty of evidence that there is a distinct tendency towards the short pictures and the program. Not a day passes that six or seven contracts do not come in, from feature houses that are going back to program. More significant, many contracts are coming from feature houses that have never run programs. Some exhibitors who have insisted that their patrons do not want anything but features, are changing their minds.

A good deal of patient and quiet work has been done from Kansas City, to secure a fair and reliable consensus of opinion of patrons, and this has materially helped towards the increase of regular program business. The exchange has sent to exhibitors slips for voting, to be furnished to patrons, on which they may express their preferences. In many houses the votes are in favor of features. But in a large number, the patrons vote for the program, the majorities being large enough to cause the exhibitors to change their policy.

Phil L. Ryan leaves the Kansas City Feature Film Company, distributors of Paramount Pictures in Kansas, Iowa, Missouri and Nebraska, going to the Metro Picture Service at Des Moines, Iowa. Mr. Ryan made a remarkable sales record in the Kansas City territory, and makes this change so he may be at home with his parents who live in Iowa.

He was formerly with the John Lee Mahin Advertising Agency of Chicago, and was a newspaper man. Mr. Ryan is responsible for the Style Show movement in this country under Cressey Smith of Des Moines.

He is enthusiastic about the film industry and sees an immense opportunity to develop it by a direct appeal to the "ultimate consumer." After gaining a thorough first hand knowledge of distribution, Mr. Ryan expects to carry his ideas to the East and play an important part in molding the future of film advertising.

Frank A. Salisbury, who is known as a prominent theatre manager, is now employed as a representative of the George Kleine film service, Kansas City.

M. E. Smith, general manager of the George Kleine company, was in Kansas City from New York last week.

The Pathe Exchange, Inc., has had a large booking of the new serial, "The Grip of Evil," and is expecting a big business with the picture.

C. R. Seelye, business manager of the New York office of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., visited the Kansas City office recently and everyone of the exchange was on his toes.

K. C. Agnew, formerly cashier of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., is now on the road, traveling the territory of William Beckenstein, who has gone to Omaha, Nebraska, to work for the Unicorn service.

Joseph Gilday, manager of the Willis Wood theatre, has gone to New York to book pictures for some time in advance.

Joseph Skirboll, general manager of the Metro Company, paid a short visit to the Kansas City office, Tuesday, June 27, leaving the next day. While there he was entertained by Manager Harden with a trip over the boulevards in an automobile. Mr. Skirboll expected to stay several days but had to leave for Chicago on receipt of a telegram from that place requesting his attendance, to look after arrangements for the exhibition of Metro pictures for the coming sixth national exposition and convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America.

PATHE SEEKS SITE ON FILM ROW, SAN FRANCISCO

The Pathe Exchange at 67 Turk street, San Francisco, has been looking around on Film Row, Golden Gate avenue, with an idea of selecting a location there.

Manager Markowitz of the California Film Exchange is spending his vacation at Santa Cruz.

Ben S. Cohen and N. H. Spitzer, representing the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, have been recent visitors in San Francisco. They went on for a visit to Los Angeles, after which they will return to San Francisco.

DAVIDSON IS NOW IN THE "FIRST FATHER" CLASS

G. M. Davidson, auditor of the Canadian Universal Company, Toronto, has entered the ranks of the "first father" class. Mr. Davidson has just been presented with a very beautiful little baby girl by his wife and is in consequence one of the happiest and proudest men in Canada.

Picture Business Offers Chances Only to Men Who Have Succeeded in Other Lines, Says Goldstone

"IF you have failed at everything else, don't tackle motion pictures!"

This is the advice spread broadcast in a brief interview by Ph. Goldstone, manager of the World Film exchange in Omaha, Neb., published in the Omaha Bee, which is running one such feature every Sunday from the various exchange managers in the city.

Goldstone's striking advice is:

"The time is past when the man with no experience, no ability and little money can make a success in the motion picture business.

"The phenomenal growth and opportunity open in this industry have attracted men of real and proven ability in their respective lines. They have applied their knowledge to this business and from a hit and miss proposition we today find the entire moving picture industry a systematized business, with profits proportionate to investment of money and ability. There are big opportunities for the intelligent, successful men and the same lack of opportunity for the drifting chance seeker. The man who goes from one business to another in the hope that the goddess of chance will gather him coin without any effort of exertion on his part will make poor headway in this industry.

"Immense fortunes are and will be made in motion pictures, but to make them one must compete with men of ability, and that means one must deliver the goods.

"Every day the exchanges are visited by people wanting to know what the opportunities are in this business. We always give the same advice:

"By all means get into the business if you have plenty of ability, judgment and foresight."

"But how do we know we have the required ability?" they ask.

"By the success you have made before. If you have let opportunity go by, if your judgment has been poor, your ambition weakened by hard work in any other line, then stay out. We have too much driftwood in the business now. Follow the course of least resistance—join the army and the government will make a man of you."

BENNETT TO VISIT EASTERN AND SOUTHERN EXCHANGES OF MUTUAL

Hunter Bennett, sales director of the Mutual Film Corporation, has left New York for an extensive trip embracing many of the Southern and Eastern exchanges of his company.

Mr. Bennett will visit the following exchange centres on his present trip: Toronto, Montreal, St. Johns, Bangor, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Charlotte, Atlanta, New Orleans, Houston, Dallas, Oklahoma City, Wichita, Kansas City and St. Louis.

Mr. Bennett's trip is for the purpose of launching strenuous sales campaigns in each territory visited, to handle the newly revised Regular Service Program.

C. ST. JOHN-BRENON RETURNS TO MONTREAL AFTER TRIP TO HULL

Chandos St. John-Brenon, Montreal manager for the Fox Film Corporation, returned recently from a trip to Hull, in the Province of Quebec, which is directly opposite Ottawa, the capital city of the Dominion. While in Hull Mr. Brenon visited Ottawa and looked over the ground. Business has fallen off there a great deal. Things are much better during a parliamentary session, but there is none now on and thus the theatres are suffering.

From various points throughout the Dominion reports are coming in as to the falling off of business for the summer, a falling off which is greater this year than hitherto. But there is every indication that the fall will see quite a boom in the picture field.

LANGTREE SUCCEEDS MORAN IN DENVER

E. H. Goldstein, assistant manager of exchanges for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has been in Denver for the past two months installing a complete new system in the exchange. F. Y. Langtree, former roadman of the Metro exchange of Denver has been appointed manager of the exchange to succeed Billy Moran.

Langtree has been in the business for the past five years and has served as roadman during most of this time. He has been over the Inter-mountain several times and is personally acquainted with all the exhibitors. The Denver Universal exchange with a new manager and a complete new office system should render a perfect service to their customers.

SHRADER IN CHARGE OF PATHE AT INDIANAPOLIS

R. S. Shrader, formerly manager of the Cincinnati office of V-L-S-E, has become manager of the Indianapolis office of Pathe Exchange. Mr. Shrader succeeds W. F. Hurst, a New York man who has returned to New York to accept a position in the home office.

The Famous Players Film Service, Inc., which had an exchange in the Occidental Building, Indianapolis, for the last eight months, has closed its office here.

G. N. Montgomery, manager of the Indianapolis office of the World Film Corporation, made a flying trip to New York City recently, on business.

CARMICHAEL PROMOTED TO LOS ANGELES OFFICE BY FOX

Field Carmichael, manager of the Fox exchange in Denver, has been transferred to manage the Fox exchange at Los Angeles. Carmichael's ability to hold his accounts in his territory and his aggressiveness as an exchange manager are a few of the reasons why he has been promoted by the Fox Corporation to the management of a larger office.

His successor at the Denver exchange is Albert W. Eden, former roadman for the Seattle branch of Fox. Eden left Denver the early part of last week for a five week trip through the territory.

Montreal Film Men Go in Strong for Sports and Plan Baseball Game to Raise Funds for Red Cross

FILM men and sport are becoming synonimous in Montreal. The exchanges are now indulging in weekly inter-exchange and inter-theatre baseball games, which is bringing them in closer touch with the public. Herbert Lubin and C. Sawyer of Metro and C. St. John Brenon of Fox are taking up the matter of putting on a monster comedy baseball game on the big ball grounds for the benefit of the Red Cross. The plans are now materializing and it is expected that a very substantial amount will be turned over to the Red Cross Fund of Quebec. A charge for admission will be made to the grounds to see the game and it will be under the patronage of some of the best known Montreal officials and citizens of both sexes.

The line of sports in which the exchangemen are now figuring and to a certain extent prominently are baseball tennis, cricket and polo. Mr. Brenon of Fox was a well known polo player in the west of Canada four years ago and the dearth of men to play has resulted in the game being dropped to a great degree in the east. Every effort is now being made to revive it and the Fox manager will be seen in a game on Sunday, July 9. This is the first exchange manager who has found his way to the ranks of polo since the industry came to Canada. The Universal are strong in baseball and have so far defeated all teams and all combinations. Tennis is among their list of sports. There is every indication that a film Athletic Association will be formed, taking up every branch of sport and the film men and exhibitors will be very much to the front especially in baseball and tennis.

The marriage of the brother of Maurice West, salesman for the Fox Film Corporation, Limited, of Montreal, took place on Saturday, June 24, at Montreal. Mr. West was present. The ceremony took place at 6 in the morning much to Mr. West's dismay who felt the strain of early rising.

Emily Boxer, the bookkeeper of the Fox Montreal offices is forced to take a three weeks' holiday owing to a breakdown in health. Miss Boxer will remain in the city and rest up and will later resume her duties, but will nevertheless keep her eye upon her department even while taking the much needed rest.

The Fox feature "Slander," with Bertha Kalich has proven one of the best bets yet in Montreal.

A most interesting display of the Million Dollar Fox-Kellermann-Benton picture was made last week by the Montreal Standard, the paper which was first to recognize the value of a special page, with the Montreal Herald, for the motion picture. The Standard offices are situated in the heart of the business and financial district in St. James street, almost next door to the Montreal Star, which is the largest paper in Canada.

The windows of the Standard offices front the main street and in them has been placed full pages from the New York Tribune and other papers showing various scenes from the Fox masterpiece de luxe. Thousands of people have passed the window and look at the display. Jamaica is a summer resort for many Canadians and many prominent Montrealers were in Jamaica while this feature was in production, with the result that Canadians feel they have a certain amount of interest in the feature.

JONES ANNOUNCES FORMATION OF CENTRAL EXCHANGE FOR YOUNG PICTURES

Aaron J. Jones, of Chicago. announces the formation of the Central Film Corporation, which is to handle the Clara Kimball Young features in Illinois, Indiana, western Kentucky and southern Wisconsin.

This new corporation, of which Jones, Linnick and Schaefer are the directors, will have offices occupying the entire fourth floor of the Orpheum Theatre Building at 110 South State street. On July 3, Harry Weiss, now manager of the Chicago Bluebird exchange, will become the general manager of the Central Film Corporation.

V-L-S-E BI-MONTHLY CONFERENCE IN NEW YORK ATTENDED BY MIDDLE WEST EXCHANGEMEN

The Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., held its bi-monthly salesmen's conference recently and the following attended: R. L. White, Iowa district; Y. Darnell, Nebraska; H. A. Reed, Kansas; J. H. Gilinsky, Oklahoma; J. E. Story, Missouri; T. F. Nine, a booker; F. G. Gettinger, sales-promoter; E. R. Pearson, manager; and L. J. Scott, head of the publicity department.

I. J. Marshall, Manhattan, Kansas, and V. A. Klingsberg, formerly proprietor of the Colonial theatre, Kirksville, Kansas, were at the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc., office last week.

J. L. WARNER PLACES SUBJECTS RIGHT AFTER OPENING HIS EXCHANGE

J. L. Warner, who has opened an exchange at 120 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, has already booked pictures with the Portola theatre. His first release will be "The Prima Donna's Husband," the Triumph Film Corporation, on July 23. He will handle only a few reels but will be very careful of the quality. "The Prima Donna's Husband" was given a private exhibition at the Tivoli recently. He will also have six two-reel subjects by Ella Wheeler Wilcox in film form, not a serial, to be released Sept. 15.

MAYO IS GUEST OF SUDEKUM IN NASHVILLE

G. Morrow Mayo, representing the Hy-Art Masterplay Company, of Washington, D. C., was in Nashville last week, and while there was the guest of President Tony Sudekum of the Cresent Amusement Company. The Hy-Art Company is a state's right concern handling only features, foremost of which is "The Battle Cry of Peace."

The Hy-Art Masterplay Company is claimed to be one of the most successful state's right concerns in the country. The productions handled by this company are of the highest rank as far as master productions go. Incidentally Mr. Mayo is the youngest picture man on the road.

EDWARDS BACK FROM TRIP IN THREE STATES

C. S. Edwards, manager of the Pathe Exchange at 3210 Locust street, St. Louis, has just returned from a short trip through Missouri, Tennessee and Arkansas, where he called personally on many small and large town exhibitors, and which resulted in his booking "The Iron Claw" serial in a large number of theatres. Mr. Edwards took occasion to make the trip during the visit of nspector and Auditor I. W. Goodfield, of the Pathe Exchanges, who was in St. Louis on a periodical tour.

H. P. Wolfberg, manager of the General Film Company, in Film Row, at 3610 Olive street, St. Louis, invited a number of exhibitors to view a film featuring Bert Williams, made by the Biograph Company and brought to St. Louis by Gus Mohme. The exhibition of the film took place in the projection room of the exchange on July 4, and despite the fact that the day was noisy with patriotic celebrations, a goodly number of interested film and theatre men accepted Mr. Molfberg's invitation.

Bob Taylor, assistant manager of the Universal exchange at 2116 Locust street, St.. Louis, left for Indianapolis, Indiana, last week to spend his vacation with his folks.

DIPPIE MAKES CHANGES IN VANCOUVER MUTUAL OFFICES

Manager C. R. Dippie of the Mutual branch in Vancouver, B. C., has just completed the extensive alterations which were undertaken recently, involving the rearrangement of the quarters occupied in the Dominion theatre building. The entire interior of the exchange has been retinted, and the whole establishment has been greatly improved. C. B. Price, the Mutual general manager for Canada, has departed for the east.

The Universal office will shortly move from its present location in the Holden Building to a ground floor office on Dunsmuir street, directly across from the Colonial theatre. A move has been under consideration for some time, but it was found impossible to secure a suitable location. The Universal will be the only Vancouver exchange situated on the ground floor.

COHN, NOTABLE, ON WYOMING TRIP

M. H. Cohn manager of the Notable Feature Film Company of Denver, left Denver the early part of last week for a trip through Wyoming in quest of new business. He is expected to return in about ten days. Jack Scott, roadman for the Notable has just returned from a successful trip through New Mexico and Arizona. After a short rest he will make a trip through the Black Hills for Notable.

OVIATT, PATHE IN SAN FRANCISCO, ENTHUSIASTIC OVER FIRST RUN BOOKINGS

H. W. Oviatt, manager of the Pathe Exchange at 67 Turk street, San Francisco, states that the exchange is experiencing a condition which has never before been so fully realized in that city. With all of the releases that he is receiving now, he finds no trouble whatever in securing the first week's run in the big downtown houses. The same is correspondingly true with the big establishments in the interior cities, and he feels that it is an extra test of the quality.

Dembow Goes to Pennsylvania Encampment and Gets Militia Pictures; Philadelphia Man Adds Title of "Feature Film Specialist"

GEORGE DEMBROW, manager of the Philadelphia Fox exchange went up to Mt. Gretna, Penna., with a camera man during the encampment of the State troops at that point, and got about every incident of interest to the public in the activities of the soldiers. These pictures were made into a one-reeler for the Fox Film Corporation and were released in a very few days after filming.

Philip S. Greenberg has added to his managership of the New Film Corporation the title of "Feature Film Specialist" under which he is booking a Chaplin film called "Charlie's Stormy Romance." This four-reeler is meeting with a big demand, the exhibitors booking it with avidity. Much of this demand is due to the extensive advertising given the release by Mr. Greenberg.

The Supreme Feature Film Service, of which Harry F. Grelle is manager, has just completed arrangements with Universal for the state rights in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Oklahoma on "Where Are My Children." This feature will be placed before the public just like a regular theatrical attraction, with advance agents, a complete advertising campaign and the rest. Each and every town will be played. It is expected to open the season at St. Louis and Kansas City between September 1st and 15th.

The demand for this film is keeping up to the top notch in New Jersey in spite of the usually dull summer season. The "Dumb Girl of Portici" is also booking fast in that state.

BALABAN-HERSHBERG FILM ATTRACTIONS FORMED IN CHICAGO

Barney Balaban and William Hershberg, owners of the General Feature Film Company, have formed a new alliance, which will be known as the Balaban-Hershberg Film Attractions, with offices in the Mallers Building, Chicago.

They will distribute various feature productions. Twelve new roadmen have been added to the staff, and plans are under contemplation for offices in Milwaukee and Indianapolis. Simeon B. Grevier will be general manager. The Chicago quarters will be materialy enlarged.

CANADIAN "U" HOUSE ORGAN MADE NATIONAL PICTURE PAPER

The Bulletin, started by the Canadian Universal as a house organ, has been graduated from this class into that of a national picture paper, printing news from all portions of Canada, and in addition current happenings of the producing and exhibiting fields. The Bulletin started as a one-page sheet. It is now eight pages, and has opened its columns to display advertising.

Its success is ascribed to W. A. Bach, the Canadian Universal's advertising manager.

BASEBALL HOLDS INTEREST OF MONTREAL FILM MEN

Baseball still holds a prominent place in the interests of Montreal film men. The Universal team is still champion of the informal league that exists, but the Metro team has been making a splendid showing lately. An odd rule of this league is that members of competing teams must not indulge in practice during daylight hours, as it is contended that this would take the man away from their regular routine of business, and make the competition unfair.

OMAHA LEADS FRISCO IN PATHE BUSINESS FOR MAY

Omaha jumped over San Francisco in The Pathe News for the month of May. This means the Omaha exchange made a greater gain in distributing this service. Omaha is also far from the bottom in the efficiency of business, in Gold Rooster results and in points on "Who's Guilty?" Des Moines, Ia., is close beside Omaha in everything but Gold Roosters, where she leads the column, and in efficiency of business, where she stand second.

BYRD OF DALLAS WILL GET MEXICAN SUBJECTS FOR FOX

"Billy" Byrd, manager of the Dallas office of the Fox Film Corporation, has gone to the Mexican border with a cameraman and several thousand feet of negative, to "shoot" interesting scenes at the front for the William Fox theatres. One of the interesting sidelights will be a reel or so of the New York National Guard, now encamped on the Mexican border.

Mr. Byrd visits the Brownsville section first, which is the extreme southern edge of Texas; and will later "shoot" scenes on the border to Eagle Pass.

"GRIP OF EVIL" TAKES HOLD OF MANAGERS

An example of how Pathe's "The Grip of Evil" is booking in the West, in advance of release is seen in the following telegram to the Pathe executive offices from Manager Quimby of the Pathe Seattle exchange.

"Sold 'Grip of Evil' to Pantages for all his theaters in United States and Canada same as 'Iron Claw.' Pantages says he would not trade any episode of 'Iron Claw' for any act on his bill. He considers it the best of anything he has ever seen."

DRUMM GOES TO SEATTLE FOR WORLD

J. W. Drumm, roadman for the World Exchange of Denver, has been transferred to the Seattle office. He will work between Seattle and Salt Lake for the World. G. W. Hinton is doing the road work for the Denver office.

Federal Government Plans a Graduated Tax of $10, $15, $20 on Motion Picture Theatres

APPARENTLY it is the intention of the Federal Government that motion picture and legitimate theatre operators shall stand a large part of the burden of taxation brought about by the American relations with Mexico, for in the so-called general revenue bill brought into the House of Representatives last week it is proposed to place an assessment of one-half of one per cent. of the gross receipts of the houses upon their proprietors.

Little notice is given of the matter, for it is announced that the general debate is to start on July 5, and that such debate shall cease in time for a vote to be taken on Saturday, July 8. A glance at the provisions applying to the theatres will show just what sort of a burden is to be placed upon them.

The measure was introduced by Chairman Claude Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee and contains provisions for a tariff commission and several other revenue producing matters.

It is provided that "Proprietors of theatres, museums or concert halls, where a charge for admission is made, located in a city, town or village with a population not exceeding one thousand, according to the last preceding census of the United States, shall pay $10; located in a city, town or village having a population in excess of one thousand but not in excess of two thousand, shall pay $15; located in a city, town or village having a population in excess of two thousand and not in excess of three thousand, shall pay $20; located in a city, town or village having a population in excess of three thousand, shall pay one-half of one per centum of their gross receipts from admission. Every edifice used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays or performances, for admission to which entrance money is received, not including halls or armories rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical representation, shall be regarded as a theatre.

"Every proprietor of such theatre, museum, or concert hall, located in a city, town or village, having a population in excess of three thousand inhabitants, shall, on or before the fifteenth day of March 1917, and on or before the 15th day of June, September, December and March thereafter, make a return under oath to the collector of internal revenue of the district wherein they are located, stating the gross receipts from admissions for the preceding quarter. The collector shall, within five days of receipt of the return, notify the proprietor of the amount of the tax for which such person is liable, and such person shall pay the tax to the collector on or before the first day of the next month."

Mayor of Elizabeth, N. J., Approves "Where Are My Children?" and Urges Everybody of the Right Age to See the Picture

CENSORSHIP in Elizabeth, N. J., received a setback when Mayor Victor Mravlag refused to interfere with the showing of "Where Are My Children?" scheduled at the Garden theatre for a week. The mayor's decision was based on a personal review of the film and the report of two citizens whom he had asked to attend one of the initial performances in that city.

Instead of interfering with the showing of the picture, Mayor Mravlag threw consternation into the ranks of the critics by sending to Manager Chris Hayes a written commendation of the play and its presentation. The mayor's letter follows:

"Owing to a complaint received against the staging of a film play entitled 'Where Are My Children?' I took steps to investigate the character of the play. For this purpose I requested two ladies of the highest social standing, prominent in the management of the efforts for the improvement of the civic and moral welfare of the community, and in every way qualified to correctly judge in the matter, to investigate, and I personally attended a presentation of the film.

"Both their reports and my own judgment agree that the film is not only unobjectionable, but is the most powerful presentation of the subject. No sermon, no lecture, nor other form of presenting the subject could in any way have the same force and I doubt whether words, no matter how carefully selected, could in so delicate and still so forcible a way present the subject. It ought to be seen by all people of both sexes and proper age, in order to protect the innocent and perhaps quicken the conscience of the guilty ones.

You have my permission to use this communication in whatever way you think best."

SPOKANE CENSORSHIP FIGHT NOW INVOLVES "NATION"

The first result of Spokane's newest censorship fight is an order issued by the City Council that Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" shall not be shown there unless the assault scenes are eliminated.

The film ran here for three weeks at the Clemmer theatre in 1915 without opposition. The approaching booking is at the Auditorium.

W. E. Mick, advance agent for Elliott and Sherman, of Minneapolis, who are making the Spokane territory with the picture now, has announced that the courts will be asked to issue an injunction, restraining the city from interfering with the performances.

At the same time that the "Birth of a Nation" question was pending, an application for the showing of "Where Are My Children?" was made to the city council.

A private run of the film was made, with city officials, newspaper men, ministers and others attending.

Some pronounced the film exceptionally impressive. Others found it dull, but none opposed its exhibition. It will be run at the Casino in July.

TORONTO FILM MEN MAKE MOVE FOR FEDERAL CENSORSHIP

Toronto moving picture men made the first move last week for a campaign to secure a national board of censorship in Canada, to replace the various provincial boards. The film interests are arranging to hold a meeting in the near future, it is declared, for the purpose of organizing this campaign which is intended to extend from coast to coast. According to present plans the matter of federal censorship is to be brought to the attention of every Parliamentarian in Canada, and the attempt will be made to have film jurisdiction transferred from its present provincial basis to a federal status in so far as censorship is concerned.

TOPEKA REDUCES THEATRE LICENSE FEES

The city commissioners, Topeka, Kan., have reduced the licenses for theatres. The scale adopted, effective July 1, is as follows: Theatres with seating capacity less than 400, $25; between 400 and 650, $40; more than 650, $50. The $100 license fee had been the subject of protest, the exhibitors asking that licenses be reduced to at least $50, which is what Kansas City exhibitors pay. The commissioners met them more than half way. The entire negotiations were conducted in a friendly spirit.

Bill to Do Away with Placing of Two Copies of Each Film in Copyright Office, Passed by the House, Is Before the Senate

IT will no longer be necessary for motion picture film manufacturers to file in the office of the register of copyrights the two copies of each film subject that they have offered for registration, if the bill passed recently by the House of Representatives receives similar attention in the United States Senate.

The bill, originally introduced in the House by Representative Oglesby, proposes to amend section 12 of the copyright law by adding thereto the following:

Provided, however, That in the case of any work referred to in this section wherein copyright has been secured by publication of the work with notice of copyright, which by reason of its character, bulk, fragility, or because of dangerous ingredients can not expeditiously be filed, the register of copyrights may determine that there shall be deposited, in lieu of two complete copies of such work, such identifying photographs or prints, together with such written or printed descriptions of the work as he shall find sufficient to identify it. And provided further, That in the case of motion picture photoplays and motion pictures other than photoplays, whenever deposit has been made as required by the provisions of the act of Congress (Public, Number Three hundred and three) approved August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and twelve, and registration has been secured thereunder, such deposit and registration shall hereafter be held to be sufficient, and shall exempt the copyright proprietor from the deposit of two complete copies of such photoplay or motion picture if it is later reproduced in copies for sale, and the provisions of the amendatory act of August twenty-fourth, nineteen hundred and twelve, are hereby made to apply to motion picture photoplays and motion pictures other than photoplays that have been reproduced in copies for sale or otherwise published.

Section 12 of the copyright law as it now is requires that after copyright has been secured by publication of the work (sale or public distribution) two complete copies of the best edition of the work must be promptly deposited. This has imposed a burdensome obligation upon such proprietors which was not intended, the House Committee on Patents held. They are practically of no greater value for the identification of the motion picture in which copyright is claimed than the selected prints together with the title and description required by section 11 to be deposited in the case of a motion picture. The deposit of the complete reels is of no service to the copyright office and are of no value to the Library of Congress and are held, by reason of their inflammable character, to be dangerous. Such deposit also imposes an added burden upon the copyright office to no purpose.

This bill has been referred to the Senate Patents Committee for its consideration. It has the approval of all film manufacturers.

Exhibitors in Boise, Idaho, Win Sunday Opening Right After a Three Months' Fight

AFTER a three months' fight, during which they have taken their case into the Supreme Court, the motion picture theatre owners of Boise, Idaho, have finally won out in their fight for Sunday opening and the doors of the six theatres there opened Sunday, July 2, to a large and appreciative audience, which proved that the public of the city were strongly in favor of Sunday motion picture shows.

In the latter part of March a petition containing 3,814 names was presented to the city council asking that the theatres be opened on Sunday. After careful checking up of the names the city council passed an ordinance providing for the opening of the theatres. The council was divided upon the question of Sunday opening, two members of which voted against it. The church members in order to block the theatres operating on Sunday immediately filed with the council a referendum petition, which, under the commission form of government in force in Boise, would necessarily refer the ordinance to a vote of the people under a special election or else hold it up until the next city election, when it would be voted upon, leaving the matter optional with the council. The motion picture men took their case into court under a writ of prohibition. The judge of the district court after considerable deliberation, handed down an adverse decision and an appeal was immediately taken to the Supreme Court. June 29 the Supreme Court handed down a decision reversing the district court. In substance the court held that the referendum provision under the commission form of government does not apply in the matter of moving pictures after the proper petitions have been signed and presented to the city council, which has the power to grant the petitions without referring to a referendum vote.

Although the theatre managers had less than two days to prepare for Sunday opening, they were ready and were patronized by audiences which showed the public approval of such performance.

"UNDINE" PASSED BY ST. LOUIS COURT

S. J. Baker, manager of the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., at 2116 Locust street, announced to the exhibitors of St. Louis and surrounding territory through the newspapers that the photoplay "Undine" has been pronounced a "moral, clean and highly artistic motion picture" in Judge Miller's court.

Efforts were made, by bringing court action, to restrain the film company from exhibiting the picture, but Judge Miller's action leaves it free to be shown in its entirety at local picture houses. Mr. Baker says that the film has been booked for an indefinite run at the Central theatre, Sixth and Market streets.

June 24th, 1916.

Mr. R. M. VANDIVERT,
Advertising Mgr.,
Motion Picture News,
729 Seventh Avenue,
City.

Dear Sir:

It gives me great pleasure to extend to your publication a tribute that it justly deserves.

In my twenty years' experience in the theatrical business, during which time I have handled publicity for the greatest and best known stars both of Europe and America, and some of the most successful productions produced during that time, I have never used a medium of publicity that brought quick results as evidenced by the avalanche of letters, telegrams and long-distance telephone messages such as the Kulee Company received in reference to its recent production of the five-reel feature, "THE UNBORN."

Although my connection with moving pictures is of recent date, and my experience with feature pictures limited, I am compelled to acknowledge that with such a medium as the Motion Picture News, it is not a difficult matter to interest State Right buyers.

It is also quite evident from the tone of these letters and telegrams, your reviews and criticisms of productions is accepted by motion picture buyers and exhibitors as reliable and authoritative.

Firmly believing that "one should render unto Caeser the things that are Caeser's," compels me to address this letter to you.

The success that "THE UNBORN" is meeting with in the sale of State Rights I attribute to your wonderful publication.

Yours very truly,

LK:JH. KULEE FEATURES, INC.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

"MEET me in Chicago the week of July 10 to 18, at the Exhibitor's Exposition and Convention; I don't want to feel lonesome," reads a post card which bears a likeness to Sam Spedon at his favorite occupation of lighting his pipe. Sorry, Sam, we can't meet you, but we've arranged so you won't be lonesome.

Emily Stevens has recovered from a serious operation for appendicitis at a New York hospital, and will soon be back at work. Preparations are being made at the Metro studios for the new play in which she is to star.

George DuBois Proctor, who as conductor of this here very department, successfully eluded the police for many weeks, has signed up to write scenarios for Lasky. He made a good week of it last week by getting married on Wednesday, and leaving with his bride for their new home at Hollywood, Los Angeles, on Thursday.

The newest recruit to the motion picture ranks, is "Bob" McAlarney, formerly city editor of the New York Tribune. Mr. McAlarney has joined the Lasky scenario staff, also, and is reading manuscripts at the New York office, under the direction of Hector Turnbull.

J. Cunningham Flinn, Harry Reichenbach, William A. Brady, E. Richard Schayer, and John Grey are among those who have checked out at this office on their way to the big convention.

Of the above, J. C. Flinn, H. Reichenback, E. R. Schayer and J. Grey announce that they will have the most startling exhibitions at the whole show. We believe they are right.

H. O. Davis, general manager of Universal City, was seated in the projecting room at 1600 Broadway the other day, waiting for a picture to come on when one of the demon secretaries of the National Board of Review approached with this question, "Pardon me, are you a member of the National Board?" Mr. Davis' ears were tin to such a remark. The secretary repeated it. Mr. Davis turned purple and as he left the room, answered, "I hope not," accented first last and in the middle. Those who are acquainted with Mr. Davis' enthusiasm for the Board term this the week's best laugh.

New York's position as the executive center of the picture industry has been strengthened by the Famous Players-Lasky merger. Although the Lasky studios on the coast will be enlarged to handle increased production, the business, and even the scenario end of the company will be handled from the Fifth avenue offices in New York. The scenario department is a sort of hobby with Mr. Lasky, and he proposes to have nothing but a fireproof wall separate him from it. Three scenario writers (or continuity writers, as the Lasky people call them) will be maintained on the coast, but they are looked upon largely as an emergency crew, and the reading of scripts and the scenarioizing of most of the stories will be done at the New York end, with Hector Turnbull, himself the author of many Lasky photoplays, in charge. Manuscripts for both Famous Players and Lasky will be handled through this department.

To the general gaiety of this week's issue. May Anderson contributes this clipping from Bide Dudley's column in the New York Evening World.

George Proctor, of the Lasky staff of film editors, stutters now and then. He isn't a bit sensitive about it, so we might as well tell a little story "on him." A few days ago George married a very comely young actress. Prior to the ceremony a friend said to the film editor:

"George, suppose you get a stuttering spell when the minister asks if you will take the girl as your wedded wife!"

"Well," replied George, "he'll just have to wait. That minister will be working for me, you know."

Consistency being a jewel, and jewels being rare, Jacques Kopfstein has been wearing a withered daisy on the port lapel of his best coat all this week. He says it is one way of announcing the next Ivan production: "A Faded Flower."

Marie Walcamp, Star of the New Universal Serial "Liberty"

J. C. Johnston, of Philadelphia, one of our staunchest admirers, (applause) visited the Stanley theatre in this city last week, and saw "Destiny's Toy." "The remarkable memory of the millionaire with regard to the scar that reunited him with his daughter," he writes, "seems to be connected with this clipping from T. A. Daly in the Ledger." This is the clipping:

The grandest memory in all the four quarters o' the world was me father's, so it was. Wan day—it was in the summer of 1847—me father was diggin' in a field in Ireland, doin' a day's work, whin the ground opened an' up jumps the Divvil. "D'ye like eggs?" sez he. "I do," sez me father. Wid that the Divvil pops down agin an' the hole closed. Well, now, it was about twinty years later, me father was workin' in the same field—only now he was ownin' the place where he was doin' but the day's job before—an' all of a sudden the ground opened as before an' the Divvil comes up. "How?" sez he. "B'iled," sez me father. Think o' that for a memory!

As a cook, Enid Markey is an appealing little screen actress. Last week, her director put her in a scene where she had to fry bacon and eggs for Frank Keenan, and Keenan had to eat the cooking. It was said at his home last night that he might be up and around within the week.

Mistaken identity is popular on the coast just now, not only in the scenario departments, but out on the highways. Last week a group from a Sunday school picnic ran across De Wolf Hopper, and mistaking him for Billy Sunday, asked him to give them a talk on temperance. De Wolf kindly consented, and told them all he knew, or had heard about the subject. He advised them to drink only malt or spirituous liquors, or wines, and under no conditions to take anything stronger than alcohol during the warm weather.

J. Reardon, V-L-S-E, Boston, was in town and left Saturday.

E. L. Masters, V-L-S-E, leaves for Chicago and will be gone one week.

"NE'ER-DO-WELL" DOES WELL IN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Having been shown in the larger cities of California, the "Ne'er-Do-Well" has been taken into the San Joaquin Valley by the All Star Feature Distributors of San Francisco and is duplicating the success of "The Spoilers" in that section. Business conditions in that field are very good for this season of the year and crowded houses have greeted this production wherever shown.

The Bayside Bugle

"Bigger, Busier, Brighter Bell Ave." Bayside, L. I., July 22, 1916.

EDITORIAL

While not always to be encouraged, it is sometimes the best thing for a person to blow his own horn, and although we do not advocate this as a rule it seems to be justifiable in some cases, as since the BUGLE was started and announced it would be for Bayside first, last and all the time, more than a score of the best motion picture people have moved to our fair midst, coming from all quarters of the four winds. We might mention their names, but a list of such would be legion, and, furthermore, is unnecessary. It only remains for the BUGLE to add that the Board of Trade and the various real estate interests should take note of this, inasmuch as we might be wanting to rent another house ourselves one of these days.

—Quite a number went around to the Episcopal church, the 4th, to hear the band play and Bram Davis speak.

—Fred. Beecroft called on his brother Bill, the Fourth, and watched the regatta at the yacht club.

—Victoria Searl is working for Frank Powell, this week, she taking part in a picture which is being taken in Flushing. As Frank, as well as Bill Barry also lives here in Bayside, it is pretty soft for everybody, say we.

—H. Reichenbach and wife, with others, were among those who Long Beached and Lynbrooked, the Fourth.

—Ye Editor was up Roslyn and Sea Cliff way with Leon and Victoria Searl, the Fourth, in case anybody is interested.

—Cliff Bruce may go up north soon to work in a picture for the Metro co., of N. York.

—Harry O. Hoyt, one of our original subscribers, has been installed as one of the most recent acquisitions of Bayside.

—Many of our first citizens are in Chicago at the motion picture convention this week; things seem a little dull along Bell ave. Hurry back boys—and girls, Bayside needs you.

—Letters have been received here from Marsh Farnum, who is now in Los Angeles; Marsh is getting along well, and his many friends are glad to hear that he will soon be well enough for a trip up into the mountains.

"Greater New York by Day and by Night"

C. Post Mason Will Begin Tour of the World to Advertise the Subject, and While Abroad Will Furnish Special Correspondence for "Motion Picture News"

LEAVING New York the early part of August and advertising his latest production, "Greater New York by Day and by Night: The Wonder City of the World," C. Post Mason will commence a tour of the world in an eight-cylinder King automobile. MOTION PICTURE NEWS has arranged with Mr. Mason to furnish special correspondence, reviewing the picture fields in the various countries he will visit.

The itinerary of the trip is from New York to San Francisco, thence by steamer to Honolulu, New Zealand and Australia, and from there to the Far East. Egypt, Italy, Spain, France and England will also be visited.

In addition to exploiting and exhibiting his production, Mr. Mason will make a series of travel pictures throughout the trip, and these he will exhibit on his return. Outside of American territory, Mr. Mason expects to lecture on his new production.

"Greater New York by Day and by Night" was produced with official permission from the Commissioners of the different municipal departments. All the famous bridges, boulevards, drives, streets, skyscrapers, and historic spots of New York are reproduced. Statistics given in the subtitles were furnished by courtesy of the various city departments.

The production will be distributed from Mr. Mason's New York office, Room 1702 Candler building, 220 West Forty-second street.

A trade showing of "Greater New York by Day and by Night" will be given at the Sun Photoplay rooms, 218 West Forty-second street, on Thursday July 15, at 3 P. M.

TABOR GRAND, NOW A PICTURE THEATRE, IS BRILLIANTLY LIGHTED

Special to Motion Picture News.

Denver, July 8,

The Tabor Grand Opera House of Denver is to have a huge brilliantly lighted Curtis street entrance. This famous old playhouse, recently converted into a high class moving picture theatre, will be one of the "bright lights" on Denver's Screen Row. It will be decorated in ivory and buff tints and will have an electric outline system of lighting up to the third floor.

An audience of Denver's sociological workers gathered at the Tabor on Saturday, July 1, to witness the private showing of the latest Universal film, produced by the Smalleys, "Where Are My Children?" which opened at the Tabor on Sunday, July 2 for an indefinite run. In the audience were Mrs. Ida Gregory, the Denver censor, William H. Smiley, superintendent of High Schools, The Rev. Father William O'Ryan and a score more representing the pulpit and the press of Denver. At the conclusion of the private showing the production received the approval of the critical body.

BARRON DEDICATES SONG TO "LIBERTY," UNIVERSAL SERIAL

Ted Barron, author of "If Time Was Money I'd Be a Millionaire, "Billy," "Georgia Moon," "Lull Me To Sleep" and a dozen other popular song hits in the last decade, has dedicated a song to the Universal's new patriotic serial, "Liberty."

The song will be played in every theatre where "Liberty" is shown. The author of the song is a member of the "Piano Bugs Septette" which holds forth at the Friars' Club and Lights' Club, in New York. The Septette is made up of seven of the most famous song writers in the country.

The name of Mr. Barron's song, most appropriately, is "Liberty" and it has been officially adopted as the song of the World's Statute of Liberty Illumination fund and as the official anthem of the celebrants of the new national holiday, "American Liberty Day."

It has been adopted in public schools in various cities, by many patriotic organizations, including the "Daughters of the American Revolution," "The Daughters of Liberty," fraternal orders such as the Elks and Foresters and many other civic bodies.

RIDICULOUS ASPECT OF CENSORSHIP POINTED OUT BY BERST

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, was discussing local censorship the other day, and gave an excellent illustration of its folly. He called attention to the fact that in McMinniville, Oregon, a town of 2,500 inhabitants, there is a regularly appointed Board of Censors.

ROBERT BURNS NOVELIZES HIS "GATES OF DIVORCE," GAUMONT

Robert Burns, author of Gaumont's "Gates of Divorce," has completed the story for publication as a 90,000-word novel. Gertrude McCoy is starred in the photoplay version. It will be released as a Mutual picture, July 20.

Famous Players Film Signs Maurice and Florence Walton

The Pair Has Danced in Practically Every Court of Europe and Bear the Distinction of Overcoming, by Their Graceful Dancing, Queen Mary's Prejudice Against Tango

MAURICE and Florence Walton, internationally celebrated dancers, have signed a long term contract with the Famous Players Film Company and will shortly be starred by that concern on the Paramount Program.

Though Maurice first gained recognition in Europe and has at various times been hailed as a Frenchman, Austrian, Spaniard and Russian, he is in reality an American and a native of New York City, though of Belgian descent. From humble origin, he has danced his way into the presence of every crowned head in Europe except that of the Kaiser himself, and he has won a unique status in the most exclusive circles of New York and London society through his connection with the Biltmore Hotel, "Chez Maurice" and his having instructed many members of the English nobility in the intricate mazes of the waltz, tango and maxixe.

Maurice and Florence Walton (Famous Players)

Like her dancing partner, Miss Walton is an American, a native of Wilmington, Del. She first gained prominence in the Ziegfeld "Follies," thereby paralleling the case of another recently acquired Famous Players star, Ann Pennington. Curiously enough, the first time that Maurice and Florence danced together, it was after exactly fifteen minutes' rehearsal. Maurice was engaged to dance in "Over the River," and his partner forsook him the day the play opened. Miss Walton was rushed to the theatre, introduced to Maurice and although she declares that she was nearly petrified with fright, she consented to dance upon this remarkably short notice.

They have danced together in London, Paris, Vienna, Berlin and other large European cities and bear the unique distinction of having, by their graceful dancing, overcome the prejudice of Queen Mary of England against the tango. Until she consented to watch a performance by these clever dancers, Her Majesty had barred the tango from all functions at which she appeared and it had consequently become taboo in London society. When Queen Mary lifted the embargo on the Argentine dance after seeing it done by Maurice and Miss Walton, it promptly became the rage and they were swamped with requests from titled heads of every country in Europe to teach the new steps.

Having triumphed in London they returned to New York where they danced daily at the Hotel Biltmore. Here they mingled with the most exclusive set.

A specially written photoplay has been prepared for Maurice and Miss Walton, the name of which will be announced later, and work on which will begin within the next few days.

BALTIMORE THEATRE ABANDONS CONTRACT BOOKING FOR V-L-S-E METHOD

The Parkway theatre, of Baltimore, which caters to one of the most exclusive audiences in the staid Maryland capital, has abandoned the closed contract system of booking in favor of the open booking method of the Vitagraph-Lubin-Selig-Essanay, Inc.

The theatre recently opened under the new order of things with "Salvation Joan," the big Vitagraph featured starring Edna May and Harry T. Morey. "The Suspect" with Anita Stewart, and "Sherlock Holmes" with William Gillette, will follow in its wake.

Another prominent theatre which has adopted this method of operation is the Criterion theatre, one of the most modern edifices in the South, which was formally opened on Peachtree street, Atlanta, last week.

FANNIE WARD TO BEGIN WORK WITH LASKY

After a vacation and rest of several months spent in New York, Fannie Ward, the Lasky star who achieved success in "The Cheat" and who has appeared also in "The Marriage of Kitty," "For the Defense" and "The Gutter Magdalene," has returned to the Lasky studios at Hollywood, California, to begin work on a new production entitled "Each Pearl a Tear." Jack Dean, her husband, returned with her.

During Miss Ward's stay in New York, various reports and false rumors were circulated that the star and the producing firm had agreed to disagree and that she would not return to the screen under the Lasky banner. These reports denied at the time by both Miss Ward and the Lasky Company, are now shown to have had no foundation in fact.

Glimpses of "The Lost Paradise" and "Weighed in the Balance," Recent Chapters of Pathe's "Who's Guilty?"

MOLLA BJURSTEDT IS SHOWN AT TENNIS IN SECOND SELIG ATHLETIC SERIES

Molla Bjurstedt, the Norwegian girl tennis champion, will be shown in the second of the Selig athletic series to be released through the V-L-S-E on July 5.

Miss Bjurstedt is seen in a championship contest, which, as usual, she won, with Mrs. May Sutton Bundy, runner-up in the recent national tournament. Following it, victor and vanquished play an exhibition game in which both display the most intricate tennis shots. Lightning-like accuracy mark both contests.

Jimmy Clabby, middleweight, demonstrates his training methods while preparing for a bout. He later takes on Joe Welling and Steve Kenney for two rounds each.

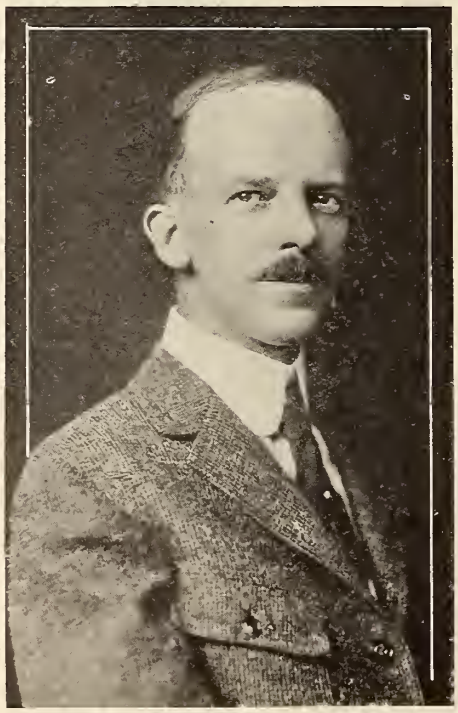
Joe Conconnon, eastern states billiard champion, bests "Cowboy" Weston in a match in which marvelous skill is displayed. These cue experts also supplement their game with an exhibition of intricate shots, including masses, time shots, six-bank shots and others.

There is also a wrestling match to a finish between William Berne, Russian champion, and William Demetral, Greek champion.

TROOPS ON MEXICAN BORDER STIMULATE TEXAS BUSINESS

All exhibitors in south Texas towns are rejoicing at the troop movement to the Texas border. In San Antonio there are now quartered some 35,000 soldiers, of the various National Guard and regular army. In Eagle Pass, Del Rio, Laredo, Brownsville, El Paso and intermediate towns the picture shows are playing to big business every day.

Of course the war subjects get over best in these sections and numerous film men have "dug up" old Mexican war film which have lain on the shelf for several months. In one instance a three-reeler was unearthed, a "red-white and-blue" circular gotten out, and a veritable "flock of bookings" came in. The exhibitors over Texas playing this film get good business at their end of the line, too.



The call for every man belonging to a military company in Texas has taken a few men from the film exchanges, operating booths and even from the theatres.

Kalem Writer Lived as Many Thrills as He Put in Serial

Ritchie, Author of "Girl from 'Frisco," Starring Marin Sais and True Boardman, Was Correspondent in Russo-Japanese War and Was in Mexico During Madero Revolt

IT is seldom that an author must confess that actual experiences which have been crowded into his own career far outrival in thrills the most daring creations of his imagination. But such would necessarily be the case with Robert Welles Ritchie, author of Kalem's new series, "The Girl from Frisco," could he be induced—which is not probable—to talk of his own experiences.

A graduate of the University of California, Mr. Ritchie was barely beyond the cub reporter stage when he covered one of California's best remembered "stories"—the "Folsome prison break." On this occasion a half-score of desperate convicts escaped to the mountains and for weeks fought off the armed militia of the State, the leader of the band, "Red Shirt Gordon," never being captured. Mr. Ritchie, then with the San Francisco Call, was in the party of newspaper men who chartered an engine and braved death to go into the mountains after the story. It is interesting to note that this famous event has been made the basis of one of the episodes of "The Girl from Frisco."

Robert Welles Ritchie, Author of Kalem's New Serial

At the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese War Mr. Ritchie was among the picked newspaper men sent to the front as correspondents for the New York Sun, and for two years he was in the Land of Nippon. So successful was his work during the trying war days that it was not long before he was called to the newpaperman's mecca—New York, becoming a member of the Sun's staff.

Once again he found a "big story" at the start, being hurried off to Labrador to meet the returning Peary. At the Johnson-Jeffries fight in Reno, Nevada, which saw a memorable gathering of crack newspapermen and literary lights, Mr. Ritchie was on deck for the Sun. Then he received another taste of war, being hurried off to Mexico during the Madero revolution that resulted in the overthrow of Porfirio Diaz. Ritchie was the only newspaper man at the fallen dictator's side when he made his last minute flight from Mexico City to Vera Cruz and then to Havana.

Under the direction of James W. Horne, the work of producing "The Girl from Frisco," which will feature Marin Sais and True Boardman, is already well under way at the Glendale, California, studios which were recently greatly enlarged in preparation for the new series. The players were this week making arrangements for a trip into the desert to secure necessary scenes for the first episode, "The Fighting Heiress."

LINDA A. GRIFFITH, POWELL STAR, WRITES SERIES FOR FILM FUN

Linda A. Griffith, now starring in the feature photoplays of the Frank Powell Productions and for many years with the Biograph Company, is writing a series of reminiscences relative to the intimate secrets of the first days of the picture industry. These articles begin in the July issue of Film Fun, published by the Leslie-Judge Company of New York.

EDNA GOODRICH BEGINS WORK IN "BODY OR SOUL" FOR MOROSCO

Closely following the release of "The Making of Maddalena" on the Paramount program, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company announces Edna Goodrich, who portrays the chief role in that photoplay, has commenced work on her second vehicle under this banner. "Body or Soul," by L. V. Jefferson is the new Goodrich photoplay on which activities have already been started under the direction of William D. Taylor.

Among the most elaborate sets now being erected for the new Goodrich production is an outdoor theatre that will be used in only one scene. The structure is being built in the private gardens of a well known millionaire in Passadena under the personal supervision of William D. Taylor. The stage is to be a duplicate of the type used in the Roman period on which several hundred gayly bedecked actors will appear in an immense scene.

Supporting the star is a typical Morosco cast including such players as Juan de la Cruz. Kathleen Kirkham, Herbert Standing, Lucile Ward and Harold Holland. The photography is under the chief supervision of Homer Scott who is responsible for many of the beautiful effects displayed in recent Morosco productions.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR MAY ALLISON IN THOUSAND ISLANDS

May Allison, who is co-starred with Harold Lockwood in Metro-Yorke plays, was pleasantly surprised with a dinner party on the occasion of her eighteenth birthday anniversary while the company of players were at work on "The River of Romance," at Thousand Islands. Together with other members of the company she was at work all day on an island in the St. Lawrence River. On her return to the Hubbard Hotel, at Clayton, N. Y., Director Henry Otto announced that he had a scene to rehearse.

A blindfold was placed over Miss Allison's eyes, and she was led by devious windings to the dining room, where a birthday table had been set. When the blindfold was removed Miss Allison beheld the entire company of twenty-two persons around the table, with glasses poised for a toast. There was a large cake with the required number of candles on the table, and a large electric sign at one end of the dining room spelling the words "Metro-Yorke."

SUTHERLAND IS A FOX FILMITE NOW

Victor Sutherland is one of the latest additions to the William Fox dramatic forces. Mr. Sutherland will have the lead in the new Virginia Pearson picture now being filmed at the Fort Lee studios. He has been acting for more than five years, on the stage and before the camera. He is favorably known in many large cities of the eastern United States.

Mr. Sutherland's name is indicative of his ancestry. He was born in Paducah, Ky., and his mother was a native of the Bluegrass state. His father came from Alabama.

When he was only nineteen years old, Mr. Sutherland played for twenty-five weeks as Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Selig Invites Convention Visitors to See Chicago Plant

Studio and Laboratory Buildings Occupy Entire City Block—Company Also Owns Three Picture Making Establishments in and Near Los Angeles Besides Zoo

A Glimpse of the Chicago Studios of the Selig Polyscope Company

THE Chicago plant of the Selig company is a large and most modern institution. The studio and laboratory buildings occupy an entire city block on Western avenue. The buildings contain in reality two large studios. In addition a three story building for the housing of the laboratories was recently erected at the cost of $200,000. Here the technical departments, including the cutting and trimming departments are located. All developing and printing is now done at the Chicago studios.

In addition to the Chicago plant the Selig Company owns three studios in and near Los Angeles, Cal., in addition to the Selig Zoo, Los Angeles, which contains one of the finest collections of wild animals in captivity.

In Chicago the Selig Company maintains a suite of offices in the Garland Block, 58 East Washington street. These offices contain the private offices of William N. Selig, president of the company, the offices of the general manager, offices of The Selig-Tribune, the news semi-weekly, the publicity auditing, cashier's, clerical, and other departments. The private projection parlors of the company are also located here.

A cordial invitation is extended to exhibitors attending the convention to visit the Selig offices and mail addressed them care of the Selig Company will be held safely for them.

San Francisco Will Support San Mateo in Bosworth Project

Four Companies Will Operate at the Studio, Expending in the Metropolis of the West and on the Peninsula More Than $750,000 a Year

Special to Motion Picture News.

San Francisco, July 8.

SAN FRANCISCO pledged its support to San Mateo, California, in establishing the moving picture industry on the peninsula at a luncheon attended by business men and leading citizens of the two communities at the Palace Hotel.

Definite plans were made for the raising of funds to construct a studio and other buildings on the corporation yard at San Mateo for the use of Hobart Bosworth, who will bring a large company from Los Angeles to produce a ten reel feature, "The Gray Dawn," from Stewart Edward White's novel of the early days of San Francisco.

This film, which will be the first produced by Mr. Bosworth's company, is backed by San Francisco capital. Between 2,000 and 3,000 persons will be used in some of the scenes. Many of the scenes will be laid on the San Francisco Bay.

At the luncheon Mayor Frank P. Simmen of San Mateo told of the negotiations with the Bosworth people and the offer made by San Mateo to turn over the five-acre corporation yard at a nominal rental. price.

Bosworth said he expected to operate four companies, which will expend in San Francisco and the peninsula more than $750,000 a year. He said the minimum of one company will be porbably $15,000 a month.

Joseph Levy, chairman of the citizens' committee from San Mateo pointed out that while the plant would be located in San Mateo, San Francisco would in reality be the chief beneficiary by the purchase of supplies and materials, and for this reason San Francisco ought to assist San Mateo in financing the project.

Among the speakers were Mrs. Emelie Johnson, formerly president of the Liberty Film Company at San Mateo.

EIGHTEEN AND EIGHTY WILL MAKE PREMIER IN A FOX

Within a fortnight, motion picture fans will witness a contrast in debuts in a single picture. Two premiers will be made—one at eighteen, the other at eighty.

One who will have her premier is June Caprice, the eighteen-year-old Fox star, who comes of the Puritan stock of New England.

"Caprice of the Mountains," is also remarkable for the first appearance before the camera of Sara Alexander, who was playing with dolls when Andrew Jackson sat in the White House. Miss Alexander has the character role of Aunt Susan in the picture. Lisle Leigh, her niece, also has a part in "Caprice of the Mountains."

Whereas Miss Caprice has as ancestors Puritan Bostonians, Miss Alexander lived for years in the core of the Mormon settlement in Utah. Through years of successful tours with America's foremost players Miss Alexander has retained a thorough recollection of her journey across the "great American desert." Miss Alexander played with all the favorite stars of the older generation.

HALE, WITH POWELL PRODUCTIONS, QUALIFIES FOR AERO CLUB

Creighton Hale, now starring in the feature pictures of the Frank Powell Productions, Inc., is the only actor appearing on the screen or the legitimate stage who has qualified and become a member of the Areo Club of America.

Mr. Hale recently addressed the Harlem Board of Trade on the adaptibility of the aeroplane in modern warfare and succeeded in arousing their enthusiasm to the extent, that it is rumored they contemplate donating to the U. S. Government a fully equipped aeroplane to be used at the discretion of its aviation branch.

Mr. Hale has agreed to form an aviation corps among his co-workers in the motion picture industry, and in the event of trouble between this country and any foreign nation, Mr. Hale assured the Board of Trade that he would be willing to leave for the front at any time.

DENVER THEATRES SHORTEN PROGRAMS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Denver, July 8.

Most of Denver's suburban theatres have shortened their programs and are running only part of the week instead of seven days. The downtown houses are feeling the effects of the warmer days in a perceptible falling off in the box office receipts at the afternoon runs. The exhibitors are educated to the fact, however, that, the condition is only a temporary one, and therefore look forward to the winter season.

"DARKNESS," NORBIG, STARS MARGARET DARWIN AS NEW PLAYER

The Norbig studios, Los Angeles, are completing a three-reel production entitled "Darkness," which will offer Margaret Darwin, a California girl, as a new photoplay star. The picture is being produced under the direction of Harry T. De Vere, who also wrote the story.

Gather Round, Girls, and See What Everybody's Wearing

Pathe Will Release Fashion Pictures on August 7 and Every Two Weeks Thereafter for the Women Folk, Who Can See Same Garments Later in Department Stores

(Left to Right) Dell Boone, Florence Rentti, Corenne Uzzell

The Girls in Pathe's Florence Rose Fashions

FASHIONS shown at the same time in leading newspapers, leading department stores and leading moving picture theatres, will result from a decision just made by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

Fashion films will be produced by Pathe under the personal supervision of Florence Rose, formerly editor L'Art de la Mode and editor of the fashion pages of the New York Evening Mail and the New York Globe.

The first release, in one reel, will be seen publicly the week beginning August 7 and new pictures will be shown every two weeks thereafter. Leading newspapers will, every day for twelve days in advance of release date, publish the fashions to be shown on the screens in each release. Later, the garments will be on sale in the stores.

This means that the women of America can first see them in the newspapers, then on the screen, and later at their own department store. The title of the first reel is "A Day with a Society Girl" which shows her from the time she wakes up in the morning until she leaves the Charity Bazaar that night. Twelve beautiful girls will be shown in thirty of the latest creations ranging from boudoir caps and night gowns to the latest style in evening dresses and a feature of the release is a scene at the Englewood Golf Club.

The picture presents in advance what the most fashionable women will wear in September, October and November. It will show thousands of dollars worth of furs, shoes, hats, and gowns. The following list of newspapers merely marks a beginning: Chicago Daily News, St. Paul News, Minneapolis News, Omaha News, Louisville Times, Pittsburgh Dispatch, Buffalo Enquirer, Baltimore American, Boston Traveller, Syracuse Post-Standard, Utica Observer and Cleveland News.

The first release will present some of New York's latest Fall fashions. A pretty story will be woven into each reel to increase the interest of the audience.

Kansas City to Fight Bad Attendance with Good Pictures

Record Heat Following a Wet Spell Cannot Prevent Exhibitors from Going After Business as Energetically as in Cold Weather, by Making Attractive Bids for Patronage

Special to Motion Picture News.

Kansas City, Mo., July 6.

BUSINESS in Kansas City has been handicapped all spring by extremely wet weather. The rains stopped late in June, and July is starting out with record heat for the season. The extremely high temperatures have temporarily affected the patronage of motion picture houses. The departure of the Third Regiment for war took away a few hundred men, and left their families temporarily disinclined for amusements.

But the situation is brightening rapidly. Billy Sunday reduced attendance materially during his stay—and he is gone. The effect was produced solely by the number of people who went to hear him rather than to picture shows; and they are now back at the theatres, against which he raised no word of caution. The people are getting used to the heat, which came upon them suddenly and without any preparation after the cool weather that had prevailed.

"I expect to do as much business this summer as last winter," said one exhibitor. "I'm giving them good pictures, and going after business as energetically as in cold weather. And I don't expect to see much, if any, falling off. Why should there be? My house is cool, and people really get out more, and have more leisure, than in winter. Lots of 'em go to the parks—but lots more don't go every night. I'm going to get a lot of this summer business that some fellows say doesn't exist."

ATLAS ABOUT TO BEGIN PRODUCTION

The Atlas Motion Picture Company, Detroit, is about to begin production of one-reel comedies, which will be produced by Tommy Mullens, assisted by Zoe Orth. P. R. Upton will supervise and release will be made through one of the large companies in New York.

A Battle Scene and a Glimpse of the Gnome City in William Fox's Spectacle, "A Daughter of the Gods"

GEORGE PROCTOR, LASKY SCENARIO STAFF, MARRIES EILEEN CURRAN

After resigning as scenario editor of the Gaumont company to join the Lasky forces in California, George Dubois Proctor surprised many of his friends in the newspaper and theatrical worlds by announcing his marriage to Eileen Alanna Curran. The ceremony was solemnized in the rectory of All Saints Church, New York City, July 3, and Mr. and Mrs. Proctor left three days later for Hollywood, Cal.

Mr. Proctor, a Yale man, is well known from coast to coast in the newspaper field. More recently he has been interested in editing motion picture publications, and serving as scenario editor of several of the more important film corporations. Miss Curran, who played last season with Montgomery and Stone in "Chin-Chin," appeared previous to that with "The Pink Lady" and with Lew Fields in "All Aboard." She is an ardent Irish worker, and has been noted as a stage beauty since she appeared first in America with the Irish Theatre movement.

VITAGRAPH IS IN THE MARKET FOR SCENARIOS

The Vitagraph Bay Shore studios are in the market for one-reel comedies, either society comedies or slapstick. Ralph W. Ince, supervising director, is also willing to consider feature scripts of five reels or more, particularly those suited to Lucille Lee Stewart. Scenarios or synopses should be sent to Edward L. Montagne, scenario editor, Bay Shore studios, Bayshore, L. I.

PLAYERS IN "CRISIS" SEE THF PICTURE RUN OFF IN CHICAGO

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, gave a private exhibition of "The Crisis" in the Selig projection room on the afternoon of July 4. The drama was presented for the benefit of the Selig players who appear in the production and who left Thursday for Los Angeles, Cal.

Rosenthal Secures Rights to "Civilization" for Ten States

He Organizes the Western Civilization Company to Handle the Feature in California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming and New Mexico

ISAAC A. ROSENTHAL of the Sun Photoplay Company, San Francisco, and Sutton Feature Film Company of Seattle, Wash., has secured the rights of exhibition for "Civilization" covering the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Arizona, Colorado, Nevada, Wyoming and New Mexico. Mr. Rosenthal has organized the Western Civilization Company to handle this big proposition. The membership of the new company is composed largely of New York capitalists, with Duncan M. Stewart as president,; Richard L. Cowan, vice-president; William J. O'Toole, secretary, and Isaac A. Rosenthal, general manager.

To facilitate the distribution of the picture in so large a territory, branches of the main Western Civilization Company's office in San Francisco will be opened in Seattle and Denver the third week in July and in other cities early in August. The picture will be put on in the same elaborate manner as that now adopted at the Criterion theatre in New York, the Cohan's Grand Opera House in Chicago, and the Brighton Beach Music Hall, Brighton Beach, New York. All three of these houses are playing to capacity audiences twice daily and Sunday. In New York "Civilization" reaches its one hundredth performance July 20, and will run indefinitely all through the summer and late into the fall.

Mr. Rosenthal left last week for San Francisco to open business at the new offices there, and is now proceeding with the organization of a capable working force.

The New York offices are now prepared to co-operate with state rights buyers with an entirely new set of 24-sheets, 8-sheets, 6-sheets, 3-sheets, window frames, tack cards, booklets, postcards and circulars. A publicity department is also at the service of state rights men.

Letters Approving "Who's Guilty?" Pour into Pathe Office

"It's a Money Maker," Is Theme of Correspondence Avalanche, Says Berst, Vice-President and General Manager of the Company—Theatres Adopting Novel Advertising Schemes

"'WHO'S Guilty?' as a money-maker" is the theme of an avalanche of letters received by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. It appears that aside from the excellence of the photoplays comprising the "Who's Guilty?" series, produced for Pathe by the Arrow Film Corporation, there is unusual box office value in the pictures because of the interest stimulated by them on the part of audiences wherever they are shown. They lend themselves to unusual advertising of many kinds.

One of the first theatres to start this on "Who's Guilty?" was the Strand theatre in Milwaukee. In addition to crowded houses, the result has been a large amount of publicity in the Milwaukee papers.

A great many other theatres are adopting this scheme; also subpœnas are being sent to prospective patrons by progressive exhibitors. Cards, with a large question mark, accompanied by the words "Who's Guilty?" printed on them, are being hung on doorknobs, while newspapers carry large advertisements tying up to the general scheme, so that after a man has found one of these cards on his doorknob, he later sees in the newspapers a large advertisement which stimulates his interest still further. Every possible aid is extended by the Pathe Company, whose policy is to do everything in its power to increase the business of exhibitors showing its pictures.

Novel paper has been prepared on this subject, and a large number of exhibitors are taking advantage of the Pathe Company's offer of twenty-four sheets free, provided that the theatre man will agree to post a certain number.

PATHE NEWS WEEKLY IN ALL BROADWAY THEATRES EXCEPT TWO, ON JULY 4

The Pathe News celebrated the Fourth by conquering Broadway in a way that has never before been accomplished by a news film. Every picture theatre on Broadway from the Battery to Spuyten Duyvil, with the exception of only two, has booked the News. Among the houses contracting for regular service are the Broadway, Rialto, Palace, Strand, Eighty-first Street, Schuyler, Olympia, Riverside, Nemo, Clairmont, Hamilton, Bunny and New York.

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe, visited two well-known Broadway houses one night a week or two ago, and found that one of them did not show the News Weekly. The next day he called a conference with A. S. Abeles, manager of the New York booking office, and Eric Mayell, manager of the News Weekly department. A line of action was determined upon, and New York salesmen were requested to show what they could do. Every man hustled and the bookings poured in from theatres all over Greater New York.

NO SPLIT BETWEEN SYD AND CHARLES CHAPLIN

Both Syd and Charles Chaplin make vigorous denial of the report that there has been a "split" between the brother screen comedians. The report originated in a New York publication.

"Deny it flat; somebody's foolish," Charles Chaplin wired from the Mutual-Chaplin studio at Los Angeles.

"Not only is there no split, but we never have had a serious difference," Syd Chaplin declared. "We have always kept our interests in each other's work and whenever it has been possible we have lived together. We will be living under the same roof again if it happens that I go to Los Angeles to work."

Syd Chaplin is negotiating with several concerns for the making of a series of comedy releases. It is probable that he will close a contract with one of them in the course of the next few weeks.

LOEW CIRCUIT EXTENDED TO CANADA

It has been learned on good authority that the Loew circuit will be extended this year in Canada to include Montreal. It stated that the Loew people have elaborate plans for a big new theatre in that city, which will be commenced in early fall or late summer.

Four Stage Successes Added to Famous Players List

Company Obtains Rights to "Under Fire" and "Under Cover," by Roi Cooper Megrue and "Rolling Stones" and "Nearly Married" by Edgar Selwyn

FOUR important acquisitions to the screen were made recently by Famous Players in obtaining the rights to this number of stage successes—"Under Fire" and "Under Cover," by Roi Cooper Megrue and "Rolling Stones" and "Nearly Married," by Edgar Selwyn, with whom the respective negotiations were conducted.

"Under Fire" enjoyed a long run at the Cort theater, New York, where its war scenes and international spying in the trenches drew the public for many weeks. "Under Cover," also a Cort success, is already under production with Hazel Dawn and Owen Moore in the stellar roles. It is a story of the secret service, and is international in scope, the action taking place in Paris, on shipboard, in the Customs House, at the pier and at a magnificent Long Island estate.

In "Rolling Stones," which held the boards at the Harris theater, Edgar Selwyn evolved what was called the breeziest crook play that has been presented in New York for many seasons. "Nearly Married" filled the Gaiety theatre to overflowing during the season of 1913. It is a story of New York society life and of a near-divorce in which laughter and dramatic suspense are intermingled.

The acquirement of these Broadway successes for photoplay purposes indicates the intention of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, announced to the trade last week, of extending their activities in several directions.

Exhibitors Want More Mutt and Jeff Subjects from Fisher

Cartoonist's Time Is So Taken Up He Cannot Produce Two a Week, as Requested, But His Company Arranges to Bring Out Hans and Fritz in Their Pranks

OWING to the success of Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff in animated form, exchanges throughout the country handling the comedies have requested that Mr. Fisher produce two weekly Mutt and Jeff cartoons instead of one. This move on the part of the exchanges was entirely due to the demands of exhibitors. Mr. Fisher's time is so taken up, as to make it a physical impossibility for him to produce two Mutt and Jeff cartoons every week.

The experiences of Mutt & Jeff are related in a weekly release of five hundred feet. Mr. Fisher has mastered whatever difficulties confronted him when he decided to draw for the camera in exhaustive style. In each subject he introduces some new ideas in animated cartooning.

To satisfy the exhibitors' call for world-known characters in animated cartoons, the Mutt and Jeff Film Company has completed arrangements with the Celebrated Film Corporation whereby the Mutt and Jeff Film Company can produce the cartoons of Hans and Fritz, whose comical pranks appear on the pages of over one hundred leading newspapers throughout the country.

Universal Announces Titles to 4 Episodes of "Liberty"

First Installment of Its Preparedness Serial, Set for Release in Week of August 14, Is "Across the Border," the Second Is "Fangs of the Wolf"

THE Universal announces the titles of the first four episodes of its new preparedness serial, "Liberty," the first installment of which will be released during the week of August 14. The four episodes will be entitled, respectively, "Across the Border," "Fangs of the Wolf," "Riding With Death," and "American Blood."

"Liberty" deals with adventure below the Mexican border at the present day. Border raids and their repulse by American troops; the adventures of an American girl on a great hacienda below the Rio Grande; pitched battles in the mesquite country; and the invasion of Mexico by American troops, with the establishment of a protectorate will be depicted.

The serial, which features Marie Walcamp, was written and produced by Jacques Jaccard. Jack Holt, Neal Heart, Bertram Grassby, L. M. Wells, Maud Emery and Roy Stewart appear in the supporting cast. Twenty-seven hundred horsemen and infantrymen will play an important part, it is announced.

CHINESE GRADUATE FROM YALE COMPOSES MUSIC FOR "YELLOW MENACE," UNITY

Charles Fang, a native of Canton, China, and a graduate of Yale University has composed the music for the Unity Sales Corporation's production of the big sixteen episode serial "The Yellow Menace," starring Edwin Stevens and featuring Florence Malone and Margaret Gale. Mr. Fang has spent months in the studios studying the oriental atmosphere of "The Yellow Menace," and the result is a score which, while typical of the Mongolian atmosphere of the spectacular serial, at the same time is typically popular composed.

Fang is also author of the book which will be forwarded to exhibitors of "The Yellow Menace," telling them exactly how to produce the proper effects to bring out the value of his music. This is the first time that a score has especially been written for a serial by a composer whose nativity especially fits him to compose it.

Bluebird Advertising Campaign in The Post Told in Booklet

Company Issues Handsomely Printed Brochure, Twelve Pages, Descriptive of the Expenditure of $200,000 for Aid to Exhibitors—Specimen Electros Shown for Local Publicity

BLUEBIRD has issued a handsomely printed book of twelve large pages, descriptive of its $200,000 advertising campaign now being conducted through the Saturday Evening Post. The first five advertisements are reproduced in the brochure, and the exhibitor's attention is called to the fact that ten times the number will be published in the course of the next twelve months.

These advertisements are well written, and strike a new note in emphasizing the photoplay story rather than the photoplay star.

Several pages are devoted to explaining to the exhibitor how he may secure direct results for his house from this national advertising campaign. Specimens of electros for newspaper cuts, ad headings, and samples of heralds are reproduced.

AUTO ACCIDENTS CAUSE DELAYS TO LOS ANGELES STUDIOS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 8.

Automobile accidents caused delays to Los Angeles producing companies last week, and may result in the death of C. E. Lord, a member of the Signal organization.

While a Universal car was carrying a company of players to a location, it struck and instantly killed a woman who stepped from in front of another machine just as it was passing. A Universal City bus collided with a man riding a bicycle on Cahuenga Pass, and the man was killed instantly.

C. E. Lord was riding to the Signal studio on one of the company's trucks, when a Los Angeles City truck collided with it. Lord was thrown to the pavement and is in a hospital suffering with a fractured skull.

Every Program Should Have an Animated Cartoon—Palmer

"Best Place for This 'Comic Relief' to Serious Part of the Entertainment Is Right After the Big Feature—This Kind of Comedy Always Popular"

"THE animated cartoon is an integral part of any motion picture program," says Harry Palmer, the Gaumont cartoonist, "whether the exhibitor places his main dependence upon a five-reel feature or upon pictures shorter in length. It is the exhibitor's aim to provide variety. The cartoon is the farthest remove from the photoplay in method of depiction, and as such comes as a psychological shock to the spectator. His interest is not only arrested for the animated film, but it is also stimulated for what follows.

"In the old days of melodrama the playwright would always put in an Irishman or a Chinaman who was known as 'comic relief.' He has been denied comedy in writing features for the screen, and must now provide comedy as a separate entertainment. In pictures comedy now has three divisions, each important; there is polite comedy into which Mabel Normand is being graduated, slap-stick comedy such as is given in its best form by Charles Chaplin, and animated pictures.

"The first and second forms of comedy may not both appeal in the same house. There are neighborhood theaters which prefer genteel comedy, and others which have the risibilities of its patrons aroused only by the slap-stick and the seltzer bottle. It is interesting to note that both classes of houses welcome the animated picture. This is due to the fact that spectators more readily accept the animated picture convention, recognizing that they are not asked to give the cartoon the same credence they do the comedy. Their surrender to the 'make-believe' is easier.

"The best place on the program for an animated reel is right after the big feature. This may be a five-reel picture or a three-reel picture. Whichever it is, it is usually of a tense nature. Spectators wish to relax after it is over, and—as was explained in showing how the animated picture appeals to the greatest number of spectators—the greatest relaxation for the greatest number is secured by showing an animated picture.

"Events of national importance, the coming election, the Mexican situation, and general preparedness, afford such striking subjects for caricature that the cartoonist now makes his happiest hits depicting such events in a gently satirical vein. The ideas are grasped immediately by every one. For these reasons the animated cartoon should have a place on every program."

Horsley Orders His Directors to Resume 5-Reel Subjects

This Applies to the Company Under Robert Broadwell, with Crane Wilbur and Mae Gaston in the Leads, and the Swickard Players, with Clifford and Margaret Gibson

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 8.

TELEGRAPHIC advice from David Horsley, now in New York City, instructed the producing companies to resume the making of five-reel photoplays instead of two thousand feet subjects. This applies to the two dramatic companies, one under the direction of Robert Broadwell, with Crane Wilbur and Mae Gaston as leads, and the other directed by Charles Swickard, with William C. Clifford and Margaret Gibson as principals. Another important change concerns the Cub Comedy Company which is to make two reel pictures instead of one. These will be made by Milton H. Farney, and feature George Ovey.

The Broadwell Company had just finished a two-reel picture when this advice was received, and the day following, left for San Diego to make exteriors for a military play, known under the working title of "Somewhere in Mexico." Many of the scenes for this will be made along the international border. The photography is in charge of Roberto Turnbull, who for three years was the official photographer for the Mexican government, and most of his time he was with General Villa.

The second Horsley Dramatic Company will make one more two-reel subject before beginning on the larger photoplay. At present Director Swickard, with Clifford and Miss Gibson are filming "Destiny's Boomerang," by Elsie M. Callaghan. It is based on the desires of a wealthy father that his daughter marry an English nobleman, and by a mistaken identity scheme, this is accomplished. The girl's first lover induces a stranger to pose as a count and woo the girl. She feigns to fall love with him and a newspaper makes an exposé of the supposed count who is in reality a count. He wins the girl. Victor Rottman, formerly of the Horsley staff, who has been with the Kalem Company for several months, returns to the Horsley organization and plays juvenile lead in this picture.

Shortly another producing company will be added to the Horsley forces which will devote all its time to the making of animal dramas.

Plans have been made for improving the artificial light studio at the Horsley plant. Instead of closed walls which the studio has at the present time, glass will be substituted. This is to be done so that all companies will have sufficient stage space to continue work during the next rainy season.

FREDERICK PALMER GOES TO VOGUE SCENARIO STAFF

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 8.

Frederick Palmer, formerly manager of the publicity department at the Keystone and assistant to Hampton Del Ruth of the scenario department, has been engaged as writer and editor by Manager Crone of the Vogue Films plant. Mr. Palmer spent two years at the Keystone studio scenario department, which is considered one of the greatest schools for photoplay writing. Roy McCrae, late assistant director with the Allen Curtis Joker Company, has been added to the Vogue staff as assistant to Rube Miller, and Jack Gaines has been named assistant for Henry Kernan.

The Rube Miller Vogue Company has been making a shoe store picture this week, with Rube Miller, Ben Turpin and Lillian Hamilton as principals. The padded bricks of the prop room were again brought into play when Miller and Turpin were thrown through a brick wall in the filming of this comedy.

A forest fire near Los Angeles last week, in which about five acres of gum trees were burned, was photographed by the Vogue Company for a coming comedy. The players took part in fighting the fire and rescuing those in danger. This was an extremely spectacular blaze and some very unusual scenes were secured.

Famous Players-Lasky Combine Pushes Activities

Series of Special Mary Pickford Subjects Is Planned, Under the Direction of John Emerson —Izola Forrester, J. Moroso, and Forrest Halsey Added to Script Staff

THAT the merger of the Famous Players Film Company and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company into the $12,500,000 Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was one designed to gain instant increase in productive activities by these leading producers for the Paramount Program is clearly indicated by the first announcement emanating from the newly formed concern.

The engagement of Robert E. MacAlarney, city editor of the New York Tribune and president of the New York City News Association, as editor of the Lasky scenario department, which followed closely on the heels of the engagement by the Famous Players of Shannon Fife, John A. Moroso, Izola Forrester, and Forrest Halsey to assist Harry R. Durant in that company's script department, shows that the stories in which the concern's aggregation of stars is to be presented will receive the careful attention of experts.

The record-breaking offer of the Famous Players of $100,000 for one hundred photoplay ideas is unaffected by the merger, and the new corps of scenario experts will devote a large part of their attention to the technical perfecting of those scripts which are accepted under the offer. Add to this material the five new plays, "Under Cover," by Roi Cooper Megrue, and "Rolling Stones" and "Newly Married," by Edgar Selwyn, and Clyde Fitch's "The Woman in the Case," in which Pauline Frederick is already being starred, and the amount of material which is being piled up by the producers becomes apparent.

As a further indication of the projected activities of the combination, it may be stated that a series of special Mary Pickford subjects is now being planned. John Emerson, who made his debut as a motion picture star with the Famous Players and has since acquired an enviable reputation as a director of photoplays, has been engaged to direct Miss Pickford in these productions.

Del Henderson, one of the best known motion picture directors in the business, has been added to the Famous Players staff and is now at work on "Rolling Stones," in which Owen Moore is starred.

The first stars to be engaged since the merger are Maurice and Florence Walton, who are soon to appear in a Famous Players production.

The moving of the Lasky scenario department, under Hector Turnbull, from the West Coast to New York, augurs closer co-operation between the two companies at once and a desire to concentrate the scenario work.

As another indication of the get-together spirit, the office of Adolph Zukor, president of the new concern, will be moved from the Famous Players studio in Fifty-sixth street to 485 Fifth avenue, the address of the Lasky Company. The publicity departments of the constituent companies will also make their headquarters at the Fifth avenue address.

One of the great advantages of the merger is the fact that the placing of the executive responsibility upon the shoulders of Adolph Zukor, Samuel Goldfish and Arthur S. Friend, respectively president, chairman of Board of Directors and treasurer, will give Jesse L. Lasky opportunity to devote a far greater part of his time to the actual producing of pictures and of coming in even more frequent personal contact with the stars and directors.

Unity Actress Believes in Dramatic School Training

Margaret Greene Says It Is Excellent Means for Fitting Young Players for Screen as Well as Stage—Temperament Not Necessary for Success, Says Jane Meredith

MARGARET GREENE, who appears in support of Nat Goodwin in the Unity Sales Corporation's "The Marriage Bond," is a firm believer in the efficiency of dramatic schools as means of training young actresses for the screen or the stage. Miss Greene is herself a graduate of Sargent's Dramatic School, and had wide stage experience before her first film appearance, which was opposite Donald Brian in a Famous Players production.

Jane Meredith, who has the leading feminine role in Unity's "The Pursuing Vengeance," is an actress without temperament. "So far as temperament is concerned," says she, "a broken toe is as good as a broken heart, so far as emotional work is concerned." Miss Meredith then went on to explain that during the making of "The Pursuing Vengeance," Sheldon Lewis, the star, accidentally trod on one of her toes and broke it.

Thurlow Bergen, who is seen as the star of "The Lottery Man," also a Unity release, is the possessor at his country place on Long Island of a full-blooded Arabian horse, which was once the property of the late Homer Davenport, the cartoonist. Elsie Esmond, in private life Mrs. Bergen, is just as enthusiastic a horseback rider as her husband, and takes an active interest in the Bergen stables.

REEL FELLOWS CLUB INVITES MEMBERS OF SCREEN CLUBS TO MAKE USE OF ITS BOOTH AT CONVENTION

During the national convention and exposition of the Exhibitors' League of America, at the Coliseum, Chicago, July 10 to 18, the Reel Fellows' Club of Chicago will maintain a booth for the convenience and reception of all visitors at the convention.

Members of out of town screen clubs, presenting proper credentials, and registering at the booth will be presented with a membership card entitling them to all the benefits of the club for a period of two weeks.

The Reel Fellows will maintain stenographic service, free of charge, at their booth and visitors are cordially invited to use it.

Free transportation by auto bus, between the Reel Fellows' headquarters at the Hotel Morrison and the Coliseum will be maintained during the entire exposition period as a convenience for delegates and convention visitors.

HEATING, COOLING AND VENTILATING SYSTEM INSTALLED AT SIGNAL

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, July 8.

A heating, cooling and ventilating system, operated by refrigerating, heating and air filtering system by means of suction pumps, has been installed in the laboratories of the Signal Film Corporation under the personal supervision of Superintendent Orrin Denny.

By means of this it will be possible to keep the laboratories at the same temperature every day throughout the year, and thus greatly facilitate the work, and give a more uniform development and finish to all negatives and positives.

Dixon Picture for Release to N. Y. and New England July 24

With Films Now Being Placed in Hands of States Rights Men, Company Expects 50 Prints of "Fall of a Nation" in Use by September

Feminine Stars in "The Fall of a Nation," Thomas Dixon's Spectacle

THE National Drama Corporation announces that "The Fall of a Nation," the Dixon-Herbert patriotic spectacle now showing at the Liberty theatre, New York, and the Illinois theatre, Chicago, will be released to Greater New York and New England exhibitors on Monday, July 24. This is in line with Thomas Dixon's recently announced policy of securing the widest possible distribution of his work while the military forces of the country are mobilized and America is debating the question of further preparedness. With the films now being placed in the hands of state rights purchasers, by September at least fifty prints of the national defense play will be exhibiting its enthralling story to the great American public.

A commodious film exchange and likewise spacious offices to accommodate the state rights trade have been fitted up by the corporation at 1465 Broadway. Space requirements necessitated the removal from the Longacre Building offices. The new quarters are easily identified by the big "Fall of a Nation" sign at the southwest corner of Forty-second street and Broadway. Here will be found Ed. V. Giroux, general manager, in charge of bookings and state rights; Henry MacMahon, general press representative, supervising publicity and advertising aids to exhibitors, and Wayland Taylor, financial manager and general auditor. It will also be the headquarters of W. M. Powers, late of the press department, who has been appointed traveling representative in New England.

Harold Sanford, the director at the Liberty, has now completed the transposition of the Victor Herbert music for small orchestra. This will enable the small-town exhibitor, if he so desires, to present the musical score with a very few musicians. The film itself is in ten reels; actual running time, two hours and twelve minutes. Four shows a day are thus easily practicable.

Out West, where "The Fall of a Nation" has been acclaimed by Ashton Stevens, O. L. Hall and several other critics as presenting the greatest battle scenes yet staged, the Illinois theatre, Chicago, is the centre of exhibitor interest. Large delegations from the exhibitors' convention were entertained last week by E. D. Price, "The Fall of a Nation" manager there, and by Bartley Cushing, the associate director of the production. The stamping grounds of W. J. Bryan and Henry Ford will soon be invaded by the trenchant Dixon plea for preparedness.

Some of the choicest territory has been contracted for by state rights men. But much of the Middle West, where national defense is a topic on every tongue, is still open, and the exhibitors will reap a harvest at the conclusion of the Chicago run.

New York Branches Elect 30 Delegates for Chicago Meet

Sixty Rooms Engaged at Sherman Hotel—Those Wishing to Make Trip with Exhibitor Body Should Now Notify League for Transportation and Hotel Reservations

THIRTY exhibitors of the New York State Exhibitors League have been elected by their several locals to attend the Chicago convention in official capacities. Aspecial train left New York on Saturday, July 8, to convey the delegation and other film men to the convention city. Sixty rooms have been engaged for the party at the Sherman Hotel.

At the convention the New York exhibitors will devote special attention to the discussion of open booking, deposits, the contract question, particularly in reference to serials, and a contemplated new organization to be formed by manufacturers and exhibitors. All these topics are much in the foreground at the present time and the exhibitors hope to reach some definite understanding on them.

Those who made the journey are Lee Ochs, president, New York State branch; Tom Howard, State secretary; Louis Blumenthal, treasurer; M. Needles, Charles Steiner, Ed. Gorman, Lester Cohn, Aaron Corn, Henry Haring, Otto Lederer and Adolph Weiss, former State secretary, from the New York City local. Sam Trigger, National vice-president; Henry Cole, first vice-president, Bronx local, and Henry Coleman from the Bronx local. President Manheimer, William Brandt, executive secretary; Ben Title, first vice-president; H. H. Levine, and Sol Lesselbaum, from the Brooklyn local.

In addition, Syracuse will send Ed. Gibbons, Rochester will be represented by W. W. Wolf and W. H. Hubbard, respectively president and secretary of the Rochester local; Yonkers will send A. Weiss; President Buettner will come on from Troy; Sam Zuckno, president of the Albany branch, will represent that local; while President W. H. Linton, former state treasurer, will represent the Utica exhibitors.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS VISITS CHICAGO FIRST TIME IN 3 YEARS

Kathlyn Williams, the Selig star, visited Chicago last week for the first time in about three years. She visited the Chicago offices of the Selig Company where she was accorded a royal reception.

"BEAUTY AND THE BEAST" FILMED ON GOULD ESTATE

"Beauty and the Beast," a screen fashion playlet based on the famous old-time fairy tale, has just been finished under the direction of H. E. Hancock for release through the International Film Service, Inc.

Through his personal acquaintance with George J. Gould, Mr. Hancock was able to avail himself of the use of Georgian Court, the Gould estate in Lakewood, New Jersey, for his exterior scenes.

Mineta Timayo, the "Beauty" of International's "Beauty and the Beast"

In order that the interior scenes would fit in well with the magnificence of the exteriors, a special set of unsurpassed beauty and impressiveness was built for this playlet representing the palace of the sleeping beauty. Most of the scenes outside were taken in the sunken gardens of the Gould estate and the cast was made up of the most beautiful models obtainable. The gowns were furnished by the firm of Maison Maurice, Fifth Avenue.

Miss Mineta Timayo, who is under an exclusive contract with the International Film Service, appears in the star part as the sleeping beauty in the play. The clothes worn by Miss Timayo alone represent a retail value of over $2,000.

The film, which is now being assembled by Mr. Hancock, will be released in the near future in one of the special split releases that have become one of the main features of the International Film Service, Inc.

TWO AMERICAN FILM COMEDIANS AT WORK ON "THE THREE PALS"

Kolb and Dill have commenced work at the American studios on the second of the five-reel comedy features starring the well-known German comedians. The title of this picture is "The Three Pals" and is replete with a score of funny situations in which the stars appear to their best advantage. The story was written by Al Santell from a synopsis by Ritchie and Whitcomb.

Exhibitors Take Kindly to General Film's Slogan

Theatre Managers All Over the Country Evince Keen Interest in Its Announcement of "Distinguished Stars in One, Two and Three Reels"

GENERAL FILM COMPANY, through its advertising department, announces that exhibitors are evincing keen interest in the General's campaign slogan, "distinguished stars in one, two and three reels," and professes to believe that this interest will be even more generally demonstrated, now that hot weather appears to have set in for a regular summer's session.

The week of July 17-22, inclusive, will have an auspicious start Monday with Selig's two-reel production, "The Private Banker," featuring Edith Johnson and Wheeler Oakman. "The Musical Barber," a Vitagraph one-reel comedy, in which William Dangman has the lead, will follow. "The Head Waters of the Dalalven," a scenic offering by Vitagraph, will precede the Selig-Tribune, showing pictorially all the important happenings of the day. Mary Pickford and Henry Walthall are starred in "The Informers," a Biograph one-reel reissue. "Otto's Vacation," a Lubin one-part comedy, will close the program for the day. Davy Don and Patsey de Forest have the leads.

Francis X. Bushman and Lillian Drew will be seen in the first picture screened Tuesday, "The Other Man," an Essanay drama reissue in two parts. "The Great Detective," a Kalem one-reel comedy, will follow. Mae Marsh, Alan Hale and Donald Crisp have the leads in the two-part Biograph reissue, "By Man's Law," which rounds out the program for the day.

"A Watery Wooing," a comedy in one reel by Kalem, will be first on the program for Wednesday, followed by Verona Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of New Orleans, a very interesting cartoon, and a short scenic reel, both furnished by Essanay. "The Connecting Bath" is a one-reel comedy by Vim, featuring Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby.

A three-reel drama, "The Rough Neck," by Lubin, featuring George Routh and Evelyn Page, will get the spotlight Thursday, followed by the Selig-Tribune portraying current events of interest from all parts of the world, and "Aunt Bill," a Vim one-reel comedy of the "Plump and Runt" series on this program.

A Knickerbocker Star Feature, "Sibyl's Scenario," a three-part drama starring Marie Empress, supported by an all-star cast, furnishes an unusually strong feature. Kalem offers "A Double Elopement," a comedy of the "Sis Hopkins Series," while Vitagraph presents "The Fur Coat," in which F. Rankin Drew is starred, followed by "Help! Help!" of the "Pokes and Jabbs" Series by Vim.

Essanay will lead the list Saturday with a three-part drama "The Grouch," in which Harry Beaumont and Virginia Bowker share honors, followed by "Americans After All," a timely one-reel comedy by Lubin, which precedes "In Death's Pathway," a thrilling episode of the "Hazards of Helen," by Kalem. The program for the day and week will close with "Shooting up the Movies," a two-part Selig western comedy in which Tom Mix and Victoria Forde are featured.

Wave of Infantile Paralysis Hits New York Exhibitors

Commissioner Bell Prohibits All Children Under Sixteen Years of Age Admission to Picture Theatres and the Penalty for Disregarding Order Is Loss of License

THE wave of infantile paralysis that is sweeping New York City and Greater New York has seriously affected the business of the exhibitors in these localities. License Commissioner Bell has prohibited all children under sixteen years of age admission to picture theatres, and the penalty for managers who disregard this order is the revoking of their license. New York Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America looks upon this act of Commissioner Bell as too serious a drawback to the exhibitors' welfare to pass without objection.

Commissioner Bell's reason for this act, to prevent the spreading of the disease, is, of course, one that no one can criticize in motive. The exhibitors realize the danger of the plague, but they do not wish to see matinee business menaced to such an extent as is the ultimate effect of the order.

If the situation continues in its present state, the League will take definite steps. Their plan is to have a physician stationed at every theatre or in convenient localities throughout the city to examine all children desiring admittance to a picture theatre. In this way those who have the disease may be segregated from those untouched by it. The exhibitors believe that this would be a benefit to the city at large as well as to their own business. This proposition would have to be placed before the New York Department of Health, which has not as yet referred to motion picture theatres in its campaign against the disease.

JAMES YOUNG TO DIRECT BLANCHE SWEET

James Young has resumed work at the Lasky studios, Hollywood, California, and will devote himself exclusively in the future, it is said, on productions for Blanche Sweet. Miss Sweet, early in the spring appeared under Mr. Young's direction in "The Thousand Dollar Husband" which is one of the successes on the Paramount Program.

Her new picture is entitled "The Unconquered" and the star will be supported by a cast of well known Lasky players.

RAY COMEDIES BEGIN RUN IN CLEVELAND

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, July 8.

The comedies which are produced by the Reserve Photo Play Company, featuring Johnny and Emma Ray released their first picture in Cleveland, "Casey's Dream," and will continue to release one picture a week. The Alhambra has the first run. "The Detective" is now before the Board of Censors in Columbus.

PRESIDENT WILSON TO SEE "CIVILIZATION" AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Thomas H. Ince has been granted the honor of presenting "Civilization" at the White House before President and Mrs. Wilson. The President will select his own invited audience. The date will be announced later.

Mr. Ince is also sending a special courier to Baltimore for an interview with Cardinal Gibbons, through whom he hopes to be granted an opportunity to show the spectacle to the Pope.

MacAlarney, City Editor, New York Tribune, with Lasky

He Was in Charge of Local Room for Post and the Mail, President of News Association and Is an Associate of Pulitzer School of Journalism

ROBERT Emmet MacAlarney, for the past two years city editor of the New York Tribune, last week assumed his new duties in the photodramatic and scenario department of the Jesse L. Lasky Featuring Play Company, photoplay producers.

In taking up his new work, Mr. MacAlarney resigns as city editor of the Tribune and as president of the New York City News Association, having succeeded the late Arthur Greaves of the Times in the latter position. He continues, however, as associate in journalism at the Pulitzer School of Journalism, Columbia University, where for two years subsequent to its founding he served as one of the organizers and professors.

Mr. MacAlarney has been city editor of the New York Evening Post and Evening Mail. He has been for some years a successful writer of fiction.

The engagement of Mr. MacAlarney, who is one of the best known newspaper men in the United States, is significant of the sincere effort which the Lasky Company and some of the other producing firms are making to enlist the services of experienced journalists and novelists in the cause of better motion pictures.

Some weeks ago when Jesse L. Lasky returned East from the studios at Hollywood, California, he opened a discussion which has since been widespread in both the motion picture industry and outside among the larger public on the question of better stories for the films. Having pointed out what he declared to be now one of the great shortcomings of the motion picture, particularly in contrast to the great improvement which has been made in all other divisions of the art, such as direction, photography and projection, Mr. Lasky announced that the Lasky Company is seeking to meet this condition by a revolutionary movement, an effort to enlist by personal contact the services of the best writers of the present day in behalf of the screen.

That the project was timely and psychological was evidenced by the fact that during the same week that the Lasky Company announced the transfer of the scenario department from Hollywood, California, to New York, to be in closer contact with well known contributors to magazines and newspapers, one of the other big producing companies, the Famous Players Film Company, announced an offer of $100,000 and royalties for 100 ideas for photoplays.

Mr. MacAlarney brings to the motion picture an understanding of public tastes gained only through many years of active newspaper editorship and observation. As the city editor of the New York Evening Post he played no small part in the upbuilding of that newspaper into one of the solid conservative journals in high literary publications. Subsequent to his connection with the New York Evening Mail he was selected among all New York's well known practical editors to be one of the organizers of the Pulitzer School of Journalism at Columbia University, which was founded by a bequest in the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer, editor and publisher of the New York World and St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

That Mr. MacAlarney possesses executive capacity to an unusual degree is evidenced by the speed with which the organization at the School of Journalism was put into effect and by the number of competent journalists it has trained for newspaper and magazine work.

V-L-S-E Plans for Further Extension in Canada Under Way

General Manager Irwin Discusses with Managers Gookin and Watrous of Toronto and Montreal, Respectively, the Advisability of Establishing More Branches

WALTER W. IRWIN, general manager of the V-L-S-E, has just returned from Canada, where he went for the purpose of enlarging the facilities of that organization to take care of its increased business in the Dominion. But six months old, the Toronto branch has proved a revelation to film men in general, on account of the strides it has taken. W. C. Gookin is the present manager.

The sub-office at Montreal, which heretofore had done business through the Toronto branch, has also met with such success that it will henceforth be run as a regular branch exchange.

The Montreal office has been almost doubled in size to take care of the ever-increasing business. An entire ground floor of one of the largest buildings in the city has been rented. This is near the Imperial theatre, which is the V-L-S-E first-run house in that city.

The matter of the establishment of several additional branch offices in the Canadian Dominion was also discussed by Mr. Irwin and Managers Gookin and Watrous of Toronto and Montreal, respectively.

Despite the youth of the Canadian service of the V-L-S-E, exhibitors are strong in their praise of its policies. Recently a committee appointed by an association representing sixty-four theatres called upon Manager Gookin to give their endorsement of the V-L-S-E open-booking-box-office-value policy. These men stated in behalf of their association that they appreciated the endeavors of the V-L-S-E and assured Mr. Gookin of their support. It is said that this action by Canadian exhibitors is unprecedented.

Mr. Irwin returned to New York highly pleased with the strides taken by his company in Canada. He declared that the success of the Big Four policies in Canada is but another illustration of their customary efficiency.

"The Ne'er-Do-Well," the big Selig feature being released through the V-L-S-E, opened Monday night in the Strand theatre, Toronto, to a crowded house.

Dustin Farnum Will Be Seen as Davy Crockett on July 13

Supporting the Star in Pallas Subject Are Winifred Kingston, Harry deVere, Herbert Standing, Ogden Crane and Lydia Yeamans Titus

CLOSELY following the release of "The American Beauty," starring Myrtle Stedman, Pallas Pictures announces as its next subject for the Paramount program, Dustin Farnum in "Davy Crockett," the historic subject as done by Frank Mayo. The new Farnum vehicle will be released on July 13.

In this production the range of scenery and climate available for motion pictures in southern California is shown in the raging snow storm and summer garden scenes that were taken on locations all within a day's ride from the studio. Scenes taken in the forest during the blizzard among deep snow and ice covered trees, show a southern California that few people know about. After taking these scenes the players motored down to the seashore to an old colonial estate where the summer-like warmth made the frontier costumes feel a bit heavy to the actors.

It was during the staging of this photoplay in the San Bernardino Mountains that Dustin Farnum and his company were cut off from the outer world for eight days through a severe blizzard. Many hardships were suffered by the players, but the results attained seem to warrant their efforts for realism in the production of this classic of American pioneer life.

Supporting the star in "Davy Crockett," are Winifred Kingston as Eleanor Vaughn, the dainty miss who is carried off by her lover as was the maid of old, by brave Lochinvar; Harry deVere as her father, Herbert Standing, Ogden Crane, Page Peters, who was recently drowned in California, and Lydia Yeamans Titus. The production was staged under the direction of William Taylor, while the camera work was entrusted to Homer Scott.

POLLOCK TO PLAN SCENIC EFFECTS FOR "GARDEN OF ALLAH"

Gabriel Pollock, scenic and art director of the Selig Polyscope Company, who has been working in Chicago in connection with the production of "The Crisis," left Thursday, July 6, for Los Angeles, Cal. Immediately upon arrival there Mr. Pollock will begin the work of planning artistic scenes and effects for "The Garden of Allah," the forthcoming film drama. Colin Campbell, the director who produced "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," and "The Crisis" for the Selig Company, will also produce "The Garden of Allah."

PARSONS TO PRODUCE "TARZAN OF THE APES" IN TWELVE REELS

William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation of America, with offices at 218 West 42d street, New York City, has closed a contract with Edgar Rice Borroughs for the production of the well-known book success, "Tarzan of the Apes."

The "Tarzan" stories have been widely published in magazines, newspapers and many book editions have brought their circulation up into the millions.

It is Mr. Parsons' intention to make a pretentious production of ten or twelve reels and to release the picture independently. Production will be begun within a few months at the National Film Corporation studios in Florida and also in the Big Horn Mountains.

Associated with Mr. Parsons in the enterprise is Robert Lay of Chicago, who will be vice president of the National Film Corporation. Mr. Lay is secretary of the National Life Insurance Company of the United States. Another associate is Henry G. Carr, president of the Cook County Real Estate Board. These gentlemen are directors, as is also Edgar Rice Burroughs.

SIXTY-THREE REEL FELLOWS ON OUTING

The Reel Fellows Club of Chicago held an automobile outing on Saturday, July 1. A party of sixty-three people left Chicago in fourteen cars at 1 p.m. and made a fast trip to Cedar Lake, Indiana. After indulgnig in a chicken dinner and making a few excursions around the lakes, the party climbed into the machines and returned to Chicago at 11 p.m.

This affair was so successful that the club is arranging for an automobile week-end party to Cedar Lake, to take place in the early part of August.

"Daring of Diana," Starring Anita Stewart, Is a Newspaper Story from Vitagraph for Release on July 24

ANITA Stewart's latest starring vehicle is "The Daring of Diana," a Blue Ribbon Feature in five parts from the pen of Charles L. Gaskill, which is announced by Vitagraph for July 24.

While on the lookout for news, Diana Pearson, a reporter on the Daily Argus, sees a woman following the automobile of Jason Briscoe, the owner of the Argus, who had just returned from Paris after an absence of twenty-five years. She follows the woman, sees her enter Briscoe's house, and soon after, hears a shot. On entering she finds the woman on the floor severely wounded.

Briscoe, seeing Diana, throws her into the cellar with the other woman and locks the door so that she cannot escape. In the cellar, the other woman tells Diana that the man who is posing as Briscoe is really named Stange and that he had stunned the real Briscoe in Paris and left him in care of an apache. Diana sees that Stange's intention is to sell the paper and then get off with the money. After many fruitless attempts, she finally manages to effect an escape and arrives at the Argus office just in time to halt the sale of the Argus and have Stange arrested.

A few weeks later, a cable to the Prefect of Police in Paris has secured the release of Jason Briscoe, who returns to New York in time to congratulate his son, John, editor of the Argus, on his approaching marriage to Diana Pearson, the reporter. Other Vitagraphers in the cast are, Anders Randolf, Francis Morgan, Julia Swayne Gordon, Charles Wellesley, Joseph Donohue and Donald MacBride. S. Rankin Drew directed the production.

Gun Cotton, Gas Masks and Incendiary Bombs Make Up the Pictographs for Week of July 24

FIVE-REEL Paramount pictures scheduled for release during the week of July 24 will include the Morosco production, "An International Marriage," in which Rita Jolivet will appear, and "Little Lady Eileen" from the Famous Players studios, featuring Marguerite Clark in the role of a young Irish girl. The Morosco picture will be a Monday release. "Little Lady Eileen" will be shown on Thursday.

Paramount short reel subjects for the same week will include an edition of the "magazine on the screen," Paramount Pictographs, "The Real Bohemia" in the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel-Pictures and the Paramount-Bray Animated Cartoon "Boddy Bumps and the Detective Story."

"How the Chemist Makes War," an out-of-the-trenches exhibition of the efficiency of gun-cotton, gas masks and incendiary bombs will head this release of the Pictographs. Electrifying a railroad for 410 miles by the use of water power—one of the world's greatest engineering feats—is the subject of another film feature, "Climbing the Rockies On a Waterfall." Also included in the screen periodical will be "Constructive Imagination" in the "Better Babies" series, "What a Tennis Ball Will Do," and "How Germs Destroy Each Other."

Dime library detective tales proved so alluring to the hero of Earl Hurd's drawing "Boddy Bumps and the Detective Story," that he spent all his spare moments reading them. His watchful father discovering his son deep in the pages of one of the yellow volumes, reprimands him and takes the story away. Later Boddy discovers his parent absorbed in the censored volume and recovers his book with the aid of his pointer pup. An exciting chase which follows brings the book into mother's possession and leads to the climax of the plot.

"The Real Bohemia" continues Burton Holmes' European tour for motion picture audiences.

EDISON MAKES MILK PICTURE FOR HEALTH DEPARTMENT

The New York State Department of Health will use motion pictures in a campaign to encourage the pasteurization of milk and a one-reel picture which reveals, through an interesting political story, the danger of impure milk, is being made for the State authorities at the Edison studios in Bedford Park, N. Y. The story, which was written by Alan Crosland, Edison casting director, is known as "The Trump Card."

Among the well-known screen players who appear in "The Trump Card" are Robert Conness, Herbert Prior, Leonie Fluegrath and Andy Clark.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"THE SILENT BATTLE"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is decidedly the best vehicle that has been secured for the presentation of J. Warren Kerrigan in a long time. Aside from that it is a good picture as well. The original story by George Gibbs is of the sort that fits naturally in the film case. Most of it is laid in the wild woods. Here is one of the best fields of the camera. What few settings appear are not lavish, although fully adequate to meet the situation. The sylvan scenes are beautiful naturally—and the photographic work has greatly enhanced their charm.

The scenario was shaped by F. McGrew Willis and produced by Jack Conway, and both these men have done their work in such an acceptable fashion that to pick flaws in it would be somewhat of a difficult undertaking. Faults to the blame of either the scenario writer or director have the disagreeable habit of jumping out from the screen and striking the observer in the face, figuratively speaking. With the case of "The Silent Battle" no such occurence is to be reported.

The story commences in the year 1855, to show the manner in which the present day hero, Gallatin, inherited a craving for drink from his father. Gallatin, the lawyer, is sent to the woods by his doctor. Here he gets along nicely. When lost in the forest he meets Jane Loring, who is in the same predicament. They are obliged to make camp and spend several days and nights together. Later Gallatin gets a chill from a rainstorm and Jane gives him a stimulant. His old craving comes back, he drains the entire bottle and then attacks the girl. She is rescued in time by a search party.

Later, in the city, Gallatin has completely mastered the curse of his inheritance. He again meets Jane and she forgives him. Nina Jaffray and Coleman Van Duyn, each jealous of the other two, plot their separation and by underhanded methods they succeed in again disillusioning the girl. But finally Nina repents and confesses to Jane and the lovers meet once more in the wilds of the forest.

Kerrigan is his usual self as Gallatin. Lois Wilson makes an appealing character of Jane. Maude George is again the heavy, Nina, and Harry Carter as Coleman is equally and smoothly villainous. Ray Hanford and J. F. Connolly have character parts. The camera work was in charge of B. C. Hayward and is excellent throughout.

"FATHERS OF MEN"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is a James Oliver Curwood story, laid in the Canadian Northwest. Like other Curwood stories it has a realistic background, and deals with adventurous characters, whose controlling motive is revenge. In its working out, the story is resolved into a melodrama, with many of the faults of melodrama, and also a good many of its virtues.

The most impressive thing in the picture is Robert Edeson, who appears in two widely contrasting roles. He is seen first as Howland, a trapper, who lives with his wife and child in a cabin in the North. The child is injured in a snow slide, and the father is forced to take him to a surgeon many miles away. While he is gone, Blake. the villain, steels Howland's wife.

Howland swears revenge, and goes in pursuit, but fails to find his wife. Then the story jumps twenty years. Howland has become an officer of the Northwest Mounted Police, and his son is also a mounted man. Mr. Edeson appears as the son, of course, and like his father, takes the oath of vengeance. Blake falls into the power of the two, by being found at the side of a murdered man. On the elder Howland's testimony he is convicted. In attempting to escape, Blake is shot. While this is proceeding, Blake's three sons, going to the elder Howland to make him sign a confession which would release their father, are witnesses of his accidental death.

With the two fathers thus disposed of the various sons swear vengeance, and trail each other through the snow. The younger Howland and Blake's son, David, meet and agree to fight a gunduel. They are interrupted by the appearance of three women, one of whom turns out to be the stolen wife over whom all the trouble started. Reel six takes the party to the cabin of a lot of desperate crooks, who attempt to outrage the two younger women. Howland and Blake save them. The other two Blake sons appear on the scene, and, before the erring wife drops dead, the two clans agree to bury their enmity.

Such is the story, in brief. It is told, for the most part, in a straightforward manner, working up to climaxes at intervals, and, despite its melodramatic theme, holding the spectator pretty well throughout. Mr. Edeson undergoes a severe test in a series of scenes wherein he appears in the double role. These are managed by the cut and flash method, and the use of a double for the elder Howland, when necessary. Certainly they are novel, and will cause some bewilderment.

Naomi Childers is quite appealing as the wife. Others are Bobby Connelly, Harry S. Northrup, Stanley Dunn, Kalman Matus, William Humphrey, as the conventional villain; Logan Paul, Robert Gaillard, Carolyn Birch and Betty Howe.

The direction is by William Humphrey, and is entirely adequate, though not at all distinctive. There are many pleasing snow scenes. In fact, "snow stuff" predominates throughout. The picture is hardly worth six reels and could be trimmed to advantage.

"DUST"

(American-Mutual—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

ALTHOUGH the villainy is considerably overdeveloped, this is an intensely interesting melodrama of modern industrial and social conditions. It is aimed at the unscrupulous and overbearing employer, and the squalid conditions still obtaining in many factories.

Frank Kenyon is an author and sociologist. His sweetheart is Marian, the cold and worldly daughter of Moore, a grasping factory owner. Kenyon has tried in vain to get her to aid him in inducing Moore to remedy conditions in his factory, known as one of the worst in the country.

Marian is to appear as "Humanity" at an entertainment for the Belgian Relief Fund; the same day, Mina, a child worker at the factory, is mangled in a machine. Kenyon, by a ruse, gets Marian into Mina's home, where the little girl is under chloroform; Kenyon realizes that an overdose has been administered, and tells Marian to stay and keep the child awake until he gets aid. While he is gone Marion leaves her charge, hails a passing automobile, and drives to the entertainment. When Kenyon returns Mina is beyond aid.

The author hurries to the entertainment, and from the platform tells the story of Mina, and denounces the shallow charity of the selfish rich. It breaks up the entertainment, and Marian hands him back his ring.

Kenyon starts a bitter war on Moore and the things he represents; he is elected to the legislature and succeeds in getting a factory bill through. Bud, a boy at the factory, has perfected a number of safety devices, and with the idea of cheating Bud, Moore visits the closet where the appliances are stored. A fire breaks out and sweeps the fire-trap of a factory, and Bud and Moore are cut off.

Kenyon, from an adjoining building, gets a rope to the window where the victims are, and makes his way to their aid; Moore roughly attempts to thrust Bud aside and insure his own safety, but as he swings over the edge of the building the rope burns in two and he is dashed to death. Kenyon succeeds in rescuing Bud, but the factory is a total loss.

Later Marian sees a great light, and begins to devote her fortune to charity. She and Kenyon are reconciled. Winnifred Greenwood, Franklin Ritchie, Harry von Meter, Louise Lester and Margaret Nichols head the cast.

"THE HALF-BREED"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

AGAIN we have Douglas Fairbanks in a new mood. It is not in the comedy of adventure, nor yet in farce, but in straight drama that he is presented here. Those who have hitherto associated his wonderful screen personality only with the eccentric, in comic and heart interest situations, have an opportunity to gauge his ability in a picture which is utterly different.

'The Half Breed" is an adaptation of Bret Harte's story, "In the Carquinez Woods," and is therefore laid in the California frontier days. Its theme is the barrier of blood between Indian and white man, which barrier confronts Lo, the Half Breed, at every turn, and particularly, of course, in his relations with young women of the white race.

It is easy enough to see that such a story might have been allowed to fall into a sermon on the subject of the persecuted Indian. This angle is presented, it is true, but not to the exclusion of things more appealing and distinctive. We also have a version of the moral superiority of the Indian to the white, especially in respect to women; and, whether this is actually true of Indian character or not, it serves to throw an atmosphere both of pathos and of worth about the role which Fairbanks carries.

Those who look for stirring fights in every Fairbanks picture will find none of them in this. His athletic prowess is demonstrated in other milder ways, and flashes out of the picture at intervals as a relief offsetting the heavier scenes. There is also less than the usual footage given the star. But it seems to us that Fairbanks is just as "sure-fire" as ever, although the part itself does not give him the opportunities afforded by such vehicles as "The Habit of Happiness" and "The Good Bad Man."

As to direction, no exhibitor need have any misgivings about this picture. The reputation which the Fine Arts staff has for care and distinction is fully maintained by Allan Dwan. There are splendid panoramas, colorful scenes of frontier life in two small villages, and, particularly, locations among the giant red wood trees, which are both beautiful and impressive. Finally, a forest fire is staged, and it is excellent in realism. Some remarkable night photography is also presented.

Alma Reubens deserves especial mention for her work as Teresa, and Jewel Carmen is very good as the fickle beauty. Others are Sam De Grasse, Frank Brownlow and George Beranger.

"THE RETURN"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

GETTING away from the conventional, this film portrays the strange emotional experiences of a most unusual woman. Her hallucinations and primitive instincts are hard to understand, yet afford an interesting psychological study. Kathlyn Williams interprets the moods of this woman with considerable skill. Wellington Playter takes the part of a professional strong man and is physically suited to the part as well as being an experienced actor. Guy Oliver's acting is restrained and effective. Others in the cast are Vivian Reed, Sidney Smith, and Harry Lonsdale.

In the commendable attempt to prune excess footage, the story has at times been cut to the quick, necessitating some help from the imagination to keep up with the plot.

By his good judgment in handling the scenes, T. N. Heffron, the director, contrived to bring out the full dramatic force of the various episodes. The settings are handsome and appropriate.

Ione, a society girl, inherits a strain of barbarism. She is wooed by Rutley, a young business man, but there is not enough of the cave man in him to satisfy her. She is fascinated by Pascho, a vaudeville strong man. Forgetting Maritana, his fiancee, Pascho persuades Ione to elope with him. Just as they are leaving, Rutley calls and attempts to dissuade Ione from marrying the giant.

The First Meeting

Maritana, mad with jealousy, fires a revolver at Pascho, but the bullet strikes Rutley. This act reminds Pascho of Maritana's great love, and he goes back to her; Ione finds herself in love with Rutley, who soon recovers from the bullet wound.

"THE PAYMENT"

(Kay-Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

"THE PAYMENT" is a story of a girl who sacrifices honor to further her ambition, and consequently it is a drama of sex. Never, to our notion, has a sex drama been presented with such good taste, with such an utter absence of sordidness, and with keener psychology in the telling. There is a wholly commendable effort to avoid offensive situations—there are no offensive situations whatever—and yet the drama of the thing holds to the final unhappy ending.

In fact, this picture is the best example we have ever seen of the axiom that the manner in which a sex theme is handled is the sum and substance of the whole question. For this piece of good work Director Raymond B. West and Author C. Gardner Sullivan deserve equal credit.

Bessie Barriscale, who has always impressed us as one of the most sincere and most competent of screen players, is splendid in the central role. She lifts it far above any hint of melodrama, and drives it home to the spectator as perhaps her most distinctive characterization. Excellent as the handling of the material is, it could not be put over without such an engaging personality and such intelligence as Miss Barriscale registers at every point.

This quality of restraint and skill extends also to other members of the cast. Katherine Kirkwood gives an unusual portrayal of a trustful wife—the best thing of the sort we have ever seen. Charles Miller is effective in a part which is hedged about with the pitfalls of the melodramatic; and William Desmond is good in a small part. Others are Thomas S. Guise and Gertrude Claire, who appear only in the first reel.

One expects first-rate settings, lighting and photography from the Ince studios, and his expectation is fulfilled in this picture. They are, of course, merely incidental to the drama, but the spectator is fully conscious that they are there.

"The Payment" is one of those photoplays which hinge, to large degree, upon subtitles, and the subtitles are exceptionally good. The camerawork is by G. D. H. Heriot.

If the exhibitor wants a strong psychological drama, presented with new twists and unusual skill, he should not overlook "The Payment."

"A DOUBLE ELOPEMENT"

(Kalem—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ROSE Melville, still in her eccentric role of Sis Hopkins and aided by a competent cast and a story of fairly prominent humorous possibilities, holds sway in this one-reel comedy from Kalem. Miss Melville's tactics for getting a laugh, though not as extensive in appeal as those of other screen comediennes and comedians, appear to have the faculty of registering with a great number of people. Her style of comedy is neither boisterous nor of the conventional parlor variety and the happy medium seems desired in a moderate fashion.

Sis is still the slavey. Next door lives Professor Doolittle, a physical culturist who believes that Sis is the embodiment of perfect womanhood. He presents her with Indian clubs and medicine ball and she succeeds in taking the count on the maid next door with the medicine ball. The maid had previously planned to elope that night with the silver, Sis and Doolittle had thought to do the same, while Skull N. Bones, the village undertaker was to elope with somebody or other. The result is a bunch of scrambled elopements with things finally straightened out in fairly good order.

The Dawn of Romance

Henry Murdock is seen as the Professor, while others who appear are Richard Purdon, Adelaide Byrd, C. D. Peruchi, Arthur Albertson and Frances Neymoyer. Robert Ellis directed.

"WHO'S GUILTY?"

(Arrow and Pathe—Episodes Eight and Nine)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE eighth and ninth of the series are here and they go to definitely prove one thing above all others, that the producers do not intend to allow any of the episodes to go slack in the matter of dramatic material. The separate stories may be melodramatic in makeup, as most of them are, or they may be straight drama, or studies of character, but no matter what the variety of story presented, it contains meat—there is action every minute of its duration. Little time is spent with introductory scenes. The pictures are so molded as to obviate this evil as well as scenes of the anti-climax sort.

"Beyond Recall" is the eighth number. Aside from a slight muddle created at the outset of the first reel, it makes for thirty odd minutes of the greatest suspense. A woman, whose lover plans to leave the country, takes her life. The man comes to bid her a last goodbye and the police get him. To establish an alibi is impossible because the man whom he was with at the time of the suicide has gone on a business trip. As a consequence he is executed.

"The Weaker Strain," the ninth of the series, is based along lines of a conventional sort, but it is done in a finished manner and measures up as original beside other plots of the same character which wind up with a forced happy ending. The young wife goes on the concert stage when her husband has been injured by a fall. A composer falls in love with her and makes it appear that she is unfaithful to her husband. As a result she kills him, thus proving her love for her husband and he, to prove his love for her, takes the blame for the crime.

"FROM BROADWAY TO A THRONE"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A CARTER DE HAVEN feature might be a signal for an outburst of laughter, for this actor's forte is undoubtedly comedy. William Bowman, author and director of "From Broadway to a Throne," was offered a fine chance to raise that signal, but he has only partially succeeded in so doing. The basis of the picture is good even though not original. It has the mythical kingdom and the long lost prince. Jimmie, a prize fighter, happens to be wearing a medal that convinces three emissaries from the kingdom that he is the prince. He is lugged back to the kingdom

"Thy Kingdom Come"

—Margonia it is, this time—and there is made to serve as prince until the real fellow shows up.

Now it happens that mythical kingdoms are excellent locales for pictures, either of the comic or the romantic variety. Mr. De Haven might have had a world of fun shocking a royal court with Bowery prize fight methods if he had been allowed to cavort about in such a place for more than the space of a reel. The trouble with the picture is that it takes the redoubtable Carter three full reels and part of the fourth to get to Margonia. The earlier parts of the picture are given over to showing Jimmie (De Haven) fighting in the ring and depicting earlier history of the European kingdom. The fight scenes are interesting and well done, but few people will be able to work up any enthusiasm for the past history of Margonia.

From all which, it may be deduced that "From Broadway to a Throne" breaks about even. When it takes a turn for the humorous both the star and the subtitle writer are there on the job, and when intended, the laughs are not bashful in coming to the front. The only trouble is, Mr. Bowman has not put enough of them in the picture's five reels.

It might be well to remark that Jimmie wakes up in the end and finds out that the greater part of the picture has been a dream. This gives a laugh. The production tendered the picture by Mr. Bowman is adequate. The settings are good and the photography clear.

Walter Belasco, Duke Worne, Marvel Spencer, Yona Landowska, Malcolm Blevins, William Canfield, T. D. Crittendon and Frank and Albert MacQuarrie supplement Mr. De Haven's work.

"QUICKSANDS OF DECEIT"

(Flying A-Mutual—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

WE have here a melodrama of the old-fashioned variety, with familiar characters, which seldom fail to appeal. The plot centers about Ida, a waif, who is adopted by Hardy, a sturdy and honest farmer, who brings her up as his child, and acquires real affection for her.

Hardy has a daughter of his own, Eleanor, he is anxious to have marry Hugh, a young farmer. Hugh has fallen in love with Ida, but he agrees to Hardy's plans.

Eleanor has fallen in love with Paul, a worthless character who appears in the community, and she elopes with him, making it appear that she has gone away to school. Later, betrayed, deserted and disgraced, Eleanor writes to Ida, who goes to her and assists in caring for Eleanor and her baby, until Eleanor dies. Letters written by Paul, and found by Hardy and Hugh, make it appear that Ida is the one who eloped with Paul, and she is under a cloud until it is discovered that Eleanor never reached the school.

Paul appears, down and out, and attempts to extort money from Hardy on threats of exposing the family disgrace; through him Hugh learns the truth, and finds out where Ida is. She is surprised while caring for Eleanor's baby, and is taken home to love and happiness. Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh, George Periolat and Queenie Rosson head the cast.

HOLD ON TO YOUR HEART, REVEREND SIR, IT'S SLIPPING AWAY FROM YOU TO THE FASCINATING THEDA

REV. MORGAN E. GEORGE, pastor of the First Christian Church of Ottumwa, Iowa, has risen in defense of Theda Bara, the screen vampire. He calls her eyes magnetic and asserts that they betray the real woman even when the lip curls with a sneer. In most pleasing language he speaks of her charm and has written to the actress informing her that he misses no opportunity to see a play in which she is featured. He cannot agree with those who choose to call Miss Bara a vampire.

"STRANDED"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

DE WOLF HOPPER appears here as an old-fashioned actor, whose Shakespearian efforts the public no longer cares for, preferring "vaudeville and movies," so a subtitle tells us. Mr. Hopper confines himself to the same style of acting which he has offered in other productions, and registers nothing that he has not registered before.

The story confines itself mostly to heart interest, depicting the old actor's fatherly care of a little actress of the one-night stand variety. He takes care of her when she in injured, and sees her happily married to a youth of a village. Then he falls dead, just at the end of the wedding ceremony, as the result of a bullet wound inflicted by the villain who threatens to expose the fact that the girl and the old actor are not daughter and father, as they pretended to the villagers.

There are some pleasing scenes, which center about Bessie Love, who is very effective as the stage waif. The well-known ability of Fine Arts directors to get over small town atmosphere is once more demonstrated by Lloyd Ingraham. The prejudice against things theatrical, except for "educational" purposes at church benefits, is played upon skilfully. As in other recent pictures with the small town background, "Stranded" is strongly reinforced with excellent types, and settings upon which it would be hard to improve.

Preliminary to the main action, wherein the old actor poses as a Shakespearian expert in order to get a job coaching the church dramatic society, glimpses of the life of a fifth-rate troupe are shown, and these are well-managed.

In the supporting cast are Frank Bennett, Loyola O'Connor and Frank Stockdale. The story is by Anita Loos.

"THE SELFISH WOMAN"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is an interesting story of a division in the family, which extends to social and business intrigue. The production has added value from the fact that the characters are interesting, and the atmosphere and locale are ditto. An excellent production has been made, and brilliant photography shows its full power to increase the effectiveness of a picture.

The story was written by Hector Turnbull for Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely. Reid plays the part of Tom Morley, a young civil engineer, engaged in building a railroad across Imperial Valley, California. His father, a wealthy banker, disapproves of his taking up engineering and does everything in his power to make the engineering undertaking a failure. It is also to the interests of his firm that the project shall fail, and in his attack on his son's work he is assisted by McKenzie, a crooked promoter.

Tom meets and falls in love with Alice Hale; the Hales are in sore straits financially, and Alice's mother manoeuvres to bring about the wedding. Following a runaway match, Morley, sr., offers to take Tom into partnership if he will give up the railway construction, but he refuses, and then Morley offers Alice a fortune in her own right if she will bring about Tom's failure. She consents, and goes back to Imperial Valley with Tom.

By the free use of money, Alice and an assistant create discord and drunkenness among the men. She finds Tom hard to deal with, however, and sends back to his father for an assistant. McKenzie, who has long been in love with Alice, induces Morley to send him, and on his arrival, he not only sets about the ruination of Tom, but renews his wooing of Alice.

Alice, in the meantime, has been gradually drawn to a respect for Tom's strength and nobility of character, and she begins to realize that she loves him. The pay-roll is delayed, and the men, crazed by drink, are led to believe that Tom has appropriated the money. They surround his office in a howling and dangerous mob, but Alice, repenting of her former attitude, arrives in time to save her husband, and they continue life on a new understanding.

The cast is generally capable. In it, beside Wallace Reid and Cleo Ridgely, are Mrs. James Neil, Charles Arling, Joseph King, Jane Wolff, William Elmer, Horace B. Carpenter, Bob Fleming and Milton Brown.

"MARTYRS OF THE WAR"

(Permanent Blind Relief War Fund—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THESE pictures do not pretend to show warfare. They show the results of it—the results of modern "civilized" warfare in the shape of hundreds of French soldiers who have been blinded for life. The three reels take the spectator through several hospitals and schools which have been instituted in France for the re-education of these men. They are shown learning various trades: carpentering, basket weaving, lace making, shoe making and the like. It is one of the most pitiful sights that has ever been pictured.

The Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, 590 Fifth Avenue, New York, is placing this picture on the states right market and all funds received are to go to the establishment of more schools and better means for the re-education of the soldiers. The exhibitor may or may not donate a portion of his receipts from the picture to the Fund, but in all probability his patrons will be more than eager to do so.

The picture, considered from the technical side, is very good. Taken with the permission of the French government, the photographers have been able to procure scenes of great interest at close range. Moreover, there has not been an over-supply of these pictures—in fact this is the first. It will beyond a doubt, appeal because of its pitiful aspect and if it brings forth a donation from here and there so much the better.

"CAPRICE OF THE MOUNTAINS"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

WILLIAM Fox presents in this picture his newest star—a very pretty little girl, who undoubtedly has distinct screen possibilities. Her name is June Caprice, and her role here is accurately described by her surname. This is her first appearance in pictures.

The selection of a vehicle for a newcomer to the screen is a good deal of an experiment, of course, but the Fox staff made a happy choice of story, settings, and direction. The story is perfectly simple, and does not offer anything new as to theme, confining itself to depicting a girl of the Southern hills who, in order to escape marriage to a coarse mountaineer, goes to a bungalow occupied by a young society man, whom she had met. When he comes in, he discovers her in his bed fast asleep with her doll. This strikes him as highly amusing, and he leaves her to her dreams.

Her father arrives very shortly, and immediately suspects evil, although there is no evil. He forces the young man to marry her, but Caprice steals away the next morning, and goes to her Aunt's, where she is ultimately found by her husband, who, of course, falls in love with her without difficulty.

There are a few other complications, which also hinge upon a mixture of pathos and humor, the latter being built around the child nature of the star. Miss Caprice is quite appealing, and registers very well. Harry Hilliard gives an excellent matinee-idol performance as the hero, and his work strengthens the subject immensely. Other players are Sara Alexander, a remarkable type, as the aunt, Joel Day, Richard Hale and Lisle Leigh. The extras are good types.

Director John G. Adolfi gave the picture careful and skillful treatment. Working from a script by Clarence J. Harris, Adolfi introduced a number of touches, both in atmosphere and the handling of players, and these have a lot to do with maintaining interest.

The director also went to considerable trouble to secure right locations, and here again he has succeeded unusually well. The exteriors were evidently made in the South, and disclose scenes of real beauty. The camera effects in these are very fine.

Finally, the picture won't offend anybody's sensibilities.

"THE GROUCH"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

THE young man fresh from college who teaches a middle-aged man how to run his office appears often in popular magazines and on the screen. In this film he not only transforms a decaying business into a dividend payer, but he cures the boss of a life-long grouch.

These two miracles are performed in a manner that hardly seems possible, but since the picture is a comedy, this only aggravates the humor. The sheer irresponsibility and spirit of the piece, in contrast to some of the indigestible problem plays, make it welcome.

The cast is well chosen for interpreting this kind of comedy. Harry Beaumont is a good-looking juvenile, and Virginia Bowker makes a vivacious ingenue. Harry Dunkinson is excellent in the title role, while Camille D'Arcy and John Cossar are very good in character parts.

The settings and locations are unusually appropriate, and the directing throughout was carefully done.

Peter Dixon is a thirty-third degree grouch. Because of his surliness and his old-fashioned methods, his once flourishing business is going to seed. Jimmie Bradley, with a newly acquired B.A., is in love with Dixon's daughter. He figures that the best way to win the old man's consent to his marriage is to build up the business.

Accordingly, he gets a job as sales manager, and in a few days makes the film a howling success. He then undertakes to make Dixon smile. He bribes the office boy to play ragtime on a harmonica, and when this fails, he teaches the grouch to play golf.

This game enlivens Dixon to such a degree that he flirts with all the debutantes, and being caught by his wife, he fires Jimmy. But the youth patches this up, and marries the daughter of the now jolly parent.

"GREATER NEW YORK BY DAY AND BY NIGHT"

(Four Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

C. POST MASON has secured some exceedingly interesting views of New York City for presentation in these four reels which he will release throughout the United States on the states right basis. Not only has Mr. Mason photographed all the major points of educational and general interest in the city, but he has used the sub-titles to instructive advantage and has told historical anecdotes in connection with practically every scene through this channel.

Mr. Post's cameraman has cranked on scenes from the Battery to the Polo Grounds, from Riverside Drive to the bridges that span East River. Wall Street with its numberless places of unusual interest, Fifth Avenue with its handsome residences and public buildings, beautiful Riverside Drive winding by Grant's Tomb and the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, and Times Square, with its myriad electric signs at night, all come in for a share of film.

Benefited by good photography and intelligent editing, these views should prove a boon to the exhibitor in the smaller locality or in the foreign land. New York has a certain glamour about it, a certain immeasurable romance that those who have never been to it glory in. A picture that shows points of interest in such a city without attempting any hotel advertising, that does not attempt the exploitation of any manufacured product is sure to be well received at face value. Those who are acquainted with the highways and by-ways of the great city need have no fear of losing interest in Mr. Post's series of views. The average New Yorker knows less about his city than the average small town man, and many will be entertained by seeing places that they know familiarly.

"THE PRIVATE BANKER"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

THE plot of this film is essentially the perennial murder case, involving the hero's being found near the dead man, and his almost being hung before his innocence is established. The old favorite has been given a brand-new twist, however, and the characters are so unconventional that the spectator often forgets the antiquity of the theme.

The players represent Italians, and while some of them do not have the features of that race, they create the Sicilian effect by means of shrugs and stilettoes. The acting is very good, the best work being offered by Edith Johnson and Wheeler Oakman. In their support Leo Pierson, Harry Lonsdale, and Thomas Bates appear. Thomas Santschi directed. The photography and settings are good.

Pietro, an Italian laborer, and Tony, an Italian idler, are rivals for the hand of Lucia, a pretty girl of their own race. Pietro is successful, and in his pique, Tony decides to rob his countrymen. He takes into partnership Amato, an experienced confidence man.

They open a bank, and the deposits come in rapidly, Tony feels that it is unnecessary to split the booty with Amato, and so robs the safe. Amato sees the theft, and in the fight that follows, Amato is stabbed. Tony flees, but Pietro, seeing him with the satchel of money, trips him, and takes the bag.

Tony tells the police that Pietro was the man who killed Amato and stole the money. Pietro is caught by the fleeced workmen, and they are about to kill him, when Lucia appears on the scene. She proves that Tony was the guilty party, and when Pietro shows the men their money, he is the man of the hour.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Other Man." (Essanay. Re-issue. Two reels. Tues., July 18.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Mildred Ross is married to Harry Ross, but her father induces her to divorce him and marry Frederick Braddon, a millionare. When Ross returns from a long trip he calls on Mildred and persuades her to elope with him. But Bleeker, the old butler, overhears their talk, and when Mildred is about to go, stands at the door with her little child in his arms. She cannot leave the child, so Bleeker goes in her stead to meet Ross. He gives Ross a letter, a locket, and a photograph of the baby. He understands, and sobs. A broken man, he leaves. Francis X. Bushman and Lillian Drew are the leads.

"Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of New Orleans." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., July 19.)—This reel of sketches and scenic not shown for review.

"The Grouch." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., July 22.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Broken Brake" (Kalem. Sat., July 15.)—Another Hazard of Helen number, this time from a story furnished by E. W. Matlack. It contains more than one thrill in its make-up and is exciting enough throughout its length to warrant it a place with the best of the series. Helen Gibson takes a leap from the back of a horse to a flat car and back again, thus completing a series of sensational scenes, while P. S. Pembroke jumps from an engine to the ground while it is going at a pretty fast clip. There is a tremendous explosion besides, and the climax calls for some deft manipulation of the railroad switches which excites considerably. George Routh, late of Lubin, adds greatly to the cast.

"The Baggage Smashers." (Kalem. Tues., July 11.)—Ham and Bud get jobs as baggage smashers at a wayside railroad station in this number. They are mistaken for bad men and finally are run out of the place on an engine. This makes a fairly good burlesque, containing quite a bit of rough house which is partially funny. Ellen Godsay plays the feminine lead.

"A Double Elopement." (Kalem. Fri., July 21.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Sibyl's Scenario." (Knickerbocker Star Feature. Three reels. Fri., July 21.)—Not shown for review. It was written by Sibyl Smith, of Iowa, an amateur, and is said to have been produced exactly as she wrote it. Mercedes Gonzales, a Spanish cabaret dancer, learns by telephone that her daughter, Bernice, has been kidnapped by James Harper. The information is given by an old nurse, who has reared the girl in ignorance of her mother. Harper's accomplice repents and brings the girl back. She overhears enough to send her to the city in search of her mother. Meanwhile, Mercedes, disguised as a boy, breaks into Harper's apartments and is captured by his Oriental servant, Carib. Carib confesses that he, too, hates his master, and they plot to have him shanghaied. Harper is drowned. Mercedes and her daughter are reunited. Marie Empress, Philo McCullough, Makato Inokuchi, Lucile Pietz, Molly McConnell and Bert Ensminger are in the cast.

"Otto, the Sleuth." (Lubin. Mon., July 10.)—A Davy Don comedy, burlesquing the detective picture. Trick photography and various mechanical applicances for fooling the spectator are employed to an effect that is slightly humorous. The picture is, however, too utterly foolish to be taken even as a comedy. Edwin McKim directed from a story by Marie Foster. Patsy De Forest, Bernard Siegel and Florence Williams support Don.

"The Half Wit." (Lubin. Two reels. Tues., July 11.)—A western Lubin presenting a story in which the Black Hand figures prominently. Ned, a half-witted member of a gang of toughs, saves the daughter of a man marked by the Mafia from its clutches. He regains his whole senses after an operation. The atmosphere of this drama is exceptionally good, the acting commendable, while the story is stirring enough in places to maintain a good degree of suspense throughout. L. C. Shumway, Helen Eddy, George Routh, Melvin Mayo and Jay Morely appeared under Leon Kent's direction. The scenario was by Arthur Peterman.

"Expiation." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., July 13.)—A picture of this quality is pretty sure of sending patrons away pleased. The story is terribly weak in spots, but the good production saves it. In some places it is a slow moving affair, but on the other hand, there are times when the intensity of the picture reaches extraordinary heights. The story deals with the attempt of a young man to find his father, who was not his mother's legitimate husband. He succeeds and finds him the guardian of the girl he loves. The father after a terrible ordeal with himself offers himself to the mother and she accepts, which after all is not at all according to reason. Frances Greene wrote the scenario and George Terwilliger directed Octavia Handworth, E. K. Lincoln, Clarence Elmer and Margaret Adair.

"Hang On Cowboy." (Lubin. Sat., July 15.)—A Romaine Fielding picture of the humorous sort. It depicts in great detail the manner in which a cowboy put to rout a city man intent on stealing his girl. June Daye, Jack Lawton, Eleanor Mason and Arthur Minium are the principals. Fielding wrote and directed besides appearing in the leading part.

"The Private Banker." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., July 17.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Shooting Up the Movies." (Selig. Two reels. Sat., July 22.)—This is quite the best Tom Mix Western the writer has seen, and he has viewed a lot of them. In plot, business, acting and in every other respect, it is a picture that should be popular in any house. The scenes showing a moving picture outfit at work will interest the curious fans, and the riding, roping and shooting tricks are loaded with thrills. Supporting Tom Mix are Victoria Forde, Sid Jordan, Howard Farrell, Hazel Daly and Joe Ryan.

Tom Travers, a cowboy, rides up to a moving picture troupe on location, and seeing the villain riding away with the heroine, dashes after the pair, knocks down the heavy, and rescues the girl, the daughter of a local sheriff. The director hires Tom to take Western leads, but when the script calls for Tom's marriage to the heroine, the sheriff interferes. Tom is so mad that he shoots up the town, driving away all the desperadoes. This pleases the sheriff, and he consents to let Tom marry his daughter in reality.

"Aunt Bill." (Vim. Thurs., July 20.)—Not shown for review. The story tells how the club friends of Plump and Runt play a practical joke, by delegating one of their number to dress up as the expected wealthy aunt of the two. Aunty arrives, and is inadvertently subjected to rough treatment by Plump and Runt, who discover the plot. Babe Hardy, Billy Ruge, Flo McLoughlin, Ray Godfrey, Bert Tracey and Billie Bletcher are in the cast.

"Help! Help!" (Vim. Fri., July 21.)—Not shown for review. The story follows: Pokes makes himself a hero in Ethel's eyes by frightening away Robin, a much smaller man. Then Jabbs takes Ethel away from Pokes. Pokes, for revenge, hires a strong-arm agent to give Jabbs a beating, telling him to bruise the man with the little mustache. Robin also hires the agency to beat up Pokes, and Jabbs is sent. There is a three cornered fight, Pokes winning. But Ethel decides she likes Robin better anyway. Robert Burns, Walter Stull, Ethel Burton, Robin Williamson and Harry Naughton head the cast.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Two Slips and a Miss." (Beauty. Wed., July 12.)—A lively comedy, detailing the adventures of Noah Goode, who became involved with an actress, and aroused his wife's suspicion. The bookkeeper, who had been thrown over by the same actress, assists the wife in tracking Noah and the girl to the beach, and there finding the girl only wants Noah's property, and not his affections, they give her the check for the valuables he has checked at the bathing pavilion, and she escapes with them. In the cast are John Sheehan, Carol Halloway, John Steppling and Meta Drinkwitz.

"The Rummy Act of Omar K. M." (Beauty. Sun., July 16.)—A comedy of modern marital difficulties bent around passages from the Rubaiyat. Omar K. M. neglects his wife for the sake of another girl, hires an automobile and takes his new flame for a picnic. Mrs. K. M. gets on the trail, and follows to the woods, where she finds the driver washing down an empty car; the driver directs her to a cottage in the woods, and on crawling in she finds Omar and the girl; the "jug of wine" is broken over Omar's head, and he wakes up in his own back yard; a blow from a broomstick has brought him back from a dream of some 916 years ago. Orral Humphrey, Jo Taylor, Leo Banks, Margaret Nichols and Jow Massey are in the cast.

"The Dancer." (American. Two reels. Mon., July 17.)—Not shown for review.

"In the Land of the Tortilla." (Beauty. Wed., July 19.)—Not shown for review.

"The Dyspeptic." (Mustang. Two reels. Fri., July 21.)—Not shown for review.

"The Ostrich Tip." (Centaur. Two reels. Sat., July 22.)—Not shown for review.

"A Studio Satire." (Beauty. Sun., July 23.)—Not shown for review.

Reel Life, No. 12. (Gaumont. Sun., July 23.)—International Correspondence Schools of Scranton, Pa., form one of the three divisions of this number, under the title of "A Day in the World's Schoolhouse." "Anthracite Coal" follows, which should prove unusually engrossing, if the reported shortage of coal materializes during the coming winter. "The Breeding of Sea-Gulls," is the last number of the pictorial magazine, and is a thorough "handbook" in pictures on the subject, even though breeding sea-gulls is not yet a recognized society recreation.

"See America First"—Greater National Park-Gaumont. Wed., July 26.)—Less well known than its sister parks, Yellowstone and Yosemite, the Crater Lake park at Crater Lake, Ore., is well worth the footage devoted to it by the Gaumont photographers. Scenic beauties unexcelled, follow one another in rapid succession during this split reel. The lake, located in an extinct volcanic crater, will fully repay an evening's visit through the theatre. On the same reel with Harry Palmer's Kartoon Komics. These have always spoken for themselves, and will continue to do so. Suffice it to say that they rank high among the cartoon creations of the screen.

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC

"Nutty News." (Goldberg. Split reel.)—Cartoonist Rube Goldberg burlesques this country's mania for writing notes, satirizes the news weekly's average small-town fire scene and gives some natural history intelligence in his own inimitable style in this half reel. The ideas are all exceptionally funny, although the mechanical end of the cartooning is not very good. On the same reel with "The Porcupine."

"The Porcupine." (Pathe. Split reel.)—An educational in color giving interesting information concerning the porcupine and showing the animal in various of its habits. On the same reel with "Nutty News."

"Across the Malay Archipelago." (Pathe. Split reel.)—Showing sports, customs and scenery of this Indian country. A fine scenic and topical combined. Should be a good filler. On the same reel with "The Kinkajou."

"The Kinkajou." (Pathe. Split reel.)—This animal, small in size, resembling a musk rat to a certain extent, has been caught by the camera foraging and climbing. It makes an interesting half reel, for few people are aware of the existence of such an animal. On the same reel with "Across the Malay Archipelago."

"Our Lobster Supply." (Pathe. Split reel.)—The planting and hatching of lobster eggs and the breeding of the young animals are here shown in detail. A fairly good educational. On the same reel with "Perak, the Protected."

"Perak, the Protected." (Pathe. Split reel.)—More scenes from Malay. Buildings and the style of ancient architecture prevalent in this place are shown. On the same reel with "Our Lobster Supply."

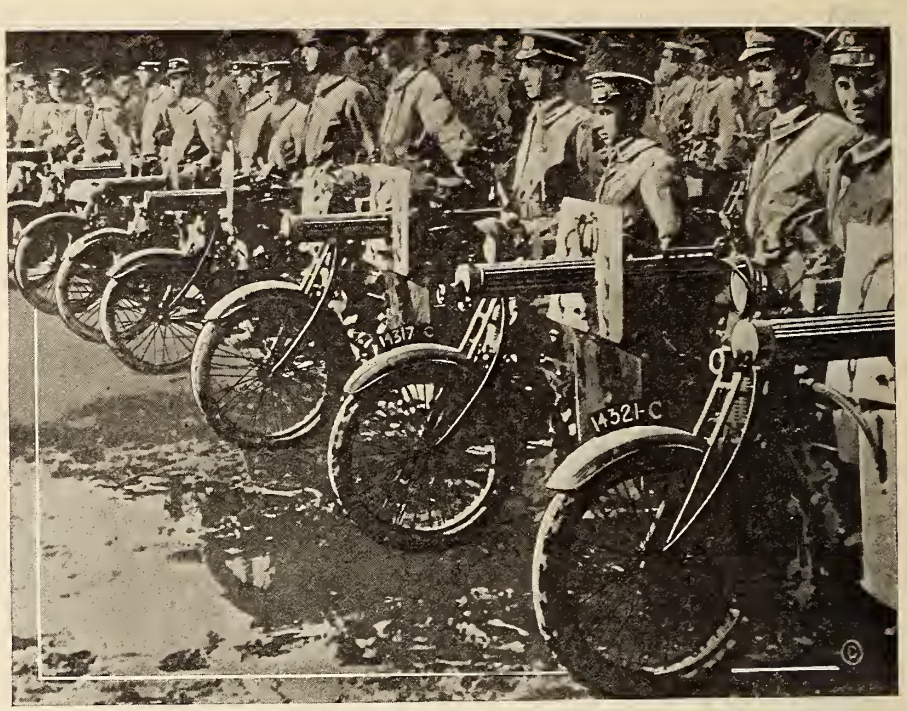
"Luke's Washful Waiting." (Phunphilm. One reel.)—Slapstick action is here staged in a laundry and a tailor store adjoining one another. There have been better Lonesome Luke comedies, although this one manages to create a deal of laughter. Harold Lloyd and Beebe Daniels are the principals.

"The Cave of Despair." (Pathe. Two reels.)—This is the nineteenth episode of "The Iron Claw," and as the next will conclude the series, it all but reveals Davey as the mysterious Laughing Mask. The action is very exciting, a great part of it taking place in an underground cave.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"The Seekers." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., July 17.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of July 8.

"The Crystal's Warning." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., July 18.)—A mystery drama which has the element of mystery in abundance and little else besides. The story fails to carry out its original purpose, the bringing of a spy to justice, while the atmosphere of diplomacy striven for in the club and other scenes has not been obtained. The cast includes Hobart Henley, Clara Byers, Sidney Bracey and Sydell Dowling. Robert Hill directed from a scenario by J. Grubb Alexander.



"The Gentle Art of Burglary." (Victor. Tues., July 18.)—An unexpected visitor, a girl fulfilling a bet and a burglar have a high old time in a vacant house as none of the three are acquainted with one another. A lively little comedy is this, quite spicy in several places but inoffensive. William Garwood and Violet Mersereau are the leads.

"The Garden of Shadows." (Laemmle. Two reels. Wed., July 19.)—The divorced husband and wife are reunited through the death of their child. We have the happy ending when the spirit of the child decides to come back to the body after its absence has performed the reunion. This ending is ridiculous and weakens the entire picture. The acting has great room for improvement. The man who causes the break between husband and wife is too much of a juvenile while his features are decidedly weak. The child also breaths obviously when it is supposedly dead. Mary Fuller is the wife.

"A Bold Bad Breeze." (L-Ko. Wed., July 19.)—A heavy wind is the feature in this comedy. It blows Billie Ritchie, bed and all into a married woman's room and this leads to another house top affair with the players falling and hanging all over the edges of the roof. The windy scenes are well done and there is much that is funny in the reel although there is also a little that is too shady for whole hearted enjoyment. Lucille Huton and Bill Bevan are other players.

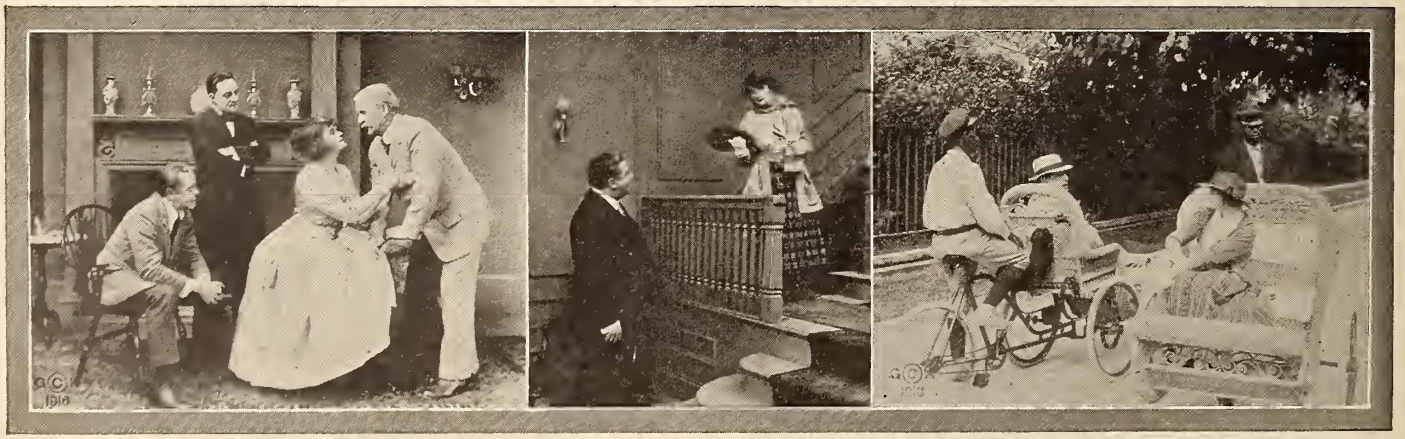
"His Own Story." (Big U. Thurs., July 20.)—King Baggot sitting in the Screen Club tells a director a story. It is how he and Bill Bailey were captured by coast pirates and escaped after much trouble. The director who had asked for a good story pays Baggot fifty dollars for it. The question that this picture presents is: Was the director kidding Baggot, or is the picture intended to kid the public?

"Le Blount Goes Home." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., July 21.)—Herbert Rawlinson and Agnes Vernon renounce comedy for a time to take up melodrama in this picture. Rawlinson, in prison on a false charge, dreams of escaping and of the dire consequences, several in number, that then befall himself and his family. He awakes and a confession of the real culprit frees him. An intense picture written by Harvey Gates and produced by William Worthington. William Quinn and Zoe Durae (formerly Beck) are others in the cast.

A Scene from "How Britain Prepared," Now Offered on the State Rights Basis by Patriot Film

"The Come On." (Nestor. Fri., July 21.)—Crooks pick an easy mark in an awkward appearing country girl and to enable her to get her inheritance so that they in turn may get it they give her five thousand dollars. What is their surprise to learn later that she has double crossed them and made off with the five thousand. An excellent comedy, enlightened all the way through by the eccentric character work of Jane Gail and carrying a strong surprise at the end. Matt Moore produced it from a scenario by John Brownell.

"Midwinter Madness." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., July 22.)—The chief feature of this picture is its delightful snow scenes, while the story, a familiar version of the eternal triangle, manages to interest with the assistance of these scenes. Winthrop Kelley wrote and directed, while Stanley Walpole, Dorothy Phillips and Charles Ogle do creditable work in the principal roles.



"A Social Slave." (Laemmle. Sat., July 22.)—This drama written and produced by Jacques Jaccard is typical of that author-director's work. It is a pathetic tale, vivid and of the sort that hits tradition squarely in the face. The business man is burdened with an unsympathetic, false and extravagant wife. He loves his stenographer and the picture closes with his decision to marry her after he has been able to divorce his wife. G. Raymond Nye, Jessie Arnold and Roberta Wilson are the leads. Miss Wilson is rapidly coming to the foreground as a real actress.

"She Was Some Vampire." (Joker. Sat., July 22.)—A good burlesque on the general run of vampire picture with Gale Henry interpreting the vampire role with a fine sense of comedy. William Franey as one of her victims adds more excellent comedy of his own particular sort to the reel; while others are Milburn Moranti, Charles Conklin and Lillian Peacock. Allen Curtis wrote and directed.

"Branscombe's Pal." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., July 23.)—The girl's brother is wayward and her lover watches over him and even goes so far as to take his blame for cheating at cards. Happily the girl's eyes are opened by a collie dog, Branscombe's pal. This drama made by the London Film Company is told extremely well and the presence of the dog, a really clever canine, adds novelty and livens the action. The players are competent and the staging good.

"Spring Fever." (L-Ko. Sun., July 23.)—When a company such as the L-Ko, can and do turn out excellent comedies, one is forced to wonder why they should make such a poor picture as "Spring Fever." There is no story whatsoever and the business is rather poor, some of the tricks being easily distinguished. Billy Armstrong, Louise Orth and Gertrude Selby are the principals.

"Peg o' the Ring." (Universal Special Feature. Eleventh Episode. Two reels. Week of July 10.)—"The Stampede" follows along lines similiar to the other episodes with the exception that this time Peg is carried away on a tramp steamer by sailors, disinterested in the main conflict between the forces of Mrs. Lund and her son. Dr. Lund, Jr., pursues the ship and with the aid of one other man has the sailors at the point of a gun when the episode closes.

MONARCH

Keep your eye on this fellow—Whenever you see him you will know there's SOMETHING DOING WORTH WHILE—

Pictures with a punch—pictures that pull—good pictures, new conceptions, attractions just a little different from the common run—short features, mostly comedy —the kind of pictures that fit into your daily program like a hand in a glove.

Reasonable priced films that you can run profitably at popular prices—the reliable kind of service that will cause the play goers of your community to say of your show place, "let's go there—they're always good!"

Try it out on this one.

Now Ready for Release

GENE GREENE

(Everybody knows Gene)

Supported by a company of capable talent including popular comedy stars, in a screaming farce of timely interest—

Raising An Army

Gene reads and worries about his country's unpreparedness, goes to sleep and in his dreams raises an army—into which is introduced the funniest medley of misfits ever —"soldiers" of all nations, ancient and modern—big and little, fat and skinny—recruited by the "General" from here, there, everywhere.

Gene's dream is a scream—clean, refined, without offense to anyone and just one gale of hilarity from start to finish. It will laugh streams of coin into your box office and be the hit of the week in your community.

Get it while it's new—Through your Exchange—don't delay—it's too good to let the other fellow have it first.

Watch for Monarch Films—they will send your patrons out with "that satisfied feeling that brings 'em back!"

Call on us at the Coliseum.

Adjutant General of the Kaiser

Certifies this "WAR REVIEW" in 5 Reels as the ONLY OFFICIAL FILM with ORIGINAL NEGATIVE IN AMERICA

English translation of the original document shown in the film

Your most welcome contribution of ten thousand marks ($2,500) and numerous other contribution for the Deutschwehr of Potsdam have been received with very great appreciation. Your Mr. Pigorsch had occasion to hand over your contribution to the Leader of the Deutschwehr Potsdam in the presence of the Lord Mayor Vossberg at a festivity held for the benefit of the Deutschwehr in Potsdam.

I sincerely hope that these war pictures will create a medium whereby the American public will be brought closer to the sufferings wrought by this terrible conflict and further help you to relieve to some extent the distress of the innocent victims of this war.

Most respectfully yours,
The "Deutschwehr" E. V.

High Protector and Honorary President.

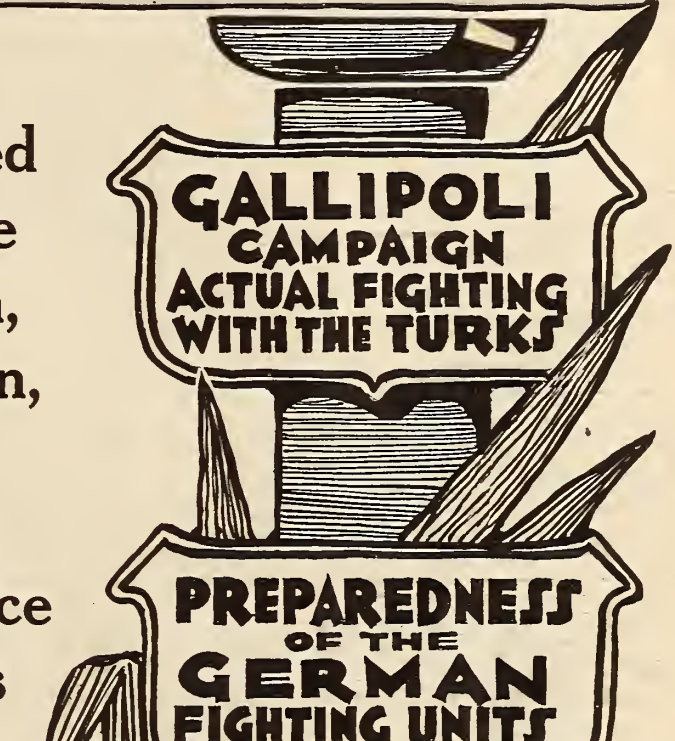
Dear Mr. Westebbe:-

You asked me for some expression regarding the part of the Deutschwehr Films we have presented at the Strand Theatre. I can only say that we are more than pleased with them, and the part shown by us was extremely instructive and interesting and a valuable asset to the week's program in which they were incorporated.



With best wishes, I remain

The "MARTIN" ROTARY CONVERTER

FOR REAL "SUN-LIT" PICTURES

AND PERFECT REEL DISSOLVING
The machine they are all talking about

The Martin Rotary Converter is positively the only machine on the market which does not require a compensarc for emergency purposes. Its emergency panel provides A. C. for the lamps should the rotary for any reason become temporarily out of service. The elimination of this extra expense makes the Martin the cheapest machine to install.

Consider this fact when purchasing a converter—It will save you money.

Over One Hundred Martin Rotary Converters installed in Chicago alone. Write for list of theatres using them.

Guide to Accessory Displays at Chicago Convention

List Is Compiled for Benefit of Visiting Exhibitors in Order That They May More Readily Locate the Equipment Which They Desire—The Information Is Furnished by Various Manufacturers Whose Goods Are on Exhibition Either in Their Own Booths or in Connection with Supply Dealers

THE following has been compiled from information sent in by the various manufacturers whose goods are on exhibition either in their own booths or in connection with some dealer handling general supplies. This has been compiled for the benefit of visiting exhibitors in order that they may more readily locate the equipment which they desire.

Apparatus for Transforming A C to D C Current

WESTINGHOUSE ELECTRIC & MFG. COMPANY, PITTSBURGH are exhibiting in their own booth a motor generator set especially adapted for motion picture work. This set is furnished with a ballast resistor with which the arc is controlled. The method of warming up a second picture machine off this set while operating the first machine, showing a very good fade-in effect is also being demonstrated. The Venpura outfit and a Sirotto blower for ventilating motion picture booths and motion picture houses is also on exhibition.

GENERAL ELECTRC COMPANY will demonstrate the latest designed A C to D C compensarc, A C compensarc and motion picture rectifier.

HALLBERG 20TH CENTURY MOTOR GENERATOR—see supply dealers E. E. Fulton Company and Kleine Optical Company.

NORTHWESTERN ELECTRIC COMPANY, Chicago, will have on exhibition the Martin Rotary Converter. This will be in actual operation in the Coliseum. See supply dealers—Mid West Theatre Supply Company.

Costumes

MILLER THEATRICAL COSTUMIER, PHILADELPHIA—A. W. McClellan is representing this company at the convention and is in a position to show all classes of costumes for actors and actresses, as well as various uniforms for theatre employees.

Carbons

NATIONAL CARBON COMPANY, Cleveland, at their own booth show their special silver tip D C negative projector carbon, in the sale of which they are meeting with considerable success. These small negative carbons will be shown in conjunction with a special adopter for use in the present lamp. These adopters in bronze will be furnished free of charge to users of the carbons.

SPEER CARBON COMPANY, St. Mary's Pa. These carbons of various sizes and shapes will be on exhibition in the Coliseum. See supply dealers E. E. Fulton Company and Kleine Optical Company, who are distributors for the Chicago territory.

Fans

TYPHOON FAN COMPANY, New York City, in their own booth will display their various ventilating systems, which include not only air exhausts for the theatre itself but also for the projection room.

Musical Instruments

BARTOLA MUSICAL INSTRUMENT COMPANY, Oshkosh, Wis., in their own booth are exhibiting the various types of musical instruments appropriate for use in motion picture theatres, giving a continuous demonstration and showing their ability to fill any requirements.

J. P. SEEBURG PIANO COMPANY, Chicago, in their own booth exhibit four styles of Seeburg Pipe Organs and self-playing orchestras. One of these instruments will be of an entirely new type and will be shown for the first time to the public.

Projection Machines

BAIRD MOTON PICTURE MACHINE COMPANY, New York City. A demonstration of this machine is given at the convention. See supply dealers—Mid West Theatre Supply Company.

PRECISION MACHINE COMPANY, New York City, in their own booth, under the supervision of L. W. Atwater, give a complete demonstration of their latest outfit and attachments, including an arc conroller attachment.

NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY, New York City, in their own booth will show their 6A, 6B and Road Machine; also Current Saving Devices, Intermittent Movement and other mechanisms for the booth, as well as special equipment.

ENTERPRISE OPTICAL MFG. COMPANY, Chicago, in their own booth exhibit the latest Motiograph Projection Machine, showing hand driven and motor driven equipments, as well as equipments with special enclosures. Messrs. McAuley, Hahn, Blakely and Ferney, as well as O. F. Spahr, manager, will be on hand. A. C. Roebuck, president of the company, is also planning to spend considerable time at the convention.

Screens

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY, St. Louis, Mo., exhibit an especially constructed Minusa Gold Fibre Screen. Descriptive literature relative to their product will also be distributed. See supply dealers, E. E. Fulton Company, Kleine Optical Company and Amusement Supply Company.

GOLD KING SCREEN COMPANY, Altus, Okla., are represented by President Jones, special representative E. W. Green and R. B. Morris. Complete demonstration of the value of the Gold King screen as a projection surface will be made for the benefit of all exhibitors.

Stage Settings

SOSMAN AND LANDIS COMPANY, Chicago, in their own booth have erected a miniature stage with complete settings. This will give all visiting exhibitors an idea as to how the stage should be properly equipped in order that the pictures may be shown to the best possible advantage. Hopeful suggestions and ideas to suit individual conditions will also be given.

Special Show Room Displays

The following companies have sent word that they are preparing special exhibitions of their product in their showrooms located in Chicago, and extend the visiting exhibitors a cordial invitation to visit their plant during the convention.

THE MARQUETTE PIANO COMPANY—B. C. Waters, vice president, 1608 Canal street, Chicago.

AMERICAN SEATING COMPANY—G. V. Bugner, 14 E. Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

UNIVERSAL CAMERA COMPANY, 559 W. Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

RUDOLPH WURLITZER COMPANY, 329 So. Wabash avenue, Chicago.

W. W. KIMBALL COMPANY, S. W. corner Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard, Chicago.

Supply Houses

AMUSEMENT SUPPLY COMPANY, Chicago, will have on exhibition at their own booth Powers, Simplex, Motiograph machines, Mercury Arc Rectifiers, Hertner Transverters and National carbons, as well as Minusa screens, and other equipment which should not be overlooked.

EXHIBITORS SUPPLY COMPANY, Chicago, in their own booth will show Simplex and Powers machines, Hertner Transverters, fans and general supplies of interest to all theatre owners.

E. E. FULTON, COMPANY, Chicago, have on exhibition in their own booth all standard projection machines, together with Minusa screens, Speedco Arc Controllers, Compensarcs, Mercury Arc Rectifiers, Speer carbons, Radio Mat Slides and other equipment necessary for the proper projection of pictures on the screen.

KLEINE OPTICAL COMPANY, Chicago, will have a special display of projection machines from the year 1896 to 1916 inclusive, showing various models which will demonstrate the evolution of the art of projection. This idea was originated by George Kleine personally. The booth will be under the supervision of Mr. Green, the new manager of the company.

MID WEST THEATRE SUPPLY COMPANY, Chicago, in their own booth will feature the Baird Motion Picture machine for which they are distributors in the Chicago territory. They will also show the Martin Rotary Converter and a dissolver, as well as spotlight made by the Chicago Stage Lighting Company. This exhibit will be in charge of Jack Williams, one of the best known operators in the Middle West.

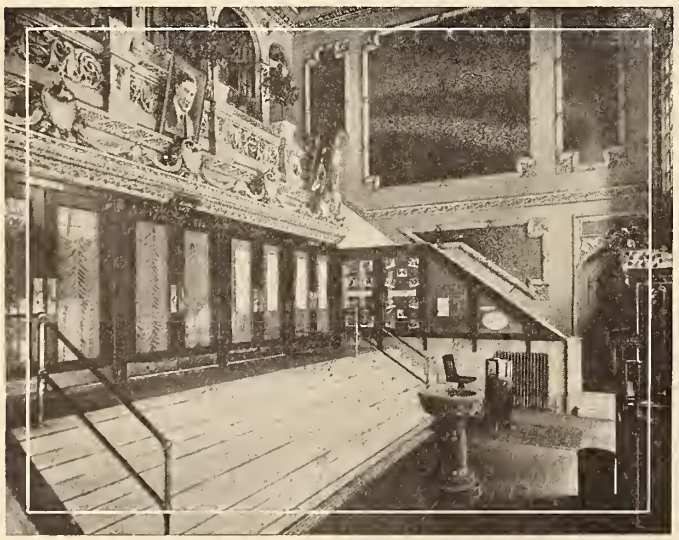
Ticket Selling Machines

AUTOMATIC TICKET SELLING AND CASH REGISTER COMPANY, New York City, in their own booth are demonstrating their four types of machines, all electrically operated. These machines sell from one to four tickets so that theatres having up to four different prices of admission can use them.

NATIONAL CASH REGISTER COMPANY, Dayton, Ohio, in their own booth will have on exhibition their latest ticket printing registers. These registers not only print the date, price and name of theatre on the front and back of the tickets but will record the number of tickets sold, the total amount of the money received and will automatically issue the tickets. Particular stress will be laid on the 1916 model ticket printing register which prints two color tickets, that is, it will issue a ticket of different color for each of two prices.

HERTNER ELECTRIC AND MFG. COMPANY, Cleveland, have on exhibition their transverter. See supply dealers, Amusement Supply Company and Exhibitors Supply Company.

Victoria, Philadelphia, is an Ornate Structure

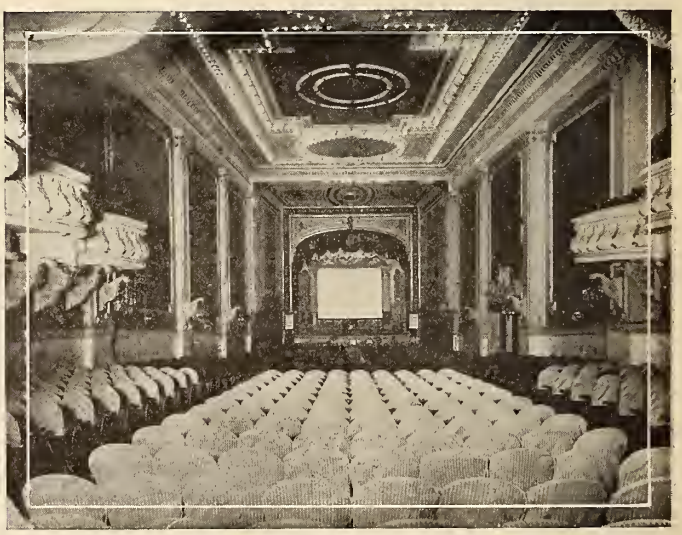


Situated in the Heart of the City, It Commands a Large Daytime Patronage in Addition to Its Evening Clientele—Lobby of Unusual Size Makes Possible Striking Display of One and Six Sheet Posters in Gilt Frames—A Ten Thousand Dollar Kimball Organ Is Part of the Equipment

IN the rehabilitation of all the theatres of the Central Market Street Company, the Victoria at Ninth and Market streets, Philadelphia, easily takes the palm.

Situated in the heart of the city in the midst of the best shopping district, this house commands a large daytime patronage in addition to its evening clientele. It is therefore open from 9 A. M. until 11.15 P. M., running a continuous performance. A big feature, comedy, scenics and educationals make up the two-hour program. Changes are usually made twice a week.

Building of Stone and Concrete



The theatre is ornate in appearance with a large lobby and foyer, situated several feet above the street level, giving chance for a good display of the one and six-sheet posters in gilt frames which adorn walls and floor.

Foyer of the Victoria, Philadelphia

The building is of stone and concrete, the ticket booth and lobby being decorated in white and gold. Carrying this color scheme all through, the panels inside and out are in tones of yellow from a pale gold to a deep orange, a unique but artistic effect. The doorkeepers and ushers wear uniforms in harmony, the men in brown suits with gold braid, the girls in brown costumes with gold trimmings. This is, however, discarded in summer for all white, with black ties. The lobby as well as theatre has Italian marble wainscoting and tiled floors. In the center of the lobby is a handsome stone drinking fountain inlaid with mosaic. White and gold tubs containing myriads of varicolored electric bulbs simulating flowers adorn a balcony over the main entrance.

Fresh air is blown in for the ventilation which comes from the ceiling, while a number of exhaust fans add to the comfort. The 1,000 seats are large and upholstered in brown leather. Ten loges fitted up with large armchairs, each seating six people, are an unusual feature. The stage, a relic of the vaudeville days of the theatre, is tastefully arranged with a garden set and electrical effects.

A Glimpse of the Auditorium of the Victoria, Philadelphia

A Simplex machine with a 140-foot throw is used and a Mirroroid screen. Four operators handle the projection. The lighting is a combination system. It takes twenty-three employees all told to handle the large business of the house.

All daily papers are used in advertising the attractions, besides a large mailing list. Neat programs contain besides the list of

WITH this issue of the "News," Mr. Ira G. Sherman will assume the responsibilities of the Projection Department.

For fifteen years Mr. Sherman has studied projection from a practical viewpoint. He does not claim to be a "Projection Engineer." He is merely a man of wide experience, capable of making helpful suggestions to those who need them.

Any operator, manager or theatre owner who wants to receive the opinion of a practical man may write Mr. Sherman. He is on the permanent staff of the "News" to give help and advice to all, without charge.

The increasing success of the department depends upon Mr. Sherman's support, that is, cooperation from you, in the form of letters, questions and the interchange of ideas.

Mr. Sherman is Past President of Local 384, I. A. T. S. E., and a strong advocate of better operating conditions and better projection. He is here to add his strength to the fight which will increase the popularity of motion pictures in the public eye by helping the operator, the man who can make or break any show.

Questions Answered

Edited by Ira G. Sherman, Past President, Local No. 384, I. A. T. S. E.

Who will answer all questions you may send in, no matter how simple or difficult

To the Motion Picture Operator

GREETING: In this my introduction as editor of the projection department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, I desire to give you a brief outline of the policy I intend to pursue in conducting this department.

First: I am for the "organized" operator, the men who are trying to better their condition by regulating working hours and salaries.

Second: All operators, whether organized or not, are invited to contribute any articles that will assist in the organizing of the unorganized, and help place the operators, as a whole, upon a higher plane than they have ever enjoyed in the history of the motion picture industry.

Third: I do not make any claim to being an expert, nor do I think that I cannot be helped, or that I am past the point where I too can learn, for were I to make any such claim it would be an expression of ego for which there could be no excuse. A man's success in life depends to a great extent upon the confidence he has in himself, and I am confident that with the assistance of the many operators in the country I can make the projection department of the NEWS the "one best bet." I do not expect to do this in a day, a month, or a year, for I realize only too well the task that confronts me, but I will do it, with your assistance.

Fourth: I am going to try and express my meaning clearly, precisely and in understandable language, avoiding as far as possible all technicalities (which are as Greek to the average operator), and substituting plain-every-day language that the operator can and will understand.

INTERMITTENT MOVEMENTS

In a separate article we will attempt to describe the various types of intermittent movements, and their relative value toward perfect projection. The first will be that which is known as the Geneva movement.

RESURRECTED FROM THE DEAD

Our contemporary, the World, in its issue of July 1 reprints a letter from D. W. Griffith, the leading producer of American photo-plays, in which Mr. Griffith instructs the New York office of the Mutual Film Corporation as to the speed in which a certain feature should be run. In part the letter was as follows:

"I cannot overestimate the importance of seeing to it that this picture is run at very nearly its proper schedule. A matter of five minutes slower or faster for the entire picture might not affect it perceptibly one way or the other, but if the entire number of reels should be strung out for ten or fifteen minutes overtime the picture would be absolutely ruined. . . . Often the exhibitor wants to lengthen a show that he may not have to put another picture on, with the result that he absolutely ruins the picture, and succeeds not only in dragging the audience out, but keeps them out of his theatre for good. . . . I should think it would be a good plan for the man in charge of the exhibition of pictures which require care to know enough about projection to be able to put on a show himself. In many instances, thousands of dollars have been spent for theatres, for the production of motion pictures, and for the exhibition of motion pictures which were absolutely wasted. The location of the theatre has been blamed when the real fault lay in the projection of the picture."

Editor's Note.—I am republishing this article for the reason that it may cause those exhibitors who pay absolutely no attention to the proper speed at which their films are run, to sit up and take notice. When a man, of Mr. Griffith's recognized ability makes such a statement, there must be something in it, something that other exhibitors should heed. Too much publicity cannot be given to such letters as these, but I do not forget that this letter was first published in the Morning Telegraph, later in the I. A. Journal, in the December issue I think, and more recently the Board of Trade Journal during the recent exposition.

Give credit where credit is due, brother.

NEW LENS CLEANER

Krystalline is the name of a new lens cleaner being marketed by the Williams, Brown and Earle Company, Philadelphia. It is a whitish paste put up in tubes, and retails for fifteen cents per tube. The claim of the makers is, that it will remove all dirt, finger marks and grease from the surface of the lens, leaving a most brilliant polish. The sample which I received from them certainly did all that was claimed for it, and if used according to their directions operators will find that it will improve the definition of the picture to a remarkable degree.

WILLIAMS, BROWN AND EARLE MOVE TO "FILM ROW"

The Williams, Brown and Earle Company, one of the largest supply houses in Philadelphia, will move to 1208 Vine street, where it has leased a building for the exclusive use of its moving picture patrons. This company is the sole distributors of the motiograph projector, the transverter, and the speedco arc controller. The report large sales for their "safety fireproof rewind," which has been approved by the fire underwriters of Chicago and other cities. The chief recommendation of this rewind is that it is necessary for the doors of the magazines to be closed before it will operate, and thereby eliminate the possibility of fires through the negligence of the operator.

CALEHUFF SUPPLY COMPANY EQUIPS CASINO THEATRE

The Casino theatre, Cape May, N. J., through the Calehuff Supply Company, of Philadelphia, has installed two Simplex projectors and a Minusa screen. It also installed projecting machines in the Locust theatre, Philadelphia, and reports business as being very good. Preparations are under way for its removal to larger quarters on Vine street, the mecca of Philadelphia filmdom.

The Toronto Operators Union No. 173, have arranged to conduct an advertising campaign in The Bulletin, a Canadian paper, which reaches all the theatre men in Canada. Mr. MacMahon, the moving spirit in this new idea has made arrangements with W. A. Bach, the managing editor of the paper, to run an operators' column in The Bulletin, which will be increased as the need for it grows. This will be the first operators' section to be conducted in a Canadian movie paper.

Overcoming the Waste in the Operating Room

Who Is to Blame? The Exhibitor as Well as the Operator, in Many Cases—A Manager Might Spend Thousands of Dollars in Erecting an Up-to-Date Theatre and Then Spoil Everything by Placing the Equipment in the Hands of an Incompetent Man

MUCH has been said and written concerning "waste" in the operating room but no one has taken into consideration just how much waste there really is, or who is to blame for it.

The blame, if blame there be, rests upon the shoulders of either the exhibitor or the operator. Which? The manager will undoubtedly say the operator; while the operator will be equally insistent that it is the exhibitor who is to blame, and in many instances the operator is right. Take for example, an exhibitor who will spend thousands of dollars in erecting and equipping an up-to-date motion picture theatre and then "spill the beans" by placing that equipment in the hands of an unreliable, incompetent, and irresponsible operator, simply because a first-class man would demand a salary commensurate with the labors performed and the results obtained.

Let me say right here, that whether you believe it or not, Mr. Manager, the time is not far distant when the motion picture operator will not only, demand, but will get the salary to which he is entitled.

"Waste" Often Due to Cheeseparing Methods

It is an old and trite saying; "The cheapest is the dearest in the end." This holds good in the operation of a motion picture theatre as well as in other things, for the success of the motion picture theatre to a great extent depends upon the ability of one man, the operator, for he can make or unmake the most expensive film production ever manufactured, thereby setting at naught the efforts of author, producer, actor, and director. But if he is a careful, competent man, he will by his work, enhance the efforts of all who were instrumental in the making of our present-day film productions.

Instead of saying that the "waste" is due to the "don't care" attitude of the operator, why not say that it is because of the great desire of the exhibitor to keep expenses down to a minimum, at the greater expense of seeing his patrons gradually draw away and attend those theatres where they are sure to see good projection, and with that it necessarily follows they will also see "good pictures."

It is not necessary for a film to be "first run" to qualify as a good picture, for there are numberless pictures; some of them as old as two and three years, and yet they are still good pictures, by reason of the fact that they have received the proper care. It is a sad commentary upon our film exchanges and their "don't care" attitude, that a film scarcely two weeks old will look as though it had been in constant service for several months, but the fact remains that it is so, and one of the greatest evils that exist today is lack of inspection—proper inspection—by the various film exchanges.

The exchange managers say that it is impossible for them to properly inspect film in the limited time they have for doing so, owing to the loss of time in shipments, but when we think of the enormous sums of money exhibitors are forced to pay for some of the so-called "features" we wonder why it would not be possible for the exchange to secure a few more prints and thus obviate the complaint; and a just complaint, of those exhibitors who are willing to pay the price and who quite naturally expect to receive the goods.

To be honest and impartial, I will admit that there are a number of operators who do maintain a don't care attitude, in that they are not as careful of other people's property as they might be, but heaven be praised, their tribe is fast becoming extinct. Then too, conditions under which some operators are forced to work are not conducive to their best efforts and so afford them an excuse for being less careful than they otherwise might be.

Would Displace Projector by Sneezing, Booth so Small

I have seen operating rooms (?) that were of such small dimensions that when the operator took his position at the machine he would find it difficult to sneeze without displacing the projector from its position, unless it were securely fastened to the floor of the "room."

You may perhaps think I am exaggerating, but I assure you it is the truth, and these places are not more than fifty miles from New York City. Just imagine if you can, an exhibitor who will ask an operator to work under such a handicap, and then expect perfect results, for which he is willing to pay the munificent sum of twelve dollars per week, seven days constituting a week's work. Many writers have said: "Pay operators what they are worth." In the vernacular of the street, "it listens well," but is there any sum of money great enough to compensate the operator who is asked to labor under the conditions as outlined above?

It is also true that too little consideration is given by the architect, to the practical location of the operating room, but that too, is to a certain extent being overcome.

But to return to the "waste." It is not of the film and its abuse that we are so greatly interested, for we believe that is a matter for the manufacturer and the exchange manager to take up; it is their property and they should safeguard it. We do not feel constrained to fight the battles of the film exchanges as long as they themselves remain in a comatose state, and we are not going to, but, if they are desirous of overcoming the evil we will co-operate with them to the fullest extent.

Recently I visited a theatre where the operator was throwing away as of no further use, carbons that were nearly six inches in length, and with the price of carbons as they are today, you will realize the enormous waste there is in this one particular. This is written in all fairness, but it proves that there is a certain amount of truth in the contention that operators maintain a "don't care" attitude.

If the operator had suggested to his employer that he, the employer, purchase a set of carbon economizers as illustrated in Fig. 3, and explained to him how necessary it was for him to have them, in order to effect the saving, we believe it would indeed be a most short-sighted manager who would refuse to purchase them. These economizers come in all sizes to accomodate the various sized carbons, and are procurable from any supply house or equipment company. They are of so small a cost as to quickly pay for themselves by the saving effected. It is to the interest of the exhibitor to have one or more of these sets on hand.

Size of Carbons Usually Thrown Away

Fig. 1 illustrates the size carbon usually thrown away; fig. 2 the possible consumption of carbon by the use of the economizer, fig. 3. You will notice that the carbon is almost entirely consumed, and you can readily figure the saving effected by their use. Then too there are too many operators who are using carbons that are not of the proper size to eliminate waste; operators who desire to be efficient and economical, but who are handicapped by "not knowing how." That will be one of the functions of this department; to tell them how. Now don't misunderstand me, it is not my desire to become a "teacher," but I am going to try to be of assistance to the operator who really is desirous of being economical in the matter of operating room expenditures, and I hold the view that an operator should be allowed a certain sum of money weekly, or monthly, for operating room expenses, and all purchases of supplies should be left in his hands.

I believe that there would be few instances where an operator would betray the trust reposed in him, and it would also serve to give him the impression that he was something more than a necessary evil which many exhibitors are not prone to do. A cheap or poor operator is dear at any price. Get a good operator and pay him the salary he deserves, then see to it that he produces the goods, and if given the proper equipment you can depend upon his doing so.

RIALTO, SAN FRANCISCO, WILL HAVE SEPARATE PROJECTION ROOM FOR THE SELECTION OF PICTURES BY MANAGEMENT

THE new Rialto theatre on Market street, San Francisco, is going at things right, and the excellent business which this firm has enjoyed indicates that the people are quick to respond. The carpenters are now at work fitting up a separate projection room for the sole use of the managers, so that they can project pictures for their own selection at any time. This saves waiting around until after midnight in order to look at a film.

The management has just bought three new Power's 6 B. Cameographs from G. A. Metcalfe, so that they now have five machines in operation, three in the operating room and two in the reviewing room, and it is the first time in the history of the business on the west coast that a house has installed five machines.

This theatre has the first releases of the Hearst International News Pictorial, which means that a great deal of publicity will be given the films in the Hearst papers, besides the regular advertising. This week the morning Examiner gave a full write-up of the News Pictorial, with special pictures, and the evening Call not only gave a two-column write-up, illustrated with a picture of Nelson B. Edwards, the International Film Service man who took pictures in Turkey, but the paper tells that the pictures are to be shown in the Rialto theatre. Very seldom has a new theatre stepped into such an active business as has the Rialto.

ROBERTS AND CARTER SUPPLY COMPANY SELLS MOTIOGRAPH TO WERNER

THE Roberts and Carter Supply Company of Nashville, Tenn., reports the sale of a 1916 Model Motiograph machine to S. E. Werner, Dixie theatre, Tracy City, Tenn. Mr. Werner is very enthusiastic over the new machine. A Motiograph was also placed in the Empress theatre, an up-to-date suburban theatre in Nashville by this concern. The concern has recently been appointed the southern representative of the Sanitary Perfume Corporation of Brooklyn, New York.

TransVerteR

Perfect Light Control

Easy As Turning Gas Up Or Down

When a film demands more or less light, you can always get it as you need it with Transverter equipment.

At the will of the operator, the amperage can readily be regulated to light or dark pictures as easily as turning gas up or down.

At the same time, the voltage lowers or increases automatically in proportion to the changing length of the arc.

The Transverter is the last word in projection equipment. It insures a perfect arc, a steady, bright, white light, and more artistic projection of pictures without waste of current.

If you want better pictures, larger attendances and bigger profits, you need the Transverter.

KATHOL, AN EFFICIENT PHOTOGRAPHIC DEVELOPER OF AMERICAN MANUFACTURE

WHEN the European war broke out in the summer of 1914, photographers and chemical supply houses felt no apprehension concerning their supply of developing chemicals. The dearth of high-class imported photographic developing reagents which ensued is now, of course, well known to all persons connected with photographic or motion picture enterprises.

One of the first to anticipate the coming shortage of developing chemicals was Dr. C. J. Thatcher, an organic chemist, who had secured his training in German universities.

Bearing the extensive requirements of the motion picture industry in mind, Dr. Thatcher set to work to evolve a photographic developer which would possess similar characteristics and chemical action to the extensively used reagent Metol. The result was the product "Kathol," on which a U. S. patent was granted to Dr. Thatcher on October 26, 1915.

In perfecting the formula of the compound Kathol, an endeavor was made to produce a compound which could be used in the place of Metol in existing formulæ, and in the same quantities as the Metol which it was designed to replace.

A photographic developer, to be considered valuable in a motion picture laboratory, must possess speed of action—in other words, it must develop the films to satisfactory density in a short time. This is accomplished with the developer Kathol by adding to the bath when making up some sodium hydroxide. This latter is added in a proportion amounting to 1/10 to 1/30 of the amount of alkaline carbonate incorporated into the bath. The exact amount of sodium hydroxide to be used varies with different formulæ, but when the correct amount for a given formula has been ascertained by test this amount remains a constant in preparing future solutions according to the same formula.

Kathol first appeared on the market in the latter part of 1915, and since that time has found its way into use in numerous film laboratories, in addition to being used by the regular photographic profession also.

It has been found that when a developing bath (as used in film laboratories) compounded with Kathol begins to slow down, it can be accelerated two or three times by the addition of some sodium hydroxide before becoming entirely exhausted.

Such well-known concerns as the American Press Association, National Photographers, Inc., and the Defender Photo Supply Company are regular users of Kathol, and this developer is being extensively used by some hospitals for the development of X-Ray plates.

A New York corporation was formed in March of this year, with Dr. Thatcher at its head, to manufacture and distribute Kathol to the photographic and motion picture trades. The aim of the Kathol Manufacturing Company, whose plant is located at 230th street and Riverdale avenue, New York City, is to supply their product at as reasonable a price as possible. Kathol is selling at present at about one-half of the price of genuine Metol, and the price will be further lowered as soon as the prices on raw materials will permit. This action of the company in keeping the price of their product within reason is no doubt appreciated by those engaged in photographic work of all kinds.

GODFREY BUILDING, SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, BECOMES FILM CENTER

THE Godfrey-Backer Building at 729 Seventh Avenue, is being rapidly filled with film exchange offices and feature film concerns, making it a very popular centre for motion picture exhibitors to examine films.

Quite a number of the concerns have put in projecting rooms. J. H. Hallberg has equipped among others, the projecting room of the Keen Cartoon Company and the public exhibition room of the building with Power's motor driven machines, 6-B's, and has closed a contract with the Clara Kimball Young Corporation, for two Simplex machines for their new projecting room on the fourteenth floor.

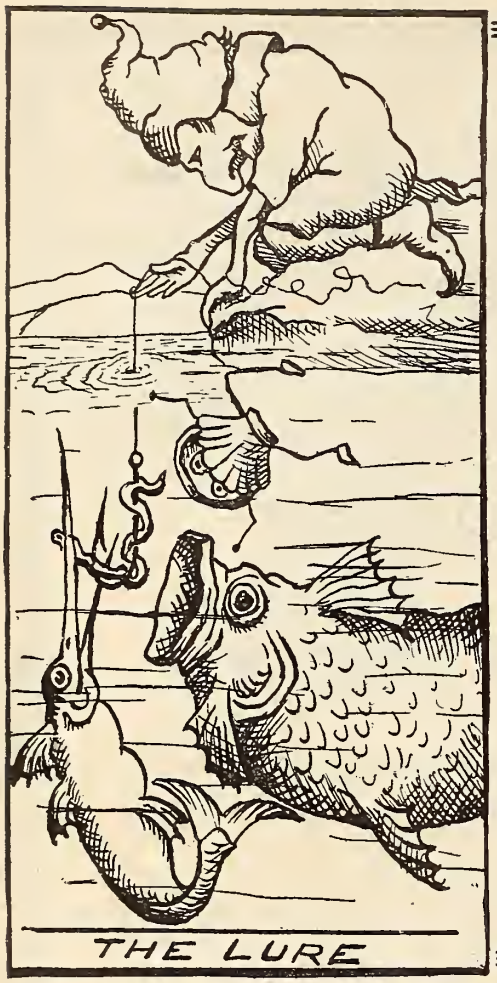
For 65 to 70 amperes D. C. use { 7/8 x 12" National Cored Upper / 11/32 x 6" Silvertip Solid Lower

For 70 to 85 amperes D. C. use { 7/8 x 12" National Cored Upper / 3/8 x 6" Silvertip Solid Lower

For 85 to 100 amperes D. C. use { 1 x 12" National Cored Upper / 7/16 x 6" Silvertip Cored Lower

These small negative carbons require a special ADAPTOR for use in the holder of present lamps. STEEL ADAPTORS must not be used because their resistance is high, which results in heating, short life, and excessive needling.

WE HAVE DESIGNED A SPECIAL BRONZE ADAPTOR, WHICH WE WILL FURNISH FREE OF CHARGE TO USERS OF OUR CARBONS



These carbons and adaptors will be shown at our booth at the Chicago Convention, July 10th to 18th.

Be sure to visit our booth and see an actual demonstration of these carbons burning in the lamp.

Stereoscopic Cinematography

The Anaglyph Was Devised Many Years Ago by Ducos du Hauron—From a Pair of Suitable Stereoscopic Photographs Two Half-Tone Blocks Were Made—One of These, the Picture Meant for the Left Eye, Was Printed on Paper Using Green Ink

IT should hardly be necessary to dwell here upon the desirability of giving exactly the same exposure and development to the two negatives comprising a stereoscopic pair. The focus should be equally crisp in each negative also. Before printing up stereoscopic negatives they are generaly transposed, the right-hand print being made from the left-hand negative (as taken) and vice versa.

We have seen in an earlier paragraph how the image of an object received by the retina of one eye is dissimilar to the image of the same object received by the other eye and a properly photographed pair of stereoscopic pictures exhibits this dissimilarity also. In practice it is found desirable that the right hand picture should embrace more of the view on its left-hand side than does the left-hand picture, while the left-hand picture should include more of the view on its right-hand side than does the right-hand picture.

With the fundamentals of stereoscopic perception and photography now established we may next consider methods of securing relief in lantern and motion picture projection.

Before entering upon a description of the various methods which have been experimented with in the effort to produce motion pictures which would exhibit an appearance of stereoscopic relief when projected, we will describe one more method by which stereoscopic effects were secured in looking at pictures printed on paper.

This was the Anaglyph, which was devised many years ago by Ducos du Hauron, a well-known pioneer in color photography. From a pair of suitable stereoscopic photographs two half-tone blocks were made. One of these—for instance, the picture meant for the left eye—was printed upon paper using green ink. The other picture—meant for the right eye—was printed right on top of the green impression in red ink. The superimposed or combined print appeared very vague or confusing to the naked eye.

Experiments with Processes Like Anaglyph Method

But when viewed through discriminating glasses or spectacles, having a red glass for the left eye and a green glass for the right eye, a good stereoscopic effect was obtained as the pictures were transposed and properly conveyed to the eyes by the discriminating action of the red and green glasses. We describe the Anaglyph here because—in addition to having been often seen a few years back—similar processes are now being experimented with by some investigators in an endeavor to apply the same principle to the motion picture, with the end in view of securing relief in their film subjects.

Lantern or stereopticon projection giving a good stereoscopic effect was attained many years ago, the first tolerable results having been secured by J. Ch. D'Almeida as early as 1858. D'Almeida's first results were obtained in a manner similar to the principle of the Anaglyph, which has just been described. Two slides having stereoscopic relationship to each other were projected onto a screen superimposed (one over the other). In the slide carriers of the lanterns were placed—a red glass in front of one slide and a green glass in front of the other. In observing the projected result, green and red glasses were held in front of the respective eyes, whereupon the screen image appeared to possess relief just as in the case of the Anaglyph. As a result of further experiments D'Almeida conceived his Eclipse system of stereoscopic projection, which was accomplished as follows:

Two stereoscopic lantern slides (in black and white) were projected one over the other onto the screen by means of two stereopticons. A shutter was revolved in front of the lenses of the lanterns in such a manner that the lens of one lantern was covered while the lens of the other lantern was projecting its image onto the screen and vice versa.

In viewing the screen results a device bearing a similar revolving shutter was looked through; the shutter of the viewing device working in unison with the shutter before the lantern lenses and shutting off the view from one eye while a picture was being perceived by the other eye and so on. As these eclipsing shutters were rotated rapidly it will be seen that the stereoscopic effect was due to persistence of vision, which is the principle involved in showing and viewing an ordinary motion picture.

G. R. Wilson One of First to Make Experiments

G. R. Wilson, an Englishman, was one of the first to attempt the making of motion pictures which would appear stereoscopic when projected. He obtained a patent in 1898 for a double cinematographic camera taking two series of views on a wide film. These stereoscopically photographed film strips were projected so that the two series of views were superimposed on the screen, and the result was then viewed through a device similar to D'Almeida's Eclipse shutter. It will readily be seen that any stereoscopic projection system which requires its results to be viewed through a shutter arrangement, can only be viewed by a few persons at a time and could therefore not be utilized to entertain a theatre audience.

The very best stereoscopic motion pictures which have yet been made and shown, however, are the result of the study and efforts of Theodore Brown, of Salisbury, England. In securing his results Mr. Brown takes into account the laws of motional perspective, which is basically perhaps the best method to follow in attempting the production of stereo motion pictures.

As the effect of motional perspective has not been given the amount of consideration, by experimenters in this country, which its importance (as applied to the class of work under consideration) warrants, we will briefly outline the workings of the laws governing it.

A one-eyed person estimates the distance of a given object in nature by its size in comparison with objects nearer or farther away and by its perspective. If the object is in motion the speed of its motion greatly aids his judgment of its distance from him. This may be readily demonstrated by a study of the diagram Fig. 3. In Fig. 3, A is the observer's eye which is viewing two men at B and C. While the men remain stationary the observer will know that B is farther away than C by reason of the fact that B is imaged on the retina as being of less magnitude than C. However, if both men advance five steps across the field of vision the brain is immediately made aware that the image of C on the retina has undergone a greater displacement than has the image of B. During the proportionate movements of the men the brain has formed an accurate idea of the distance between them.

"EASTMAN"

in the film margin answers the question,

"How clear should a motion picture be?"

EASTMAN KODAK CO.,
ROCHESTER, N. Y.

This brief description of the effect of motional perspective, on which Theodore Brown's method of stereo-animatography is based, will also serve to explain why a motion picture taken from a train or other moving vehicle shows the surrounding scenery and other objects in stereoscopic relief.

Why Pictures Taken from a Train Show Objects in Relief

In taking his stereoscopic motion pictures, Mr. Brown uses but one camera and lens (which this writer contends is sufficient for securing a good stereoscopic motion picture) and causes the objects photographed, or the camera, to be oscillated—or swung right and left—to a slight degree. If the objects to be photographed make no motions (still objects) the stand upon which the objects are placed is oscillated by means of a rod connected in a suitable manner to the same crank by which the camera is operated. In taking a stereoscopic motion picture of moving objects the camera instead of the subject is oscillated (or swung slightly back and forth across the field of view). The camera is oscillated on its tripod by means of parallel bars actuated by the camera crank. The shaft by which the camera crank is attached to the camera is made telescopic, so that the crank will not become disengaged as the camera moves away from the crank at certain periods of its (the camera's) oscillation.

Pictures made by this process, when projected upon a screen, produce the effect of an internal oscillation of the objects seen, upon the retina of the eye. This being similar to the action of the eyes changing the direction of their axes as in ordinary or binocular vision, a fine steroscopic effect is apparent. Some of the unscientific muddlers, at present engaged in wasting money by trying to perfect their impossible processes for securing stereoscopic motion pictures, claim that Brown's method is not a feasible one owing to the fact that oscillating the camera causes blurring of the images. This blurring can be easily eliminated by the use of a smaller shutter opening in the taking camera, and were some of the experimenters to try this system with intelligently and properly constructed apparatus doubtless some encouraging results would soon be secured.

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

EACH PICTURE HAS A CERTAIN RHYTHM WHICH MUSICIAN MUST OBSERVE

WE are always glad to hear from Alice Smythe Jay and while the theme she mentions has been continually agitated in Music and the Picture, nevertheless the subject is of such importance that its continued agitation is necessary if we desire to eradicate the evil of playing beer garden concerts and hope to have them appeal as Picture theatres music.

"Your answer to C. A. James reminds me of a similar question that I was asked recently. It was this: What music will suit most every picture? How can I tell what to play? I could only answer the question in this way: study rhythm, vibration and character. Could you two step to a waltz time, certainly not. This rule applies to the pictures. Each individual picture has a certain rhythm and if studied at all you will find that different movements suit different pictures. To be able to do this one must be careful to select the same as for dancing. For example, I attended a high class motion picture theatre recently, where they employed a most unusual orchestra. I should judge they were all soloists, judging from the artistic way they played, but the selections were absolutely void of rhythm to the picture. The picture was "God's Country and the Woman." Scenes were in log cabin, snow storm; in fact the Western type of scenery. These were the selections: Sympathy, novelette, intermezzo, etc.; in the scene where she walks through the room, heavy agitato, music best suited to a mob scene; heavy fortissimo chords.

"The melody 'Sympathy' evidently was intended for the musical theme setting, as they played it nearly all through the picture. The words and the theme of 'Sympathy,' are perfectly blended and would suit a love scene after a quarrel or something of that grade, but not a picture of the western atmosphere. The Novelette, etc., were all well suited to society scenes in pictures of this grade. Great care should be taken to select proper music. I would have selected for this grade picture a bright 4/4 movement like 'Heart to Heart," or 'Sunshine and Roses,' blending in an andante movement. The sleep walker, an andante, mysterioso movement and so on.

"I find that little or no attention is paid to the synchronization by rhythm and vibration. It is just as essential as for dancing, opera or character. The one-man orchestra has a great field to study proper music at the right time and place. The many different makes of motion picture orchestrions open a most desirable opportunity for study also. The Fotoplayer is awake to this fact using that special grade of music that is arranged in the correct registers for fife and drum. As Mr. Westcott states, he never knew the worth of music for the picture, until he purchased Inspiration Music Rolls, which makes the picture talk. The different traps in the Seeburg Fotoplayer, and other orchestrions are easily played when music is arranged in this manner, but the operator must look well to his picture, rhythm and vibration, if he obtains the best music. I have played orchestrions and manually, piano and organ, and am extremely careful in making my selections for the picture."

APPROVES ARRANGEMENT FOR MUSICAL LIBRARY, PUBLISHED IN "NEWS" MAY 13

WE are pleased to hear from the writer of the letter printed below. Musicians should take note of the suggestion regarding folios with their proper tabulations. Those employing such a method as set forth by Carrie Wood Bush will find that they can keep an unlimited repertoire of music immediately in front of them and use it at will.

It should be of interest to our readers to know that the writer of the letter is a sister of Frank E. Woods, manager of the Fine Arts Studios in Los Angeles, Cal. Hence her helpful words, her interest being for the betterment of Music and the Picture.

The letter from Carrie Woods Bush follows:

"Your articles interest me very much and I think that your arrangement for the Musical Library in your issue of May 13 excellent.

"People are demanding a more appropriate and better grade of music. I have seen theatres that were running the highest grade pictures fall off in attendance because of the inappropriate music used, and the manager was wholly unconscious of the reason, not realizing what picture music evolution is doing in that regard.

"The photoplayer has been filling a place in many theatres throughout the country for economic reasons as well as being advantageous for making quick changes, and when in the hands of one who is perfectly familiar with musical literature and possessing ability for selection, has proved quite satisfactory.

"Just now the pipe organ is destined to take the lead even though it may be supplemented by the orchestra, for the reason that its possibilities are almost unlimited in accompanying the picture and it being much easier for the organist to follow and make quick changes.

"Now that some of the leading motion picture companies are having the music selected before the picture is released, the task of the music director is much simplified. In case the music is not so arranged and an orchestra is not present, a few volumes of different selections tabulated would come in very handy: for example, arrange a row of tabs about an inch in width from the top to the bottom of your book containing the various selections and be sure that you have the tabs on the page in front of the piece indicated so that you can instantly take hold of it, turn the leaf over and have the desired selection. If the piece is in another key from the one just played, you can quickly modulate to it.

"In my own case I have taken large sized scrap books and patsed in pieces of different nature and moods, tabulated. Referring again to the music being arranged for pictures before they are released, I notice that the plan of David W. Griffith of the Fine Arts-Griffith productions to be a very good one, and when the exhibitor realizes the necessity of using the programs thus selected, the success of pictures will be far greater.

"Your comments on B. A. Holoway's article, in your issue of June 3, are very convincing and should be helpful to the exhibitor and to the musicians employed in accompanying pictures."

MAGARO ENGAGES MARIAN MERCHANT AS ORGANIST AND ELSIE MALSEED AS PIANIST FOR THE REGENT, HARRISBURG

Special to Motion Picture News.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 8.

MARIAN MERCHANT has been engaged as organist of Peter Magaro's Regent theatre, 410 Market Street, and Elsie Malseed as pianist. Both young women are Harrisburgers, Miss Merchant having formerly been organist at the Regent. She recently went to New York to play for the Loew interests in one of their theatres there, and took a course of training which has added greatly to her usefulness as an accompanist to motion pictures.

Miss Merchant has a fine musical education and has had much experience both as orchestra leader in vaudeville houses and in motion picture work. She succeeds Professor Walter C. Wallace as organist at the Regent.

appearance of relief in motion pictures perhaps the systems most commonly experimented with are alternate projection and the so-called "two-color" system. Recent attempts have been made to photograph subjects with a double camera and print the positive in such a manner that the impressions from the right and left hand lenses would alternate on the film strip. Then by projecting at twice normal speed or faster it has been hoped to secure stereoscopic effect. This system is immediately open to the objection that it requires a positive of twice the usual length to give a performance equal in duration to an ordinary film depicting the same action. Moreover this alternation of the dissimilar pictures on the film gives a hideous and eye racking effect on the screen as has been demonstrated to the satisfaction of the writer.

The most popular process with experimenters, however, seems to be that which is termed the "two-color" process. This process is identical in principle with the Anaglyph previously described. The exposures are made with a double camera, and from the negatives obtained two prints are made, one of which is stained red and the other green. The staining is done with basic dyes so that after clearing, the highlights are white, as in a toned film positive, with the difference that there is no silver image left—the images consisting of colored gelatine.

If these films are taken on a double camera they should be shown by means of a double projector, unless the camera used has two separate revolving shutters, one for each lens. The customary double camera has only one shutter which acts for both lenses. The result is that one film strip is always portraying a phase of the movements of the objects photographed slightly in advance of the movement recorded on the other film strip. It is obvious that the action shown in these two films can never be accurately combined by running the two strips through one projector mechanism, as is attempted by some and, moreover, satisfactory definition and register which is designed to accommodate only one thickness of film.

Lack Knowledge of Properties of Dyes Used for Staining

There is a regrettable lack of knowledge shown by some dabblers in two-color stereoscopic cinematography regarding the properties which the dyes used in staining the film should possess. The basic red and green staining dyes used in preparing the positives for this process should be complementary to each other in order that the screen image may be of a neutral shade with no color predominating. Any old grade of dye will not do in this work if good results are to be secured. Many dyes which will strain the film so that it appears to be of a good red color when viewed by transmitted light will be found to yield a decidedly purplish or bluish color when the film is projected.

Likewise the gelatine or glass used by many, through which to view the screen results, is found upon a simple examination with a hand spectroscope to transmit other colors besides the one color which it is desired to transmit. Having no knowledge of the regions of the spectrum which the complimentary red and green viewing glasses (or gelatine) should transmit, and which regions they should absorb, the amateur inventors use any old piece of gelatine which appears to be red or green in color. The transmissions of some of the gelatine thus employed, when examined spectroscopically, prove that the results secured when looking through the same will be anything but that which is desired.

Granting, however, that success may some day crown the efforts of some of the workers on the two-color process of stereo-cinematography, pictures viewed in this way have their drawbacks. There is the item of providing each member of the audience with the viewing "specs," and it will also be readily apparent that pictures viewed through heavy colored glasses or gelatine would not possess snap and brilliancy in any event.

Having treated the attempts to secure (by special means) motion pictures which would possess the appearance of solidarity or stereoscopic relief, we desire to call attention to the possibilities of securing a considerable degree of relief in motion pictures photographed in the ordinary way. A study of the photography of some of the leading film makers will show, here and there, a scene which exhibits a marked degree of depth and roundness.

With a better understanding of the principles and capabilities of photography and the motion camera, the quality of motion picture photography could be considerably improved, and we are tempted to dwell on some of these fine points in a future issue.

MUSIC FOR SPECIAL PICTURE ADAPTATION ISSUED BY SAM FOX COMPANY

THE Sam Fox Publishing Company of Cleveland, Ohio, is publishing original compositions by American composers which are of excellent value for picture playing. This music is known as the Sam Fox Library Edition. This library now consists of twenty-nine numbers. None of them are difficult and all of them are melodious and pleasing to the ear. The compositions are all of a serious nature, ranging from waltz lento movements to heavy, pathetic and romantic.

No. 20 is of beautiful Japanese character. No. 22 is a three-numbered suite entitled "Twilight Sketches." It opens with a light movement and continually becomes more serious until the end.

Every picture musician should get in touch with these twenty-nine numbers as they will be a very valuable addition to his musical repertoire.

GOSDORFER BUYS TWO BAIRD MACHINES FOR ODEON THEATRE, NEW YORK

MILTON GOSDORFER of 1493 Broadway, controlling several theatres in New York City and vicinity, placed his order with the Special Universal Motor Company, 406-10 East 149th street, New York, for two Baird projectors with special lenses to be installed at the Odeon theatre, 256 West 145th street, New York.

A 50-ampere Wagner White Light Converter is being used, the arc being controlled by two Speedco Arc Controllers, pictures being projected on a Mirroroide Screen.

The two Baird machines are standing at an angle of about 38 degrees, the screen being pitched in proportion, therefore, the picture projected is absolutely perfect. This equipment is operated by two members of Local No. 306, I. A. T. S. E.

Notes:—While the above story is a romance, the music must necessarily be serious, nevertheless melodious numbers should be used, avoiding the tumultuous in music. Nos. 1 and 5 should be light intermezzo movements. Nos. 2, 4, 6, 12 and 27 should be slow melodious numbers of romantic or pathetic suggestion. Nos. 10, 14, 17, 23 and 25 should also be slow numbers of pathetic suggestion with a slight dramatic effect. Numbers played legato are the better.

Nos. 3, 7, 9 and 18 are 2/4 numbers commonly used in modern dancing. Nos. 8, 13 and 21 are slow waltz movements and should be played very legato. No. 11 should be a fast polka movement. Nos. 15, 16, 23, 24, 25, and 26 are all numbers of melodramatic intent and segues must be made quick. No. 19 is a concert waltz with a slow introduction. No. 22 can be either the "Lohengrin" or Mendelssohn "Wedding March."

Why Not Lighting to "Mood" of Pictures Like Music?

Colored and White Lights Can Be Concealed in Coves or in Artistic Receptacle and by Turn of Switch the Auditorium Can be Blended into A Ruddy Glow of Sunset or Fire Scenes, or the Hazy Blue of Moonlight Can Be Used, with All Under Control of Operator

By J. L. Stair

"THE photoplay is opening vast, hitherto unused channels for the expression of human life, and so, penetrating the desert places of the drama, is becoming an instrument of culture, limitless in its possibilities," says a writer in the Chicago Tribune. There is a growing demand on the part of the public for genuine art, for better craftsmanship, and for special effects in the presentation of the plays. These demands are being supplied be resourceful producers and exhibitors.

Some one has stated that it takes more than a star to make a photoplay, more than a few chairs and a canvas screen to make a picture house. As a matter of fact it takes a specially constructed building, the best mechanical equipment, finest ventilation, and a suitable and properly designed lighting system to make a modern picture theatre.

As the theatre is used at night, light is therefore the best means of making the theatre attractive. The effective, rational and efficient use of light is a wonderful power in the hands of the theatre owner for advertising effect, and for the comfort of his patrons. A brilliantly lighted theatre is not necessarily the one that has the rush of patrons, and the one to which they come a second time. Theatre lighting is much more of an art than is ordinarily supposed. Perfection in it can only be obtained by careful study of the various means which can be used, and the effect of each method on the actual operation of the house. Any method of theatre lighting which furnishes satisfactory illumination, which is novel, new and effective, is greatly desired by the progressive theatre owner.

Flood Lighting an Effective Aid

Even from a distance of several blocks patrons can be attracted to the playhouse by special lighting effects. The recent development of flood lighting using projector units provides for the theatre owner a new means of effective advertising. The system gives striking results, is installed at small expense, and does not mar the building surface, since in most cases the units can be placed in an accessible location at a considerable distance from the building, since in most cases the units can be placed in an accessible location at a considerable distance from the building. The method of bringing the building into prominence by outlining with bare lamps, has been used extensively for some years.

Although this method is satisfactory in some cases, it does not light the building but rather obliterates detail of design. The new scheme for the lighting of the exterior, an example of which is shown in Figure 1, fixes the shape, design and location of the building upon the mind of the observer, which is really the first step in the process of attracting the patron to the playhouse.

artistic treatment and the working out of individual lighting schemes. Can you imagine a more attractive lobby than that illustrated in Figure 2 or Figure 3, where the illumination is accomplished by means of decorative portable lamps and floor standards? The concealing of the glaring lamps changes the atmosphere of the lobby from one of garish cheapness to one of quiet dignity. Subdued foyer lighting is the correct thing, inasmuch as it reduces the contrast between the bright street illumination and that of the dimly lighted auditorium. The Curtis portable art lamp shown in Figure 2 has concealed within the silk shade, a clever arrangement of X-ray reflectors and lamps which makes it possible, by the pull of the switch, to obtain either a subdued shaded light, or a flood of perfectly diffused indirect illumination. The indirect lighting equipment is an added feature to the lamp, thereby combining utility with its artistic qualities.

Indirect Lighting Adopted for Interiors

The scientific study of the subject of auditorium lighting has lead to the general adoption of the indirect lighting system as the logical method for this portion of the theatre, and although most pleasing results can be obtained with hanging fixtures as shown in Figure 4, the tendency of interior lighting is toward the use of other than ceiling outlets. The newest means is that in which the ceilng fixtures have been discarded and the illumination is from concealed sources, located in side wall brackets, boxes or coves as illustrated in Figure 5. torium looks much higher, more airy and spacious; no obstruction is offered to the projection or view.

It has come to be a necessity that two intensities of illumination be provided for the auditorium—dim, during the progress of the show, and bright for intermissions. Dim illumination while the pictures are being shown assists the ushers in seating patrons, produces a more cheerful place of entertainment, and gives to the patron a sense of safety and security. The dim illumination can be carefully calculated to be of such an intensity that it does not interfere in any way with the clearness of the pictures on the screen, and furthermore, does not reduce the ability to clearly see about the room. Dim and bright lighting effects are easily obtained either by employing dimmers or by wiring lamps in the lighting units on separate circuits which are controlled from the operator's box.

Illumination Effects Are Essential

In addition to the ordinary requirements of the auditorium, illumination effects are coming to be more essential in the production of photoplays in suiting the lighting to the action and atmosphere of the play. The theatre of the future will utilize harmonious lighting effects in the presentation of screen dramas. The means for doing this are now within the reach of exhibtors; then why not fit the lighting to the mood of the picture as is now done with the music? Colored and white lights can be concealed in coves or in artistic receptacles so that by the turn of the switch the auditorium can be blended into the ruddy glow of the sunset or fire scene, or the hazy blue of moonlight or iridescent beauty of early morning—all at the will of the operator.

Beautiful results can be obtained at small cost if the most efficient equipment is used. It has been found that the indirect lighting system to be successful must be produced by tungsten lamps and powerful silvered reflectors. The most satisfactory types are those made in one piece, having vertical and spiral corrugations to break up the light rays. The light, which can be absolutely controlled by reflectors of this kind, is directed against the ceiling at correct angles and results in a perfectly diffused illumination, free from harsh shadows and annoying glare.

One of the many special types which have been designed for indirect lighting is the peculiarly shaped X-ray reflector shown in Figure 9. The design illustrated has been worked out especially for use in side wall boxes and coves. It throws the light out against the ceiling, avoiding all unsightly splashes and splotches of light on the wall above the fixture. Figure 10 shows an inexpensive wall box in which the E-65 can be installed.

All Ceiling Fixtures Eliminated

With this system of indirect side wall box lighting all ceiling fixtures will be entirely eliminated; all lamps and reflectors are concealed from view, yet the auditorium is flooded with a strong, clear, easy reading and comfortable illumination by means of an equipment which suggests itself to the audience as a decorative feature rather than as a lighting fixture.

Such details of the lighting scheme as the number of units to use, correct designs of reflectors, sizes of lamps, proper placing of lighting devices, etc., should be determined by an experienced lighting man working in conjunction with the theatre owner. The result of their co-operative efforts will be most surprising and pleasing.

subjects, much information, particularly the time of the features are largely distributed. There is no billboard or poster advertising.

It is in the music, however, of which the management makes a specialty, that the Victoria excels. Dessauer Brothers Symphony Orchestra, of which Leo Dessauer is leader and Walter Dessauer assistant, plays selections from grand opera or popular airs before each afternoon and evening performance. A spotlight is thrown upon the leader with the house in darkness. The music is always applauded to the echo.

A $10,000 Kimball Organ

The orchestra also plays in connection with the organ during the showing of the pictures. This organ, which the Kimball Company recently erected, is valued at over $10,000. Herbert Henderson and William Kleiss are the organists.

Exterior of the Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia

The main organ is located in two massive expression chambers built upon the stage, against the rear walls of the house. The echo vox humana and other echo stops, including the cathedral chimes, are heard through the opening in the rear wall above the balcony, being installed in a chamber adjoining the projection booth. The electric console in the orchestra pit controls the entire instrument, even to the musician starting and stopping the motor without moving from his seat, and it changes instantly while he is playing any combination at will.

The Victoria Kimball is unique, not alone in point of size and completeness of registration, but is voiced on four distinct wind pressures to obtain the orchestral tones, which cannot be successfully imitated without such treatment. are the methods of reproduction in this instrument. Every effect is attainable, from the soft muted violin to the heavy brass tuba.

Outside of the foundation or "organ" tones, led by the powerful diapason phonon and tibias, there is an entire orchestra with ten strings ranging from the double bass and violincello to the violins, four flutes, three members of the tuba family, trumpet, oboe, bassoon, horn, clarinet, piccolo, harp and accessories. There are two vox humanas, imitative of the human voice, one in the main organ and the answering echo at the opposite end of the house, where are also located echo flutes and ethereal strings, with the chimes.

William Goldenberg is the manager of the Victoria and James Carr is the assistant manager.

Mr. Goldenberg is also assistant manager of the Central Market Street Company, to which post he has just been elected. Frank Buhler is general manager of the company.

Assistants at the Victoria are J. S. Von der Pent, projection expert; Samuel Perry, first assistant; E. A. Lee, chief electrician; J. D. McSherry, stage manager.

Taken all in all, the Victoria deserves to be ranked with the finest of the Quaker City's photoplay houses.

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY, REMOVED TO 2665 MORGAN STREET, ST. LOUIS, BUYS RIGHT TO SIMPSON SOLAR PATENT FOR SCREENS

MINUSA CINE PRODUCTS COMPANY wishes to announce the removal of its factory, together with its offices, into its new building at 2665-2699 Morgan street, St. Louis, Mo.

With this greatly increased facility for manufacturing high-grade screens the company will be in a better position than ever to serve their many friends.

When E. R. Anderson, treasurer of the Minusa Cine Products Company, first manufactured and placed before the moving-picture public the gold fibre screen, he was separated from the Atlantic shore by the full width of the broad U. S. A. He did not realize, at that time, that there was such a thing as the Simpson Solar Screen. At the same time he was beginning to lay the foundation for his product. Al. Simpson, after several years spent in experimental work, had been granted by the U. S. Patent Office full protection on all metallized screen surfaces. He was the first man to use a surface of this kind for the reproduction of pictures, and the patent granted him, serial number 890,101, also was broad enough in its scope to protect him in all cases where color backgrounds were used for the purpose of bringing out the pitcure in a clearer and more effective manner.

The scope of operations of both these screen men took different courses. The Gold Fibre is a surface vastly different from the Simpson Solar screen, and both of them have their particular qualifications for obtaining results.

The Minusa Cine Products Company, after suit had been filed against it by the Simpson Solar Screen Company, the suit being directed against the Triangle Film Company and S. L. Rothapfel, realized that it had been infringing on the rights of the Simpson Solar Screen Company, unconsciously, for quite a while. In the manufacture of the Minusa Gold Fibre screen, and other screens of the company's line, it is necessary to use certain properties that basically tread on the toes of this patent, therefore there was but one thing for the Minusa to do, in order to protect itself, its former purchasers and future customers, and that was to secure the ownership of this patent, as well as the right and name to the Simpson Solar screen.

The Simpson Solar screen is one of the best known projection surfaces now being offered to the moving picture trade. In recent years the management of this company has been in charge of the widow of Albert L. Simpson. She has been enjoying a nice business by reason of the efforts of her husband.

The Minusa Cine Products Company will continue this and also increase the volume, and with its large facilities for turning out screen surfaces, it will undoubtedly be in better position to do this than the original owners.

The company contemplates prosecution of those who infringe upon the rights granted by this patent and state that not only the manufacturers but the exhibitors who purchase surfaces from the above concerns will be held liable for the value of the screen, as well as for damages.

ARTIFICIAL FLOWERS AND SHRUBBERY MAKE THEATRE REFRESHING OASIS IN HOT WEATHER

DURING these hot summer months the thermometer is the exhibitor's worst enemy, and he finds it hard to lure patrons into his house no matter how many "20 degrees cooler inside" or "coldest place south of the pole" signs he displays. At this season, more than at any other, it pays to make the interior, and especially the lobby of the theater, as attractive as possible to the perspiring passer-by.

A most effective way to make the lobby look cool and inviting is to decorate it with artificial flowers and shrubbery making it seem a refreshing oasis compared to the sweltering street.

When it comes to selecting artificial floral effects, the manager has a wealth of material from which to choose. In fact, there is hardly a plant, shrub, flower or vine in nature that has not been faithfully reproduced in form and color by the manufacturers of cloth botanical decorations. This material may be had in the form of garlands, wreaths, sprays, shrubbery and single flowers. There is no additional charge for having these articles fire-proofed.

No less a variety is offered in containers for these articles. There are on the market especially designed pedestal and hanging baskets, vases, stands and other fixtures suitable for displaying them. Decorative baskets are colored dozens of different tints and two-tone finishes. These fixtures are made of reed, willow, alabaster, cement and other material.

A very attractive finishing touch to your lobby is given by an aquarium on a wicker stand, or, better yet, one or two running fountains. These fountains give a most decided air of coolness to the entrance, and they are really useful, too, because they humidify the air.

Fountains for this purpose usually consist of a wide bowl set on a woven wicker or bas-relief plaster stand. A number of jets set around the outside of the bowl shoot streams toward the center, where they strike each other and fall back into the bowl. A larger spray in the middle gushes straight in the air and falls back over a tinted electric light bulb in the center.

The action of the fountain is controlled by a 110 volt Universal motor that will connect with any electric light socket and run on direct or alternating current. The same water is used constantly. so no piping is necessary. The cost of such fountains is moderate.

Having once attracted the patron into the theater by means of the cool-looking front, the problem still remains to keep him in a frame of mind so he will come again. You may have the most perfect ventilators, fans, blower, ammonia pipes, or other cooling devices made, but if the patron thinks he is hot, he will be. Here again a little psychological diplomacy can be exercised.

Wall baskets of artificial green vines and delicate flowers, with vases of ingeniously wrought shrubs will do wonders with his mental temperature. A few potted palms often go well in the decorative scheme. Both plants and containers should be in harmony with the other decorations. This is easy, because of the great variety offered by the manufacturers.

Many managers have installed, fountains inside their theaters. The best place for these is on the stage, on either side of the screen, or in niches higher up and fairly close to the screen. These fountains do not divert the attention from the pictures when the film is being run, but on the contrary, seem to give the pictured scenes a better perspective. During intermissions the subdued sparkle of the splashing water is a pleasant and restful sight.

A tasteful installation of artificial plants is equally pleasing in the winter time, because the springtime atmosphere the flowers give is a welcome contrast to the blustering weather. Certainly no decorative material is more adaptable, beautiful or cheap than artificial botanical material.

MONEY MAKING ADJUNCT TO THEATRE IS POP CORN MACHINE

AMONG the money-making adjuncts to the modern motion picture theatre, none is gaining in favor so rapidly as the pop-corn machine. Sales of pop-corn from especially constructed machines, installed in the lobby of the theatre have furnished so satisfactorily a source of revenue in many cases that a new machine has been put out, especially for this purpose, and is attracting considerable attention.

The Holcomb and Hoke Manufacturing Company is the maker of this apparatus, which it calls the Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine. The company has long been the manufacturer of corn poppers of various styles, for use in the street, stores, at fairs and circuses, and the new machine, which was primarily intended for installation in stores, is an outgrowth of the development of the theatre, and a study of the conditions on the part of the Holcomb and Hoke Company.

The machines as they are built today stand about six feet high and occupy five square feet of floor space. They are made with any finish so as to fit the interior furnishings of any store and all metal parts are nickel-plated. The lower half consists of the case or the wooden base, wherein the raw pop corn and fuel are kept, while the upper half consists of a glass case which tightly encloses the machinery.

Butter-Kist Pop Corn is now advertised in the leading national publications, such as the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, Leslie's and the Cosmopolitan. The leading trade journals in every line of business also carry large advertisements telling of Butter-Kist Pop Corn.

This idea has standardized the quality of all pop corn that is made in the Butter-Kist machine and sold in the trade-marked Butter-Kist bags. Whenever one buys this famous brand of pop corn he is sure that he is getting the best and cleanest pop corn in the world.

The great success of the Butter-Kist idea has warranted its makers in predicting that within a comparatively short time every leading motion picture theatre in America will have one of their machines. Its power to attract attention—to help hold the attention of the waiting patrons—to earn a big profit, all make it a most invaluable adjunct to any motion picture theatre.

It is claimed for these machines that they will make eighty bags of pop-corn an hour; profits may be roughly figured from the fact that a pound of shelled corn, sufficient to make ten five-cent bags, can be purchased for six cents.

Many theatre managers have found that the machine installed in their lobby has an especial attraction to patrons who are waiting to enter; others report profitable sales both from those entering and leaving, as well as from passers-by in the street. One of these is the Clarksburg Amusement Company. The manager of this company reports:

"I have found people coming to our theatre in preference to others, because they could get Butter-Kist pop corn here. Butter-Kist receipts alone have run as high as $112 a week." A report from the Alhambra Amusement Company says: "The Butter-Kist machine has proved a money-maker even under unfavorable weather conditions. We have been doing a minumum of 150, and a maximum of 300 bags a day."

The Theater Grande, Detroit, also has found the machine a success. "In practically four months the machine has returned in profits our original investment. We have taken in as high as $46 a day from pop corn and peanuts. We have been operating the machine only in the evenings, and Saturday and Sunday afternoons."

TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM

TYPHOON FAN COMPANY 1544 BROADWAY NEW YORK CITY

TYPHOON RECORD IN CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE

Outstrips everything as an unparalleled record-breaker—literally coining money for owners of Typhoons.

The money-making power of THE TYPHOON COOLING SYSTEM was demonstrated far beyond the expectations of its most optimistic and enthusiastic advocates.

Here are the Cold TYPHOON FACTS

The Alcazar Theatre is owned by a bunch of "up-to-the-minute" business men, heads and brains of some of the biggest enterprises in Chattanooga and Nashville. About a year ago one of them heard of the TYPHOONS—wired for information—telegraphed the order and the TYPHOONS were promptly shipped by express. A few days later the local press was full of TYPHOON news. The crowds flocked to the Alcazar, packing even the lobby which is about as large as the theatre itself.

The breezes from the TYPHOONS on the roof cooled the lobby as well as the theatre, making the crowds contented while waiting their turn for seats.

The TYPHOONS played havoc with the other theatres on Main Street, and before the end of the summer every theatre but one went into the hands of receivers—not because there were too many theatres or a crowd not big enough to fill them all—but those that spend their nickels and dimes woke up to the fact that there is no pleasure in being roasted in an ill-ventilated theatre. The Alcazar folks bid in all the theatres at the receivers' sale, and the one that did not "fail" gave up.

The Alcazar bunch is a live one, and they had their specifications and prices on the TYPHOON before the bankruptcy sale came off, and wired their orders the same day.

TYPHOONS were installed in all of these theatres, even in one with a four-months' lease, and now closed up—but the TYPHOONS paid for themselves, and will be used in a new theatre which will shortly be started.

Three new theatres built by other interests were also TYPHOONIZED and the three theatres for colored people exclusively fell in line and put in TYPHOONS as well.

If you should visit Chattanooga and be interested, you need not look for any particular theatre. Just drop into the first one you come to, and if it happens to be a scorching hot day, you need not ask any questions about how they like the TYPHOONS.

Just take a seat for a while, and you will be lucky to find one, as they certainly are the busiest bunch of theatres in the country—TYPHOONS made them busy.

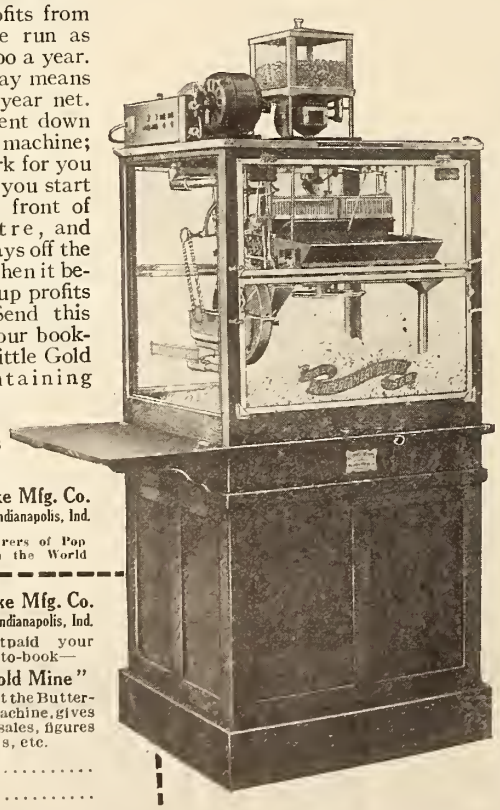
BUTTER-KIST

You have come to this convention to talk shop. You are learning from each other how to make more money out of motion. While you are about it, learn from somebody who has done it—and you will find hundreds at the Convention—how to make extra money out of motion with the Butter-Kist Pop Corn Machine.



Moves Nickels Out of the Crowd's Pockets Into Yours

This machine sells pop corn to the crowds that gather and wait at your theatre entrance, by motion. It is a moving picture of the manufacture of the most delightful, crackling, toasty-flavored pop corn that you ever saw. It pops, sorts, butters, toasts, and delivers this delicious pop corn all in plain sight. People stop to watch it and decide to try a bag. When they once get the taste they are spoiled for any other kind of pop corn.

Nobody can use this fascinating automatic seller of pop corn to better advantage than you moving picture men, who have waiting crowds in front of your places for hours every day.

EXTRA PROFITS

Extra profits from this machine run as high as $3000 a year. 80 bags a day means a $1000 a year net. Small payment down brings the machine; it starts work for you the minute you start it going in front of your theatre, and very soon pays off the balance. Then it begins to pile up profits for you. WILMER AND VINCENT THEATRE COMPANY TAKES OVER APPELL INTERESTS IN MAJESTIC, COLONIAL AND ORPHEUM, HARRISBURG, PENNSYLVANIA

Special to Motion Picture News.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 8.

THE Wilmer and Vincent Theatre Company, of New York City, which with Nathan Appell, of New York and Harrisburg, has for several years controlled the Majestic, Colonial and Orpheum theatres, in this city, has just taken over the Appell interests in the business of these three houses and has also acquired sole ownership of the properties of the Orpheum and the Majestic. The three houses concerned are the largest theatres in Harrisburg. The Colonial is devoted entirely to motion pictures and the Majestic and Orpheum are partly devoted to that form of entertainment

Walter Vincent, president of the Wilmer and Vincent Company, which controls about twenty theatres in cities of Pennsylvania, and Eugene L. Koneke, of the same firm, came here from New York to negotiate the deal which has just been consumated. Mr. Appell owned half interest in the business of each of the three theatres. In addition to owning a half interest in the business of each of the three houses, Mr. Appell owned the Majestic and Orpheum properties, which he now relinquishes. The Colonial property is owned by Harrisburg interests and leased to Wilmer and Vincent.

C. Floyd Hopkins, under the new arrangement, will continue as the local manager of the three houses.

PRINCESS, NASHVILLE, WILL SHOW PICTURES DURING THE SUMMER

THE Princess, Nashville, a vaudeville house, will be turned into a picture theatre for the summer. Stage settings representing an Italian garden, in the middle of which will be an electric fountain of many colors, with palms, ferns and shrubbery, will be the main decorative features. An orchestra consisting of fifteen pieces and a large organ, is being installed on the large stage.

In addition to the ventilating system, over fifty fans of the oscillating type, with the ones now in use, will make the Princess the coolest spot in Nashville. In speaking of the change, W. J. Williams, assistant general manager of the Crescent Amusement Company, had the following to say: "In turning the Princess into a motion picture house, which will be only temporary during the hot summer months, it is the aim of the Crescent Amusement Company to see that the patrons of the Princess are to be treated to something extraordinary in the way of a motion picture theatre.

"We intend to spend somewhere in the neighborhood of a little over a thousand five hundred dollars in improvements." Mr. Williams went on to state that the pictures shown will be the best. No particular program will be used.

Remove the "Tire-Tax" on ——Gasolene

EVERY time the Gasolene Tank, on your Car, is filled up—think of this:—

If the Tank holds, say, 20 Gallons,—and the price is 30 cents per Gallon,—reflect that FIVE of these Gallons are consumed, not by the MOTOR,—but by your FABRIC Tires.

Of the $6.00 you pay for 20 Gallons, 25%,—(or $1.50),—is practically poured over your Tires, instead of into your Tank,—WASTED!

These Five Gallons of Gasolene constitute a sort of "TAX," levied by Circumstance, against the Man who does not live up to his Opportunities,—who fails to investigate Silvertown Cord Tire records.

If he did investigate these Records,—and Test out Results for himself,—he could verify the following Facts, and PROFIT by them:—

SILVERTOWN Cord Tires have only TWO Layers.

These Two Layers are of giant CORDS, instead of the 5 to 7 Layers of Cotton Cloth in Fabric Tires, or of Cotton Threads in other (so-called) "Cord" Tires.

TWO Layers of Cords BEND 4 times, to 6 times, more FLEXIBLY, than 5 to 7 Layers of Fabric or Thread rubber-cemented together into a stiff, unyielding "Muscle-bound" Carcass.

This wonderful "Flexibility" is what gives such wonderful RESILIENCE,—and such slight Traction-Wave-resistance to Motor-power,—that Silvertown Cord Tires are, through it, enabled to do this:—

—Coast down-hill 30% further and faster.
—Travel 25% further on each Gallon of Gas.
—Add 17% more Speed, to same Motor.
—Ride with 50% less Vibration.
—Be 70% LESS liable to Stone-bruise, Puncture, or Blow-out.

SILVERTOWNS are the easiest of all Tires to permanently Repair,—the most Luxurious to ride upon,—the most Aristocratic in appearance.

Did you ever see a police dog go up to the second story of a house after a thief? Our camera man did. And he got a picture we can talk about.

Over in Jersey when we took the "Hazards of a War Bride," we almost lost two valuable men in a nitric acid fire. But you should see that picture!

And here we are telling you about them! We don't need to talk about Better Babies nor about those new articles showing American business efficiency and the great outdoor stuff that is coming our way.

MUTUAL CHAPLIN SPECIALS

The Greatest Attraction

At this particular season of the year, during the torrid days of summer, the strongest possible attractions are needed to hold up patronage.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN

in the series of Mutual Chaplin Specials is the surest and greatest attraction you can book. Remember, a Chaplin Mutual has never failed to fill any house!

His latest subjects, "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," and "The Vagabond" are drawing record-breaking business everywhere and leave such a delightful impression that everyone is eagerly following his Mutual Chaplin releases.

Book the entire series of Mutual Chaplin Specials at any one of the 68 Mutual Exchanges.

WILLIAM RUSSELL SERIES

The value of any production to an exhibitor is gauged by the number of dollars it brings into the box office and the amount of satisfaction it gives the box office patrons.

The William Russell series is bringing big returns to exhibitors because of the popularity of the star and the mouth-to-mouth advertising each subject receives after its showing. It is giving satisfaction everywhere because each picture is of the most popular type.

Eight productions, each a separate and distinct subject, in five reels, comprise the series.

Attacked by the Conspirators
(Extract from Chapter 10)
With a smothered groan, the young officer sank to the ground. All this Cleo saw, but not until Mahlin started toward her did she realize that she was powerless to aid her friends and that her own life was in imminent peril. Then, with Mahlin barely a score of yards behind, she turned and ran like a frightened deer. Satsuma stopped only long enough to rifle Hope's pockets, taking from them his pocketbook, his papers, and the piece of the book-cover containing the key to the code.

Gentlemen:

We read every week in your advertisements at the bottom of your "Sign Post" the following:

"We can only govern our own course by the proven experience of others."

The moving picture manager governs his course by the likes and dislikes of his patrons and the box office receipts are the best way the manager has of telling what pictures his patrons like best.

Having run Big Four pictures for the past year, my experience has been that Big Four pictures head the list, not only for the excellent quality of the pictures and the box office results, but for the satisfactory service we get through the V-L-S-E.

JAIL FAILS TO STOP 'TRIBUNE' CAMERA MAN

Gets Pictures of Returning Prisoners After Being Thrown Into Juarez Jail a Second Time.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

El Paso, Tex., June 29.—[Special.]—Nicholas McDonald, operator for the Selig-Tribune picture service, today added to the general excitement of Juarez.

This morning when the returning American troopers were to come, McDonald went across the Rio Grande with his camera on his shoulder. He was grabbed by the first Mexican soldiers he encountered and pointed back toward El Paso. McDonald protested vigorously and the soldier changed his mind, called his companions, and marched McDonald off to jail again.

He stayed there two hours, fuming lest the American prisoners should be released before he could get out, but was finally released on orders of Consul Garcia.

So McDonald planted his camera one inch north of the center of the international border and made several hundred feet of film as the Negro troopers filed across.

Nicholas McDonald is just one of a hundred daring Cameramen employed on the staff of The Selig-Tribune, the World's Greatest News Film, released every Monday and Thursday in General Film Service. On every battlefield, in every land, everywhere that news is in the making, these intrepid men will be found risking their lives to film exclusive and first news pictorials for The Selig-Tribune!

"THE OLD MAN WHO TRIED TO GROW YOUNG"

A sensational soul-stirring Selig Drama released in General Film Company's regular service on Monday, July 31st. Al. W. Filson, the noted character actor plays the lead, and is supported by such artists as Vivian Reed, Charles West and Harry Lonsdale.

And then another in that series of side-splitting Selig Western Comedies will be released August 5. Tom Mix, the cowboy star, appears in "An Angelic Attitude," which will add brightness to any program.

THE LOVE DOCTOR

With Mack Sennett

1 Reel Comedy

Cast: Mack Sennett, George Nicholls, Eddie Dillon, Florence Barker

M. T. Hedd, M.D., was a doctor whose pet hobby was to disinfect everything for fear of lurking germs. Even with this to draw him back he got along fairly well in the world. Finally, he decided to make love. Strangely enough, he was making considerable progress in this direction, when his foot slipped. He disinfected his lady love's lips before he kissed her. He hasn't stopped running yet. Released July 17th.

A NOBLE SACRIFICE

With Mary Pickford

1 Reel Drama

Cast: Mary Pickford, Arthur Johnson, Florence Lawrence, Mack Sennett, Flora Finch, James Kirkwood

That the maxim "Beauty is only skin deep" is a true one, is the point brought out in this film in a superb manner. The sacrifice of the love of a girl whose beauty had been marred by an unfortunate accident furnishes the central theme of this inspiring masterpiece. An unusual number of stars are presented to bring out the wonderful portrayals of character. Released July 19th.

WHOM GOD HATH JOINED—with Barbara Tennant

2 Reel Drama

Cast: Barbara Tennant, O. A. C. Lund, J. W. Johnson, Alec B. Francis, Guy Hedlund, Julia Stuart

Polka Holla Camp never encountered a worse criminal than Steve Stone. And yet this same Stone won a woman as his wife thru the uncertain medium of a pair of dice. A child was about to be born to the wife and it was at this point in his life that Steve became a real man, offering his life for that of the mother. Her noble soul saved him from the noose, thus fulfilling the almost divine injunction—"Whom God hath joined, let no man part asunder."

This film is a strong, virile study of every conceivable human emotion in the melting pot of caste and race, the Northwest. Exteriors showing miles of "God's own country" rival the faithful reproductions of true-to-life western mountain homes in this wonder-picture. Released Friday, July 21st.

Unicorn Film Service* will prove a winner for you; remember these points:

Twenty-one reels weekly of the best one and two reel subjects ever produced—
Stars of national reputation in every cast—
Clean and clear new film—
Prices lower than you are now paying for poor subjects and worn-out film—
Posters distinctive in design and compelling in character.

Gentlemen:

Just a few lines to let you know that we opened with "The Ne'er-Do-Well," last Monday night to 1,100 paid admissions.

The audience left the theatre praising the picture, and our business increased nightly. On Saturday we showed to 3,100 admissions, making the total for the week, 11,225, or one-fifth of the entire population of Lincoln and its suburbs. This was not accomplished by a sensational advertising campaign. I think this speaks highly for the merits of the picture and is a remarkable showing when you stop to think that there are seven other better located exclusive photoplay theatres with seating capacities ranging from 500 to 1200 showing ---------- programs with tri-weekly changes and at lower admission fees.

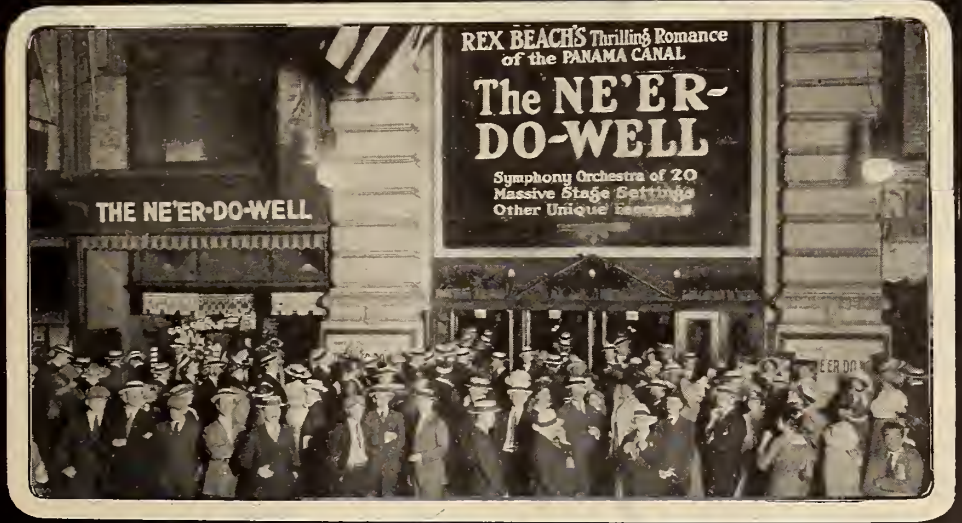
Gentlemen:

I cannot resist telling you of the great success I had with "The Ne'er-Do-Well" in Houston, San Antonio, Beaumont and Waco.

I have played all other great productions in these towns, but have been more successful with "The Ne'er-Do-Well," than any picture I have ever played. In Houston I booked "The Ne'er-Do-Well," for one week, but on account of the tremendous success, booked it for a week return engagement and on the second week, which I have just completed, my business was very much better than the first week.

I have never shown a picture so universally liked.



Yours very truly,
Anthony Xydias.

THE EMINENT CHICAGO NOVELIST

LILIAN BELL

July 4, 1916

My dear Mr. Dixon:

I enjoyed myself rarely last night at The Fall of a Nation. It is dramatic photography raised to the nth power, enhanced a hundred fold by Victor Herbert's music. I never have seen anything like it--probably because there is nothing like it. The finish of this triumph of photography makes other productions seem crude. I shall go again and again and tell my friends to go. I had a distinguished party with me, all of whom were both thrilled and delighted. We hardly breathed!

Faithfully yours Lilian Bell

Ochs Elected President of National League—Action of Trade Association Ratified By Exhibitors

Convention Proves the Largest, Liveliest and the Most Constructive in History of the Industry—A. P. Tugwell, Los Angeles, Is First Vice-President; W. Eisenberg, Mississippi, Second Vice-President; William J. Sweeney, Chicago, Secretary; Peter J. Jeup, Michigan, Treasurer—Frank Rembush and Fred J. Herrington Dropped Out of the Running for President, Paving the Way for Unanimous Election of Ochs

THE Sixth Annual Convention of the M. P. E. L. of America will go down in League history as the largest, liveliest, and the most constructive thus far held. Despite the disorganization of the past three years, the fact that, as usual, all states were negligent or dilatory in sending in their reports, the further fact that from the outset the convention was rattled continuously by a three-cornered political struggle for the presidency, and finally, despite the heat, the convention co-ordinated itself, gave recognition to big questions, thought clearly, expressed itself forcefully, got down to business and did things.

The following officers were elected:

President, Lee A. Ochs, New York; First Vice-President, A. P. Tugwell, Los Angeles; Second Vice-President, W. Eisenberg, Mississippi; Secretary, William J. Sweeney, Chicago; Treasurer, Peter J. Jeup, Michigan.

Frank Rembusch and Fred J. Herrington, both candidates for the presidency, withdrew their names from nomination, and thus paved the way for the election of Mr. Ochs, which was unanimous.

A resolution was later passed to have the League endorse one national exposition hereafter.

Ten Exhibitor Directors Elected

The following ten men were elected by ballot to serve as the directors representing the exhibitors' league in the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry: Thomas Furniss, Frank Rembusch, Samuel H. Trigger, A. P. Tugwell, Louis Blumenthal, Peter Jeup, L. L. Levine, Fred J. Herrington, M. A. Choynski, and Charles H. Phillips.

The dominant thought of the convention, from its outset, was co-operation with the other big branches of the industry. Practically every exhibitor has the matter in mind, and there were present at the convention, from almost every state in the Union, from even such far away states as California, Florida, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Massachusetts, exhibitors of high business standing and ability. The able presentation by Chairman Irwin and associates on the committee to present to the convention the plea of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, seemed to crystallize opinion in the all-important matter of at last joining together the vital branches of the industry into one co-ordinated whole, for protection without and correction within the industry. The problem was thoroughly discussed at lengthy sessions in committee; a contrary resolution was presented; and finally by a vote of 15 to 5 the joint committee of exhibitors, together with W. W. Irwin, Paul Cromelin, Wm. M. Seabury, L. L. Levine and W. A. Johnston, representing the committee at large or trade organization approves in toto the plan submitted and already published in pamphlet form. On Friday morning, preceding the election, the Convention ratified by a unanimous vote and with enthusiasm the report of the joint committee. Thus was accomplished the most important and beneficial action ever recorded in the history of the industry.

The exposition opened Wednesday night in the Coliseum with a crowd estimated conservatively at 25,000, so great in fact, that the fire department of Chicago felt compelled to take measures to control the attendance.

Great credit is due the Chicago exhibitors for the excellent arrangements made in advance for the reception of delegates and the handling of the convention, and in particular for the success of the exposition. The latter followed, it will be remembered, two New York expositions. The committee started with a big handicap and the clouds were never very bright above their efforts. That they succeeded so well does great credit to their organization, and in particular to Chairman W. J. Sweeney, Manager Louis H. Frank and Convention Secretary Fred W. Hartman.

Governor Dunn Enters Hall

The convention was opened Monday morning at 12:30 by President Herrington. Seated on the platform with President Herrington were Peter Jeup, treasurer; James Delves, secretary; Samuel H. Trigger and A. P. Tugwell. Governor Dunne of Illinois, together with Secretary of State Stevenson, son of Adlai A. Stevenson, former Vice-President of the United States, had entered the convention hall at 12:15. Samuel H. Trigger promptly arose and extended to Governor Dunne the greetings of the exhibitors of the State of New York, President Herrington in a brief address introduced Governor Dunne, who was greeted with prolonged applause.

Governor Dunne, after a tribute to the power of the motion picture, said that the industry should be fostered in the interests of the public. He spoke of the censorship

VOL. XIV July 29, 1916 No. 4

The Convention's Big Week

THE Chicago Convention, just closed, stands out as the most constructive meeting of any kind ever held within this industry.

Good men were present and plenty of them—good business men, good organization workers, representative men from all branches of the industry. And they did things.

The biggest piece of work, so big in fact that it overshadowed and even comprehended everything else accomplished, was the ratification by the Motion Picture Exhibitors League and the entrance of this organization into the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

This action was forecasted and urged by this publication. We felt that not only was such a federation of all branches a prime and immediate necessity, but that all thinking exhibitors wanted some such co-operation.

This was true. Co-operation from the very outset was evident on all sides as the keynote of the gathering.

* * *

EXHIBITORS talked it in hotel lobbies, on street corners, on the Convention floor; and finally their thought and action were crystallized in their acceptance of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, its fundamentals and by-laws.

They did not talk it over hastily. There was much discussion and the floor committee of fifteen harangued the question in a session lasting nearly five hours.

But once they moved, they moved with celerity. They ratified it earnestly and unanimously and they stand to-day as the first branch of this industry, the only organized branch, to adopt as a body and to promulgate a federation of the whole industry.

All credit to them!

THE strength of the Convention is also proven, first by its three-cornered struggle for an office now regarded as one worth fighting for, and, secondly, by the fact that the winner was unanimously elected, each of the two other candidates and their followers withdrawing and warmly pledging their support to the victor. They placed organization first.

LEE A. OCHS, to quote his own words, gets what he goes after. If he goes after a successful administration as he went after the presidency he will get it; we believe he will. He is young, ambitious, successful, a tireless worker, conscientious, clear headed and determined. He is not a straddler nor ever on the fence. He is decisive in thought and action. He is an exhibitor first, last and foremost and he will be just this as an exhibitor League president.

Frank J. Rembusch came to the convention with a plan, a mighty good one though its important efforts are comprehended and will be accomplished by the broader plan of the National Trade Association. He put this plan ahead of himself. The plan, not the office, brought him to the convention and when he clearly realized the machinery of the Federation plan he was one of the first to support it; and he was also the first to withdraw his candidacy, placing exhibitor organization before himself.

THE striking success of this, the biggest and best convention thus far held is a testimonial to the retiring president, Fred J. Herrington. Chicago had something to do with it, but Herrington had most.

The San Francisco Convention of last year was one extreme and the Chicago Convention another. To the man who worked in the interim, worked so courageously, unceasingly and self-sacrificingly, is largely due the fact that the presidency of the League is now an honor worth striving for.

* * *

HE had it forced upon him when he did not want it and lost it when he did. But Fred Herrington has gained much more than he lost. He has not alone the sympathy but the utmost respect of every single exhibitor at the convention.

Like every real worker he is modest about his efforts. He works quietly and efficiently away from the limelight, not so well in its glare.

But these very qualities have now given him a new prominence. He has the support of this publication as never before. As organizer of the League we will gladly give to him and to President Ochs as much space as they need to help make the League what it should be. We like him and his manly speech of withdrawal for organization's sake. He will make a very successful organizer.

IF any exhibitor thinks he can now stay out of the M. P. E. L. of America and thereby out of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, he had best think a little further ahead—right now—to the time surely coming when he will need a power to protect him and his box office much greater than his own resources. It behooves him to get in touch at once with his State League.

And another thought: the exhibitors have now entered the National Association. They have elected their ten directors. They are in it to work, and they are workers. It is decidedly up now to all the rest of the industry—to every factor—to hasten a complete organization. Matters are pressing. Action is imperative in many quarters. Let there be no delay.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

bill in the State of Illinois and gave his reason for vetoing it. He found, said he, that the city censorship in Chicago, governing a population of two and one-half millions, was adequate and working well without complaint either from the public or from the industry. He found little sentiment down the State favoring an additional State censorship, and he failed altogether to find any reason for adding a State Board of Censors to the city censorship board. The people of the State as a whole, said he, simply want what is fair. They recognize the value of the motion picture and they do not want any injustice done to it. They feel as he does, the less laws we have, the better. It is up to the producers and exhibitors of pictures, however, as to whether or not there shall be a public demand for censorship. In closing he said: "It depends upon you, gentlemen. Do as we have done in the State of Illinois; continue to produce pictures as good and better than our pictures; and there will be no demand from the public for censorship anywhere."

The Governor Elected Honorary Member

Upon motion by Ben Zerr, of Reading, Pa., Governor Dunne, by a rising vote, was unanimously elected to honorary membership in the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

Secretary of State Stevenson was the next speaker. He said that he had an explanation to make to the exhibitors assembled, inasmuch as he had fought hard in favor of the Illinois censorship bill. The vote of the legislature was almost unanimous. Upon investigation, however, he found that this sentiment was due to the activity of a few people, principally the women's organizations, who were opposed to motion pictures because some of them were unfit to be seen by children. He found, however, that these organizations had not gone at all deeply into the problem of censorship. They went at it superficially, with little knowledge of pictures and the picture industry.

Furthermore, he found that out of the 200 applications which the State received for the three positions of censors, that only one applicant seemed at all fitted for the position. College professors were too narrow; teachers had the wrong angle; one applicant alone, a newspaper man seemed to fill the bill. He decided after a conference with the Governor of the State that it would be extremely difficult, if at all possible, to find for these important positions men of the necessary caliber. Men of unusual ability, said he, were needed. If censorship should again come up in the State of Illinois, Secretary Stevenson said that he would be opposed to any bill for one reason alone, and that is, lack of suitable material for the positions of censors.

Judge Tugwell Pays Tribute to State Executive

Judge A. P. Tugwell responded in his happiest vein. After a tribute to Governor Dunne, he said that he regretted for the first time that he was a citizen of California and not of Illinois, so that he could vote for the re-election of such a man as Governor Dunne. He agreed with Secretary Stevenson that the great trouble with local and State boards of censors everywhere was the utter lack of available material.

Gene Greene, at present with the Monarch Film Company, and a famous circuit entertainer, sang several songs, after which the convention adjourned until 10 a.m. Tuesday.

The following telegram was received from William A. Brady and read with great enthusiasm on the convention floor:

> You ought to take some concerted action against the proposed Government tax which was rushed through the house of representatives yesterday without referring it to a committee, which is the usual method of procedure. This comes because the theatrical business, both legitimate vaudeville and motion picture branches, are not organized but are under the control of a few cliques who run these associations for the benefit of themselves and only act when their own interests are taxed. The motion picture industry should be organized from stem to stern and should include in its organization every branch of the business. It should immediately be put upon such a fighting basis that it will enforce congress, state legislatures and county councils to respect our rights. You have the votes and the means of getting more publicity by the aid of your screens used in unison than any other business in the land. Both Democratic and Republican National Committees are at present busily forming schemes to advance the interests of their presidential candidates by the use of motion pictures. This will give you a true line on the power of the motion pictures in this country. Put a chip on your shoulder. Stick your chin out and state your decision flatly, then you are ready to fight to a finish all obnoxious laws devised by petty grafters against this growing business. You will get nothing by watchful waiting. Now is the time to strike for your rights. Frame a resolution and forward it today to the Senate and House of Representatives at Washington, protesting against any more hostile legislation.
> (Signed) William A. Brady.

Committee on Credentials Appointed

On Tuesday morning President Herrington appointed the following Committee on Credentials: Thomas Furniss of Duluth, W. M. Slimm of Cleveland, A. H. Jones of Tulsa, Moeller of Michigan, and George Henry of Chicago. While this committee was in session an open meeting was held, at which addresses were made by W. Steven Bush, Sam Spedon, P. A. Powers, Harry Reichenbach, Paul Cromelin, Benny Zeidman, and Adolph Zukor. Mr. Bush called the exhibitors' attention to their power as a dominant factor in the industry.

Mr. Spedon, who followed, stated that the power of the exhibitors was self-evident. However, the factor at this convention was not the power of the exhibitor, but their intelligent use of it. He insisted that their good must necessarily be the good of the whole industry, and made an earnest plea that whatever they did at the convention should be done in the interests of the entire industry.

Adolph Zukor declared that the interests of the three great branches of the industry are absolutely identical and must so be considered from now on. Speaking of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, he said that they were open for suggestions and criticisms and wanted to be guided by the exhibitor. He announced that Mary Pickford and Pauline Frederick would be present at the exposition on Saturday.

On Wednesday, James Gilosky of St. Paul was made sergeant-at-arms. The following committees were appointed by President Herrington: Committee on Resolutions, Sam Bullock, A. P. Tugwell, Dr. Rhodes, Louis Blumenthal, and Alfred Hamburger; Committee on Constitution and By-Laws, Chas. H. Philipps, Frank J. Rembush, Lee A. Ochs, Chas. A. Megown, M. I. Choyniski: Ways and Means, Chas. A. Megown, Samuel H. Trigger, Louis H. Frank, Louis Blumenthal, and A. J. Barthel.

Upon motion of Horstman, of Massachusetts, a rising vote of thanks was given to Granville S. MacFarlane, editor of the Boston-American, for his important assistance to the exhibitors of the country and to the entire industry in reopening the Federal Censorship bill. A rising vote of thanks was also given to Gov. Dunne of Illinois and Gov. Whitman of New York for their vetoes of censorship bills in their respective states.

President Herrington announced that the Executive Committee had decided to hold two sessions a day and a night session if necessary in order to complete the business before the convention. It was decided to have no entertainment during convention hours.

Exchanges Not to Rent Films to Antagonistic Churches

The following resolution was unanimously adopted, after a heated discussion, in which an almost unanimous opposition was shown to pictures in church and schools: Resolved: That it is the unanimous sentiment of the M. P. E. L. of America that exchanges shall not lease films to churches, schools or others that shall interfere with any exhibitor without the organization first obtaining the consent of the exhibitor in that vicinity.

On Thursday morning the Resolution Committee presented to the convention a resolution offered them by Frank J. Rembush and approved by them calling for co-operation between the producers, distributors and exhibitors to secure a system of credit and terms and agreements regarding film service. This resolution was adopted by the convention, but later in the day, upon motion, it was tabled for further reconsideration.

The Committee on Constitution and By-Laws presented a considerable number of changes, which were ratified by the convention. President Herrington announced that the convention session, beginning at 2:30, would be given over for three hours to the committee, appointed by the committee at large on trade organization, to present to the convention their report. Chairman W. W. Irwin of this committee opened the discussion with a speech in which he explained the fundamentals of the proposed Trade Association, and which brought forth considerable applause.

"Until recently," said Mr. Irwin, "a barrier has existed between the various branches of the industry, particular between the two great branches, producers and exchange men, on the one part, and exhibitors on the other, by which instead of doing business with mutual confidence and co-operation, most transactions were conducted with commercial enmity, and consequently at economic sacrifices, and the industry has been torn by jealousy, suspicion and misunderstanding.

"I know that it is apparent to you, gentlemen, that the time has arrived in this industry when every branch must consider itself an important member of the motion picture family. It must be self-evident that our domestic disputes and trials ought to be settled within the family circle instead of being displayed to those who would take advantage of them. That wherever a question arises which affects the entire industry, our attitude towards it ought to be determined by a majority vote.

Every Branch of Industry in Harmony

"So it has seemed to a great many that if each branch of the industry and every organization in any branch of the industry could be brought into association by which we could present for discussion and deliberation all questions affecting the industry as a whole, that the minority in all instances, after a full and free discussion, ought to be willing and would be willing to abide by the rule of the majority.

"It likewise must be self-evident to the exhibitors that neither their national association, nor their state or local associations can be as effective in matters pertaining to the industry as a whole, as they would be if we were working in conjunction with all of the other members of the motion picture family. In any event it has become perfectly apparent to the other branches of the industry, that they cannot produce the desired results in behalf of the whole industry, except by the co-operation of every branch, including the exhibitors with their tremendous influence extending over the entire country.

"For these reasons those at the luncheon on June 8 constituted themselves a committee at large for bringing into association each branch of the industry for protection and promotion through concerted influence and effort. A committee of twelve was appointed to endeavor to work out a plan which would embody each branch of the industry, and which would be fair and equitable to all alike.

"This sub-committee formulated a plan which was presented at a second luncheon last week, and unanimously approved.

"The plan instead of attempting to destroy or weaken any existing organization such as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has for its foundation the fostering and strengthening of your organization and of any similar organizations that may come into existence, for it was the belief of the committee that such an organization as yours ought to be aided and encouraged, so that it will attain its greatest effectiveness and have for its membership all of the exhibitors of the country. In fact, it takes for its example the national and state governments, by which each branch shall govern itself, shall determine all questions within itself, just as do the States; shall be encouraged and helped to great strength and influence, and shall only be governed by a majority of the entire instances affecting the industry as a whole; just as the national government acts in behalf of all the people when all are affected or threatened; and at the same time the plan furnishes a channel through which each branch may become acquainted with the others and an amicable adjustment of internal differences effected; for it is felt that all reasonable men need is a means through which to understand the viewpoints and difficulties of each other in order to arrive at a fair disposition of questions in controversy.

"In fact this plan proposes that no exhibitor shall become a member of the associated branches of the industry except by joining the Motion Picture League of America, and it is believed that if this association of the branches, this federation, is brought to its proper strength and influence, that there will be no exhibitor, big or little, who will not want to have a voice in the affairs of the whole industry, and who therefore will be compelled to join the Exhibitors' League of America in order to give expression to his views and exert his influence.

Committee Explains By-Laws

Mr. Irwin was followed by these members of the committee, who explained in detail the by-laws and budget: Wm. A. Seabury, Paul Cromelin, and L. L. Levine. During the discussion the officers and branch managers of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, who are in session in Chicago and who had just arrived at the Convention Hall, were introduced from the platform by Carl H. Pierce. Addresses were made by L. J. Selznick, Marcus Loew, Hiram W. Abrams, and Frank J. Rembush.

Following a discussion on the National Trade Association, as proposed by the committee from New York, President Herrington appointed the following committee to confer with the committee from New York: Sam Bullock, A. P. Tugwell, Dr. Rhodes, Louis Blumenthal, Alfred Hamburger, M. I. Choyniski, S. H. Trigger, F. J. Rembush, C. A. Megown, C. H. Philipps, Thos. Furniss, W. J. Sweeney, S. H. Jones, A. J. Barthel, Peter J. Jeup, E. H. Horstman, A. H. Blank, W. Eisenberg, E. A. Ochs, and Carl Kettler, Jr. The two committees went into executive session in the evening, and after four hours' delay approved in toto the report and plan of trade organization adopted by the committee at large on trade organization at their luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York, on July 6.

At Friday's session the following important changes in the constitution and by-laws were made:

Article 3. Officers shall remain as at present, but two additional men shall be appointed by the president to the Executive Committee.

Article 5. Two new sections: (1) A State to be in good standing must have paid its per capita tax for the current quarter. (2) Any State represented on the floor of the convention shall be allowed to vote its five votes allowed under the constitution, in addition to the actual number of delegates present.

Article 3, section 2. The per capita tax shall be changed from two dollars to one dollar.

Article 7. This league shall have the power of joining any association for the promotion of the welfare of the industry.

Only regular and bona-fide exhibitors shall be elected to the offices of secretary and treasurer, and the latter placed under a $10,000 bond.

Upon motion by Chas. E. Megown it was carried that the present Committee on Constitution and By-Laws be continued actively throughout the ensuing year to report at the next annual convention.

Gives Luncheon for Publicity Men by V-L-S-E

Sidney E. Abel, in behalf of V-L-S-E, gathered together a company of Chicago newpaper critics and representatives of a number of the trade journals of New York and Chicago for a luncheon at the Chicago Athletic Association, Wednesday of the convention week.

Those present at the luncheon were Louella Parsons, of the Chicago Herald; Kitty Kelly, of the Chicago Tribune; Joslyn, of the Chicago Post; Messrs. John B. Rock, of the Vitagraph Company; Bennie, of Lubinville; J. Mooney, Alfred Hamburger, W. H. McHenry, of the Exhibitors' Herald; Bob McKnight, of the Chicago Examiner; Fred Beecroft, of the Dramatic Mirror; Wid Gunning, of "Wid's," Sam Spedon, advertising manager of the Vitagraph Company; W. K. Hollander, of the Chicago News; E. I. Masters, advertising manager of V-L-S-E; Gordon Laurence, and several others.

The object of the luncheon was for the purpose of extending to the representatives of the press the open hand of hospitality from the Chicago office of V-L-S-E. After an introductory talk by Mr. Abel, Mr. Breetroft was called upon to offer a few complimentary words to the Chicago press.

Wid Gunning said that the secret of success of motion picture producers in the future is to make fewer pictures and make them better, and prevail upon the exhibitors to run these pictures three or four days instead of one, thereby making more money for themselves as well as the exchanges.

Mr. Masters said: "The newspapers should entirely divorce their editorial columns from their advertising columns, and advertisers should not expect to receive free publicity in proportion to their paid space. We all want publicity, but editors want to, and always will print the kind of stuff that is real news, and it is up to the producers to supply the right kind of material. Advertising is legitimate news in itself, and no newspaper should subsidize one news column for another. This may sound like heresy, but it is the attitude that is going to come among producers."

Mr. Spedon then livened up the party with a little of his ready wit.

Mr. Hollander gave a most interesting talk on the inside workings of his newspaper, in which he explained how the Daily News, in its editorial columns, and through its directory of theatres, is constantly improving the motion picture business in Chicago.

Brady Addresses Convention

William A. Brady addressed the convention on Saturday on adverse legislation and other problems affecting the industry. In regard to the bill now before Congress he said:

"I tell you that unless this bill is headed off the motion picture and legitimate interest will be paying out millions and millions of dollars, for you will have to give up to the Government one-half of one per cent. of your gross receipts; and let me tell you something else—that bill was rushed through Congress without referring it to a committee.

"It is a custom that when a bill is offered which may work a hardship on any person or industry, it is referred to a committee, which is authorized to hear both sides of the question, but in this case, 'zowie!' they rushed it through. They simply mulcted this business because this business is unprotected, unorganized. Nobody ever lost anything by being known as a fighter, and fighting spirit can only be brought about by organizations. When I say organizations I not only refer to exhibitors, I will go further than that. Demand a hearing. Telegraph to President Wilson, to Champ Clark. Telegraph to your Senator, to your Congressman, demand a hearing. We are human beings, business men, and we deserve square treatment.

"They pick motion pictures out to censor. Every trivial thing that they can heap on they do in order to grab on this business —that is making so much money in their mind. Fight it nationally. Don't leave the fight for the State of Ohio, don't let the men in Idaho fight by themselves. Have the other go to Tallahassee, and one go to Phoenix, Ariz., and say we stand here representing the motion picture business in the United States, nationally, not locally. The future of pictures does not depend upon any one State, but upon the whole country. And it depends upon education. Soon the highest class schools and colleges in the United States will include among its necessary equipment a motion picture machine and a library of motion picture records, and it is upon the producer rests the burden. He can provide entertainment with education. He can make the motion picture as great as the newspaper or the church. Sensation, sensation. Don't put anything on your screen that you don't want your daughter or your own child to see. Introduce into your organization a decree that any man who maliciously makes a dirty picture be ostracised, expelled.

An Alarming Condition

"The motion picture business has been using up material so fast an alarming condition is going to appear presently. In reading the criticisms of the exhibitors I find one line constantly appearing: 'We don't want romances, we want modern stories.' There are just so many modern stories. So many things can happen between a woman and two men or two women and a man. Don't tell your branch man, 'We don't want romance.' Get your public used to it. Get your public used to it so that you can put Dickens, Shakespeare, Thackeray, Tolstoi, etc., before them. Then you open up to the motion picture industry an enormous field of stories, once you bring them out of the hysteria of 'Perils of Divorce,' 'The Poor Old Shop Girl,' and 'When Nellie Left Home.'

"Fight the crooked, grafting politician through your screen. Then you will get attention, then you will get the representation in Congress you are entitled to and which you ought to have. You will get more by fighting than by watchful waiting.

The most important of the numerous resolutions adopted was one condemning in strong language the Hughes bill for legalized Federal censorship of motion picture films, which is now before Congress for immediate action. The delegates, led by President Herrington, went on record as regarding it as a pernicious piece of legislation, particularly detrimental to the interests of exhibitors.

Important Resolutions Adopted

They also condemned the Pathe Exchange, Inc., for sending letters to exhibitors throughout the United States calling upon them to communicate with Congressmen, requesting them to support the Hughes censorship measure.

The convention also went on record against being forced by film exchanges to feature serial pictures their full course when they do not come up to expectations, and reserving the privilege to cancel such serials as are unprofitable to run and unsatisfactory to their patrons.

Two more amendments were made to the constitution, one permitting the league to affiliate and become members of other associations and organizations formed to promote the welfare of the industry, and another reducing the annual dues from two dollars to one dollar.

Clarabel, Chicago Citizeness, Comments on Coliseum Convention

"HERE we are at Fourteenth street, Myrtle, and there's the Coliseum. Gee, I'm excited. No, I've got the money all ready, let me pay. Look! There's the Universal place; I wonder if King Baggott is there. Look at the red feathers—I want one of those. There's the guy who wrote Buck Parvin. I just heard somebody call him Van Loan. Who's that under the picture of Universal City? Maybe he's a new leading man—everybody calls him Joe.

"Say, I guess that Bluebird booth ain't swell, with the fountain and everything. I wonder if there're giving away blue-birds. No, I guess not, but they sure have a nifty hang-out.

"There's the General Film place. Look at those pictures! That's one of Bessie Eyton over there. I saw her on State street a few weeks ago. She used to play in Chicago. Look at that funny make-up. Oh, it's a Puritan, and he's advertising Knickerbocker Star Features. I'm coming back here later, it seems so comfortable.

"Lookie! Charlie Chaplin! No, it must be an imitation, 'cause there's six of them. Here's Charlie's salary checks, nothin' phoney about them. That boy is hard up, ain't he? They're giving away free post cards of the stars. Let me have all of them, please. Look at that sign, 'Purity will have its premier Chicago showing at one of the large downtown theatres.' The idea! I bet there's as much purity in Chicago as anywheres else.

Here's where we buy tickets for something. No, they're just showing how it's done with an Automatic Ticket Seller. 'Automatic!' I bet lots of exhibitors wish their tickets would sell automatically.

For Actors, Like Sam Trigger and Judge Tugwell

"You register here at this booth. No, I guess it's just for actors, like Sam Trigger and Judge Tugwell, we saw over there.

"There's a painting of Theda Bara in the Fox space. Ain't she just fascinating? Here's some stills of the Kellermann picture. Annette looks like the dames up at the Wilson avenue beach—not!

Here's a girl selling tickets with a National Cash Register. Sure she is real, look at her breathe. Yes, she has a nice complexion. She is not a doll! See her turn her head? Look at the tickets jump right up at you.

"What's that fellow doing with the black stick? Oh, I see, they're National carbons. See, he is showing how cool they are after being used.

"What are all those machines? Motiographs, whatever they are. 'Price $285' it says in electric lights. Oh, they run the pictures through them? I've always wanted to see the inside of the picture game.

"There's some movie power plants. No, the name of them is Powers. They put the fillum in those, and then the picture goes.

"Where's that quartette? Over there it is. Gee, what a crowd! See that guy over there? He makes the music all by himself, and it sounds like a big symphony orchestra. What's the name, oh yes, Bartola. I want that Bartola fox trot they're giving away. Thank you.

"See those big pictures of Billie Burke. She's a dear. It's the Kleine Optical Company. I guess they give you glasses so that you won't lose an eye looking at Billie. No, I see, they have these picture machines all the way back to 1896, and up to now to show the improvement. That nice one there is called Simplex—manufactured by the auto people, maybe. That's Harry Watson. No, not Sherlock's assistant, he's the funny guy I saw over at the Ziegfeld.

"Here's Mr. Hamburger's booth, and they're giving away five dollar bills! No, they're free passes to let you into the Fine Arts or V.-L.-S.-E. theatres. Give me a stack of those.

"Lordy, that E. E. Fulton fountain looks cool. I wish I could jump in. Look at all the machinery. When we see a fillum, we don't realize how complicated it is to run it.

The Longest Slide in the Business

"Say, there's a giant! I bet he's ten feet tall and works in pictures. No, that's Tom Phillips, who makes slides, and the sign says he's 'the longest in the business.'

"Here's where they give you fun—the 'Amusement Supply' it's called. No, they have picture machines and stuff for theatres. They have a lot of it, haven't they?

"Don't mind me if I blush. Look at those pictures of 'Diana.' I guess it's a 'back to nature' fillum!

"There's some chinks in masquerade suits over there. They're advertising the 'Yellow Peril.'

"Is this a water wheel here? No, it's a Typhoon, to cool you with. Just feel that breeze.

"Here's something pretty—Decorators' Supply! I guess they furnish you with calsomine artists. We'll remember that when we have the flat painted next time.

"The Newman Company made all those nice brass frames for posters.

"Ain't that grand? Here's a lot of sample stages, with decorations, lights and everything. The Sosman and Landis studios put them out.

"There goes the band! Let's run over there. Get off my foot, you slob! Everybody's going to the Essanay booth. Oh, Myrtle, look who's there. There's Henry B. Walthall, the Marshall Field of the screen, they call him. And there's Dick Travers, I'm gonna speak to him.

"Look at the gown Edna Mayo has, ain't she the swell dresser! My goodness, did you ever see such a crowd? They've broken down the railing. Hello, Mr. Maupain, I've always wanted to—aw, somebody shoved me away. Real stars! Well, I've got something to tell my cousin in Kenosha!

"The Central Film Company is here. They have the Clara Kimball Young pictures, you know. She's gonna be here tomorrow, and believe me, I'm gonna be here too.

Some Other Things the Visitor Sees

"Gee, those trained nurses are pretty. I guess they're from the American Theatrical Hospital tent. No, they are going to the 'How Britain Prepared' booth. Have you seen it at the Colonial?

"There's all the magazines and papers in that row. I'm gonna get a copy of each and read all about my idols.

"The Auto Arc there feeds the carbon into the machine all by itself. The Arcus Ticket Company there makes the movie pasteboards.

"The Johnstown Automatic Register and Menger and Ring and Hamburg exhibits are nice, but I want to hear what this guy is singing over here. It's the Seeburg organs—that's nice music. Give me one of those Chaplin cards. Ha, ha, watch Charlie hit that dandy with his cane—ain't it a scream?

"Don't you love ukaleles? Listen to those Japs play in the Metro booth. And look at the little chickens there in the moss—ain't they cute? Those parrots are saying 'Metro,' can you beat it? That's one of the best places I've seen yet.

"That's Gene Green in the Monarch place. He sure can pound the horse teeth and warble the rag.

"That's catchy music over there. What is it?—oh, the Fotoplayer.

"There's a handsome display. Do you see the white pillars with a white Simplex in front of the black curtains? One of the machines is throwing a picture at that screen in the Mid West Theatre Supply booth.

"Those are sure pretty ladies at the World Film, see, they're giving away real roses. Let me have two of those, please, and can I get some for a friend of mine? You know Alice Brady's gonna be here Friday, and I'm gonna hear her tell how to get in the movies. I might be a knock-out in celluloid myself.

"Do you see that chicken—no not that girl with the rouge—that white rooster with 'Pathe' on it? And there's the Black Hand exhibit. Oh, no, it's just the world in the 'Grip of Evil,' the new Pathe serial.

"Well I guess the Paramount place ain't gorgeous! Those are real gold fish there. You know Pauline Frederick and the other big ones are coming for the Paramount day, and just think, dear little Mary Pickford will be here too. I'll be here, even if I do get killed in the mob.

"Here's the Reel Fellows and Film clubs. I wish I could belong to some nice movie club.

"There's a picture of Mutt and Jeff and Mr. and Mrs. Castle at the Celebrated Players. No, you have them mixed, that one is Vernon.

"Those Westinghouse fans sure look good. Let's wait here a minute to cool off. I'm roasting.

"You can see the International Film map from here. It has the number of readers of the Hearst publications in every state, you see there are 2,414,000 in Illinois. I must have those souvenirs of Jean Sothern, Howard Estabrook and Irene Castle.

"Let's see that Mills Novelty automatic violin. Wait a minute, there's free dancing upstairs. Let's run. Oh, and free movies, let's go there; we can dance any time.

"See all the souvenirs I've got. I'm coming every night from now on. Ain't it great to see a real Convention."

THEATRES IN EDMONTON AFFECTED BY EXODUS OF SOLDIERS FOR TRAINING CAMP

OVER 5,000 soldiers have left Edmonton, Alta., for the military training camp at Sarcee, near Calgary, for the summer months, and as a result the patronage at Edmonton theatres has fallen off considerably. Four theatres, the Bijou, with musical tabloids and pictures; the Empire, a combination house; the Orpheum and the Garland have closed for the season.

The Gem, the only house in the city showing Mutual first-run pictures, is scheduled to close next week, until the soldiers return from their training camp in September.

Thanhouser Will Release Through Pathe Exchange

New Rochelle Company Agrees to Supply Two Five Reel Features a Month for the Gold Rooster Program, Beginning in August—Thanhouser Influenced by Pathe Plan to Have Every Exhibitor Visited at Least Once a Month by Salesmen from One of Its Thirty Exchanges

THE Thanhouser Film Corporation announces that arrangements have been made with Pathe for the release of two five-reel features per month, on Pathe's program of Gold Rooster plays, beginning in August. The contract was signed Wednesday, July 12, by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and Edwin Thanhouser, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation.

This announcement sets at rest many rumors which have been circulated since Thanhouser announced it would no longer release on the Mutual program. It was reported that there would be an alliance between Paramount and Thanhouser. That Pathe had secured the pictures of this producing company came as a distinct surprise.

"I take great pleasure in announcing an alliance with Pathe," Mr. Thanhouser said to an interviewer in his home in New Rochelle. "Our decision was based on a careful investigation of the motion picture field. One of the most important factors that led to our conclusion to release through Pathe, was the fact that Mr. Berst is now general manager of that company.

"I consider Mr. Berst one of the most important factors in the motion picture industry today. Through his long years of association with exhibitors and manufacturers, he has a deep insight into all of the details of the motion picture business.

Familiar with Plans of Pathe

"I am familiar with his plans for the expansion of Pathe's activities in America and I am glad that we have been able to make arrangements to release our out-put through a concern with such an enviable reputation."

It is known that another important factor in Mr. Thanhouser's decision was the Pathe accounting system.

It is known that Mr. Thanhouser was also influenced by the fact that every exhibitor in the United States is visited at least once a month by a salesman from one of the thirty Pathe exchanges.

"With our splendid facilities in our New Rochelle and Jacksonville studios, we could turn out eight features a month," said Mr. Thanhouser. "Instead we will concentrate on two productions every month. Three of these features have already been made. We have under contract excellent stars, authors and directors."

Mr. Berst was equally enthusiastic about having gained the Thanhouser production for the Pathe program. Mr. Berst made the following statement:

"Thanhouser pictures have been known and admired by exhibitors and public alike for years. The Thanhouser Film Corporation achieved success in the early days of the industry. Each year it has made its success still greater. The Thanhouser people know the picture business from the ground up. The first features they have made for release through Pathe are excellent. Mr. Thanhouser and his associates are broad-minded and able men, with whom it is a pleasure to be associated in a business way.

"Our combination with Thanhouser gives us more productions for the greater Pathe program. With Arrow, Astra, Balboa, Blache and Thanhouser—with contracts for picture rights to the stage successes of Al. H. Woods and Henry W. Savage, and with a staff which includes some of America's best playwrights, we guarantee future releases up to the standard of 'At Bay,' 'Via Wireless,' 'Madame X.', 'The Woman's Law' and 'New York,' which rank among the greatest features ever produced. Pathe feature releases compare with Pathe Serials and Pathe News, which all admit are in a class by themselves."

Negotiations Begun Some Time Ago

Negotiations looking toward the alliance between Thanhouser and Pathe were begun some time ago between Mr. Berst and W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, which releases its features and "Who's Guilty?" series through Pathe. Mr. Shallenberger is the largest individual stockholder in the Thanhouser Film Corporation.

Other Producers Negotiating

With preliminary negotiations opened between Mr. Berst and Mr. Shallenberger, the matter was placed before the executive committee of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, consisting of Crawford Livingston, chairman; Mr. Thanhouser and Mr. Shallenberger. At Mr. Shallenberger's suggestion, it was decided that Mr. Thanhouser should conduct the negotiations with Mr. Berst.

It is rumored that certain other producing companies are negotiating with regard to an alliance with Pathe.

Paramount Announces List of Releases for Next Half Year

After Showing Audiences "In Picturesque Prague, the Capital City of Bohemia," Mr. Holmes Will Take Spectators from Carlsbad to Moravia

REPORTING the increasing success of its Burton Holmes Travelogues, now six months young, Paramount announces the list of releases for the next half-year.

After having shown "In Picturesque Prague, the Capital City of Bohemia," Mr. Holmes will take his audiences from Carlsbad to Moravia, and then to "Innsbruck, the Capital of the Austrian Tyrol." This is followed in weekly succession by "In South Tyrol, the Italian Corner of Austria"; "Climbing the Austrian Alps," "In Switzerland," "In Southern Italy," "Life on the Island of Capri," "Seeing Naples," "Vesuvius in Eruption," "A Grecian Journey," "The Olympian Games in Athens," "Marathon Day in Greece," "In Modern Egypt," "The Real Streets of Cairo," "Round About the Pyramids," "An Egyptian Round-up," "Up the River Nile," "Luxor and Karnak, or In Ancient Egypt," "On the Nubian Nile," "The Sunny South of England," "Motoring in England or English Town and Country," "Glasgow to Edinboro," "Bonnie Scotland," "A Scotch-Irish Reel" and also "In Old Ireland."

For the Christmas and Yuletide holiday weeks Mr. Holmes is preparing special reels for that time of the year, the announcements of which will be made shortly.

Pathe Announces Program for Week of the 24th

Last Chapter of "Who's Guilty?" Series Will Be Released—It Will Be Followed by "The Grip of Evil," Featuring Jackie Saunders

PATHE has announced its program up to the end of July. The week of the 24th will see the last chapter of the "Who's Guilty?" series, which will be followed by the new series, "The Grip of Evil," featuring Jackie Saunders and Roland Bottomley. The first chapter will be released the week of the 17th, under the title "Fate."

Another leading attraction of the Pathe program for the week of the 17th is "The Shadow of Her Past," a Gold Rooster play featuring Lina Cavalieri and her husband, Lucien Muratore. The film was made under Mr. Muratore's direction in Italy.

"Home, Sweet Home," a Goldberg cartoon, will be presented the same week, as well as "Unfriendly Fruit," a Heine and Louie comedy, and a short educational, "The Caterpillar."

In the week of the 24th, the second chapter of "The Grip of Evil," entitled "The Underworld" will appear. The lonesome Luke comedy is "Luke, the Crystal Gazer," with Harold Lloyd. Following this, comes a split-reel industrial and scenic, "Paper Parasols."

Two editions of the Pathe News will be issued each work.

BERST ATTENDS CONVENTION IN CHICAGO

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., showed his appreciation of the importance of the National Convention of the Exhibitors League at Chicago by leaving New York on Saturday afternoon for the convention city, where he remained through Monday.

With Mr. Berst went Pearl White, the star of numerous Pathe serials, and Miss White plunged into the work of distributing various souvenirs and compliments of the Pathe Company at the Exposition.

FIFTY MEMBERS OF RIALTO FAMILY FETE ROTHAPFEL

Fifty members of the Rialto family enjoyed a banquet after the performance last week tendered by the Rialto orchestra to Managing Director S. L. Rothapfel. The occasion was Mr. Rothapfel's birthday and the affair was arranged by the musicians through a committee consisting of H. Hand and F. Cork as a surprise. It was held in the promenade at the rear of the orchestra, where a canvas was spread and the banquet table placed.

The guests included the executive staff and the technical and mechanical staff. After a period of music and speeches Mr. Rothapfel was presented with a loving cup, the gift of the latter staff; a mahogany phonograph, the gift of Alfred de Manby; and a handsome pipe set, presented by the ushers.

The feature of the evening was the playing for the first time of a March, "Hello, Sam" composed by Hermann Hand, the French horn soloist, in Mr. Rothapfel's honor and dedicated to him. The piano score of the March, bound in leather and encased in a mahogany casket was presented to Mr. Rothapfel with an appropriate address.

PLAN UNDER WAY TO MERGE TWO OHIO ASSOCIATIONS

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, July 15.

Plans have been completed for the consolidation of the two powerful rival associations of Ohio motion pictures exhibitors having headquarters at Cleveland and at Cincinnati. Sometime in September or October, a convention will be held in Cincinnati to complete the merger, according to a communication received by H. Serkowich, secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce, from C. A. Megowan of Cleveland, chairman of the executive board of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Ohio, and Frank Beverstock, of Mansfield, a director of the Cleveland organization.

The new combine expects to remedy with harmony all the evils hitherto fostered by rivalry.

"SELF-DEFENSE" ALMOST READY FOR RELEASE

The Canadian military drama, "Self Defense," which has been in the course of production for the last three months and which has been officially sanctioned by and produced in co-operation with the Canadian military department, is now announced as being almost ready for public presentation. The filming of the many and varied scenes has been completed and the assembling of the nine part military spectacle is now under way and will be finished shortly.

During the past week a battle scene was staged at the mobilization camp at Carling Heights, London, Ontario, Canada, in which over five thousand men participated and in which the general staff of the camp also experienced their first dip into the sea of motion picture actoring.

Universal's Two Booths at Entrance of Exposition Hall

Company Spends $11,500 on Exhibits in the Coliseum, Chicago—Display Surpasses That of the Corporation at Madison Square Garden in the Spring

The Universal Exhibit at the Chicago Exposition and Convention

THE Universal-Mutual exhibit at the Chicago convention surpasses the one at Madison Square Garden. Dozens of banners, pennants, miniature electrically lighted statues of "Liberty," the new Universal serial, an electric light display which cost the Universal $7,500, two bands, two booths right at the main entrance to the Coliseum and all the available Big U stars combine to call the attention of the public to the fact that the Universal is very much on the job.

On the night of Thursday, July 13, a mammoth ball was held by the Universal in the Louis XVI ballroom of the Sherman Hotel, which was attended by two hundred delegates from all parts of the country, representing every state in the Union. President Laemmle and Joe Brandt, general manager of the Universal, addressed the exhibitors, outlined the scope of the Universal's fight against censorship, its progressive policy and constant improvement of its program; of the millions being spent at Universal City in the interest of better pictures; of the new Universal serial, "Liberty," shortly to be released, and the submarine film, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," now being cut from 185,000 feet to ten reels.

Later Claude Plough and Maurice Fleckles gave short talks to the exhibitors present, talks just long enough not to interfere with the general gayety of the occasion.

One of the most popular songs played at the ball was Ted Barron's song of songs, "Liberty."

The first two exhibits, as the visitors enters the building, are the Bluebird and Universal. The Bluebird display consists of an arbor of trellis work, covered with flowers. Bluebirds, in cages, hang between the six arches, bearing the message: "The Play's the Thing."

Rustic benches are placed under the arbors and beautiful souvenirs are given out. Universal has spent $11,500 on the two exhibits and by the time the show is over it is safe to predict that the company will have spent close to seventeen or eighteen thousand dollars.

"Independent Producer Must Make Good Pictures to Succeed"

Lee Kugel, of Kulee Features, Outlining Policy Pursued by His Company in Distributing "The Unborn," Calls Attention to Peculiarity of State Rights' Market

THE increased activity shown by the independent producer as evidenced by his output of pictures for the State Right buyer, calls attention to the indisputable fact that he must, out of necessity, produce a better box-office attraction than the producing companies who are allied with a program," says Lee Kugel of Kulee Features.

"To begin with, the independent producer must run the gauntlet of the most discriminating critic in the world, and that is the State Right buyer who has to sell his picture to the exhibitor upon the individual merit of the picture instead of the collective output of a program.

"The State Right buyer is interested only in successful pictures. He has the opportunity of seeing them before purchasing. Another reason why the manufacturer of pictures for State Right consumption must put out better material is because the man he sells to cannot do as the program people do—collect for their picture a month in advance.

"Lately the exhibitor has been brought to a realization that although he is a subscriber to a program, when the program manufacturer makes an unusual picture, he 'State Rights' it and the exhibitor gets left. It would appear that the sooner the moving picture manufacturer puts his business on a pure commercial basis and governs himself accordingly, the sooner will the irresponsible manufacturer and exhibitor be eliminated. Fair dealing and upright methods should be as characteristic of the motion picture industry as it is in commercial lines of the highest order.

"In the distribution of "The Unborn," the five-reel picture the Kulee Company is selling, we are trying to exercise the same degree of fair play and square dealing that one would expect in doing business with the United States Steel Company or any other large institution."

GERMAN SUBMARINE ON SCREEN 13 HOURS AFTER ARRIVAL IN BALTIMORE

At 7 o'clock on the morning of July 10, the now famous German submarine Deutschland arrived at the port of Baltimore after its history-making trip across the Atlantic. Thirteen hours later the Hearst International News Pictorial flashed the film upon the screen of leading New York theatres.

When the first flash came of the arrival of this super-submarine, Hearst International cameramen were dispatched from New York, Washington and Philadelphia. Arriving in Baltimore, they chartered the tug, and accompanied the strange craft into the harbor. Thirty minutes later they were on their way back to New York.

The Deutschland pictures are also shown in the current release of July 11.

Mack Sennett Is in New York Conferring with Triangle Heads

General of the Keystone Forces Talks of His Plant and How Hard Sometimes It is to Get the Right Kind of Comedy to Keep Sleepy Audiences Awake

MACK SENNETT, managing director of Keystone comedies, is spending a week or ten days in New York, in which time he will meet in conference with other Triangle heads, including Thomas Ince and D. W. Griffith. Mr. Sennett shakes his head, smiles and shrugs his shoulders when asked what's brewing and says there is nothing of importance to tell, which of course is quite true, for there isn't—yet.

The peer of comedy-directors did however talk about the Keystone plant and activities out there in Los Angeles. Said he to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "The supply of good comedy is running shorter every minute. The better stuff you hand out to the public, the better they want. In the old days, we used to finish up a reel of film in a day or two. I'd set out for locations without the slightest idea of what I was going to put my company to do when we all got there. Usually if a tree was shaped in an odd manner so the leading comedian could have some fun with it, and if there was a little water in the background for the police to fall into, we were all right. We'd make the things up as we went along and sometimes it would be good and sometimes it wouldn't.

"Producing comedies in the present (of course I'm referring to Keystones only) is a long and tedious process. You can't measure the time it takes to make a two-reel picture of our brand. A week, more likely ten days, two weeks—a month—any time. When one of my directors is finally through with his work, mine commences. My director may turn in four, five or six thousand feet of film in one picture and then comes the hardest and best part of it all—cutting.

"I sit and look at the picture and slash and cut and slash until the picture is in natural length. You may call it two reels, but it may be two thousand feet, fifteen hundred, eighteen hundred or any intermediate length. Some of my directors think I'm crazy when I'm cutting—they don't say so though, because I'm the boss. Zip, go the shears and I gently but firmly remove four hundred feet of negative all in a lump. In its place goes a ten-foot leader. 'Why, Mr. Sennett,' exclaims the director, growing light green, 'I spent two weeks getting that stuff.' 'Well, you can have it, it hampers the action, so I don't want it in the picture,' is the answer I usually give. And so it is left out. Perhaps I'm wrong, but—the director is working for me."

The reader who has seen Keystones can tell whether Mr. Sennett is wrong or right and it requires little deliberation.

Mr. Sennett was asked as to the character of the forthcoming Mabel Normand feature, on which she is at work under the guidance of a Keystone director. "Just a little Keystone stuff will go in that," he answered. "Its going to be a light drama and there are going to be no sleeping periods in it. Whenever we come to a point where it would be natural for the observer to fall asleep, there is going to be a laugh to keep him awake. We have tried to gage these points correctly. And as to the length? It may be seven, six, five, four, three or two reels, that all depends, but it will be a special feature anyway. It's also going to progress from first to last, nothing in it incidental and only incidental, everything will build the plot further along on its way. The side stuff is to be cut out when there's no use for it.

Here Mr. Sennett went back to present-day troubles in making comedies and referred specifically to "The Snow Cure," one of the later Keystone-Triangles. "There was a bear in that picture," he said, "and in one scene that bear had to climb up on a trapezee. Well, we had to shoot that scene forty times before we had it the way we wanted it."

Dixon's "Foolish Virgin" Is Second Subject for Miss Young

The Author Sells the Rights to the Novel Only Because He Feels That the Actress Is Best Fitted to Present the Chief Character in Screen Form

THE Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation announces as the subject for its second feature picture "The Foolish Virgin," by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Birth of a Nation."

Miss Young, who is already at work upon the screen adaptation of Robert W. Chambers' widely read novel, "The Common Law," will begin the presentation of the Dixon novel within a week or two. This will be in accordance with the system devised by Albert Capellani, director-general of the corporation, under which Miss Young will be able to work in two productions simultaneously and the schedule of one release a month can be adhered to.

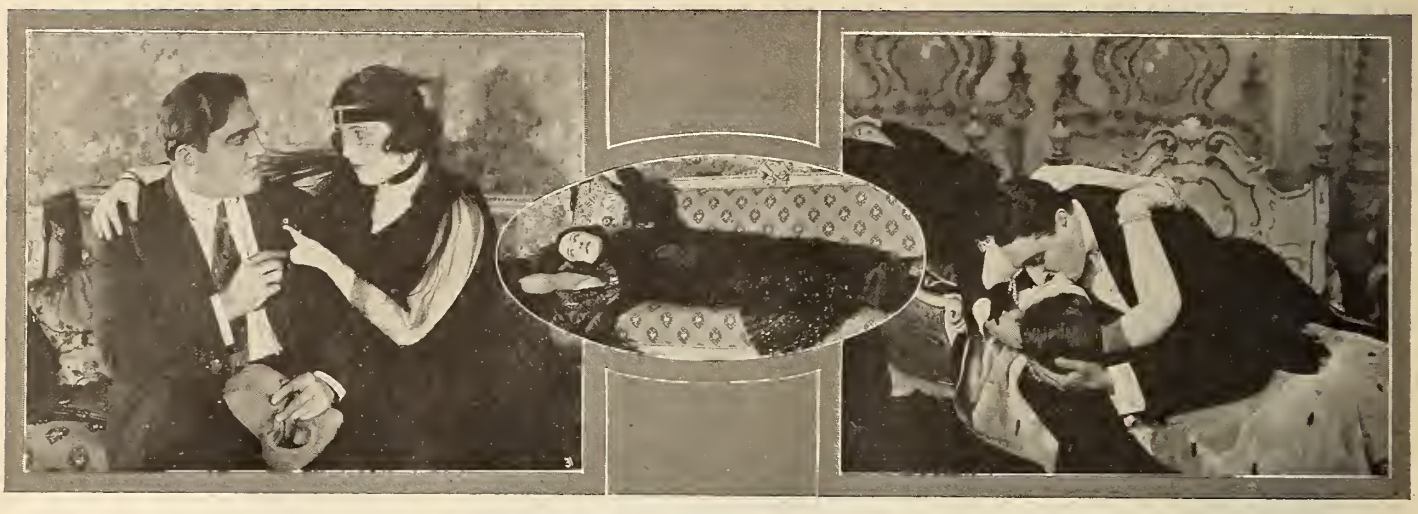
"The Foolish Virgin" is the first of Mr. Dixon's novels that he has been willing to sell to a film producing company. With the exception of "The Birth of a Nation," which he wrote from his book, "The Clansman," Mr. Dixon has been unwilling to see any of his stories adapted for the screen.

"I have sold the right to 'The Foolish Virgin' only because I feel that Clara Kimball Young is the best fitted to present my book in screen form," said Mr. Dixon after he had completed the business details with Lewis J. Selznick, president of the corporation.

"We have paid more for these two novels," said Mr. Selznick, "than many producing companies spend on two entire productions. Both Miss Young and I believe that the story is fifty per cent of the picture and we are determined to spare no expense in obtaining proper material. Our reason for restricting ourselves to noted novels or plays is plain. It is the only present way to obtain material by recognized leaders in the world of letters."

With her first two pictures decided upon Miss Young is now conducting negotiations for a third subject. A deal is under way with Derwent Hall Caine, son and representative of the famous novelist, Hall Caine, for the latter's great story, "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

Rowland Acts to Check Panic Over Infantile Paralysis



Metro President, Through Special Envoy, Enlists Aid of Federal Officials in Presenting Statistics, Giving the Truth About the Situation

REALIZING the menace to the motion picture theatre's prosperity if the present public panic over the spread of infantile paralysis reaches beyond New York, Richard A. Rowland, President of the Metro Pictures Corporation, has already taken steps for the institution of a nation-wide campaign to counteract the feeling of panic which has begun to manifest itself in other sections of the country.

Last week a special envoy was sent to Washington from the Metro offices and a consultation was held with Assistant Surgeon-General Rucker. Following this, the national official issued a statement to the newspapers of the country, assuring the public that the Federal Government was satisfied that the situation was well in hand, and that, as a matter of fact, more deaths had occurred in the infected localities as a result of the usual forms of summer complaint prevalent at this season of the year among children, than from infantile paralysis.

Upon the return of the Metro agent to New York, special one-sheet posters were printed for distribution to every exhibitor who was willing to use them. These posters bear authentic statistics revealing the actual extent of the disease, and bear the message of Assistant Surgeon-General Rucker. The Washington statement has already received publicity in some of the New York newspapers, and its effects have been felt in the returning calm noticeable in the press in general, more particularly in the decision of the health authorities of New York City, announced Monday, to reopen the public play grounds.

"We wired the details of our action to the exhibitors in convention in Chicago," said Mr. Rowland, "and have received their hearty endorsement of the plan."

Flashes from "The Siren," a Forthcoming William Fox Production Which Stars Valeska Suratt

METRO TO RELEASE ON AUGUST 21 16-EPISODE SERIAL FEATURING COSTELLO

Announcement is made by O. E. Goebel, president of the Consolidated Film Corporation, of the release through Metro of a sixteen-episode serial, "The Crimson Stain," commencing August 21. Maurice Costello and Ethel Grandin are featured. The story will be printed serially in leading newspapers, the novelization being by Albert Payson Terhune.

The photograph and production ends are being handled by the Erbograph. T. Hayes Hunter is directing.

UNIVERSAL ENGAGES COLLINS AND SCHENCK FOR CHARACTER PARTS

The Universal announces that it has engaged Harry M. C. Collins and J. H. Knowles Schenck, to play characters with the Paton Company at Universal City. A. E. Whitting has been engaged to play characters in general stock, Priscilla Deane to play leads with the Lyons-Moran Company and Thomas D. Moreno, comedian, has joined the Wallace Beer Company.

Universal Takes Infantile Paralysis Film to Aid Plague Fight

Five Hundred Feet Showing the Cause of the Disease, Its Effects and the Means of Cure Is Taken for Exhibition in Cities and States Suffering from the Scourge

THE wave of infantile paralysis that is sweeping a large area centering in Greater New York is so dangerous and has become such a menace to the various picture shows in the infected districts that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company in conjunction with the New York Evening World and the Board of Health, has taken about five hundred feet of film showing the cause of the disease, its effect and cure, the same to be publicly exhibited throughout the cities and states suffering from the plague, absolutely free of charge.

On Saturday night, July 15, Universal started on its charitable mission of exhibiting the film throughout New York. Various accessory companies, realizing the good of the cause contributed equipment gratis to facilitate the showing of the picture. A screen was furnished by the Trans-Lux Screen company, Nicholas Power gave the machine, the New York Calcium Light company came forward with lighting apparatus, while the truck in which was placed the machine was donated by the International Motor Company.

Robert L. Titus, of Yale Sheffield Scientific, Cornell and Syracuse, lectured with each showing of the picture. Dr. Haven Emerson and Dr. John S. Billings, of the Board of Health, Dr. Charles Boldman and O. M. Leiser of the Bureau of Public Health Education and Dr. D. M. Kaplan and Dr. Joseph Collins of the Neurological Institute made everything easy for the Universal men to get the desired pictures.

Scenes of a like nature were taken at the Willard Parker hospital, where more than four hundred cases of infantile paralysis have been treated, at Kingston Avenue Hospital and at the Sea Breeze Hospital, all in Greater New York. The exterior scenes were taken in South Brooklyn, the lower east side of New York City and in Richmond and Harlem. For English, Italians and Jews, the subtitles are printed in the three respective languages.

The following information is included in the five hundred feet of film: illustrations of practical measures to stop the spread of the disease; activities of the Bureau of Child Hygiene; preventive measures adopted by the Bureau of Infectious Diseases, the City Health Department, the State Health Commission and the Surgeon General of the United Public Health Service; affected districts; removal of children from their homes; how mothers may detect first symptoms; closeups of medical treatment given children; micrological enlargements of infantile paralysis germ; garbage pens, including Barren Island, "the pest hole of all creation"; the nests of the germs; maps of New York City and United States showing infected districts.

M. H. Hoffman, general manager of the Universal exchanges, has granted that all theatres lying in Brooklyn, which is the portion of New York most heavily infected by the scourge, receive Universal service at their own figure, no matter how low it may be during the period of the infantile plague.

Brenon to Enter Production Field on His Own Account

In August He Will Begin Producing Special Features with Women Stars Only—An Elaborate Spectacle Planned in the Spring with Mary Garden

HERBERT BRENON, who has just completed "A Daughter of the Gods" for William Fox, announces his intention to enter the production field on his own account, releasing his product on the state right basis.

Mr. Brenon expects to begin next month producing special features with women stars only. He expects to make four or five of these before next March, when he will start work on an elaborate spectacle with Mary Garden as the star.

To Motion Picture News Mr. Brenon described his plans as follows:

"I shall make these pictures with women stars only, because I believe the public prefers to see them on the screen. I shall make at least four or five productions before next March, when I shall commence upon my next great spectacle with Mary Garden as the star. Between now and that time, I shall try and keep up the reputation I trust I have gained with the trade by continuing to make productions which will bring patrons into the theatre a second and a third time. No star will appear either for me or any other concern for within one year of the date of the release of her feature. I have decided upon this policy because to-day 'Neptune's Daughter' is still playing with excellent receipts solely because it is the only picture in which they can see that wonderful artist, Annette Kellemann.

"August 1 I shall begin work on my first production. The star whose name I am not at present at libery to reveal has never yet appeared on the screen, yet her name is known in every hamlet in the United States, and I with many others consider her the greatest living actress who has starred in dramatic productions in this country.

"I shall have as my associate one of the best-known exchange men and exhibitors in the country, who will handle absolutely all the business details in connection with my output."

Illustrating Two Episodes of Kalem's "Hazards of Helen" and "The Wishing Ring"

SOL. L. LESSER MAKES FLYING TRIP TO NEW YORK

Sol. L. Lesser, the young states right magnate who has sold control to "The Ne'er-Do-Well," the Selig photodrama which is being released through the V-L-S-E, made a flying trip to New York last week.

Mr. Lesser stopped off in Philadelphia where the big feature has been showing to packed houses for the past two weeks. He was very much interested in the manner in which Will Moore Patch staged "The Ne'er-Do-Well," in the Forrest theater of that city.

Following the day spent in Philadelphia, Mr. Lesser came to New York, where he transacted a week's business in two days. He then returned to San Francisco.

RESERVE AT WORK ON "CASEY IN MEXICO"

Special to Motion Picture News.

Cleveland, July 15.

The Reserve Photo Plays Company, with Johnny and Emma Ray, is working on its first two reel comedy, "Casey in Mexico." These pictures have all been taken in and around Cleveland. The battle scenes have taken place at Rocky River, while some of the quieter ones have been enacted at Puritas Springs.

The Reserve Photoplays Company is taking only outdoor pictures until the new studio is ready for occupancy.

Ince Plans Another Big Picture Requiring Over a Year to Make

No Information Concerning the Subject Revealed at Present—"That There Will Be Another Feature Spectacle Emanating from His Mind in 1917 Is Fact," Says Grau

SINCE the presentation of "Civilization" considerable interest has been aroused as to the next big picture which Thomas H. Ince will make. The subject was discussed interestingly by Robert Grau, one of Mr. Ince's choicest confidants and manager of his international campaign for promoting "Civilization."

"That there will be another feature film spectacle emanating from the brain of Thomas H. Ince for 1917," said Mr. Grau, "is no longer a mere prophecy but a fact. But it is doubtful if I can give you any more information than that in advance of its production, as it is Mr. Ince's custom, just as preceding the premiere of 'Civilization,' never to do any advance exploitation of his plans. Nevertheless, it is no secret that Mr. Ince not only has decided on the subject of his next offering but that he has already determined that the production which will succeed 'Civilizaiton' will require a full year of preparation, and the most he will say now is that it is not a play and surely not an adaptation of one for the screen.

"About all that the intimates of Mr. Ince have to guide them in any effort to predicate the nature of the next Ince spectacle is the man himself, hence it is fair to assume that 'Civilization's' successor will not deal with war, in fact Mr. Ince truly believes that the message which he has delivered to mankind through his production of 'Civilization" will be answered in the affirmative before his 1917 masterpiece is revealed to screen audiences throughout the world.
